IN honor of Reginald Denny, whose first "bigger and better" production, "Take It From Me," will be released on that date, October 9th has been designated by Universal as National Denny Day. Universal exchange men and others in the organization have been instructed by Carl Laemmle to extend themselves to the limit in making October 9th and the following week a time of tribute to Denny. More than five hundred theatres will play "Take It From Me," starting October 9th. Other theatres have arranged to show former Denny pictures on the 9th and during the ensuing week.

Reginald Denny

Four Denny productions are finished, in work or in preparation. "The Cheerful Fraud" is now being filmed. "The Four Flusher" and "Fast and Furious" are being adapted and will go into production as soon as the star reaches them. Denny's pictures were formerly marketed as Universal Jewels. On this season's program they are rated as Reginald Denny Productions. Phil Dunas, former Minneapolis exchange manager, has been appointed sales director of the series and is now devoting his time to the promotion of National Denny Day.

Universal Ready to Start "The Big Gun"

"The Big Gun," the forthcoming Universal Navy picture, is scheduled to go into production soon with Harry Pollard directing. He will start camera work on it as soon as he finishes "Uncle Tom's Cabin." A special visit was made to Washington, D.C., by E. J. Montagne, Universal West Coast chief, for the purpose of conferring with Richard Barry, author of the story. Arrangements were made whereby the U. S. Navy will cooperate with Universal in the filming of the picture.

Carl Laemmle has designated George Lewis as the star in "The Big Gun." Universal will make every effort to make the film one of the most spectacular on their 1926-27 program. Barry, the author, worked with Montagne and Harry Dittmar on the script.

"Fourth Commandment" Prints Arrive at "U" Office

Emory Johnson's first production for Universal, "The Fourth Commandment," has been completed and has arrived at the Universal home office in the East. The executives of the company have waxed enthusiastic over the performances of the two different types of mothers, Belle Bennett and Mary Carr. The story, which is built around the "Honor thy father and thy mother" theme, was written by Mrs. Emilie Johnson, the director's mother. In the east are Henry Victor, June Marlowe, Robert Agnew and Kathleen Myers and Wendell Phillips Franklin, a new screen child star. No definite information as to the release date of the production has been issued as yet.

Other Brands Than P. D. C. for N. Y. Hippodrome

IT might be inferred that Keith-Albee Hippodrome in New York belongs to Producers Distributing Corporation since Keith-Albee is a part of P. D. C. However, this is not the case. In a statement issued this week the Keith-Albee organization makes plain that P. D. C. does not own a monopoly on the Hippodrome screen but on the contrary must compete with other companies for bookings at the house. It is because of the many millions that have been invested in the Hippodrome that this protection must be resorted to. Therefore, all P. D. C. pictures to reach the Hippodrome screen must be equal, if not better in quality than competitive production aiming to be shown at the Keith-Albee house.

For the first five weeks of the present season the Hippodrome has booked four P. D. C. films in competition with the product of other films, "Young April" was chosen as the film feature for the opening week of August 29th. "Risky Business" followed the week of September 5th. This was followed by Universal's "Poker Faces" and this week another P. D. C. production, "For Alimony Only," is being shown at the Hippodrome. The week after next "Gigolo," starring Rod La Rocque, will replace "For Alimony Only," making four P. D. C. attractions in six weeks.

Six Tiffany Pictures Finished

Three More on 1926-27 Program Started;
Remainder of Twenty in Work Soon

SIX pictures on the Tiffany Productions' program for 1926-27 have been finished and three more of those scheduled for this season have been put into production. Preparations are now under way for the filming of "Wild Geese" which will be a special production.

The six productions now completed are "Lost at Sea," a Louis Joseph Vance story directed by Louis Gasnier; "That Model from Paris," suggested by a story of Gouverneur Morris, also directed by Gasnier; "Fools of Fashion," a George Randolph Chester story directed by James C. McKay.

"College Days," by A. P. Younger, which was directed by Richard Thorpe under supervision of the author; "The First Night," a farce comedy by Frederica Sagor, also directed by Thorpe; "One Hour of Love," based on the story by Leete Renick Brown and directed by Robert Florey and "Joelyn's Wife," from a suggestion in a story by Kathleen Norris. Pauline Frederick is starred under the direction of Richard Thorpe.

Those now in production are "Sin Cargo," "Lightning," a Zane Grey story, "Redheads Preferred" and "Enchanted Island."

Some of the other pictures scheduled for early filming on the Twenty Gems from Tiffany for 1926-27, include "Squads Right," "Husband Hunters," "Flaming Timber," "The Song of Steel," "Snowbound," "Tale of a Vanishing People" and "The Broken Gate."

P.D.C. Productions Progressing

Both DeMille and Metropolitan Studios
Cramped for Space With Heavy Schedule

THOUGH additional space and equipment have been added to the De Mille studio, the production units at present making Producers Distributing Corporation releases are experiencing working room difficulties owing to the heavy schedule.

"The King of Kings," Cecil B. De Mille's personally directed picture, is coming along rapidly despite technical difficulties which naturally arise in the production of a picture of this nature. Two of the big sets have already been erected.

J. Duncan Gleason, marine artist, is working with Rupert Julian in an advisory capacity on "The Yankee Clipper," which is to have an elaborate production. William Boyd and Elinor Fair are featured in this story of the sea.

The company making the Rod La Rocque starring vehicle, "The Cruise of the Jasper B," is at present doing exterior scenes at Catalina Island. Mildred Harris has the chief feminine role in this Don Marquis story.

Jetta Goudal's second starring production, "Fighting Love," will be directed by Nils Olaf Chrisander, whom De Mille recently brought to America from Berlin, where he was at one time director-general of Ufa. "Fighting Love" is an adaptation of the novel by Rosita Forbes. Victor Varconi and Henry B. Walthall head the cast.

Director Paul Sloane is now cutting "Corporal Kate," the newest Vera Reynolds starring feature, and Clara Beranger is completing the adaptation of Avery Hopwood's farce, "Nobody's Widow," in which Leatrice Joy will next star under the direction of William De Mille.

At the Metropolitan studio, Marie Prevost is in the midst of "Man Bait," which Donald Crisp is directing.

The Mammoth Caves of the Santa Cruz Islands furnish the background for much of the action of "Jewels of Desire," Priscilla Dean's current Metropolitan picture, and the star and her company are now on location there. Paul Powell is directing this Agnes Parsons story, with John Bowers, Walter Long, Luke Cosgrave, Ernie Adams and Raymond Wells heading the supporting cast.

F. McGrew Willis has practically completed the adaptation of "No Control," the next Metropolitan picture to go into production. Harrison Ford, Phyllis Flaver and Director Scott Sidney will be associated in the filming of this Frank Condon story.

Fleck Becomes Casting Head F. P.-L. Long Island Studio

Fred A. Fleck last week assumed his new duties of casting director of the Long Island studio of Paramount which position was open because of the resignation of William Cohill. Fleck has been an assistant director for the last six years, several of them being employed in the service of Famous Players-Lasky. In that period of time he has worked under Sidney Oleott, Malcolm St. Clair, Monta Bell, Edward Sutherland, Dimitri Buchowetzki and Maurice Tourneur. During the late war Fleck held a unique position, that of photographing all the major surgical operations for the archives of the Medical Corps. Edgar Scott Spargo, son of John Spargo of Exhibitor's Herald, and former owner and operator of a screen test studio in New York, will act as assistant to Fleck.

Casting Completed for "The Flaming Forest"

Casting has been finished for "The Flaming Forest," the Cosmopolitan production of an adaptation of James Oliver Curwood's story of the same name, now being filmed at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio. Antonio Moreno and Renee Adoree are the principals in the film and they will be supported by Gardner James, Oscar Beregi, Bert Roach, Tom O'Brien, Claire McDowell, Charles S. Ogle, Emil Chautard, William Austin, Clarence Geldert, Frank Leigh, Roy Coulson, D'Arcy McCoy and Mary Jane Irving. Reginald Barker is directing.

"Sweethearts in Every Port" For W. C. Field

"Sweethearts in Every Port," a story by Tom Geraghty, is the title of the third Paramount starring vehicle to be done by W. C. Fields. It is claimed that the story will give Fields an unusual opportunity for comedy characterization with a background altogether new to motion pictures. Fields will play the role of captain of a canal barge who has never been down to the sea in ships, but who, nevertheless, considers himself a great sea captain.

D. W. Griffith to Direct Richard Dix

D. W. GRIFFITH will direct Richard Dix in "The White Slave" for Paramount. The adaptation of Bartley Campbell's stage

D. W. Griffith part than in which he has hitherto appeared.

Before starting on the Griffith production Dix will make "Paradise for Two," from an original story by Howard Emmett Rogers. Gregory La Cava will direct.

Emil Jannings Sailing for America Sept. 26th

EMIL JANNINGS, Europe's foremost actor and star of "Variety," "The Last Laugh," and other important screen achievements, sailed for America on September 26, according to a cablegram received last week by Jesse L. Lasky. Shortly after his arrival here, Jannings, who is accompanied by George Witte, secretary to Eric Pommer, will start work on the first of his series of starring Paramount specials. The company's editorial department now has under consideration several outstanding literary pieces as vehicles for Jannings. At the Paramount studio Jannings will be associated with Eric Pommer, now producing at the West Coast studio.

Roy Briant Made Assistant to Julian Johnson

Roy Briant, Broadway playwright, has been made assistant to Julian Johnson, film and title editor at the Paramount Long Island studio, by William Le Baron, associate producer. Paramount signed Briant to an exclusive contract after his first independent titling work which was "Tin Gods," starring Thomas Meighan. Briant is the author of "The Adorable Liar," the Selwyn comedy now playing at the 49th Street Theatre in New York. He has had an interesting and varied career, having been at different times jockey, cowpuncher, honkytonk piano player, actor, stage director and student at Bethany College where he was graduated. In the past eight years he has written thirty-eight one-act dramatic sketches and three full-length plays.

"When the Wife's Away" Now Ready for Release

Columbia's production of "When the Wife's Away," starring George K. Arthur, has been completed at the Columbia studio and is now ready for release. Harry Cohn, vice-president and director-general of production, supervised the proceedings while Frank R. Strayer did the directing. Besides Arthur the cast includes Dorothy Revier, Harry Depp, Ned Sparks, Ina Rorke, Lincoln Plumer, Bobby Dunn and Tom Ricketts.

"Obey the Law," starring Bert Lytell, will follow "When the Wife's Away" on the Columbia release schedule.

Gotham Offers Two Releases for September

During the month of September Lumas Film Corporation will offer for release two productions from the Gotham West Coast studios, "The Black Signal" and "The King of the Pack." The first is a melodrama dealing with railroad life, starring Ralph Lewis, and directed by Frank O'Connor. In the second picture the late canine star, Peter the Great, appears. It is the last but one picture in which this famous dog star will be seen in. Included in the cast are Charlotte Stevens, Robert Gordon and Vera Lewis. Frank Richardson directed.

Four F. P.-L. Stock Players in Neilan Production

Four members of the Famous Players-Lasky stock company have been cast for important roles in "Everybody's Acting," Marshall Neilan's production which he is making independently for Paramount. Betty Bronson who made her screen debut under the Paramount banner and who recently became a star of that company, has the leading part. Lawrence Gray, who plays opposite Miss Bronson, is another Paramount contract player who was discovered one year ago and who has appeared only in pictures of that organization. Ford Sterling, an exclusive Paramount player, has the role of Michael Poole in the Neilan production. The fourth stock player of the company to sign for "Everybody's Acting," is Jocelyn Lee who plays Barbara Potter.

Maynard's Third F. N. Film at Half-Way Mark

Ken Maynard's third picture for First National, "The Flame of the Border," is about half finished according to Charles R. Rogers, producer of the series of Westerns. The unit has just returned from location in South Dakota and will complete shooting on the Coast. In the cast are Ken Maynard, Kathleen Collins and Chief Yowlachie. Al Rogell is directing. "The Unknown Cavalier," the second of the Ken Maynard features for First National, will be released late in November. Rogers is now in New York conferring with General Manager Richard A. Rowland anent forthcoming Maynard releases.

"Charleston Kid" Changed to "Just Another Blonde"

"The Charleston Kid," the Alfred Santell production starring Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall, has undergone a change of title and will be known hereafter as "Just Another Blonde." The production, the third to be made by Al Rockett at the First National New York studio, is now in the cutting room. Louise Brooks and William Collier, Jr., are featured supports in the cast.

Billie Dove Signs for First National Pictures

Billie Dove, through an arrangement with Charles R. Rogers, has been signed to a long term contract by First National. She has been cast for the June Mathis production of "Here Y'Are Brother," adapted from the story of the same title by Dixie Wilson. Lewis Stone is also slated. Balboni is scheduled to begin production on the West Coast around October 4th.

McCormick Signs Y. D'Avril to First National Contract

A long term contract for First National productions has been awarded Yola D'Avril whom Jean Patou, beauty expert, called the most graceful girl in France. Miss D'Avril, originally a dancer, appeared in many of the European capitals with considerable success, culminating her success in a French motion picture.

Intense Rivalry Among F. N. Exchanges

IN spite of the fact that Cleveland, representing the Southern division of First National in the Lieber month drive for increased sales, still maintains her position of first place, the other territories are doing unprecedented business in an endeavor to wrest the leadership from her. New Jersey, for the East, is a close runner-up, Minneapolis, in the West, has displaced Milwaukee for third place. In Canada, Toronto has taken the lead over Montreal. Robert Lieber, president of First National, in whose honor the drive is being forwarded, is an interested spectator of the race.

Buck Jones Ready to Resume Work in "Desert Valley"

Having toured Europe and put in another month touring America, Buck Jones, Fox Films Western star, is now in Hollywood preparing to resume work. His first picture will be "Desert Valley," adapted from the novel by Jackson Gregory. Scott Dunlap has been signed to direct, and the production gets under way within a week. Lambert Hillyer, another Western director, is preparing the second Jones vehicle, an original that has not been given a permanent title. Jones will also star in "Kit Carson," now in preparation, based on the life of the celebrated figure of the old West.

"The Waiter at the Ritz" Ray Griffith's Next

The intensive search instituted by James Cruze, Raymond Griffith and the Paramount story department for a subject suitable for the combined efforts of the director and the comedian was ended this week when the stage play by W. Somerset Maugham, "Jack Straw," was decided upon, its working title to be "The Waiter at the Ritz." Work is scheduled to start on October 1st. Julien Josephson, who prepared the scenario for "The Eagle of the Sea," is preparing the adaptation.

"War Paint" Release Title of First Tim McCoy Western

"War Paint" is the release title announced for the first Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Western starring Colonel Tim McCoy. This adaptation of a story by Peter B. Kyne has been hitherto known by the working title of "Rider of the Plains." In addition to McCoy the cast contains Pauline Starke, Charles French, Karl Dane and Chief Yowlachie. W. S. Van Dyke directed.

Ingram Sails for Europe to Make "Garden of Allah"

After a short business sojourn in New York City, Rex Ingram sailed for Europe last Saturday, September 18th. In Europe he will film "The Garden of Allah," Robert Hichens' novel for Metro-Goldwyn. He will be joined in Nice, France, by Alice Terry now co-starring with Ramon Novarro in "The Great Galeoto." Miss Terry has the leading feminine role in the Ingram production.

Fox Film Schedule Maintained

Halfway Mark Reached; 14 Feature Productions Finished and as Many in Work

FOX FILMS production schedule for the current season is rapidly approaching the halfway mark, fourteen productions having already been completed and as many more at present in work at the East and West Coast studios. At the Western plant Fox has eleven pictures in work and three or four units are now engaged in filming scenes in the East.

At the Tenth Avenue, New York, studio Allan Dwan is applying the finishing touches to "Summer Bachelors" and also preparing for filming of "The Music Master." Irving Cummings arrived here last week to make "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl" and he will soon be joined by Alfred E. Green, who will start the picturization of "The Auctioneer."

Studio space at the West Coast plant is somewhat cramped with eleven units working on new vehicles. John Ford is directing "Mother Machree" and Frank Borzage is handling the megaphone on "Seventh Heaven." Raoul Walsh is dividing his time between directing "The Monkey Talks" and in cutting and titling "What Price Glory."

"Going Crooked," under George Medford's direction, is almost finished. J. G. Blystone is making "On the Wings of the Storm," a canine story featuring Thunder, the latest dog star, in which Virginia Browne Faire and Reed Howes play the human leads.

Howard Hawkes is filming a story titled "Gaby," based on the life of the internationally known actress, Gaby Deslys. R. William Neill is directing "The City" from the play by Clyde Fitch. F. W. Murnau is making preparations for the filming of the story based on an idea suggested in Hermann Sudermann's novel, "A Trip to Tilsit."

Edmund Lowe and Lila Lee are at present in England making scenes for "One Increasing Purpose"; they expect to finish and return to Hollywood within the next few weeks. Tom Mix is busily engaged on his next production, "The Canyon of Light," with Dorothy Dwan as his leading lady.

Buck Jones has just started his third production for this season's program, titled "Desert Valley."

"Les Miserables" in Two Parts

Nine Reel Installments Run Successive Weeks Decided by Carl Laemmle

CARL LAEMMLE has decided that Universal will release "Les Miserables," the Universal-Film de France production, in two nine-reel installments to be booked and shown on successive weeks. The picture has been exhibited in this manner in England and Universal claims the manner of presentation met with popular favor.

The two installments are complete in themselves says Universal, the first part, titled "The Soul of Humanity," deals with the life of Jean Valjean through many adventures and ends with a climax and stopping point in his career; the second part, known as "The Barricades," takes up the thread of his life years later through the scenes for which one of the French revolutions in the early days of the Nineteenth Century forms the background.

The Laemmle decision is due to the answers to questionnaires sent out by Universal on the subject of the proper length at which the picture should be shown. Most of these answers, says Universal, evidenced a desire to see the production in its full length and admitted a willingness to see it in two installments. As evidence of the fact that the public is not averse to this form of presentation several examples of installment entertainment were pointed out in the letters received.

Wallace Beery Signs Paramount Contract

WALLACE BEERY has signed a new contract whereby he will be on the Paramount roster of stars for the next five years. Though the existing contract still had two years to run it was torn up in favor of the new document. This step was taken by Jesse L. Lasky after he had witnessed the characterization of the second mate which Beery renders in "Old Ironsides." Lasky proclaimed this portrayal as one of the most striking in screen history.

Following his current vehicle, "We're in the Navv Now," in which he is co-featured with Raymond Hatton, Beery will appear in another comedy drama with Hatton, "Casey at the Bat," a Hector Turnbull production. He will then appear in "The Greatest Show on Earth," in which he will play the role of P. T. Barnum. This photoplay deals with the life of the famous showman and will be one of the Paramount road shows. It will be directed by Monta Bell.

Many M-G-M Stock Players Unknown Year Ago

DUE mostly to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer policy inaugurated last year to put new players through a course of intensive training that their future status on the screen might be permanent, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announcement that more than thirty per cent. of the names of their contract players were unknown a year ago assumes a significant phase. This endeavor to place new faces before the movie public has resulted in fourteen new stars, either fully established or in the embryonic form.

The players are Greta Garbo, Lars Hanson, Beatrice Lillie, Sally O'Neil, Joan Crawford, William Haines, Tom O'Brien, Karl Dane, Col. Tim McCoy, Patricia Avery, Gwen Lee, Estelle Clark, Maurice Kains and Jacqueline Gadsden. To this list might be added the two foreign directors, Benjamin Christianson and V. Tourjansky.

It is said that additional players aiming for the heights will be put through the course with the hope of finding new stars for the screen firmament.

Several Additions to Syd Chaplin's "Missing Link"

Good progress was made during the past week by Director Chuck Reisner on "The Missing Link," Syd Chaplin's next road show attraction for Warner Bros., in which the comedian will appear in an entirely new characterization. The production got under way on September 7th. Since then many additions have been made to the cast. Among these are John Patrick, John T. Murray, Josef Swickard and Henry Barrows. Players previously announced were Ruth Hyatt, Crauford Kent, Sam Baker and Theodore Loreh. The story is an original by Chuck Reisner and Darryl Francis Zannek, who spent several weeks on the Santa Cruz Islands with Chaplin in its preparation.

Putting Short Subjects Over in the Theatre

By L. C. Moen

SO much has been written in recent years concerning the exploitation of short subjects that it may seem unnecessary, at first thought, to go over the ground again. Nevertheless, despite the increasing importance given to short subjects by leading exhibitors, there are still theatres where the shorts are bought and shown—as fillers.

The importance of the short subject on the theatre program is no longer a controversial matter. The success of the All-Comedy Weeks, Comedy Circuses, and the like have shown conclusively that picture patrons will pay to see good short subjects as readily as a good feature—and far more readily than a poor feature. Given two features of equal merit, the one supported by two or three first class short subjects and the other supported by an indifferent selection of fillers, there is little question where the average patron will go. Or, putting it in another manner, if both theatres are showing an average feature, both supported by good short subjects, but one manager boosts his short subjects and lets the public know what he is running, while the other maintains a heavy silence concerning them, there is again little question as to who will reap the bulk of the patronage.

Putting across the short subject in an individual theatre, then, involves two things—picking short subjects that are worthy of exploitation, and letting the public know that you have them. Both of these matters involve the expenditure of some little time and trouble, and it is up to the individual theatre manager to decide whether or not he wants this increased business enough to put in the necessary hard work. Most managers, where possible, no doubt do.

See as many of your short subjects as possible in advance, and strive for novelty and variety in the selection, for those two qualities are the biggest things that shorts can contribute to your program. The general run of features has all too little of either quality, and a judicious choice of short pictures will do much to make your programs brighter and snappier.

Where possible—and if possible—see comedies in another theatre under actual audience conditions. Judging comedies in the projection room is a deceptive task. The picture which does not look at all funny to you in the screening room may send an audience into convulsions of laughter—and that, after all, is what you are seeking. Certain things can be gauged at a projection room showing, such as quality of production, good taste or lack of it, appeal of subject and so on, but humor can be judged only by its effect on an audience. People in the mass react quite differently from the same persons as individuals. Mob psychology comes into play, and a man sitting in the midst of a thousand others will laugh hilariously at something which would leave him quite unmoved were he seeing the picture alone.

Study the reviews of short subjects, and get as many intelligent opinions as possible. Many newspaper reviews of short subjects today are based on theatre showings. Those that are not will still give you opinions which, while they may not be infallible, will help you tremendously in forming your opinion as to the suitability of a given short subject for your theatre. No honest reviewer even pretends to be all-wise and all-knowing, but if you study the matter you will find that certain reviewers have tastes similar to those of your clientele, and that the subjects which they like are pretty certain to be a good choice for you.

In picking your short subjects, give thought not only to entertainment value but to exploitation angles. Don't neglect the entertainment side, but keep in mind the fact that you are going to put special sales effort back of your short subjects and watch for those that have "something to sell."

These sales angles may be names in the cast, well known stories on which a series is based, a timely topic of interest, or merely some slant to the picture which will lend itself to exploitation with particular ease.

Having selected our shorts intelligently, the more important matter of letting our patrons know what we have comes to bat. Here the problem is not so much different, after all, than in exploiting features. Money spent in exploiting the short subject is just as well spent as on the highest priced super-special. The tendency, if the short subjects cost, say, one-fourth as much as the feature, is to spend only one-fourth (or even less) as much on their exploitation. This is unsound practice, for a hundred patrons who pay their quarter or half dollar to see the short subjects pay in just as much to the coffers as a hundred fans who are attracted by the feature.

Don't be afraid occasionally to spend a little less on the feature and more on the advertising of the short subjects. Spending ten dollars to advertise the feature and nothing on three short subjects is putting all your eggs in one basket. Don't use six inches over two columns in the newspaper to tell them about the feature and then put a 12-point line across the bottom of it reading: "Selected Short Subjects."

Just how far you should go in putting short subjects across as an important feature of your theatre's programs depends in a considerable measure upon what has been your past policy. If you have boosted them rather consistently for years, there is little needed but more of the same medicine. Assuming, however, that shorts have played a very minor role, and that we have decided to capitalize to the fullest extent possible on the entertainment and income value of the short subject field, we should proceed about as follows:

Start telling the patrons about our short subjects, through every conceivable medium. If there is a house program, run short readers about the care with which short subjects are selected—the many choice things in store for patrons of the Blank theatre—items about the stars appearing in comedy—a few words here and a few there, hammering away all the time on the fact that the show at the Blank theatre always has good short subjects.

Do the same in all newspaper advertising. If it can be afforded, and a real change of policy in regard to short subject exploitation is contemplated, run some policy copy once a week for a few weeks, telling patrons about it. Make this copy interesting and free from bunk—there is plenty of interesting truth about short subjects—how they are produced today with the same care which goes into feature pictures—how, picture for picture, they hit a higher average of entertainment value than features, because their short length makes them comparatively free from padding.

Then, in your regular newspaper advertising, try playing the short subjects on an equal basis with the feature-length photoplays. Devote half your space to the feature and the other half to the supporting program. Once in a while, for the sake of emphasis, devote three-fourths of the space to the short subjects and give the feature the short end. Assuming that the shorts are of first quality and box-office value, this will attract as much or more business than the type of ad in which the feature is given the prominence.

One of the best means of calling attention to the new policy with regard to short subjects, however, would be the All-Comedy Bill, or the short subject program. This has been one of the most consistently successful money-makers in all parts of the country of any showman's stunt in years, ranking with Jazz Week as a sure-fire box-office winner. On a bill of top-notch short subjects, exploited with all of the steam that you would put back of a special feature, you will not only make money but can establish certain series of shorts so firmly in the minds of your patrons that they will return again and again to see other pictures in the same series.

In the field of straight exploitation, there are available a considerable number of tie-ups. Use them. Don't be afraid to take something away from the feature exploitation appropriation to do it, either. As we remarked previously, a half dollar paid to see the short subjects is just as good as the half dollar paid in to see the feature.

When anyone calls your cashier to ask what the feature for the evening is, have her make it a point to add: "And we're showing a dandy comedy tonight, too (giving it's title) and the news weekly is better than usual." Little touches of this sort will help make your patrons feel that the shorts are important, and they will appreciate them more—and presently, if you carry this out consistently, your cashier will be too busy selling tickets to answer the phone at all.

F.B.O. Enlarges Shorts Program

Move is Important Feature of Company's "Greater Policy"—Six Series on Schedule

THE metamorphosis of F. B. O. into Greater F. B. O. is a significant one not only from the standpoint of Gold Bond productions issued through this company and features in the star series, but in point of short subjects as well. This company has enlarged and expanded its production forces for the short subject program.

Perhaps the most important gesture of F. B. O.'s short subject program for the current year is "Bill Grimm's Progress," a twelve-episode comedy series from the Collier's stories by H. C. Witwer. This series features Al Cooke and Kit Guard, the "goofs" in "The Adventures of Mazie" and "Fighting Hearts" for the same company; and stars Jack Luden and Margaret Morris. "Wiseackers," a projected F. B. O. series for 1927, also is from the pen of Witwer.

Charley Bowers, inventor of a camera process which has earned for him the title of "the wizard of the camera," now produces Whirlwind Comedies for F. B. O. There are twelve of these Whirlwind Comedies scheduled for the current year.

Standard Comedies, featuring the three fat men, are continued on the 1926 schedule, largely because of the gratifying success of these two-reelers last year. It will be remembered that "The Heavy Parade," a parody of "The Big Parade," scored a popular hit last year, and Standard Comedies are being planned along similar lines this year. The first on the new schedule "Galloping Ghosts," is a play on Red.

F. B. O. also has two cartoon series, Krazy Kat Cartoons, modeled after the famous Harriman comics, and Alice Cartoons, a combination of a charming little girl and cartoonical figures.

Stern Bros. Resume Production

Start Camera Work on Seventh "Newlyweds" Comedy
at New Studios—Speedy Recovery from Recent Fire

CAMERA work started in the new Hollywood studio of the Stern Film Corporation this week, when production was resumed on "The Newlyweds and Their Baby" series, one of the five series of two-reel comedies the Stern Brothers are making for Universal release. The other four series will go into production within a week or so. These include the new Buster Brown Comedies, the "Let George Do It" series, the "What Happened to Jane" series and "The Excuse Maker" series.

The record of the Stern Film Corporation in getting its feet under it after the fire—a fire which razed the old studio to the ground, is one of the bright lights of screen history. In less than a month, the company has acquired a new studio property, constructed sets, purchased new equipment, costumes and other properties, engaged new production forces and has launched into what is termed its greatest picture-making drive of its career.

Credit is due to the Stern Brothers, Julius and Abe, who, though in Europe, sized up the situation and sent word to spare no expense in rehabilitation. The burden of the job fell upon Beno Rubel, the secretary of the organization, who hurried from New York to the Coast and supervised the work.

Rubel was assisted by Sig Neufeld, production manager of the Stern studio.

Roach Has 5 Players Under Contract for Star Series

Five players of established reputation as comedy artists are under contract to appear in the series of "Star Comedies" that producer will make for Pathe release.

This group is composed of Jimmy Finlayson, who will play part of the time in comedies featuring him alone; Vivien Oakland, former vaudeville favorite; Tyler Brooke, well known on the legitimate stage; Oliver Hardy, veteran "heavyweight" comedian of the screen, and Martha Sleeper, sixteen-year-old eccentric comedienne.

McGovern to Direct Remaining Radio Personalities

Lester Soman, producer of the Radio Personalities series for Artclass Pictures, has engaged Elmer McGovern to direct the remainder of the series. The series deals with the activities of the announcers and entertainers that perform before the microphone. The next release, Volume D, will be in story form, with Joe E. Brown, Broadway musical comedian, playing the role of John Listener-in.

New York Exchange Leads In Red Seal Drive

A check-up of sales up to and including September 15, shows the New York Red Seal exchange in charge of Marty Soloman was again in the lead of the quota drive that was put on a month ago by Harry Bernstein, general sales manager of Red Seal.

The race, however, is very hot, with Chicago a very close second. The Chicago Exchange is in charge of Charles Lundgren.

Brooks on Tour of Pathe Exchanges in South

E. Oswald Brooks, Southern District Sales Manager of Pathe, left New York on Friday, September 17th for a four weeks' tour of the exchanges in his district.

The first city on Mr. Brooks' itinerary is Memphis, and from there he will visit Oklahoma City, Kansas City, Dallas, Charlotte and Atlanta. In addition to visiting the firm's exchanges, Mr. Brooks will call upon exhibitors in key cities.

Powell Offers Pictorial Biography of Wales

B. M. POWELL of New York, has placed on the state right market a two-reel special dealing with the life of the Prince of Wales. The picture has the title "Prince Charming," and presents a screen record of the career to date of the heir to the English throne.

Powell scoured the film libraries of Europe and obtained actual scenes of the Prince of Wales as a small boy at the time of his investiture, shortly after the death of his grandfather, King Edward VII. With these boyhood scenes as an introduction, the picture follows England's dashing heir-apparent on his travels throughout the world and reveals the life, loves and work of one of the world's most popular young men. The picture marks royalty's first screen appearance as a "box-office star."

ROMANCE

(Suggested by Sir John Millais' famous painting, "Speak! Speak!")

GREETED EVERYWHERE with the most extravagant praise, "The Vision" has set a record unparalleled by any other Short Subject. It has provided balance, dignity, beauty as a co-feature with longer feature of a comedy character in great first-run houses from the Metropolitan at Boston to the Forum, Los Angeles.

It has been a big box-office asset for houses of all sizes and the hit of the show before audiences of all types. It was advertised and exploited as the feature attraction by the Lucas Theatre, Savannah, for one of the best box-office records of the year.

At the opening of the Mecca, in the heart of New York's teeming East Side, it was "the applause hit of the entire bill," according to David J. Lustig, Managing Director. In the little town of Dixon, Cal., I. W. Ware, Manager of the Palace, says it was "acclaimed by its patrons as being the finest picture ever shown on the screen. It packs the house."

"The Blue Boy"

With JOHN ROCHE
and PHILIPPE DE LACY

(Suggested by Sir Thomas Gainsborough's famous painting)

IT WOULD seem difficult to equal the record of "The Vision," almost impossible to beat it. Yet "The Blue Boy" is starting out to do just that!

Critics and exhibitors have been even more enthusiastic, if possible, in their praise of this second subject of the Romance Productions group.

"Thinking over what I wrote about 'The Blue Boy,'" writes the Editor of the Film Spectator, "I began to wonder if it really could be as beautiful and the story as interesting as I said it was in the last Spectator. I went to see another preview of it at the Ambassador (Los Angeles). The theatre was crowded and the conclusion of the little gem was greeted by the most spontaneous and prolonged applause I ever have heard in a motion picture theatre."

"If this picture is not an indispensable enrichment for the program of any theatre then we don't know what would be."

Red Seal Releasing 154 This Year—26 in 1924

FIGURES illustrating the growth of Red Seal Pictures Corporation, short subject distributors, during the past three years show that this company has extended its operations from the release in 1924 of 26 featurettes to a schedule of 154 subjects for the present season. Red Seal released 93 pictures in 1925.

The total number of theatres which played Red Seal pictures in 1924 was 150, while it is reported that there are now over 5,500 theatres showing films released by the company, with several months of the current selling season still before it. Red Seal is now operating 21 exchanges in a national distributing organization under the supervision of Harry Bernstein, general sales manager of the company headed by Max Fleischer.

Lillian Rich in All-Star Comedy for Roach

Lillian Rich will have the role of leading lady in an all-star comedy being produced by Hal Roach for Pathe. Other members of the cast are Bull Montana, Edwards Davis, Leo White, Stan Laurel, Tyler Brooke and Ed Dearing. Fred Guiol is directing.

List 19 Releases for October

Educational Announces Schedule for Month; "Mona Lisa" Color Film on Varied Program

EDUCATIONAL'S program of new pictures for October offers seven two-reel comedies, a new Romance Production in natural color, eleven new subjects and ten Kinograms news reels.

The only purely dramatic production scheduled for October is "The Mona Lisa," third of the Romance pictures to be finished by the Technicolor Process. It was written and directed by Arthur Maude. Hedda Hopper takes the title role, that of the lady with the inscrutable smile, while Craufurd Kent plays the other principal character.

Lloyd Hamilton is on the list with his first fall release, "Teacher, Teacher." Norman Taurog again is responsible for the story and direction of the comedy.

Billy Dooley in his second starring vehicle of the new season achieves a new comedy triumph as the comical sailor in "A Briny Boob." Amber Norman, Natalie Joyce and William Irving appear in support.

Anne Cornwall makes her debut as a featured player in "Hold Still," a Christie Comedy, directed by Harold Beaudine. Jack Duffy, Bill Blaisdell and Jimmie Harrison head the large supporting cast.

Johnny Arthur finds a role suited for his abilities in "The Humdinger," a Tuxedo Comedy. George Davis, Anita Garvin and Lucille Hutton head the supporting cast. Norman Taurog directed.

Two Mermaids are ready for October release. In the first, "Pink Elephants," Al St. John is featured in a circus comedy. In the other, as yet untitled, George Davis is the featured comedian.

Jimmie Adams comes through with his second star production of the new year—"Shell Shocked."

Two Cameo Comedies also will be released this month. In "Plumb Goofy," Phil Dunham and "Toy" Gallagher are the stars. Clem Beauchamp directed this picture. "Pound Foolish" is the other Cameo for the month.

"Whatnots," third of the Curiosities series, known as the Movie Sideshow, keeps up the pace set by the earlier subjects in this group of novelties produced by Walter Futter. Two Bruce Scenic Novelty subjects, "A Typical Tropical Sky" and "Sons of the Surf," contained in one reel, and "The River Road"—"Five-Fifty-Five Runs Wild," are also October releases.

Lyman H. Howe's Hodge-Podge for the month is titled "Figures of Faney." In the Life Cartoon series will be "Cut Price Glory" and "The Raging Tide." Felix the Cat will be seen in three animated cartoons, "Felix the Cat Hunts the Hunter," "Felix the Cat Bursts the Bubble" and "Felix the Cat in Land O' Faney."

Universal Plans Super Shorts

Schedule for 1926-27 Most Ambitious Ever Attempted by Company—Variety of Subjects

UNIVERSAL'S array of Short Subjects for the coming months is the most ambitious list of one and two-reelers ever offered by that organization. The production heads at Universal City and at the Stern Brothers Studio, anticipating the increasing demand for better and better short product, laid plans to make "super" short subjects.

Two series of two-reelers calculated to follow in the steps of the famous "Leather Pushers" are included in the schedule. One is "The Collegians," ten two-reelers of college life from stories by Carl Laemmle, Jr., with George Lewis as star, and directed by Wesley Ruggles. The other is the new Buster Brown Comedy series, to be in twelve two-reel pictures, directed by Gus Meins and with Pete, the popular dog comedian, as Tige, and the other stars seen in the first Buster Brown Comedies. Both "The Collegians" and the new Buster Brown Comedies are classed as Universal Junior Jewels.

In the serial field Universal will be represented with five chapter plays based on stories by popular authors. The first serial, "Fighting With Buffalo Bill," is now being released, with Wallace MacDonald and Elsa Benham as the stars. The other four are "The Fire Fighters," from a story by John Morosco; "The Return of the Riddle Rider," by Arthur B. Reeve and Fred J. McConnell, with William Desmond starred;

"Whispering Smith Rides," written by Frank Spearman, and "The Silent Flyer," a serial with a dog starred.

In addition to the Stern Brothers Comedies, comprising four series each, made up of 13 two-reelers, Universal also will release twelve new Gumps Comedies. The Stern Brothers series include "The Newlyweds and Their Baby" series; the "Let George Do It" series and "What Happened to Jane" series, both based on the George McManus cartoons, and "The Excuse Maker" series.

Universal's line-up of two-reel Westerns offers a group of 52 of these pictures for 1926-27. The schedule includes 13 W. C. Tuttle Western Comedies, thirteen made with Fred Gilman, thirteen made with Edmund Cobb, seven Texas Ranger pictures and six Northwest Mounted Police dramas.

In the one-reel comedy field, Universal also will be represented by one release a week. The line-up includes thirteen comedies, featuring Arthur Lake, thirteen featuring Charles Puffy, thirteen featuring Neely Edwards and thirteen "Fanny" comedies, with George Summerville and Fanny, the trick mule. These one-reelers are known as Bluebird Comedies.

And, of course, Universal will continue to serve its customers with the International Newsreel, two issues a week.

Pathe's October 3rd Releases

Hal Roach and Mack Sennett Contribute Comedies—Schedule Offers Variety of Shorts

THE Pathe short feature program for the week of October 3rd, offers a list of subjects of unusual variety, Mack Sennett presents the two-reel comedy, "Love's Last Laugh," and Hal Roach offers "Wise Guys Prefer Brunettes," a two-reeler with Helene Chadwick. Other releases of the week include "A Pup's Tale," one of Hy Mayer's sketchbook series; chapter four of the Patheserial "The Fighting Marine," with Gene Tunney; "The Restless Race," a Grantland Rice Sportlight; Pathe Review No. 40, "Why Argue?" one of the Aesop's Film Fables; Topics of the Day, No. 40, and issues Nos. 82 and 83 of Pathe News.

"Love's Last Laugh," produced under the direction of Del Lord, features Raymond McKee, Ruth Hiatt, Sunshine Hart and Kewpie Morgan.

The Hal Roach two-reel Star Comedy,

"Wise Guys Prefer Brunettes" has Helene Chadwick, Jimmy Finlayson, Ted Healy, who was borrowed from vaudeville for this picture, and Charlotte Mineau in the cast. Stan Laurel directed.

"The Desperate Foe," is the fourth chapter of the Patheserial, "The Fighting Marine," starring Gene Tunney.

Pathe Review No. 40 offers "With the Roosevelts in Turkestan," released in co-operation with the Field Museum, Chicago; "The Workshop of Nature," a new series of studies in color by Arthur C. Pillsbury, and "The Poor Fish," photographed at the New Jersey State Fish Hatchery, Hackensack, N.J.

"The Restless Race," the latest of the Grantland Rice Sportlights, shows Americans in various forms of their outstanding quality—restlessness.

Steve Donoghue Star of Series

Hi-Mark Distributing Group of Six Two-Reel Productions With English Jockey Featured

NAT NATHANSON, president of Hi-Mark Productions, announces that his company will distribute a series of six two-reel productions starring Steve Donoghue, famous English jockey with a record for piloting more thoroughbreds to victory in the classic English Derby than any other rider in the history of the turf and who rode in this country in the match race in which Papyrus met Zev, champion American thoroughbred.

The stories in which Donoghue appears as a screen hero, are concerned with incidents centering about the race track and will depict romantic and stirring episodes in the colorful atmosphere which surrounds the "Sport of Kings." The jockey star is supported by a cast of all-star caliber. Carlyle Blackwell, well known to screen patrons over the world as a leading man and star, heads the cast assembled to support Donoghue in this series for release by Hi-Mark.

The titles of the releases in the series are as follows: "Riding for the King," "Beating the Book," "Hearts and Horses," "The Ringer," "A Dark Horse," and "The Golden Spurs."

It is reported that Donoghue's acting before the camera is natural to a degree and that his screen personality registers in a widely appealing manner.

Steve Donoghue, famous English jockey, in scenes from three of the series of six two-reel pictures being released by Hi-Mark Productions for the first showing to be at the Plaza, the new Publix theatre in London.

A novelty featurette that Cranfield & Clarke feel justly proud of is one that is released under the title of "Heroes of the Sea." This contains some extraordinary shots of an angry sea. This reel was held over at the Capitol for two weeks and ran for three weeks at Philadelphia.

New Series Added to Schedule

Cranfield & Clarke Increasing Program of Short Subjects--Extensive Line-up Planned

CRANFIELD & CLARKE have contracted for an extensive line-up of Short Subjects for the season of 1926-1927.

Added to the series of pictures already under release, a number of special pictures have been put out, the first of which is a two-reel novelty dealing entirely with the Prince of Wales, and goes under the title of "The Making of a King." Another special two-reel subject is entitled "Alpine S. O. S." This is the most thrilling Alpine picture that has ever been made.

Another series of pictures under the title of "Speed Cop's," the first two of which are just being released under the titles of "Gyping the Gypsies" and "A Minute to Go," featuring Milburn Morante and Eddy Featherstone.

Julian Ollendorff has completed the first three of the one-reel Sketchographs, which are a clever combination of cartoon and movie.

The Ned Wayburn "Charleston" reels have been sold for Great Britain and are being put out by the Butchers Film Service, Ltd. Mr. Clarke personally arranged

Producers for Red Seal Well Up To Schedule

SEVERAL new productions in the series of short subjects releases offered by Red Seal Pictures Corporation have been completed recently. Max Fleischer announced this week the completion of the last of his "Marvels of Motion" series for 1926-27. The "Keeping 'Em Guessing" series of one reel novelty pictures made by the Magicians' Society of America is well up to production schedule, two of the six releases now being ready for issue and the third is in the cutting room.

Dave Fleischer is about to start the tenth production in the series of "Carrie of the Chorus" comedies, in which Peggy Shaw is starred, and the third of the series of "Churchyards of Old America" group has been completed and prints delivered for release by Red Seal. Herb Fogel, editor of the "Film Reporter" one-reel monthly film magazine reels, is now selecting material for the third offering in this group.

Save Your Program With The Sava Program

The six series of Sava featurettes, genuine feature productions in two reel lengths, are veritable program savers. Sava short subjects are quality entertainments, diversified in their appeal and covering a wide field. Comedy, drama and novelty are included in the seventy-two productions, offering the basis of high quality short subject offerings on the program of any theatre throughout the entire year. The wise showman will build his short subject programs around the Sava featurettes.

Each of the Sava stars is an outstanding box office attraction in its own field. Sid Smith, Hank Mann, Fatty Laymon, Eddie Gordon, Eileen Sedgwick and Lightnin', the great canine actor, are of well established reputations. Their past offerings have been consistently good. Their Sava productions, meeting a new high standard of quality in the short subject field, will dominate the 1926-27 featurette releases. We suggest that you view a representative featurette from each of the six series,—our productions will stand any showman's test of quality.

Sales Angles Being Developed for Short Subjects On Company's Program

By ABE HELLER
Secretary, Sava Films, Inc.

TO point to a series of short subjects, and say they are "exploitation shorts," is to infer something that makes the palate of the exhibitor water with keen anticipation. The big thing, however, is to make the inference good in the finished article. That's what Sava Films, Inc., has as its object in making short subjects.

More specifically, what elements must be incorporated in order to justify the term "exploitation shorts?" To the merchandising mind the answer is simple.

The answer starts off with the same proposition that affects the principles of advertising. A good ad, in order to sell, must first, attract attention; secondly, it must hold the attention; thirdly, it must create the buying desire.

When an ad does these three things, it is a successful ad. If it doesn't, there may be two reasons for its failure. The ad writer is a poor craftsman, or the commodity to be sold is so far from the quality it is cracked up to be, that the writer can't get the proper incentive to work up sufficient enthusiasm in the ad.

It is with this knowledge in mind that Sava Films, Inc., started out to make short subjects with exploitation qualities.

To make the Sava exploitation shorts live up to their name the company has prepared an unusually complete line of advertising material and accessories for each of its productions. Special posters, lobby displays, ad cuts, scene cuts and slides will be available on each picture. Sava is making it possible for the exhibitors to exploit each picture individually; advertising material for complete series as such has been omitted.

The Sava stars include Sid Smith, Fatty Laymon, Hank Mann, Eddie Gordon, Eileen Sedgwick, and Lightnin', the popular police dog performer, and the world renowned Selig animals.

Sid Smith of the Hall Room Boy comedies of vaudeville fame, will produce twelve two-reel comedies for Sava. Fatty Laymon, the king of the present-day fat men, is making a series of twelve two-reel side-splitting comedies. Hank Mann and Eddie Gordon each are making a new series of comedies which include such names as "The Vulgar Boatman," "The Married Widow," "The Gold Brush" and "Wanderers of the Wetland."

Lightnin', one of the screen's greatest dog actors, will be starred with Eileen Sedgwick in a series of twelve dramas based on the widely read International Detective Stories.

What is expected to be the most sensational short subject series of the new season are twelve two-reel "Shadows of the Jungle" dramas with the original Selig wild animals.

"Fables" Shown to Fans in 57 Countries

ACCORDING to a compilation recently made by Fables Pictures, Inc., producers of Aesop's Film Fables, released by Pathe, the cartoon comedies in which cats, mice and other animals and old Farmer Al Falfa are the stars, are shown to the citizens of 57 countries regularly. ## Helen Foster Re-Engaged for Educational Leads Helen Foster, who scored a hit when she first appeared in Educational-Tuxedo Comedies in support of Johnny Arthur in "The Tourist," has been re-engaged to play a similar supporting role with the Tuxedo Comedy plan.

Ready Market This Year Broadcasting For Quality Short Product

By J. A. Jacobs

Director of Sales for Bray Studios

MY observations before and since my affiliation with the Bray Studios, Inc., has convinced me that the coming year will witness the greatest recognition of short subjects by exhibitors that the industry has ever known.

This is not an idle statement or an empty promise but a forecast reached only after a careful survey of the field. It is a forecast which I am glad to say is shared equally alike by the leading producers, distributors and exhibitors throughout the country and one which Mr. J. R. Bray and the producers associated with him believe to be an accurate gauge of conditions.

I have found as the result of my investigation that the exhibitor wants good short product. This applies to the second and third run exhibitors, as well as to the important first-run accounts. The product, however, must not only be consistently good, but must be made in large quantities and released often to effect the increased cost of distribution which a limited number of releases involves to the distributor.

To Produce 88 Short Subject

The Bray Studios, Inc., will produce eighty-eight short subjects for the new season, representing a diversity of product which involves a series of twelve slapstick comedies, twelve kid comedies and twelve fast-action comedies. The balance of the product will consist of 26 Bray cartoons, 13 Nature Specials and 13 Magazines. The production of these releases will all have Mr. Bray's personal supervision, and the reputation he has enjoyed over a period of fifteen years as a producer of consistently good product is back of every picture bearing the Bray trade-mark.

In and Out of Town

W. A. V. MACK, Mid-West Division sales manager of Pathe, has left the home office for an extended tour of the Pathe exchanges in his territory. He will stop at Detroit, Chicago, Des Moines, Omaha, Minneapolis, Milwaukee and Chicago.

ARTHUR W. KELLY, vice-president and treasurer of United Artists, sailed for England on September 15th in company with his wife. He will visit associate companies handling United Artist product.

OLIVER M. SAYLOR, author of literary works concerning the theatre, and representative of Morris Gest, arrived last Monday on the S.S. Columbus after his annual tour of Europe, which took in Spain, Italy, France and Austria.

A. W. SMITH, JR., divisional sales manager of First National, returned to New York after a four-day trip to Washington, D.C., Norfolk, Va., and Baltimore. He reported the closing of a contract in Norfolk whereby the Wilmer and Vincent Circuit will play the First National Banner group.

O. N. Monday of this week Edgar B. Hatrick, vice-president and general manager of International Newsreel and Cosmopolitan Productions, left for Los Angeles and Hollywood, where he will remain for about a month.

N. L. MANHEIM, export manager of Universal Pictures Corporation, sailed for Europe last Wednesday aboard the S. S. Aquilania, on his annual inspection of the Universal Continental offices. He will be abroad for six weeks and will arrange for the premiere of two Universal specials.

"U" Secures Services of Octavus Roy Cohen

UNIVERSAL has signed Octavus Roy Cohen, whose stories of negro folk have been appearing in the Saturday Evening Post for the past several years, to a contract to write a series of ten stories to be used as starring vehicles for Charles Puffy.

This is the author's first work to be written directly for the screen although several of his published stories have been converted into celluloid. The Puffy comedies will be made into a series of ten and will have elaborate casts, sets and costumes. Besides the Puffy stories Universal holds a further contract on Cohen's services which will involve at least two more series of subjects. The author has already left for his home in the South to prepare the first story.

Laemmle brought Puffy over to this country from Vienna where he had been making film and stage appearances. Having decided that this was an appropriate time to launch the comedian he sent word to the home office to secure quality comedy material appropriate for Puffy's bulk. It was in following out this order of Laemmle that the acquisition of Cohen resulted.

Export and Import Film Company, Inc., of New York owns the exclusive world's rights (except United States and Canada) to a series of four productions in which Edith Roberts (left) is starred; a series of four in which Betty Compson (centre) has the stellar role and four to eight pictures in which Paulin Garon (right) appears with other stars. All feature length vehicles

Censor Offices Remain in N.Y.C.

Commission Still to See Pictures in Manhattan After Change in Department

EVEN though the work of the New York State Motion Picture Commission is to be taken over by the Department of Education on and after next January, in accordance with the reorganization program that has been adopted in New York state, the censoring of pictures will continue to be done in New York City, and the same offices will continue to be occupied.

This much is certain, following a visit last week to the Commission by Lloyd L. Cheney, Chief Administrative officer of the State Education department, and William J. Wallin, of Yonkers, a member of the State Board of Regents, which directs the activities of the department. Mr. Cheney is making a careful survey of the work being done by the Motion Picture Commission and will make a report to the Regents at its next meeting on October 21.

Mr. Cheney feels that any attempt to censor pictures at the headquarters of the Education Department in Albany, would be a hardship on the producers, necessitating the shipment of film to Albany, and a consequent delay of anywhere from two to four days. He expressed himself as well satisfied with the arrangement now in effect relative to handling films by the Commission. There is no space, moreover, in the Education Building, that could be used for projection rooms.

There still exists the possibility of motion picture censorship being abolished in New York State, but not before July 1, next. Governor Smith is a candidate for re-election and has always favored censorship abolition. There is a report also to the effect that at the coming Republican State Convention, a plank will be inserted in the platform calling for censorship elimination from the statute books. If this takes place, then both political parties in New York State would be virtually in favor of doing away with all censorship and bills to that effect would be introduced in the coming session of the Legislature and would be given full support by either party.

F. P. Canadian Opens School for Developing Talent

H. M. Thomas, Western Division manager of Famous Players Canadian Corp., has announced the opening of the Famous Players Canadian School of Music and Allied Arts in Capitol Hall, formerly the Manitoba Hall, at Winnipeg on October 4, to develop Canadian talent for the stage or music primarily for Paramount theatres. The principal of the school is Leila Anger Thomas, wife of H. M. Thomas, who, herself, is a stage and concert star. Special courses are offered in singing, dramatic art, stage make-up, dancing, pipe organ, piano and other instrumental music. A similar school is to be opened by Famous Players in Toronto.

Alma Bennett Added to "Men of Dawn Cast"

Alma Bennett has been added to the cast of "Men of the Dawn," the First National feature now nearing completion at the Burbank studio with Milton Sills the principal player in the cast. Natalie Kingston, William V. Mong and others figure prominently in the picture.

Greg Blackton Cast for "The Popular Sin"

U. A. Production Units Busy

Four Actually in Work—Six to Follow; Plans Being Laid for Newly Acquired Star Vehicles

ALL of the independent contributing members of United Artists comprising the players who will be seen in the "Dominant Sixteen," the United Artists' product for the 1926-27 season, are now at work on the company's fall program. Ten of the releases are already finished or in production.

Mary Pickford, having completed "Sparrows," is back on the Coast preparing for her next picture, which will be one of four announced several months ago, among them "Cash," a romance of a five-and-ten-cent store girl, and a story of New England. She will begin work on her new picture within the next few months.

Gloria Swanson returned last week from Virginia, where she had been vacationing. Her next film, as yet untitled, will be produced in New York with Albert Parker directing and with Hugo Ballin as art director and Robert Schable as production head.

"The Circus," Charlie Chaplin's new film, is rapidly nearing completion. The comedian is reported to have taken 400,000 feet of film at the Chaplin studio in Hollywood. Merna Kennedy is the leading lady for the star who returns in "The Circus" to his earlier comedy style.

Douglas Fairbanks is at present out at the Pickford-Fairbanks studio laying plans for his next production. He and Mary Pickford canceled their trip to the Orient to make their next pictures at the Pickford-Fairbanks studio.

John Barrymore is working under Alan Crosland's direction at the Pickford-Fairbanks studio in Hollywood on his initial contribution to United Artists, "The Vagabond Lover," based on the Paul Bern script of the amorous and poetical Francois Villon, the French fifteenth-century poet and lover. Marceline Day acts as the leading lady. The German actor, Konrad Veidt, has sailed for America at Barrymore's invitation to play the role of King Louis XI in his new film.

Buster Keaton is in Oregon finishing the camera work on "The General," his Civil War comedy which centers about the General-Texas railroad engine battle at Big Shanty, Georgia, in 1862.

Henry King is finishing desert scenes on "The Winning of Barbara Worth," the Samuel Goldwyn production in which Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky have the principal roles. Work will be started on Goldwyn's next picture after "Barbara Worth," with the same players co-featured and with George Fitzmaurice directing, as soon as the present production is finished. Morris Gest has gathered his international cast for "The Darling of the Gods," the first of his six films for United Artists. He is expected to announce shortly the names of the players. Edwin Carewe, accompanied by Count Leo Tolstoi, the Countess and Louis Jerome are in Hollywood, where they will begin work on Leo Tolstoi's "Resurrection." The adaptation was finished last week by Carewe and Count Tolstoi, son of the Russian master. Finis Fox is now doing the scenario and working script.

Vladimir Nemirovitch-Danchenko arrived in New York from Europe last week. United Artists' executives will announce their plans for the Russian director in the near future. Roland West will make "Two Years Before the Mast," Dana's sea classic, touring the world for that purpose. Norma Talmadge, upon completing her contract with First National, will make pictures for United Artists. No announcement has been made as to her first venture.

Constance, according to Joseph M. Schenck, will also, upon the completion of her present contract, make films for United Artists at the rate of two a year. Hans Kraely will probably be scenarist.

$25,000,000 for 51 M-G-M Films

More "Outdoor" Pictures Than in Past Year; Same Combinations to Produce

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER estimates a total of $25,000,000 will be spent on 51 productions to be made for release during the 1926-27 season, $22,000,000 of which will be spent in California-made productions.

Stories of the outdoors will be more prevalent than in the past with drawing room and society drama playing a less important part in the season's output. "Mysterious Island," "Tell It to the Marines," "Trail of '98," "Slide Kelley Slide," "Red, White and Blues," "Flaming Forest," "Understanding Heart," "Captain Salvation," "Twelve Miles Out," and "The Temptress" are some of the outdoor stories to be shown during the coming months.

The same unit system of production used last year will again be followed in making the new pictures says Louis B. Mayer.

Players who are expected to reach stardom under the M-G-M banner during the coming year are: Renee Adoree, Eleanor Boardman, Lew Cody, Joan Crawford, Greta Garbo, William Haines and Sally O'Neil. This is the prediction of exhibitors, based on the present pace of the climb toward stardom of these players.

Samuel Carlisle Added to Warner Bros. Staff

SAMUEL CARLISLE, who has been connected with the Price Waterhouse and Company for the past eleven years and who during most of that time has been delving into the motion picture industry and the affairs of producing and distributing companies, has joined the executive staff of Warner Bros. at the home office. He is serving as comptroller and assistant treasurer. Harry M. Warner, who made the announcement, has for the past two years endeavored to secure Carlisle for his organization, but negotiations between them were concluded but a few days ago.

New talent developed during the past year includes Patricia Avery, Francis X. Bushman, Jr., Estelle Clark, Joan Crawford, Karl Dane, Roy D'Arcy, Marceline Day, Greta Garbo, William Haines, Lars Hanson, Maurice Kains, Gwen Lee, Beatrice Lillie, Tim McCoy, Sally O'Neil, Greta V. Rue, and Barbara Kent.

First National Personnel in Australia Changed

Important changes in the ranks of First National exchangemen in Australia have been effected. R. A. Davidson, formerly associated with the Wellington office, has assumed charge of the new branch office at Auckland. The Wellington exchange is now managed by Aubrey Durham, for the past two years associated with the West Australian territory. After having established an excellent sales record in Victoria, N. Matthews has been placed in charge of the Perth office. Cecil Mason, well-known film man of the Antipodes, became assistant general manager of Australasia. Although only in his early thirties, Mason is one of the pioneers in the industry's development in Australia.

Fox Films Has New Picture Find in Nancy Nash

Triumphing over fifty other applicants for the role of Cicely Rand in "The City," Nancy Nash, a resident of Mercedes, Texas, is the latest find of Fox Films. Miss Nash was visiting in Los Angeles at the time of the tests for the part and it was due to the suggestion of a friend that she tried for the test. As Miss Nash originally intended to enter Texas University it was necessary for her to convince her parents by wire that the college career should be sacrificed for the motion picture. Fox Films officials confidently believe Miss Nash possesses the same screen talent evidenced by Janet Gaynor and Olive Borden, two other Fox Films finds.

Gary Cooper Joins Cast of Paramount's "Wings"

In Lucien Hubbard's production of "Wings," Gary Cooper, recently signed to a long term contract as a Paramount featured player, has been cast for an important role. The list of names in the featured cast includes Clara Bow, Charles Rogers, Richard Arlen, El Brendel and Richard Tucker.

Constance Talmadge—U. A. Release Confirmed

IT was officially announced this week by Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the Board of Directors of United Artists and producer of the Constance Talmadge productions, that this star's future productions will be released through United Artists. Miss Talmadge has two pictures to make for First National release before starting her new distribution arrangements.

Miss Talmadge will make two pictures a year for United Artists; they will be sophisticated comedies of modern life.

THE CHECK-UP

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports.

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."
The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

Ralph Forbes, the young English actor, who made his screen debut as John, one of the three Geste brothers in "Beau Geste," recently signed a long term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Forbes has been prominently identified with the theatre both in New York and London. He is now appearing with his wife, Ruth Chatterton, in "The Green Hat," at the El Capitan Theatre in Hollywood.

E. M. Asher has completed casting for "The Lady in Ermine," Corinne Griffith's current starring vehicle now in production at the Metropolitan under the direction of James Flood. The latest additions to the cast are Jane Keckley and Bert Sprotte, who will portray character parts. Other players who will be seen in the production include Einar Hanson, Francis X. Bushman, Ward Crane and Charles Sellon.

Appearing with Mae Murray in her latest picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, "Valencia," are two former Russian aristocrats, Michael Visaroff, former Russian official who recently appeared in Edmund Goulding's "Paris," and Michael Vavieh, also a former Russian dignitary, who was seen as the general in the screen-version of "The Swan."

Cecil B. De Mille has engaged Ernest Van Pelt, former independent motion picture producer, to act as production manager of the unit filming "The Cruise of the Jasper B," adapted from the Don Marquis novel and starring Rod La Rocque.

Patrieia Avery, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's newest screen discovery, who just finished her role in "Annie Laurie," has been given a part in "The Little Journey," which Robert Z. Leonard is directing, with Claire Windsor, William Haines and Harry Carey in the leading roles.

"Stepping Along," Johnny Hines' new First National picture, has passed the camera stage and is now undergoing the process of cutting, editing and titling under the personal supervision of the comedian. Jack McGowan is preparing the titles and George Amy is doing the cutting and editing.

Lillian Leighton, character actress, who played an important role in Ibanez' "Torrent," is the latest addition to the cast of a feature dealing with a modern romance of Spain, being directed by John Stahl and co-starring Ramon Navarro and Alice Terry. Players who are in the cast include Edward Connelly, George K. Arthur, Edward Martindel and Otto Hoffman. The story is adapted from the play by the Spanish dramatist, Jose Echegaray.

Priseilla Dean has started work on "Jewels of Desire," with Paul Powell directing and John Bowers the male lead. Marie Prevost is working on "Man Bait," under Donald Crisp's direction and Kenneth Thompson in the leading masculine role. Anthony Coldewey is preparing the adaptation of "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" for Metropolitan. Douglas Fairbanks Jr. is a member of the cast supporting Marie Prevost in "Man Bait," as are Betty Francisco, Adda Gleason and Eddie Gribbon.

Max Fabian, photographer of "The Barrier" and other Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions, will handle the camera during the filming of John M. Stahl's new film for that company, starring Ramon Navarro with Alice Terry.

Marguerite De La Motte, who recently completed "Pals in Paradise," has been loaned by Metropolitan to Universal for one picture. Director George Seitz is busy with the cutting of "Pals in Paradise." Harrison Ford and Phyllis Haver are getting ready for "No Control," which Scott Sidney will direct.

Dimitri Buchowetzki, the Russian director, filming "Valencia" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has assembled his technical staff in which are included Percy Hilburn, who photographed "The Blackbird," "Memory Lane" and other Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer films, and H. Bruce Hummerstone, who assisted Edmund Goulding in the filming of "Paris," as first assistant to the Russian director.

At the Metropolitan Studio Leatrice Joy is about to start work on "Nobody's Widow." H. B. Warner, Jacqueline Logan, Ernest Torrence, Dorothy Cummings, Robert Edson, Joseph Schildkraut, Rudolph Schildkraut and many more are working in "The King of Kings." Jetta Gondal is starting "Fighting Love" with Nils Chrisander directing.

E. M. Asher, who produces Corinne Griffith's features for First National, has engaged Charles Sellon, character actor, for an important role in "The Lady in Ermine," Miss Griffith's newest starring vehicle on which camera work has been started under the direction of James Flood. Horace Jackson has been put in charge of the designing and art work of "The Lady in Ermine."

The leading feminine role in "The Taxi Dancer," Robert T. Shannon's story which Harry Millard will direct as a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, has been assigned to Joan Crawford, who was selected after twenty-one girls had been tested. A. P. Younger, who did the screen adaptation of "Brown of Harvard" is preparing the scenario of "The Taxi Dancer."

It took three directors, or the services of Walter Lang, Glenn Belt and Renaud Hoffman, to shoot a pitched battle in a picturesque street of a South American republic which fight figures prominently in "Money to Burn," the Gotham production which, it is said, even in its rough stages, has exceeded by more than double the cost of any previous picture released by Lumas.

In Lou Tellegen's production for Fox Films, "My Wife's Honor," Dolores Del Rio is the leading featured player in the cast and Paulette Goddard the feminine heavy.

Bebe Daniels has started work on her new Paramount picture, "Stranded in Paris," under the direction of Arthur Rosson. James Hall appears opposite Miss Daniels. "Stranded in Paris" is an adaptation by Hermann Mankiewicz and John McDermott of the German novel, "Jenny's Escape." The scenario is being prepared by Ethel Doherty and Louis Long.

The Fox Film corporation has engaged the services of Philip Klein to do the scenario from the "The Music Master," the play by his father, the late Charles Klein. Allan Dwan will direct the film.

The cast of "While London Sleeps," Rin-Tin-Tin's new starring vehicle for Warner Bros., was augmented the past week in the persons of John Patrick and George Kotsionaros, a Greek wrestler who has contributed several screen characterizations. In the Rin-Tin-Tin picture he will play a difficult characterization—that of a half man and half ape. The unit is working in sets of the Limehouse district of London. The supporting cast is made up thus far of Helene Costello, Walter Merrill, De Witt Jennings, Otto Mattiesen and Carl Stockdale.

Another "heavy" role has been given Lloyd Whitlock, who a short time ago played the same type of role in Ray Roekett's "Paradise." Whitlock will appear in the screen version of "Not Herbert," Howard Erving Young's stage play of the same name. Featured in this production is Ben Lyon. Pauline Starke has the leading feminine role. Also in the cast are Sam Hardy, Virginia Lee Corbin, Diana Kane, Tammany Young, Christine Compton, Byron Douglas and Charles Craig. Howard Higgin is directing.

Jacques Rollens is the latest player to be added to the cast of "The Story of Mother Machree," which John Ford is directing at the West Coast studio of Fox Films.

The Warner Bros. exercised their option on the services of Edward Clark, playwright and scenarist, and under the terms of his new contract he will write exclusively for them hereafter. He has just completed "Mama Kiss Papa," which is now in production featuring George Sidney, Louise Fazenda and Vera Gordon. He also wrote "Broken Hearts of Hollywood," "Private Izzy Murphy" and "Silky Ann."

New members of the cast of "His New York Wife," J. G. Bachmann's latest production, are Charles Cruze and Fontaine La Rue. Cruze recently appeared opposite Alberta Vaughn while Miss La Rue, formerly starred in the Parisian Folies Bergere, is a recent arrival in this country. She replaces Erin La Bissoniere, originally announced for the vamp role.

Under a new long term contract with Famous Players-Lasky, Irie Stuart was given her first role—that of "Theresa," second lead in "Stranded in Paris," Bebe Daniels' starring picture. Miss Stuart was placed under contract by Paramount late in July. She was formerly a model for magazine covers and advertisements.

Many Respond to "Mandalay" Essay Test

Letters on Chaney Acting Invited by Austin Newspaper

AN essay contest proved to be one of the outstanding stunts in Manager T. Wilson Erwin's campaign on "The Road to Mandalay" when it showed at the Majestic Theatre, Austin, Tex.

Through a tie-up with the Austin Statesman, prizes were awarded for the best essays on what you consider to be Lon Chaney's greatest characterization. The essays were limited to 100 words and the prizes consisted of $10 to the winner, $5 to the second best, and a month's pass to the Majestic for the third best.

300 signs in the shape of an arrow, were tacked on buildings, bridges, and posts throughout the city streets and country roads. The signs pointed in the direction of the Majestic Theater and read, "This is the road to Mandalay—Majestic Theatre—Mon., Tues., Wed."

A window display was arranged with a corner drug store in the business section. Stills and cards announcing the picture, theatre, and pay dates were conspicuously displayed.

A police dog and two woolly pups displayed in the lobby of the Alhambra Theatre, Milwaukee, attracted attention to the showing there of "A Hero of the Big Snows" (Warner Bros.). Display was arranged by Manager Rudolph A. Kuehn

"Mantrap" Signs Warning at Street Excavation

Because the streets in the business district were torn up, due to the installation of a sewerage system, it offered Manager George R. Stewart a splendid opportunity to advertise "Mantrap" when it played at the Sterling Theatre, Greeley, Colo.

One hundred 12x15 placards worded, "Danger—Mantrap," mounted on pointed laths were stuck liberally around the diggings and even in the street intersections where electric traffic markers were being installed.

Motorists Target for Teaser Campaign on "Stop, Look and Listen"

WHEN "Stop, Look and Listen" played at Pleasanton, Kan., under the auspices of the American Legion, a novelty teaser sign used as an exploitation medium attracted wide attention and caused general comment.

Several weeks before the picture was to play, the Legionnaires put up a "stop" sign at the intersection of two roads, placing two red lanterns on the sign. There is a great deal of travel on both of these roads. Naturally, everyone would rush almost onto the sign, and then stop suddenly, affording a great deal of amusement to the onlookers, who knew there was no danger, but yet were not on to the secret. Finally, several days before the picture was to play, the "Stop, Look and Listen" sign appeared, thus solving the mystery.

A huge suit box was the symbol used by the Best Theatre, Parsons, Kan., in the exploitation for Universal's "Skinner's Dress Suit." The box was used on a truck as a ballyhoo in advance of the showing and occupied a central place in the lobby of the theatre during the run of the picture

Cleaner Co. Distributes Heralds for "Skinner"

Through a tie-up with the Standard Dry Cleaning Co., Manager F. J. Miller obtained a wide circulation of advertising when "Skinner's Dress Suit" played at the Modjeska Theatre, Augusta, Ga.

Heralds, bearing the words, "we cleaned 'Skinner's Dress Suit' and we would like to serve you," followed by the name of the company, were distributed several days in advance of the film showing.

The theatre took care of 2,000 heralds while the Cleaning Co. saw to it that 3,000 more were distributed.

Makes Mystery of Star in "Miss Nobody"

Manager S. S. Oakley introduced a mystery element into his campaign for "Miss Nobody" at the Liberty Theatre, Lake Worth, Fla., by blocking out the name of the star, Anna Q. Nilsson, on all posters and omitting the name from other advertising. All the advertising substituted a question, asking fans to guess who the star was, for the missing name. The campaign thus was centered about the line, "Who is 'Miss Nobody'?"

"3 Bad Men" Thrill Cleveland in Teaser Campaign

MANAGER John Royal of B. F. Keith's Palace Theatre, Cleveland, joined ballyhoo and teaser principles and evolved a formula which worked out as one of the most novel advance campaigns staged for a picture in a long while. The campaign was used for "3 Bad Men" and it attracted the keenest interest to the showing at the Palace of this Fox production. He engaged three ballyhoo artists to appear in make-up of the conventional "bad man" and ride about the streets mounted on horses. The appearance of the "bad men" was advanced by small teaser ads, in the Cleveland newspapers, under the heading "warning."

The ads read: "Watch out for the 3 Bad Men—Call Superior 2280." The phone number was that of the theatre. Other teasers read: "Headed this way—please be on the lookout for the arrival in this city of 3 Bad Men—Call Superior 2280." When the bad men finally appeared on the streets it was with banners flashing the news that the "3 Bad Men" were appearing on the screen of the Palace Theatre. Display ads in the newspapers announcing the showing broke simultaneously with the appearance of the ballyhoo. The "bad men" and the lobby display used for the picture at the Palace are shown in the photos above.

The Place of Teasers in Exploitation

Arousing Curiosity of Purchasing Public a Vital Force in Advertising the Picture and the Theatre Profitably

By MAX TRELL

First National Publicity Department

THERE is only one thing more important than teasers. That is the show itself. In many instances of early showmanship, however, the factor that was really essential was not the show but the stimuli that encouraged patronage.

Teasers, as the motion picture exhibitor knows them, claim kinship with such apparently remote forces as the "big parade," meaning here the motley procession that heralds the advent of the circus, and the "barker." Their relationship lies in the fact that they exist by reason of their arousing the curiosity of the purchasing public. Those who have listened attentively to the "barker" are aware of the secret of his success. It consists in talking a great deal, whilst evincing the greatest enthusiasm, and at the same time "giving away" as little of the actual show that awaits to unfold itself within the tent as is humanly consistent with intelligent showmanship. The best teasers do no less, although their appeal is made in cold type instead of moving verbal utterance coupled, in many instances, with a highly developed form of acting.

Two Types of Teasers

Teasers, like the motion pictures which they serve, fall roughly into two classifications: comic and serious. It hardly needs to be mentioned that the teasers are closely adapted to the type of production that they forerun. Comedies call for comedy teasers. Dramatic attractions require teasers that are in the main serious, if not actually dramatic. Sometimes a daring exhibitor will reverse the mode. But such procedure is dangerous and is generally to be avoided.

Broadly speaking, all pictures admit of exploitation by teasers. However, some are not so easily taken in hand as others and exhibitors, as a rule, favor specials, or pictures provided with title or plot which specifically lends itself to mystification. In Colleen Moore's recent vehicle, "Irene," First National's publicity department, under C. F. Chandler, saw an opportunity to create a set of teasers based on the strong fashion element in the production. In consequence a set of six were prepared, each bearing the Colleen Moore facial imprint and the figure of a mannequin in diminuendo. The ad copy read as follows: Colleen Moore presents Dolores (name changed in each teaser) one of the sixty glorified models in "Irene," her greatest comedy achievement and the world's greatest style show—a sensation!"

Selling the Star with Teasers

Although Harry Langdon's "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," was his first feature-length comedy release for First National, it was decided that Harry and not the picture should be played up in the series of six teasers and a closing ad that First National's press-book department designed for exhibitors. Thus, each of the six teasers contained a line, such as "Society Worships Him," "Babies Cry For Him," etc., amplified by a humorous illustration. The makers steered clear of overburdening the 2 in. X 1 col. space allotment, either with superfluous copy or too expansive pictorial content. The closing ad contained the lines, "And Now We Have Him," the illustration showing a head of Langdon under which appeared the title of the feature.

One of the cleverest adaptations of a humorous idea is contained in the set of teasers accompanying "Sweet Daddies." Here the play was on the word "masterpiece" as translated into six foreign languages, including Chinese, Greek, Russian and French. The illustration graphically portrayed the significance of the foreign word so that even he who ran was able to grasp the meaning, although possibly ignorant even of the word's lettering. The final ad, as used by the Kentucky Theatre, Lexington, Ky., cleared up the mystery by stating that the various foreign words all meant in plain American "Sweet Daddies," and mentioned the name of the theatre. Previously the name of the theatre had been kept a secret, the same being true of the two sets described in the foregoing. A further adaptation of the "Sweet Daddies" teaser idea was applied by the Kentucky Theatre to government post-cards, these being sent out to the theatre's mailing list, although the theatre was not mentioned on the cards. Including the final card, which gave away the name of the theatre, the series consisted of four cards.

Samples of the newspaper displays used to feature the showing of "The Vision," Educational-Technicolor production in three reels, at the Lucas Theatre, Savannah, Ga., are illustrated in the reproductions above

"The Vision" Made Feature of Campaign by Lucas in Savannah

ARTHUR LUCAS, manager of the Lucas Theatre, Savannah, Ga., recently completed a successful and unique advertising campaign on "The Vision," which he showed at his theatre August 19, 20 and 21.

In advance of his newspaper advertising, which amounted to some 80 inches for "The Vision" alone, he sent out postcards to his regular patrons with the following printed on the back:

"Novelty is only offered every now and then. The frequent isn't novel. I do not want a Lucas patron to miss the novelty that will be presented, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, August 19, 20, 21. Although only in two reels it will be the feature of a most inviting bill. For sheer beauty and gripping appeal 'The Vision,' inspired by the painting 'Speak!' is the last word in a novel and worth-while film. 'The Vision' is an inspired creation."

Mr. Lucas opened his newspaper campaign by planting mats showing scenes from "The Vision" in the newspapers on Monday, August 16, when in his advertising space at the bottom he said: "Note—'The Vision,' a novel in two reels, will be featured Thursday, Friday and Saturday." This was repeated on Tuesday. Then on Wednesday he placed another scene cut on page two of one of the Savannah newspapers and carried a two-column by 9-inch ad, in which prominent display was devoted to "The Vision."

On the opening day of the Romance Production, Mr. Lucas in an elaborate layout used 21 inches in a three column by 11 inch ad for his Short Feature in one paper and 12 inches in a 25-inch advertisement in the other newspaper. He also was able to place another scene cut in the news columns.

Distorted Mirror Attracts Attention to Window

A trick mirror, giving a distorted reflection of those who gazed into it, proved an excellent attraction for a tie-up window in which the showing of "You Never Know Women" at the Strand Theatre, Birmingham, was featured with a display of trunks and hand-luggage by a store in that city.

Old Stunts Effective When Revived in Birmingham

Two old timers in the way of exploitation stunts were revived successfully in Birmingham recently by Manager Rodney Bush, of the Galax Theatre. The stunts were used for "The Social Highwayman." The first was a ballyhoo, which consisted simply of a man dressed in evening clothes and wearing on his back a small sign announcing the picture, dates and theatre. He wore a mask and carried a walking stick—accessories which heightened the interest of people on the street, who seemed to find the sight most curious and turned for a second look and thus got the theatre's message. The other was a revival of the old safe stunt. A safe was placed in the lobby, with a card announcing that a pair of seats would be given anybody who succeeded in opening it. Several attempts were made to open it, a large crowd invariably gathering to witness the efforts.

Cliff Lewis Now with Publix

Cliff Lewis, who has been looking after exploitation and advertising at the Strand in Syracuse, and formerly with Shirley's Theatres in Schenectady, has gone with Publix in New York City.

Pictorial publicity for pictures. Pathe publicity department has made a "serialization" of the screen episode play, "The Fighting Marine," with stills telling the story of adventure and thrills. Daily strips relating a chapter in the play are being published by a number of newspapers throughout the country. The N. Y. Graphic is publishing the feature in New York, where delivery trucks and news stand display cards are being used to publicize the feature Mystery still surrounds the fire which burned out the Miller Theatre, Bonsteel, S.D., last week, Dan Turney, manager, said.

Fire which started in a barn back of the theatre razed Kersten's Opera House, Wittenberg, Wis., recently.

South East

THE Rialto Theatre, Columbia, S.C., which was formerly owned by Mr. L. T. Lester, Jr., has been sold to B. L. Hall, of Batesburg, S.C.

A. B. Cheatham, personal representative of Arthur Bromberg, Progress Pictures, is spending several weeks in the Charlotte office of the aforesaid company, making trips into the territory with the local manager, H. H. Everett.

W. E. Stewart, of the Pastime and Westmore theatres, Concord, N.C., paid a flying trip to Charlotte during the past week.

Claude Edgerton, owner of the Peoples Theatre, Roanoke Rapids, N.C., is building a new theatre in Wilson, N.C., which they expect to open about the first of October.

T. B. Smith, has advised that his theatre in Clinton and the theatre in Ayden, N.C., will start operating six days a week. These theatres, for the past few months, have been running on a three-day-a-week basis.

Claude Edgerton, of the Peoples, Roanoke Rapids, N.C., has leased the new theatre which is being built by the Oxford Amusement Co., Oxford, N.C., and will open this house in the early part of October.

It is reported that S. S. Stevenson, general manager of the Stevenson Theatres, Inc., has selected two more sites in the Piedmont section of North Carolina in which he expects to shortly construct theatres.

The Charlotte Better Films Committee announced that they will again start their Saturday Morning Children Matinees at the Imperial Theatre. These matinees were discontinued during the summer and Mrs. J. A. Parham, President of the Better Films, and Mr. Irwin, have arranged to renew these programs.

George Parr, of the Imperial Theatre, Lancaster, S.C., paid Film Row a visit during the past week.

J. E. Webb, owner and manager of the Imperial Theatre at Kings Mountain, has thrown the doors of the beautiful amusement palace open to the people of Kings Mountain. This community, which has a population of only about 3,000, should be very proud of a beautiful theatre like this, which was erected at a cost of approximately $50,000. It is modern from every standpoint, fully equipped with the latest and most modern equipment. Mr. Webb states his theatre is doing a very nice business and he is more than pleased so far, with the results obtained.

A. F. Sams, general manager of the Piedmont Amusement Company, Winston-Salem, N.C., and Mr. M. Merriwether, manager of the Pilot and Amuzu, W. Salem, N.C., were Charlotte visitors the past week.

Albany

MILTON CAPLON, salesman at the Warner Brothers' Exchange in this city, is out a $450 diamond stickpin as well as his watch and chain and $12 in cash, through having his room burglarized at one of the local hotels. Several other rooms were entered during the same night. The burglars even took Mr. Caplon's check book and twelve cents in stamps.

Bob Pierce, of the firm of Whitney, Young and Pierce, of Ilion, announces that the work of redecorating the Capitol Theatre there has been completed. It is said that the company is looking around for another house near Ilion and will branch out soon.

A. W. Goodman is planning to dispose of the Orpheum Theatre in Utica, and judging from the number who are after the theatre, he will have little trouble.

Eva Goldstein, formerly of the First National Exchange here, has now gone with Warner Brothers, where she will become secretary to Harry Seed, the local manager.

Owing to prevailing conditions in Greece, it is quite possible that Alec Papayanakos, owner of the American Theatre in Canton, will postpone his contemplated visit back home for a few months.

The First National Club, of this city, made up of members of the exchange, is planning to reorganize for the winter months and stage a number of social affairs.

Dave Seymour's Theatre, in Saranac Lake, is to be used for a monster benefit, which will be staged next month by William Morris, of New York City, and which will bring to the Adirondack town several stars of the stage and film.

Al Herman, who recently resigned as manager of the First National Exchange here, returned to town this week, and began his duties as manager of the Producers Distributing Corporation Exchange. Mr. Herman spent last week at Rockaway and came back with some wonderful tales as to his scores over the links there.

Dave Murray has resigned at the local Universal office as salesman and has been succeeded by Leon Herman, who has been acting as a salesman for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the Catskill and Capital districts.

Henry Grossman, of New York, journeyed up to Hudson last week to inspect his theatres there. It was his first trip in several weeks. Mr. Grossman has entirely recovered from the effects of an operation for appendicitis.

In memory of her late husband, who was one of the pioneer exhibitors in Albany, Mrs. Samuel Suckno has presented a Holy Scroll to the Albany Synagogue. Mr. Suckno operated the Albany and Regent theatres at the time of his death, about two years ago.

Jack Hutcheon, operating the Strand, Regent and Rialto theatres, in Amsterdam, is playing quite a bit of golf these days, but according to friends from along Film Row in this city, he will never equal Bobby Jones.

Charles Sesonske is adding about 800 seats to his Liberty Theatre in Watertown. Mr. Sesonske took over the Opera House in Lowville last week and plans to run both vaudeville and pictures during the months to come.

Myer Schine and Pete Dana, of Gloversville, were among the exhibitors in town last week, at the meeting of the Arbitration Board.

The men and women in the Pathe Exchange presented Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Meigs, Jr., with a handsome silver serving set. Mr. and Mrs. Meigs were married in Westfield, N.J., and will be at home to their many friends in this city on and after September 27. Employees of the Associated Exhibitors Exchange here also gave the couple a piece of silver.

Ed Walsh is once more back handling the Albany Theatre in Schenectady, which has reopened as a first-run house. The theatre has been extensively decorated during the past summer and presents an attractive appearance.

Frank Learnan, who has been manager of the Strand in Schenectady for some time past, will take on additional duties in looking after the Barli, which is operated by the same management.

The Crescent Theatre in Schenectady, is once more in operation with Betty Feuer in charge. The house was closed during August while the main business street in the city was being widened. The work seriously interfered with several theatres and business at the Crescent fell off to the extent that it was decided to close the house for the time being.

Another effort is to be made to ascertain the public sentiment in Ogdensburg on Sunday shows. A representative of the Schine Bros. spent several days in Ogdensburg last week, conferring with the Mayor and other city officials. The Schine Bros. have recently taken over three theatres in that city.

Frank Hickey, treasurer of Farash Theatres, Inc., in Schenectady, is back on the job following a vacation spent in the Adirondacks.

C. H. Buckley, owner of the Leland and the Clinton Square theatres, was a mighty proud husband this past week, when Mrs. Buckley carried off first prize at the municipal flower show for the best decorated table.

W. W. Farley, of Albany, one of the best known motion picture theatre owners in this part of the state, and for many years a recognized Democratic leader, has been named as a delegate to the party's convention in Syracuse, the latter part of this month.

Captain Broome is no longer running the Grand in Scotia, and will devote his efforts during the months to come, to the popcorn business, which he controls in Schenectady. Captain Broome was at one time associated with the Shirley enterprises.

Miss Levine is the new organist at the Pine Hills Theatre, succeeding Fred Corcoran, who has gone to Harmanus-Bleecker Hall, where he replaces Stephen Boisclair, who is the organist at the Mark Ritz.

The Albany Film Board of Trade, following an inspection last week at local exchanges, gave the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer office first honors for fire prevention and general appearance.

Frank Chase, of Pine Plains, and Frank Asher, of Rhinebeck, both owners of theatres and likewise in charge of the Dutchess County Fair, will now be able to give more attention to their houses as the Fair is over after several most successful days.

Des Moines

PARK ROEBUCK of the Ideal Theatre, Des Moines, has closed his house and is spending a little time and some money in remodeling and redecorating the theatre. He is changing the front of the theatre, adding a canopy, putting in a new lighting effect and adding greatly to the appearance of the Ideal.

A. G. Stolte, booking manager for A. H. Blank, now has charge of the booking for the seven houses at Moline, Rock Island and Davenport which are of the Blank chain. Mr. Stolte does the booking for the theatres at Iowa City, Newton and the five in Des Moines, making in all seventeen houses for which he acts as booking manager and theatre supervisor.

Mr. and Mrs. Byron Watson will open their theatre at Knoxville on September 21. But the theatre has yet no name. Mr. Watson was in this week to buy new lobby frames for the new Knoxville house.

R. M. Copeland, formerly head salesman, has replaced Frank Crawford as manager of the Des Moines branch of Famous Players. Mr.

McClintock, formerly head booker, was succeeded by M. E. Anderson who came from the Minneapolis office to take charge of the booking department. There were also a number of other changes made in the staff of the exchange at the same time.

Little Miss Benjamin, daughter of Mrs. Benjamin, secretary of the Des Moines Film Board, is now fully recovered from her illness and appendicitis operation and is back in school again.

The office of the Fox Film Company which was expected to be ready for occupancy on September 15, will not be open until about September 23 or September 27. Ben Reingold, who was two years ago manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in Des Moines and who since then has had charge of the Omaha office of Fox, will be the manager of the new exchange office. Mr. Reingold is not only well known but well liked in this territory. It was at his request that he was given the Des Moines office upon the announcement of the plan for establishing the exchange here.

A. H. Blank has bought the Leccire Theatre at Moline, Ill., adding one more to the theatres controlled by Mr. Blank in the tricity and making about the thirty-third theatre in his chain. The theatre will be closed on September 26 while it is being remodeled, new seats put in, etc. The theatre will be ready for opening on October 3. Five thousand dollars will be spent upon the remodeling of the Leccire. It is a 1700-seat house.

Two new cars appeared here this week. Clyde Pratt, salesman for First National, has a new Nash sedan and Lew Ellman, also with First National, has a new Chevrolet coupe.

A. G. Stolte, theatre supervisor for the larger theatres of the A. H. Blank chain, was in Davenport last week for the purpose of settling the strike of musicians, stage hands and operators there. The theatre employees were on strike for a general increase of wages. A satisfactory settlement was made.

Two Peerless lamps and a transverter were sold by Mr. Thiele, of the National Theatre Supply Company, last week to the Strand Theatre Company at Creston.

Rose Browder is the cashier for the Pathe office since Mr. Anderson, who served in that capacity for a number of years, went to Florida on a year's vacation. Miss Browder has been with the business office of Pathe for some time.

C. T. Lynch, from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer office of St. Louis, made a visit to the Des Moines office. He was accompanied by J. E. Flynn, district manager.

Visitors in Film Row were Mr. Ellsworth, of the Metropolitan Theatre at Iowa Falls, Ross King, of Barnes City, and E. P. Smith, of Newton.

H. A. Kauffman, manager of the Pathe office, spent two days in Omaha in a sales conference with W. A. Mack, district sales manager. Mr. Mack will visit the Des Moines office next week.

The Blank Enterprises bought seven new Simplex machines last week. Two were for the Rialto Theatre at Omaha, two for the Broadway at Council Bluffs and the other three are to be kept at the theatre supply office for emergency.

New York and New Jersey

ALTHOUGH the Sunday closing situation continues to seethe back and forth in different parts of the country, the condition at Asbury Park remains the same as when the several houses in that resort city decided to test out the old Jersey blue laws to the extent of keeping open on the Sabbath Day. Approximately five theatres formerly under control of Walter Reade and now operated by Charles Bryant seem to be meeting with little or no resistance on the part of the reformers in their effort to provide Sunday shows. It is also said that the suit against Walter Reade for a Sunday showing in New Brunswick, N. J., has been dismissed.

Lee Newberry, chief of the Newberry Theatre Circuit of Southern New Jersey, will follow his usual custom of closing the several houses in that section from September until next season. These theatres are principally located at Bayhead, Seaside Park, Bradley Beach, Spring Lake and Belmar.

Those who were acquainted with William Weisfeld when a salesman for the New York branch of Pathe Exchange, will be interested to know that Weisfeld is more than making good as Sales Representative of the Golden Park Beach Company. This concern has been active in the development of four hundred one-family houses.

Most everyone who happens to have business in the New York Exchange room of Pathe, cannot seem to resist the temptation of walking up to a punching bag which hangs there and giving it a swat. After a particularly hard session with one of the branch salesmen, exhibitors have been observed handing the bag a vicious blow on the way to engage their accessories; and early this week, William Raynor, Pathe manager, was seen circling around the elusive leather with the evident intent of either keeping in form in order to pound forceful arguments into the heads of his customers, or with the idea of taking on the winner of this Thursday's big fight. At any rate, the bag makes most popular and appropriate equipment for any film exchange.

"Nick" Nicolette, of the Strand Theatre, Union City, navigated his familiar six-foot figure among the New York exchanges this week. "Nick" made a statement to the effect that the "Murphys" are steadily on the increase over his way.

The Star Theatre, Lyndhurst, N.J., has been remodeled and has recently reopened under new management.

Another New Jersey theatre to undergo extensive repairs and re-decorating is the Victoria in Elizabeth. This house seats approximately 600 and will reopen about October 1.

Universal Theatre Corporation's new picture palace under construction on New Utrecht Avenue is getting under way in good shape. According to report, the entire foundation work is in place. It's a 3500-seat house and when completed will undoubtedly be one of the finest neighborhood theatres in the entire country.

There's a rumor around to the effect that another large Motion Picture Theatre will be constructed at 15th Avenue and 43rd Street, Brooklyn. Those who are interested in the project are unnamed at present.

Theatres over in Brooklyn which have reopened for the fall and winter seasons include the Huntington, Hamilton Avenue; the Miller, Sutter Avenue, has changed from a two-a-week showing to full time; likewise, the Review Theatre, New Lots and Sheffield avenues.

Up in the Harlem section of New York City, the S. & A. Theatre has resumed its full time policy. During the summer this house showed but twice a week.

Harmon Yaffa's new Uptown Theatre at 170th Street and Broadway, New York City, was recently opened to the public.

Two other New York City houses to be opened soon include B. K. Bimberg's Endicott Theatre between 89th and 90th streets, and the William Fox Academy, the latter house across the way from the old Academy of Music on Fourteenth Street.

The Park West Theatre, 99th Street and 9th Avenue, New York City, has recently changed hands. The new owner's name has not been ascertained as yet.

Several theatre openings in this zone recently reported by the National Theatre Supply Company, include Irving Lesser's Capitol, at Haverstraw, N. Y., and Lesser's Memorial Hall, at Beacon, N. Y. The Heights Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., owned by the Goldberg Enterprises, is also reported open for business.

Julius Joelson, chief of the Tri-Poro Amusement Company, has moved his office from 1650 Broadway to the Crescent Theatre, Boston Road, Bronx.

Two other New York City neighborhood houses will soon throw open their doors. One of them is William Salkin's new theatre at 132nd Street and Third Avenue, with a seating capacity of 2500 and scheduled for the early part of November, and the other is Steiner & Blinderman's Apollo. The latter house is expected to open about September 25.

Equipment recently purchased from the National Supply Company went to the following houses in this zone: Stratford Theatre, Newark; Rosedale, Bronx; Walter Reade's new house at Red Bank, N.J., and Louis Rosenthal's Rivoli, East Orange.

Seymour Schussel becomes sales manager of Commonwealth Film Corporation, effective August 28. He succeeds to the position made vacant by the resignation of Abe Blumstein. Both men are widely known in New York Film Trade circles.

Mr. Blumstein has been active in exhibition and distribution for almost twenty years. Most of that period was spent with the William Fox organization. He joined Commonwealth Film Corporation about two years ago, going there as sales manager.

Mr. Schussel has been with Commonwealth about the same length of time, having previously had a wide experience in local film sales organizations. He is credited with being one of the best salesmen the motion picture industry has produced.

The same staff which operated under Mr. Blumstein, and of which Mr. Schussel was an important link, will be retained by the new executive.

Drastic action has been taken by the Board of Governors of the Motion Picture Athletic Association as regards the use of so-called "ringers" in various branches of sport. Under the previous ruling of the constitution the eligibility clause read, "All participants in sports shall be bona fide employees of the company they represent and vouched for by their executive member of the association."

It was generally believed that the spirit of this ruling was being violated and that semi-pro baseball players were being hired more for their athletic ability than for their efficiency as employees.

The new ruling reads:

"A bona fide employee shall be only one who is employed exclusively by the company or its subsidiaries, he or she represents, and the hours of employment shall not be less than 35 per week and he or she must have been in the employ of the company represented no less than 15 days prior to his or her entry into any sport."

The baseball branch of the Association is now drawing to a close, with Fox Films holding a commanding lead, having won practically all its games by large margins. Famous players is in second place, with Metro-Goldwyn a close third. The standing is as follows:

	W	L
Fox Films .....	10	0
Famous Players ...	7	3
Metro-Goldwyn ...	7	4
First National ....	5	6
Warner Bros. ....	4	7
Universal .....	2	10
Pathe .....	2	7

In tennis, Metro-Goldwyn, Hirlagraph and Pathe are closely bunched at the top, with only a few remaining matches to be played. On Friday evening, Dietz and Beecher, Metro-Goldwyn, won from Carlin and Howson, Warner Bros., 6-1, 8-6, the Warner pair threatening the League leaders in the second set. Malles and Bockus, Hirlagraph, who look to be a team as good as Dietz and Beecher, won from Gallup and Vaz, United Artists, 6-2, 6-0. One of the closest matches of the season took place when Fry and Leath, of Famous Players, defeated Waxman and Keyser, First National, 6-3, 12-10.

New England

WITHIN the next few weeks Boston's Film Row will undergo more changes than have been witnessed in a period of years.

Famous Players, now at 8 Shawmut Street, will move into its new building on Arlington Street in Arlington Square, where much additional space is provided. This removal will be made, it is now stated, before Oct. 1, as the new building is completed.

United Artists Exchange, long at 69 Church Street, will remove about the same time to 13 Stanhope Street, where it has secured the building once occupied by Pathe and prior to their occupancy, by Universal. They had planned to move September 1, but delay in fitting up the new quarters resulted in postponing removal a month.

Producers Distributing Corporation, now located at 48 Melrose Street, has outgrown its quarters and while no official verification is forthcoming at this time, it is pretty generally understood that they are to take the premises which will be vacated by Famous Players on Shawmut Street.

The Motion Picture Corporation, now at 28 Piedmont Street, will move on Sept. 30 to 7 Isabella Street.

As a result of the supply houses merging, headquarters of the merged companies will be maintained at 63-69 Church Street, part of this location now being occupied by equipment houses and the balance being the present exchange of United Artists.

Extensive remodeling will precede removals in most instances and all of the companies are moving to quarters considerably larger than those which they occupy at present.

The entire staff of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Boston exchange were guests of Branch Manager Maurice N. Wolf at a weenie and steak roast at his summer home in Winthrop Highlands Saturday. There were games, sports, land and water events, under the direction of Harry Worden and winners of the events included Marie Buick, H. Fay Freedman, Mary Galvin, Elizabeth Connors, Frank Ferguson, Charles Repec, Joe Banks and William Gardiner. After the "eats" a huge bonfire was lighted, which served for the footlights for the combined talent of the office and a program which would be the envy of any presentation director was staged. Songs, Charleston exhibitions, orations and fancy dances were given until the conclusion of the delightful occasion.

The first annual outing of the staff of the Medford Theatre at Medford, Mass., was held Sunday at Hampton Beach, N.H., with Manager George Hackett acting as host. The trip was made in four large autos and there were sports and dancing and a real New England fish dinner on the program. Returning to Medford in the early evening, the occasion was made complete with a hot dog and marshmallow roast at the home of Mrs. James Gibbons in Medford.

At a shower tendered Miss Julia Coffey, of Independent Films, Inc., at the exchange at the close of business, Saturday, she was presented a purse of gold by her associates and a check by the firm. She is to be married to E. Van Schelt on October 12. Entertainment was furnished by members of the organization and a collation followed.

Tim O'Toole, office manager of Independent Films, Inc., is spending his vacation in a tour through Northern New England and Canada in his new Hudson.

Those from Boston attending the Town Criers dinner at the Biltmore, Providence, at which Edward M. Fay was guest of honor, were: J. J. Scully and C. L. Devizia from Educational; Joseph McConville and Abe Montague, from Independent; Joseph Roth and Sam Moscow, of Consolidated; Henry Scully and John Derwin, of United Artists; E. A. "Doc" Golden, of Golden Films, Inc.; William Shapiro and Robert Cobe, of Tiffany; Edward O'Leary and Edward Farrell, of Film Booking Office, Timothy A. Donahue and H. E. Elder, of Warner Brothers and Herman Rifkin, of Supreme Films.

Jack Gubbins, salesman for Famous Players from the New Haven exchange, was run down by an auto in New Haven a few days ago and so badly injured that he was removed to the hospital, where it is said he will have to remain several weeks. Several bones were broken. Friends have kept his room at the hospital a bower of flowers since the accident.

Joseph Cifre is to manage the new United Theatre Equipment consolidated salesroom and branch in Boston. He has long been associated with the theatre equipment business in New England.

Having fully recovered from a serious operation several weeks ago, Samuel Hacking, of Producers Distributing Corporation, has returned to duty and is again covering Rhode Island and the Cape territory.

William Snyder, comedy salesman for Pathe, is vacationing by motor in Canada. He covers New Hampshire and Vermont during the other fifty weeks of the year.

Jake Conn's new house, the Olympia at Olneyville, R.I., has opened. It seats some 1,200 and is one of the most attractive of the medium-sized houses in that state.

E. Hurteau, formerly assistant cashier at Pathe's Boston exchange, has been appointed branch cashier at Pittsburgh and has already taken up his new duties.

O. P. Gorman, who operates a chain of eight theatres in Maine and a supply house, spent a few days in Boston during the week and was welcomed to Film Row.

Chick Varney, one of the pioneer motion picture men in New England, has joined the sales force of Associated Exhibitors.

Charles Bean, of the Pastime Theatre, Franklin, N.H., spent a couple of days in Boston during the week making advance bookings.

Poli's new theatre in Worcester is expected to open the latter part of October.

The Monitor Theatre at Hinsdale, N.H., has been purchased by Fred Sharvy. Allen C. W. Kimball formerly operated it.

The Winter Hill Theatre, Somerville, Mass., operated by Phil Markel, has been sold to Kenneth Forkey, who plans to continue the same policy as formerly in force.

E. A. Ruff, formerly of the Boston exchange of Famous Players, has been assigned to the New Haven branch.

Denver

JAMES S. HOMMEL, of the Central Theatres chain of theatres, is in New York City on a business trip.

John Flinn, vice-president and general manager of Producers Distributing Corporation, Hayden O. Duke, assistant secretary of the company; L. W. Weir, district manager, and Donald Smith, assistant district manager of the producing company arrived in Denver Saturday at 12:30 P.M. from Salt Lake City. While here they held a sales meeting with all sales representatives of the local branch of their organization. Mr. Flinn and Mr. Duke left at 9:30 P.M. for Kansas City, Mo., enroute to New York City.

Dewey Spoor, manager of the Critcher Theatre, Pueblo, Colo., is vacationing on the Pacific Coast visiting the studios of the various producing companies.

J. J. Goodstein, owner of the Palm Theatre, Pueblo, Colo., arrived back in Denver after an auto trip to Philadelphia and return. He was accompanied by B. M. Shooker, owner of the Shooker Film Exchange, one of Denver's states rights distributing companies.

Harry Nolan, original franchise holder of First National in the Denver territory, has gone to New York City where he will attend the annual stockholders meeting of First National Pictures, Inc. He will return to Denver in about a month.

Chas. R. Gilmour, Warner Bros. manager, is a busy man on the road these days. Mr. Gilmour just left for Casper, Wyo., and surrounding territory for a visit with exhibitors. He will be gone for about ten days. Mr. Gilmour and Wayne Ball, assistant manager, had a narrow escape from serious injuries last week, when they were motoring to Ft. Collins, Colo. They were crowded off the highway by a heavily loaded truck and turned over in a ditch. Both men were badly shaken up. Damages to Gilmour's new auto amounted to $200.

Tom Love, prominent Wyoming exhibitor who owns theatres in Hanna, Winton, Superior and Reliance, left last week in his auto for New York City on a well-earned vacation. While there he will attend the world series baseball games. He was accompanied by his wife. He will return about October 30th.

Kenneth Hodgkinson, United Artists' district manager, is a visitor in the city. He arrived in Denver from Salt Lake City and will leave next Monday for Los Angeles.

Chas. Klein, managing director of the Black Hills Amusement Company circuit of theatres in South Dakota, arrived in Denver Thursday for a visit with exchanges. Mr. Klein announces the completion of remodeling of the Orpheum Theatre, Sheridan, Wyo., and declares it to be the finest amusement house in the state.

Mr. Frank Harris, district sales manager for Pathe, was a visitor with S. B. Rahn, local branch manager for three days this week. Mr. Harris arrived in Denver from Salt Lake City and left for New York City.

Louis Metzler, formerly associated with the Portland branch of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has accepted a position as sales representative with the local branch of M-G-M. Another new Metro sales representative is Jerry West, formerly associated with the M-G-M studios of Culver City.

Gerald Whitney, popular Producer salesman, was stricken with appendicitis recently and rushed to a hospital in Denver, where an operation was performed. He is still confined in the hospital, but improving very rapidly.

Exhibitors visiting Denver during the last week were Ed Schoelkopf, Opera House, Idaho Springs, Colo.; A. G. Diez, Rialto Theatre, Boulder; Max Kravetz, America Theatre, Ft. Collins, Colo.; Frank Emery, Rialto Theatre, Parco, Wyo.; Henry Waterman, Waterman Hall, Big Springs, Neb.; DeForrest Swanson, Isis Theatre, Lamar, Colo.; Thomas Kirby, Elks Theatre, Worland, Wyo., and D. D. Purcell, of the Amusu Theatre, Cortez, Colo.

Eugene Gerbase, Associated Exhibitors manager, has left for a three weeks' sales trip into the southern territory.

S. D. Weisbaum, F.B.O. manager, spent the week in Grand Junction, Colo., and vicinity, visiting exhibitors.

A. G. Edwards, manager of Producers, has just returned from a visit with exhibitors in Albuquerque, N.M.

Chicago

THE 4,000-seat Granada Theatre, one of the finest amusement houses in Chicago, and the newest property of Marks Brothers, Louis L. and Meyer S., was opened to the public on September 18th with great crowds in attendance, hundreds being unable to gain admission. Marks Brothers are among the veteran exhibitors of the Middle West, having opened their first Chicago house, a 300-seat theatre, fourteen years ago, and their theatre holdings have kept pace with the developments of the industry until, with the opening of the Granada, their theatres take rank with the finest in the community. The theatre is of Spanish Renaissance style, both as to exterior and interior, the lobbies and staircases being of unusual beauty and the latest in theatre construction, including a mammoth stage and orchestra platform which will elevate sixty musicians. In addition to pictures, the Granada offers its patrons elaborate and beautiful stage presentations and the finest in music. The house staff includes Clark Robinson, art director, Benny Meroff, musical director, and Jack Haskell, who will present the stage productions. The opening program included big dance numbers, using as many as seventy-five girls. Manager Murphy, formerly of the Chicago theatres, is in charge of the new house.

Le Roy Miller, for several years office manager of Fox's Chicago exchange, has been appointed as salesman and assigned to central Illinois territory. Manager Eckhardt has also promoted Herbert Costello, cashier for the past five years, to fill the vacancy made by the assignment of Mr. Miller to the sales staff.

Ben W. Beadell, who is buying pictures for Ezra Rhodes in South Bend and Elkhart, reports that additional theatres have joined his booking circuit and he expects to announce the names of five more Indiana houses within a few days.

James R. Grainger, of Fox Film Corporation, is scheduled to make a Chicago visit on October 4th, and after a brief stay here will proceed to the west coast headquarters of his organization.

Henri Ellman, of the Capitol Film Exchange, left for the west coast on Monday and expects to remain away for six weeks. During his stay in California Mr. Ellman will make his headquarters at the Columbia Pictures Studio.

Cecil Vigdor, who recently took over the Alma Theatre at 54th and Wentworth Avenue, reopened it on September 18th. D. Sutherland was the former owner. After taking possession of the house, Mr. Vigdor closed it for several weeks during which time extensive improvements were made, including the installation of a new front and the remodeling of the interior, so that today it presents the appearance of a new house.

Frank Schaefer is home again after a four weeks' motor trip through Eastern Canada and the North Atlantic States. Mr. Schaefer, who was accompanied by his wife, continued his trip east so as to take in the Miss America beauty contest at Atlantic City, and reports that he picked the winner before the judges.

W. "Pat" Garyn, formerly assistant to Jimmy Granger, is now connected with the National Screen Service in the capacity of assistant general manager, with headquarters in New York City. Mr. Garyn recently paid a visit to Chicago and installed a new sales policy at the Chicago branch, as well as adding several new salesmen to the staff.

Frank Marshall, who several years ago left the exchange branch of the motion picture business to become associated with the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company as an organ salesman, has been promoted to Chicago manager of Wurlitzer's organ department, to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of A. Libbin, after spending a year at the home office in Cincinnati in a similar capacity. Mr. Marshall enjoys a wide acquaintance in the many states covered by the Chicago office and is receiving a warm welcome from his friends. Mr. Marshall has added Eddie Rosecan to his sales staff. Mr. Rosecan had been connected with Paramount's Chicago exchange as a salesman.

The fall Midwest Film Golf Tournament will be held at Olympia Fields Country Club on October 8th, and judging by the interest displayed in the event, another big crowd of film men will enjoy the play. The committee, which includes L. A. Ulrich chairman; W. E. Burlock, C. E. Bond, J. J. Sampson and Tom Greenwood, announce that the players at this fall event will be divided into classes, according to their handicap and another fine array of trophies will be presented to the winners in the various events. Through good management the committee has been able to make a slight reduction in the entrance fee and all film men wishing to participate are urged to send in their reservations to Treasurer C. E. Bond, 1025 S. Wabash Avenue, not later than October 4th.

Salt Lake City

THE Peery Brothers of the Ogden and Egyptian theatres at Ogden, Utah, are in this city this week attending the Democratic Convention, to which they have been appointed delegates. Commissioner Harmon Peery was present within the last few days at the opening ceremony of Ogden's new million dollar hotel, namely "The Bigelow," and he was among the invited dignitaries who were called upon to make addresses.

Clyde H. Messinger, who has charge of the Educational Exchange here, returned this week.

Clyde Blasius, of the Utah Theatre Supply Company, became the proud father of a baby girl a few days ago.

F. S. Gulbransen, salesman for Paramount out of the local exchange, who last week attended the sales meeting conducted at the office here by George W. Weeks, general manager, brought his wife and children into Salt Lake City for a visit with relatives.

Bishop Thatcher, of Logan, was a Film Row visitor this week, arranging bookings and meeting with his several exhibitor and distributor friends.

The personnel of the local Paramount Exchange is planning many social events for the fall and winter season. A number of dances are to be given, according to L. J. McGinley, manager here.

It is reported that a new theatre is under construction at Cedar City, Utah.

H. Bradley Fish has returned to his managerial desk at the local Fox office. He is leaving again this week for the territory.

A new salesman has been added to the Fox sales force here in the person of John W. Trehwela, who has been assigned from Montana territory. Mr. Young, formerly with Fox here, has resigned recently.

J. A. Epperson, local manager for Pathe, is back from a trip into Southern Utah.

District Manager L. A. Davis is leaving the local Associated Exhibitors office this week for a trip into Wyoming.

James R. Keitz, manager of the office here for Columbia Exchanges, is still in Idaho country.

J. E. Ryan is visiting here this week in the interest of his Liberty Theatre at Brigham City, Utah.

Pay Peterson, former manager of the Cozy Theatre, of this city, has sent word from Pasadena, Cal., to his friends here that his baby daughter is seriously ill with infantile paralysis, but that she is gradually improving. Mr. Peterson's many friends here send their best wishes to him and his family during this trial.

Mell Stringham, of the Colonial Theatre, of Ogden, Utah, is attending to his fall bookings here this week.

Walter Rand, United Artists branch manager here, has sold some of his highly bred dogs to Doctor Kline and O. E. Schmidt, of Idaho Falls, according to report. The purchasers operate the Colonial Theatre at Idaho Falls.

Milton Cohn is still covering the Montana territory and is expected to return to the local United Artists Exchange the latter part of this week.

Joe Goss, owner of the Orpheum Theatre at Ogden, Utah, has been booking for his fall product recently.

A. F. Hickox, Special Representative from the Warner Brothers home office, is still visiting here. Branch Manager Dave Farquhar and Hickox will make a short trip into the Southern Utah territory this week.

Ed C. Mix is now traveling Southern Utah. M. F. Keller is soon to be transferred from this territory to the Portland office for Warner Brothers, it is announced.

T. M. Chesler, operating the Gem and Princess theatres at Bingham, Utah, is lining up new business here along Film Row.

L. C. Wingham, manager of the local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Exchange, has returned to the office after having spent several weeks in Montana.

C. F. Parr has resigned from the local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization to go into the insurance business in San Francisco. "Buck" Wade, who formerly covered the Montana territory for Producers Distributing Corporation, will now cover Montana for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

C. John Predari has been added to the local sales force for M.-G.-M., and will leave immediately for Idaho in the place of Parr.

D. T. McElhenney has also resigned from the M.-G.-M. sales force recently.

George Walker, of the theatre circuit in Davis County, Utah, is visiting this city this week, as is S. M. Steck, owner of the Lyceum Theatre at Ogden, Utah.

DEVELOPING AND PRINTING MOTION PICTURE FILM

Cleveland

HARRY W. DODGE, Famous Players exchange manager, paid the local office a visit one day last week on his tour of exchanges.

Insurance rates at the local Paramount Exchange have gone up, and all because of the huge diamond solitaire that Anne Trugman, secretary to manager E. H. Brauer, is wearing. When not at her duties, Anne is kept busy accepting congratulations upon her recently announced engagement to Sidney Rose, an ex-film man.

Pat Gary, of National Screen Service, was busy shaking hands with his many local friends last week when he paid a visit to Cleveland.

Pat Dowling, in charge of publicity for The Christy Film Company, was in the city one day last week on his New York-to-Los Angeles tour in his French Citroen car.

Leo Devaney, local Universal exchange manager, has gone to Toronto to get his wife and three kiddies so that he can set up a regular home in Cleveland. Devaney represented Universal in Toronto before taking over the management of the Cleveland exchange.

Ralph Clark, assistant P.D.C. sales manager, was in the city last Friday and held a local sales meeting. He is holding a series of them throughout the territory, his itinerary including Pittsburgh on Saturday, followed by Cincinnati, Indianapolis and then Detroit.

A. C. Mavis, owner of the Theatre in Egerton, now enters the field as an exhibitor. The house was formerly under the management of Meyer brothers, but has been closed for some time. Mavis will manage the house himself.

The Silverman Brothers, who operate a chain of picture houses in Ohio and Pennsylvania, have just taken over the Strand Theatre, Akron. The Strand has been a first-run house in Akron for the past ten years and was operated by James Dunlevy and his son. Other houses belonging to the Silverman group are the Alhambra, Canton; Opera House and Majestic, Mansfield; Windameer, Cleveland, and several houses in Pittsburgh.

The Star Theatre, Amsterdam, changed hands last week. B. B. Naufel bought it from Mrs. Lena Waggoner.

W. L. Hart, of the Norka Theatre, Akron, was in town last week calling on the local exchanges. It was Hart's first visit here since he broke his leg early in the summer. He's getting about now with the aid of crutches.

The Loew's Ohio Golf Tournament, held Friday, September 17th, at the Madison Golf Club, was enjoyable to all and profitable to many who attended, as prizes were liberally awarded to those participating in the games. Ray Powell, of the Allen Theatre orchestra, walked off with first honors, doing the eighteen holes in 95. Mike McDougall, Allen Theatre stage hand, received a gold putter for covering the same territory in 115. Next in order of their prowess and their rewards came: an, Allen Theatre Manager, 119, Library Lamp; Fred Clary, Stillman Theatre Manager, 120, A Season Meal Coupon at Statler; Angelo Vitale, Park Orchestra Director, 122, Engraved Baton; Harland Fend, Publicity Department, 126, Silver Picture Frame; George Dumond, Metropolitan Manager, 126, A set of dishes; M. A. Malaney, Publicity Manager, 147, Coffee Percolator; Tom Carroll, State Theatre Manager, 149, Rubber Horse Shoe Set. Maurice Spitalny, musical director at the Stillman Theatre, had the distinction of getting the highest score of the day's game with 183 strokes to his credit. He was rewarded for his tireless efforts by being presented with a bed.

This was the first summer entertainment staged by Loew's Ohio Theatre for its employees. More than thirty attended. Both luncheon and dinner was served at the Golf Club, the party breaking up in time for its members to report for duty for the evening show.

St. Louis

JIMMY BOYD has sold his Grand Theatre, Blytheville, Ark., to Mrs. I. W. Rodgers, of Cairo, Ill. The Rodgers chain now has houses in Blytheville, including the Grand, Home and Gem; Cairo, Ill.; Carbondale, Ill.; Poplar Bluff, Mo., and Caruthersville, Mo.

John Marlowe, of Herrin, Ill., has added the Hurst Theatre, Hurst, Ill., to his string of Southern Illinois houses. The Hurst seats about 1,000 persons. Marlowe has houses in Herring, Murphysboro and Cartersville, Ill.

The Rivoli Theatre, Sixth, near Olive streets, St. Louis, Mo., passed under the management of Jules Leventhal and Charles Goldman on Monday, September 20.

Joe Desberger is said to be negotiating for the Washington Theatre, in Belleville, Ill. It is probable final papers will be signed this week.

Tommy Charack, district exploiter for Universal Pictures, returned from Des Moines, Ia., where he put over several successful campaigns.

Kosher Kitty Kelly, F.B.O.'s Yiddish-Shamrock special, will have its St. Louis premiere showing at the Missouri Theatre, Grand and Lucas Avenue, the largest exclusive motion picture house in St. Louis.

John Price is again in personal charge of his various houses in Hannibal, Mo. He is feeling like his old self once more.

Our old friend, Charley Werner, who for many years successfully presided at the boss' desk in the local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Exchange, has recovered from his recent set-back and is feeling fine these days, we are pleased to report. Charley is one boy who doesn't have to broadcast to the world that he is a square-shooter. It knows he is and everyone is pleased that he is about once more.

The engagement of Sol M. Rose, popular film salesman, and Miss Lydia Cherry, of St. Louis, has been announced. The date for the wedding has not been set. Sol is a fine boy and Miss Cherry is said to be a wonderful girl.

Jimmy Shea is returning to St. Louis to become city salesman for Universal Pictures. He formerly was with Associated Exhibitors in Omaha.

R. W. "Dad" Sloeum has resigned from the local F.B.O. sales staff and plans to spend several weeks in Michigan on a much needed vacation. He believes that the rest cure will enable him to take on the winner of the Dempsey-Tunney fracas.

Film Row looks like Murphysboro did one terrible morning in March, 1925. The city is widening Olive Street from forty feet to one hundred feet and the fronts of all the buildings are being knocked off.

C. E. Penrod, division manager for F.B.O., is due here this week.

Miss Jean Brewer, assistant booker for F.B.O., has returned from her vacation. We now know what caused the golden sunshine to chase all those rain clouds away just a few days ago.

Tom McKean, manager for F. B.O., has returned from a tour of Egypt.

Kansas City

JUST as the crowd was filing out of the St. John Theatre, Kansas City suburban house, after the final performance Monday night, fire broke out in the projection room. Patrons in the rear of the lines, who were filing their way out the exits became excited, but the patrons who were near the exit doors were unaware of any fire, thus avoiding any rush or panic by holding back the rear patrons. The loss was only $125, the blaze being quickly extinguished.

The following opening of new theatres and changes in management in the Kansas City territory were announced this week: New Midland Theatre, Pittsburg, Kas., opened by the Midland Theatre and Realty Co., of Kansas City, of which M. B. Shanberg is the head; W. J. Gable, of Beloit, Kas., has purchased the Grand Theatre, Lincoln, Ill., from Matthew Rheinhart; Lee Miller has resigned as manager of the Elliott Theatre, Independence, Mo., controlled by the Glenn W. Dickinson Circuit. He will be succeeded by Michael Purell, who also will manage the Lewis Theatre of the Dickinson chain.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: Sam Blair, Majestic, Belleville, Kas.; W. J. Gable, Beloit, Kas.; Arthur Ford, Miller Theatre, Topeka, Kas.; G. L. Hooper, Orpheum and Jayhawk theatres, Topeka, Kas.; Walter Wallace, Orpheum, Leavenworth, Kas.

Still another busy week along Kansas City's Film Row.

Harry Schiller, former First National salesman, has assumed his duties as office manager for M.-G.-M. Exchange, while Jack Auslet, special two-reel comedy salesman for Pathe, has been named sales manager for the Midwest Film Distributors, Inc., of Kansas City.

W. C. Ansell has succeeded "Rube" Meleher, resigned, on the Midwest Distributors' sales staff.

L. T. Garlo, United Artists salesman, has resumed his duties, following a trip to Cleveland and Chicago.

Joe Bloustine of the Paramount

Exchange's ad sales department, returned from a profitable trip into the territory, as did A. H. Cole, who is in charge of that department.

Russell Borg, Educational booker, is hard at work again after a fishing trip in Minnesota.

R. A. Morrows, assistant general manager for P.D.C., was a Kansas City visitor.

C. E. Grefory, M.-G.-M. branch manager, is spending a long-awaited vacation in Southern Missouri.

Art Levy, Associated Exhibitors branch manager, returned from a district sales meeting in Chicago.

Lester Fencelon, First National home office auditor, is working on the Kansas City books.

Milwaukee

R. T. SMITH, manager of Warner's Milwaukee Exchange, George Weirich, booker at Warners, Mr. and Mrs. Nine and Mr. and Mrs. Bieringer, attended the exhibition of the Vitaphone at McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, on Wednesday. Mr. Nine and Mr. Bieringer are salesmen on the Warner staff.

Charles Collins, manager of the Butterfly Theatre, Kenosha, spent a few hours along Film Row recently.

Carl Cohen, of the New Wau-paca Theatre, is recovering after an operation for appendicitis.

The local Paramount sales force has been augmented by Sid Taube and Joe Schneider.

Frank Welter, of the Grand Theatre, Wausau, is planning on going into the invention business some day. He has designed a carrying outfit atop his car for his duck boat and the demonstration on the opening day of the duck season this week was very successful. Frank is a crack shot and bagged his limit the opening day.

The new Venetian Theatre, Milwaukee, which will be operated by the Universal chain, is progressing very rapidly and will probably open early in the next season.

The Arcade Theatre has been remodeled and redecorated.

The remodeled Stuart Theatre in Wausau, now operated by Saxe, is one of the prettiest houses in that section of the country. The new organ is a big success and an augmented orchestra is helping things along for the new season.

Edward Starkey, of the Opera House, Berlin, takes over the Rex in that town November 15th.

Len Brown, managing director of Fischer's Fond du Lac Theatre, is also supervising the Parkway, Madison.

John Hanus, manager of the Armory, of Antigo, was among Milwaukee visitors this week.

Art Bartlett, it has been rumored, has sold his interests in the Empire Theatre, Milwaukee.

Charles Goetz, of the Goetz Circuit of Kenosha, Beloit and Janesville, was in Milwaukee recently to arrange future bookings.

"Pop" Terry, one of the old-timers, returned to Milwaukee this week after having spent several years in California. "Pop" is well known to exhibitors of the state, and expects soon to be back in the harness and visit all his old friends. He was with Universal three or four years ago when in this territory.

A new organ has been installed in the Oconomowoc Theatre at Oconomowoc.

Morgan Month is being observed at P.D.C. offices. The sales campaign is going over big in the Milwaukee branch.

M. A. Leich, of the Leich and Christianson Circuit controlling the Opera House at Hartford, was in Milwaukee arranging fall bookings.

E. P. Vollendorf, who was associated with First National for many years, has recently joined Producers in the capacity of salesman.

W. Tragsdorf, manager of Trags Theatre, Neillsville, was among Milwaukee visitors.

M. Ainsworth, of Ainsworth and Smith, managing the Orpheum and Bijou theatres at Sheboygan, spent Wednesday in the local exchanges.

Ed Michaelson, of the Michaelson Amusement Company of Madison, was in Milwaukee arranging bookings and acts for his new house at Evansville.

Louis Shimon, of the Up-Town Theatre, Sheboygan, was a Milwaukee visitor. Mr. Shimon having won over the theatre-going public of Sheboygan, is now looking for new fields to conquer.

Miss Helen A. Bruckmann has just assumed her duties as secretary to the manager at the Fox office. She succeeds Mrs. Evans.

Glen Wood, shipping clerk at P.D.C., arose early the morning the season opened and went a-gunning for elusive ducks. P.D.C. force is looking forward to a big duck feed. Glen admits he saw one.

Dan Kelliher, of the Princess at Elkhorn, and the Majestic, at Lake Geneva, made his weekly visit on schedule.

Frank Cook was in Milwaukee recently signing up the new season's product. Mr. Cook is managing the Bijou at Appleton and the Strand at Platteville.

Miss Fern Loomis, cashier at Producers, is on her vacation. She has gone to her home at East Troy.

Baltimore

AFTER having been entirely rebuilt and remodeled, the New Hampden Theatre, 911 West 36th Street, and the Ideal Theatre, 903 West 36th Street, Hampden, have been reopened to the public. The New Hampden is operated by Charles E. and C. W. Hicks, who have operated the Hampden for a number of years, and Julius Goodman is conducting the Ideal as he has done in the past.

Due to a delay in the construction work of Loew's Century and Parkway theatres, Baltimore, Md., those playhouses are scheduled to reopen now to the public, Monday, October 4, while Loew's Valencia, with a seating capacity of about 1,500 persons, located atop the Century Theatre, in place of the old Century Roof Garden, will open as a moving picture theatre sometime later in October. The last mentioned will be used for long run productions.

The Century will present an entire new appearance to its patrons, as the interior has been entirely reconstructed after plans by John Eberson, the Chicago architect. A number of improvements and alterations have been made in the Parkway, also after plans by the same architect.

Herschel Stuart is general manager of the three playhouses in Baltimore for Loew's Incorporated. The house manager at the Century will be Larry Shead, who formerly managed several Chicago theatres for Balaban & Katz. He is a graduate of the University of Oklahoma. U. S. Brummell, formerly assistant manager at the Century, has been promoted to manager of the Parkway.

H. M. Messiter, booking manager for the Whitehurst Theatrical Interests, Baltimore, Md., has returned from his vacation.

Gustav Klemm, movie reviewer for the "Evening Sun" and who signs himself Q.E.D., has returned from an enjoyable vacation. Broughton Tall, the playwright and Baltimore correspondent for "Variety," acted as pinch hitter for Mr. Klemm while he was away.

Sam Baron, formerly of the Rivoli and Rialto theatres, in New York, who has been acting as manager of the Embassy Theatre, here, since it reopened three weeks ago, has resigned to become manager of the Strand Theatre, Shenandoah, Pa.

Bernard Schnapper, in charge of motion picture advertising of the "Baltimore Post," a Scripps-Howard tabloid, has announced his engagement to Miss Hulda Levin, of Baltimore.

Frank B. Kroeger, who was doorman at the Century Theatre for several years, has become doorman at the New Theatre. Mr. Kroeger is one of the best liked doormen in Baltimore and is an asset to any house.

Eugene M. Daley, who some years ago was manager of the New Theatre for some time and left there, due to illness, died recently. He was buried in Baltimore. Prior to his association with the New Mr. Daley was with the Lyman Howe pictures.

Canada

MANY changes have been made in the Queen Theatre, Niagara Falls, Ontario, which was recently re-opened under the management of John V. Ward, formerly of the Classic Theatre, Stratford, the house having been acquired by Famous Players Canadian Corp. The organ lofts on either side of the proscenium have been changed to represent two large conservatory windows, effectively draped; a new stage setting has been arranged; the lobby has been brightened and redecorated with flowers and panels, and the booth has been rebuilt. Two new Simplex projectors, with other new projection equipment, have been installed.

William Bach, Canadian general manager of First National, has announced that First National Week is to be held throughout Canada during the week of October 3. C. J. Appel, exploitation specialist at the Toronto First National headquarters, is working out new details.

The softball team of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, played off with the Elgin team for the senior championship of the Toronto Softball League, winning the title by the odd game in an exciting series. Star players of the Famous Players aggregation, who are really identified with Toronto Theatre and exchange circles, included Bell, Deniord, Harper and Bossin.

Canadian exhibitors were very busy the night of September 14, this being the date of the Canadian Federal elections. Practically every theatre manager in the country gave election returns from the stage or on the screen during the evening and many conducted special midnight performances for late results.

J. J. Gaudet, proprietor of the Capital Theatre, Summerside, Prince Edward Island, recently made the trip to New York City to investigate the possibilities of the Vitaphone and to look over coming film attractions for his theatre.

Shirley Strom, a pleasing miss of the staff of Regal Films, Limited, Toronto, was recently married to Jack Meltz, of Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. Meltz spent their honeymoon in Detroit and Chicago.

Norman Code and Charles Kirby, prominently associated with presentations at the Capitol Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, have returned home after visits to United States cities to study theatre methods in various centres.

"Falling Water Valley," "The Little Brown Rug" and "Gold and Fleece"

(Educational—Three Reels)

BEAUTY is paramount. The scenic values of the first and last numbers which make up this Robert C. Boice scenic offering are so rich and gorgeous, so fantastic and delightful to the eye that you can easily go away with the impression of having looked upon the Elysian fields. It is doubtful whether so much of the marvelously beautiful has been crammed in so short a space. The tender and majestic side of nature is revealed in all her kaleidoscopic variety. We look into the Yosemite Valley through the medium of the camera and after drinking in the beauty so abundantly found there we turn to a summer sky with its wealth of ethereally lovely clouds. It would take the pen of a Conrad to do full justice to the rare scenic values offered here. The Valley with its huge granite cliffs, the sun creating the artistic and elusive shadow lines, the effect of vast distance and the mighty waterfall descending like a silver ribbon to the floor of the Valley. One can absorb so much of the beautiful from a film like this that the effect is akin to the state produced by delirium. Many of your patrons who see this little gem will carry with them a just—perhaps a higher—mental image of the handiwork of the Creator.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Why Argue"

(Pathe-Fables—One Reel)

WHY, indeed? It never got anyone anything or anywhere. But neither Pathe, Aesop or anyone else will ever persuade humanity of the futility of arguing. They have since time began and will until we have lived up to the scientists' predictions of no more food and have to quit altogether. In the meantime, we can ignore the question and laugh at Farmer Al and his associates, as drawn for the screen in this animated cartoon. As may be inferred from the title, all the artist's characters argue all the way through the picture and never get anywhere with this argumentative spirit. But the spectator should worry, inasmuch as each stroke of the pencil or brush is productive of additional laughter and that, after all, is the mission in life of Aesop's Fables and their creators. As in its predecessors, this one accomplishes that purpose.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Never Again"

(Universal-Gump—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THIS comedy, based on the famous Sydney Smith cartoons, syndicated by the Chicago Tribune, taught me two things. In the first place, I never would have believed that a human being even with make-up could create on the stage or screen a living image of the chinless Andy Gump. Joe Murphy has done this and he is just as big a fool in the comedy as he is in the comic strip. The second thing is that in the movies a cartoon or caricature is never, or rarely, as funny as he is in a newspaper strip. Wildly improbable as they are in the latter, they can be accepted, whereas in pictures it is hard to condone or find amusing the moronic mental processes that characterize their every action. The best thing in this picture is Andy trying to show his son Chester how the William Tell act should be staged. Chester has done a quite amusing imitation, shooting an apple off the dog's head. Andy wreck's Minn's hat in his target practice.

Ignoring his catching a balloon filled with milk instead of air on the fork held in his mouth, which may please some when Andy is drenched, we next move on to a charity party at which a boxing match is held. Andy is referee. The loss of his trousers and his general mutilation at the hands of the two boxers we can take for granted and drop the curtain. Possibly it is funny and my sense of humor is faulty; if so, I plead guilty.

Fay Fincher plays Min. Francis Corby directs. Released October 18th.

"Saturday Afternoon"

(Pathe-Mack Sennett—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

IN view of the presentation of the two long pictures, "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp" and "The Strong Man," starring Harry Langdon, and his discovery by the critical fraternity as belonging in the charmed circle of comedians whose presiding genius is Charles Chaplin or—if you prefer the French, Charlot—any of the one or two-reelers showing the moon-faced one are bound to be of interest.

Working in a blacksmith foundry, married and much henpecked, Langdon in "Saturday Afternoon" is the last man in the world to philander. Yet, he is carried along with Vernon Dent, who has dated up Ruth Hiatt and Alice Ward for Saturday afternoon. That they do not enjoy the half holiday is written in the stars, for, otherwise how would Langdon display that pathetic, woe-begone, wistful face and almost equally eloquent hands and feet in the various contretemps that must always characterize his screen life? First, trying to hide money from his bickering wife by placing the few coins under the carpet. Then, the rendezvous with the two flirtatious shop girls. The wreck that Langdon becomes when he emerges from the automobile where he has been hiding in the rumble seat. The inevitable fight with the two men whose girls Dent and Langdon have been trying to misappropriate. It cannot enter the realm of prophecy now, but "Saturday Afternoon" does show why Langdon has made the progress that has been his and his elevation to stardom.

THE CAST

Harry Langdon (featured) Vernon Dent, Peggy Montgomery, Ruth Hiatt and Alice Ward. Director, Harry Edwards. Supervised by J. A. Waldron. Titles by A. H. Giebler.

Comment: Shows several of the reasons why the pantomimic ability of the featured player has been rewarded with his present stellar position in the movie world.

"Kiss Me Kate"

(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

THIS must be some distant relative to "Kitty's Kisses," the musical comedy which, under William A. Brady's auspices, has been running in New York for the past several months. There the similarity or relationship ceases. The principal interest is attached to the fact that the actor, Clem Beauchamp, appears as a director in this Educational offering. Phil Dunham gets a position as a butler in one of those typical movie families where the husband is more interested in the attractions of the maid than he is in loyalty to his fat wife. The latter, Babe London—the name suggests a burlesque circuit attraction—is always catching her philandering husband coddling the maid and in revenge starts flirting with the make-shift butler. Subtle bit of revenge, "Toy" Gallagher, Jack Lloyd and Bert Young complete the cast, with the three aforementioned players. Phil lands through the window in the wheelbarrow with the other debris raked up by the gardener and is carried away.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"King Bozo"

(Another of the Van Bibber Comedies)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

"SOMETHING doing every foot of the two reels" would be a good descriptive clause for this comedy starring Earle Fox and based on one of the short stories of the late Richard Harding Davis. Falling heir to a family of acrobats Van Bibber has more than his hands full. Their complete possession and partial demolition of the hotel where he is staying make him more determined than ever to place them with a circus until he is able to locate their strong-man father. Largely through his own unintentional and unexpected success as an acrobatic clown he gets a job for the tumblers and himself with a small time circus.

There always has been and will be a certain fascination for the average man about the circus and in this universal appeal is part of the interest in this Fox offering. While exaggerated, it gives an intimate side of the lives lived on the dining car of their special train, etc. The glass eater, for example, discards a certain kind of glass because it does not agree with him and substitutes others. His breaking off leaves of a flower-like globe and dipping these into the sauce used for artichokes, is one of the many amusing burlesque comedy episodes. Wildly improbable; that we concede, but it is amusing throughout its two reels. With that troupe of jumping-jacks whom Van Bibber is supposed to foster-father jumping in and out of moving train, busses, hotel corridors, etc., your eyes are kept in a more or less constant whirl.

THE CAST

Earle Fox, Florence Gilbert, Frank Beal, Joe Bonomo and Ethel Sykes. Director, Robert P. Kerr. Scenarists, Sidney Lanfield and J. Walter Rubens.

Summary—Kaleidoscopic comedy with small circus background.

"Love's Last Laugh"

(Pathe-Mack Sennett—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

ANY number of epigrams or aphorisms might be evolved as the moral of this Mack Sennett opus, such as "The Road to True Love Never Runs Smooth," "He Laughs Best Who Laughs Last," "Love Laughs at Locksmiths, Parents and Opposition," etc., ad infinitum. For this comedy proves all of these things. It starts with the hero, Raymond McKee, trying to commit suicide because the engagement of his beloved is announced by a paper. It ends after his boarding a trans-Atlantic liner and going through Ellis Island with the distraught lovers in each other's arms which, of course, in this vale of tears and sorrow is as it should be.

Ruth Hiatt is the object of Raymond's affections and her mother, Sunshine Hart, and a bogus Baron, Kewpie Morgan, the two-fold cause of his unhappiness. The former because being socially ambitious she wishes Ruth to marry Kewpie and the man-mountain because he is, for some unknown reason, engaged to the daughter. Shipboard scenes, including a swimming pool, occupy most of the footage. Mother's exercising in her stateroom and through shifting her weight, upsetting the balance of the ship, provides some of the least plausible, but most amusing pictures in the comedy.

For full measure a smuggled jewel is introduced, but for no obvious reason except possibly, to provide a fine dramatic chase at the end.

Del Lord directed.

Kosher Kitty Kelly

The Celts and the Semites Mix It Again

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

IN this picturization of the stage play by Leon De Costa, James Horne has been fortunate in the players assigned to him for directing, numbering as they do Viola Dana in the name part, Vera Gordon, Natt Carr, Tom Forman and the others. They realize, I think, rather happily the dramatist's and the spectator's conception of the characters. It requires a fire to bring about the cancellation of two inter-racial marriages, for which device both the neighborhood in which the Kellys and Feinbaums live and the moving picture fans should be duly grateful.

Individual characterizations are the outstanding feature of "Kosher Kitty Kelly." Diminutive Viola Dana suggests most convincingly the petulant Irish girl who becomes engaged to the young Jewish doctor, played by Stanley Taylor, largely through pique; Vera Gordon, as the widow Feinbaum, ultimately yielding to the marriage pleas of Nat Carr, the delicatessen dealer; Tom Forman, the Irish cop, Kitty's first and final fiancée, though engaged in the interim to the widow's daughter, Kathleen Myers; and Aggie Herring as the belligerent "auld sod" mother of Kitty. There are laughs and human interest in the picture.

The Cast: Viola Dana, Tom Forman, Vera Gordon, Kathleen Myers, Nat Carr, Stanley Taylor, Carroll Nye and Aggie Herring. Directed by James Horne.

THEME: Racial conflict on East Side.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Characterizations unusually good; convincing East Side settings.

Why not "The Movie 'Abie's Irish Rose' "? Dana, Carr and Gordon's unquestioned popularity.

DRAWING POWER: Should

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: be good.

Produced and distributed by Film Booking Offices.

Length, 6,103 feet. Released September 5, 1926.

Scenes from "Womanpower," a Fox Film release

Dancing Days

Better a Good Wife Than a Charleston Expert

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

HARKING back in its motive, but dissimilar in theme, to Edgar Selwyn's "Dancing Mothers," is this Preferred Pictures offering presented by J. G. Bachman. The story is of the slightest and most tenuous character, but that does not detract from one's interest, as it is quite well told and acted. J. J. Bell wrote the novel; Dorothy Arzner and Paul Gangelin made the adaptation and for Albert J. Kelly it is the first bit of acknowledged directorial work for this particular company. The tale, in brief, is as follows: Forrest Stanley, a successful business man, gets caught up in the jazz motive of the age and thinks he is in love with that blonde high-priestess of the saxophone cult, Lillian Rich. His wife, Helene Chadwick, insists upon a year's test before she agrees to surrender her marital rights to the blonde Lorelei. Her theory is sound. Husband and wife leaving the house forever are brought together physically through their respective cars colliding and their awakening on the same bed in the farmhouse where they have been carried.

Helene Chadwick in the role of the wife gives an excellent performance. It is a part that calls for restraint and no ranting and she makes the wife effective and appealing. All the other parts are well done, as is the direction. It is no moving picture epic, but it is an interesting human story convincingly told.

The Cast: Helene Chadwick (featured), Lillian Rich, Robert Agnew, Forrest Stanley, Gloria Gordon, Sylvia Ashton and Thomas Ricketts. Director, Albert J. Kelly.

THEME: Jazz versus domesticity.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Charleston dances, especially close-ups of dancers' feet.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Helene Chadwick's repressed emotional scenes.

DRAWING POWER: Good story of simplest possible plot, but convincing.

Length, 5,900 feet; running time, 65 minutes. Released September 1, 1926.

Womanpower

What the So-called "Fair Sex" Does to Us

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

VIRTUE, whether of the feminine or masculine variety, will triumph in the end. That is axiomatic in pictures, so that you know before the first hundred or so feet of the "Womanpower" picture have been unreeled that the Broadway siren will lose out in the end and that the hero will marry not her but some heroine to appear later in the story. This much is certain without reading Harold McGrath's story, "You Can't Always Tell," from which Bradley King evolved the scenario for Harry Beaumont to direct. The girl, in this case Kathryn Perry, is the niece of a health-farm proprietor who suggests in many ways New York's own William Muldoon, the venerable builder-up of broken-down pugilists and businessmen. This comes about because Ralph Graves, being thrown into the disceard as "Yellow" by the siren Margaret Livingston, her presumed lover, Lou Tellegen, and the boy's own stage father, Anders Randolph, go to the Killian (William Walling) farm to prove he can come back, not only physically but in other respects. Always in his mind is the memory of the sneering face of the woman (known as Dot Bellair among our best night club circles). This memory helps a lot to make successful his come-back and the ultimate winning of the right girl's hand and the parental forgiveness. All the parts were well and convincingly played from this writer's viewpoint.

THEME: The good woman undoing the work of a bad 'un.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Typical Muldoon health farm scenes, fights, etc.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Love interest both for villainess and heroine on part of hero; good fight sequences.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Produced and distributed by Fox Films Corp. Length, 6,240 feet. Released September 19, 1926.

Stills of the F. B. O. feature, "Kosher Kitty Kelly"

That Model From Paris

Gouverneur Morris Story on the Screen

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

FROM the story, "The Right to Live," by prolific and popular Gouverneur Morris, has come this latest Tiffany production. It is important for one thing at least, in that it brings to the fore a new luminary in the person of Marceline Day in the principal role, that of a drab, unattractive sartorially, and, because of that, physically, cashier who from this chrysalis becomes the most gorgeous and radiant of butterflies. During the transformation she falls in love with and causes to fall in love with her the son of the house of modistes for which she works as a model. She gets the opportunity to impersonate a non-arriving famous French model because of the not altogether unaltruistic interest in her by the villain. He has offered to pay her salary out of his own pocket and then naturally claims his reward. Bert Lytell, the philandering hero-son of the head of the house, logically thinks there is something rotten if not in the state of Denmark, then at least in the cloak and suit business. He discovers the telltale letter of recommendation and also that the girl, Marceline Day, is not the non-English speaking French woman she pretends to be. However, their separation is not of long duration and they are in each other's arms when the end comes.

The comedy is frothy but always amusing and there is a gorgeous fashion parade by the mannequins.

THEME: Cinderella modernized with 1926-27 feminine fashions.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Fashion parade and scenes in theatre.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Same as highlights, and arrival new leading woman supported by Lytell and Gouverneur Morris's great popularity.

Produced and distributed by Tiffany Productions, Inc. Length 6,200 feet. Released October 15, 1926.

For Alimony Only

But Also—Presumably—for Laughs

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

SHAKESPEARE, discussing those quarrelsome families of Verona, the Montagues and Capulets, asked "What's in a Name?" He would have been answered most effectively in this play by William De Mille, "For Alimony Only," given its first New York showing at the Hippodrome under Producers Distributing Company auspices. The name Leatrice really spells "Joy." And justly she is starred, boyish bob and all, in the De Mille Pictures Corporation offering. Present also are Clive Brook and Lilyan Tashman, Casson Ferguson and Toby Claude, of musical comedy fame.

It is light but amusing fare and well directed and acted. Lilyan, living up to the Follies' gold-digging reputation, marries and divorces Clive for his money—even though, from Broadway standards, it is not so very much. Undismayed, Clive falls in love and marries a second time, his second choice being Leatrice Joy. Their finances are somewhat cut into through the alimony paid Lilyan, so Leatrice goes to work as an interior decorator. Her co-worker has an affair with the ex-wife. Hence the conspiracy to make them marry. Through a police raid on a smart roadhouse this is done. The monthly five hundred thus reverts to the Brook-Joy menage, where it is more than welcome.

THEME: Diverting alimony into right channels.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Introduction in bookshop of Joy and Brook; jealousy by Joy during Brook and Tashman episode.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Convincing love story. Leatrice Joy's appeal.

DRAWING POWER: Fairly good.

Produced by De Mille Pictures Corp. Distributed by P. D. C. Length, 6,070 feet. Released September 20, 1926.

Interesting scenes from "Tin Gods," a Paramount picture

Sparrows

Fair Enough and Sure Of Its Audience

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE Pollyanna motif is very strong in this picture despite the fact that its externals offer pretty gruesome stuff. Whatever its merits and demerits it surely gives Mary Pickford another chance to play her age-less characterization. It is not another "Stella Maris" however, although it has certain features in common with the star's most substantial film.

"Sparrows" is certainly different in regard to plot—even if the treatment of it is nothing to boast about. The star portrays one of those "little mothers"—whose mission is to care for the children on a baby farm.

It is splendidly produced—the atmosphere of the Louisiana swamp suggesting a large vein of suspense. And there is some effective melodrama when Mary fights for her brood against the fiendish keeper of the farm, played with unerring devilishness by Gustav von Seyffertitz. His characterization—together with certain incidents—lends a Dickensque flavor to the story.

There is suspense here. You can't help but wonder if the bad, bad man will accomplish his dark deeds—and the backgrounds aid in carrying on this illusion. It is told with sympathy—and is worth seeing.

THEME: Based upon mother love—with young girl protecting brood of younger children who are on a baby farm.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The wonderful atmosphere. The search. The escape through the swamps. The melodrama. The acting by star, Seyffertitz and Miss Mineau. The juvenile appeal.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The name of the star and the title should pack your theatre. Advertise it as a slice of life—with star cast in one of her greatest roles. Get out the mothers of the community.

DRAWING POWER: Star's name should draw them. Picture O. K. for first runs and all other types of houses.

Produced by Mary Pickford. Distributed by United Artists. Length, seven reels. Released September, 1926.

Interesting camera angles from "Subway Sadie," a First National release

Tin Gods

Meighan Back in His Element

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

NOT since "The Miracle Man" has Thomas Meighan had such virile he-man material as "Tin Gods,"—a picture which is dramatically substantial, moving, spirited—and romantic—even if it travels over old ground and becomes routine in certain features of its development. What if its plot is not so sure of itself? It carries a healthy punch anyway. Besides the characterization seems to be the high note behind this number.

We look upon Meighan going through a redemption process. He sinks to the depths but is brought back to his feet by a girl who has sufficient faith in him. Thus with his own faith restored he goes out and builds that bridge.

Romance comes to him from a warm, impulsive, sympathetic child of love—beautifully played by Renee Adoree. She nurses him, but leaves him when she is advised of his marriage. However, when the wife joins him the unhappy love bird kills herself. It's grim in spots—but it moves with forceful strokes straight to its climax and conclusion.

THEME: Concerns redemption of bitter, disillusioned husband and father who sins to the depths. Is redeemed by simple, trusting girl and reunited to his wife.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The early sequences precipitating the tragedy of hero's home. The escape to South America. Native girl. The nursing of hero back to health. The sacrifice of girl.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up as Meighan's best since "Miracle Man." Feature Renee Adoree as duplicating her performance in "The Big Parade." Emphasize the redemption theme—what it takes to redeem a man.

DRAWING POWER. Star will draw 'em. O. K. for any type of house.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players. Length, seven reels. Released September, 1926.

Displays of tender feeling and humor found in "Sparrows," a United Artists release

Interesting leading episodes in the Producers Distributing Corporation release, "For Alimony Only"

Subway Sadie

Pleasing Film. Homey and Amusing

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE isn't so much substance back of this story, but Al Santell, who directed it, has fashioned it into something full-grown. A mere wisp of an idea expands under his excellent handling of the characters and situations—and camera, so that it takes on form and color. It's a light, fluffy little romance concocted here—a romance of a gum-chewing subway guard and a shop girl who uses the subway to take her to the counter. She's a trifle hardboiled—is Sadie, but she has a heart that registers warmth and sincerity.

And that's about all there is to the story. Nevertheless one cannot help but respond to it. Still it could have been something of an epic—something revealing the spirit of New York as it goes to work—something of the soul of the strap-hanger. Santell has employed some eloquent photography.

The idea expands into a Pollyanna mood. Just as the girl gets the chance to go to Paris for her firm, her subway guard is injured in a wreck. And what do you suppose happens? Why he turns out to be the son of the owner of the subway. Not so much imagination there, but plenty of it in the tender touches, the deft satire, the color and detail.

THEME: Comedy-romance of subway guard and shop girl who fall in love. She is promoted to buyer and he turns out to be a youth with background.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The subway scenes. The atmosphere. The humor. The fine acting by Dorothy Mackaill.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up title and tease it to the limit. Bill as a different picture—one showing spirit of New York. Treat it from a comedy angle. Bill Dorothy Mackaill as making rapid advance as actress of real ability.

Produced and distributed by First National. Length, six reels. Released, September, 1926.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT EQUIPMENT CONSTRUCTION OPERATION

Making Midnite Shows a Community Event

Saturday "Previews" Increase Weekly Receipts at Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City

BY PAT MCGEE
Manager, Criterion Theatre

THE Criterion Theatre has been very successful in the promotion of a midnite matinee starting on Saturdays at 11:30 P. M., which we have called a "midnite preview."

During the summer of 1925 Mr. Ed Roberts, Manager of the Majestic Theatre in Austin, promoted a midnite show to start at 12:00 o'clock on Sunday mite. Since Austin is closed on Sunday and being a college town he probably had a student class to draw from, and since we were suffering the usual summer slump we decided to try one of these mid-nite shows and see what the result would be. Of course, we had used them on New Year's Eve and had been very successful with them—but this was a decided experiment. Our programs opened on Sundays at that time and since Saturday usually brought a great many people down town, we decided to pick up the current Sunday program and use it for one show the previous Saturday evening, and we called it a "midnite matinee." We enjoyed only a fair success during the remainder of the summer and with the opening of the season in September, 1925, they were discontinued.

At the start of the summer season of 1926 we recalled the midnite shows and decided that we would give them another try. However, we had changed our policy to open all new programs on Saturday which made it impossible to use the same program for a show on Saturday evening which had opened a current engagement the same day. Our only other chance was to pick up the program booked to open the following Saturday. This in itself offered a good publicity opportunity—since we advertised extensively that we were pre-releasing features for these special shows.

and from this pre-release idea we evolved the term "preview." Then, in order to enliven the program and make it an occasion for celebration we eliminated the short subjects and put on one or two acts of stage stuff. Then on different occasions we have furnished serpentine, confetti, balloons, etc., at a nominal cost. As you can readily see, the result was a real weekly celebration—a real opportunity for the younger element to forget restraint and "blow off some steam," and since Oklahoma City is a typical town of 125,000 population with practically no night life, we created quite a furore, and surprising as it may seem, we encountered no opposition from ministers although the ## Eye Strain?

—By P. M. ABBOTT—

THERE have been extended discussions of the harmful effects resulting from eye strain caused by viewing motion pictures. In some instances, authorities have recommended that children, especially, should be prohibited from going to movies to prevent damaging their eyes. Other authorities have not considered the eye strain as being particularly harmful.

All this difference of opinion has not been helpful to the industry. It is fortunate, therefore, that the results of investigations conducted by experts which clearly define the degree of eye strain caused by motion pictures have been made public.

The Illuminating Engineering Society carried on one investigation. The conclusion arrived at should place motion pictures in good standing:

"The effect of motion pictures on the eye indicates that while the eyes are strained a great deal by the observation of motion pictures, even in the better moving picture houses, they are damaged little more by that, in all probability, than they are by reading steadily the same length of time under the greater part of the lighting that is now in actual use."

The Eye Sight Conservation Council, another group to investigate this supposed evil, finds that on an average no generally injurious effects are caused the eye by motion pictures. This council points out that improper presentation, however, in the form of poor films, faulty projection, and improper general lighting can cause excessive strain. But, happily, these conditions can be remedied by any exhibitor who is interested in the welfare of his patrons and only adds weight to our contention that projection and lighting are one of the most important phases of good showmanship.

CAPACITY AT MIDNITE SHOW

Making the Midnite Show a Community Event

show extends two hours into Sunday morning.

Of course, we are prohibited from opening the theatre before 1:00 P. M. on Sundays. Although we try to make the entertainment as light as possible and encourage freedom of action, we do not permit any rough stuff or drunkenness, and by conducting the previews on a clean level we have managed to interest not only the younger element—but people from all classes. At the present time you see as many gray heads and bald heads as you do the sleeked hair of jellybeans and bobbed hair of the flappers, and our attendance has increased from 247 (July, 1925) to 1,704 (Saturday, July 31, 1926) which is more than our capacity.

One of the stunts used on the preview was as follows: The choruses of two or three old familiar songs were printed on cards and distributed to the audience. House lights were brought on full and a "Master of Ceremonies" was introduced who directed the audience—or rather led them in singing, being accompanied by the organ. This was broadcasted over our local radio station, KFJF with the result that we have received letters throughout the Southwest complimenting us on the "community singing" and inquiring as to exactly what we meant by the "preview." Additional advertising is given on a separate sheet.

Each preview has been an increase over the one immediately preceding. We have yet to suffer a decrease.

Louis Preston Gets Promotion With Small-Strausberg

Louis Preston, resident manager of the Republic Theatre, Brooklyn, has been promoted by the Small-Strausberg Circuit to the general managership of the Kings County Division of that organization. Eighteen theatres are in the district now managed by Preston, who is the most recent acquisition to the managerial staff of the Small-Strausberg organization.

Seven Shows Daily at Stillman

The Stillman Theatre pushed its release date of "The Son of the Sheik" way up on the calendar, and opened its continuous run last Sunday, with seven shows a day instead of the usual policy of offering five shows daily. There was a tremendous demand for admission on the opening day.

Price Increase at Albany House

Joe Saperstein has jumped his admission prices at Harman-Bleecker Hall in Albany, to 30 cents, and is planning to stage a number of special features along with his regular picture program.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

C. B. STIFF, for several years manager of the Tivoli in Chattanooga and later city manager for Publix in Asheville, N.C., has assumed the management of the three Publix houses in Memphis. These are the Majestic, Strand and Loew's Palace.

PAUL NOBLE, manager of the Liberty in Portland, Ore., for a number of years, has resigned that position to become president of a florist firm in that city.

C. S. WILLIAMS has succeeded Frank N. Phelps as manager of the Hennepin-Orpheum in Minneapolis. He was formerly manager of the St. Louis Theatre, St. Louis. The post of manager at the latter house has been assumed by Everette Hayes, formerly of the Tower Theatre, Chicago.

Stanley-Crandall Managers Form Organization

Under the direction of John J. Payette, supervisor of theatres for the Stanley-Crandall Company of Washington, there has recently been formed the Stanley-Crandall Managers' Association.

The managers hold weekly sessions in the projection room of Crandall's Metropolitan Theatre which are presided over by Mr. Payette. The problems of house management are liberally discussed and constructive advice is adduced unflinchingly.

At a recent election of officers held by the Association, Robert Etris of the Ambassador was elected president; Harry E. Lohmeyer of the Earle, first vice-president; John B. Upperman of the Avenue Grand, second vice-president, and Stephen Eilbacher of the Tivoli, secretary. The duration of office is for one year.

Portland Houses Celebrate "University Week"

Portland, Ore., theatres will celebrate "University Week" during the week of October 4. The event has been launched by Floyd Maxwell, recently appointed public relations director of the Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc. Special features will be college music and songs.

The committee in charge is headed by George McMurphy, director of McMurphy's Blue Boys orchestra. W. B. McDonald, manager of the Heilig Theatre, Russell Brown, of the McDonald Theatre, and Richard Godfrey, all of Eugene, Ore., are others members of the committee.

Appointed Music Librarian At St. Louis Ambassador

Jules Raabe, who plays a clarinet in the orchestra of the Ambassador Theatre, St. Louis, is also music librarian of the big house. In his library are some 35,000 pieces, jazz, classical, waltzes, overtures and concertos. Raabe for four years was with the Missouri Theatre Orchestra.

Spitalny Starts Season at State

Phil Spitalny, who has been touring presentation houses all summer with his orchestra, has returned for another season at the Loew State Theatre, Boston.

Plan New Policies for Two Skouras Theatres

According to reports current in St. Louis, Skouras Brothers will operate the Grand Central as a first run house for pictures other than those of First National and Paramount—probably Warner's, Fox's and Universal's—when the Capitol begins its career in October as the St. Louis home of Vitaphone presentations. The Kings Theatre will become a second run. The addition to the company's chain of the Ambassador, newest and largest St. Louis Picture theatre to which the Publix presentations were transferred from the Missouri, is responsible for the realignment which is to be put into effect when the Capitol starts its new policy.

Since the opening of the Ambassador recently, Paramount and First National first runs have been shown there and at the Missouri, with the Publix shows as added features at the former. The program last week at the Ambassador presented "It Must Be Love," Colleen Moore's First National vehicle, with "Love's Enchantment," a Publix unit show, and a "Fur and Fashion Revue" as the stage features. The Missouri showed "Tin Gods" as the screen attraction. "Sleepy Hall," a banjo "wizard" in a jazzy program of popular music, and Marie Tiffany, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, were added features of the bill.

Continuous Shows Policy Maintained at Palace

Keith's $2,000,000 Palace Theatre in Cleveland will continue through the season its summer policy of continuous shows and a combination vaudeville and picture policy. This will be the first season that Keith will not have a two-a-day playhouse in Cleveland since vaudeville was first introduced. Last summer the continuous combination policy was introduced for the warm months only, and the regular season saw the return of the big time vaudeville with two performances daily. Manager John Royal now announces that the summer policy will continue right on and become the regular house policy. Top price is 75c.

Ben Webster Presentations Director at Eastman

Ben Webster, last season manager and director of the Phoenix Players at Woodstock, N.Y., and previously art and technical director for several New York producers has been appointed director of stage presentations at the Eastman Theatre, Rochester. The Eastman makes most of its own productions, having its own musical stock company and dance corps and Mr. Webster will be given wide latitude in producing original and elaborate stage presentations and divertissements.

Vaudeville at Neighborhood House in Winona, Wis.

Four acts of vaudeville two days each week in addition to motion pictures will be the new policy of the Broadway Theatre, Winona, Wis., a neighborhood house, according to H. A. Rollbeck, owner. All other houses in the city are controlled by Finkelstein & Ruben.

Long Runs at Two More Publix Houses

Omaha Strand and Royal, K.C., Start With "Black Pirate"

THE Royal Theatre, Kansas City, last week began its new policy of playing extended engagements of special pictures with "The Black Pirate" as the attraction. The new policy for the Royal was announced some time ago by Publix, operating this house and the Newman in Kansas City. The Newman for some time has been one of the theatres in the Publix circuit of presentation houses, with the unit shows as an added feature of the programs.

Similar arrangements are being carried out in other cities where Publix operates two or more downtown theatres. In Omaha long-run policy has been put into effect at the Strand, one of the A. H. Blank chain now controlled by Publix. "The Black Pirate" also introduced the new policy there, last week. The other Publix house in Omaha, the Rialto, this week joined the company's chain of presentation theatres, where the stage shows produced by John Murray Anderson, Frank Cambria and others will be offered with photoplays on a weekly-change policy.

Louis Forbstein, director of the Newman Theatre concert orchestra, played a "farewell week" engagement in Kansas City. Forbstein is now at Dallas, Tex., where he will have charge of the musical features for Publix in that territory. The transfer is a part of the rotation plan of Publix, under which directors make three-month stays in cities on the circuit.

"American Beauties" Revue At Rivoli This Week

"American Beauties," a John Murray Anderson unit show for Publix with several of the candidates for the crown of "Miss America" in the recent contest at Atlantic City in the east, is the stage presentation being offered this week at the Rivoli Theatre, New York City, on the program with "The Campus Flirt," Bebe Daniels' new Paramount starring vehicle. The Rivoli orchestra offers "Capriccio Italien" as the overture.

Colored Baritone Wisconsin Star

The Wisconsin Theatre, Milwaukee, offered George Dewey Washington, colored baritone in a group of concert numbers, as the stage feature in connection with the screen presentation of "The Son of the Sheik."

WAR ATMOSPHERE

Melody Duo at Des Moines; Finston Show at Capitol

The Des Moines Theatre, Des Moines, featured the Eddie Miller duo, "Minute Men of Melody," in a program of harmony and comedy songs as the stage attraction last week, when "The Duchess of Buffalo" headed the attractions offered at that house. The Educational-Technicolor subject, "The Blue Boy," was an added feature of the screen program.

"Sidewalks of New York," produced by Nat. Finston for Publix presentation houses, was the stage offering at the Capitol. This house had "The Waning Sex" as the screen attraction, with a "Ko-Ko" song cartune, "Wife Shy," a Bobby Vernon comedy and Fox News as the other numbers of a well-rounded program. The Capitol orchestra offered "The Hunt in the Forest" as an overture.

Barnard and Gary in Stage Show at State

The stage show presented in conjunction with "The Strong Man" at the State Theatre, Minneapolis, last week, featured Barnard and Gary, harmonists. The State's newly augmented concert orchestra, under the direction of William Warvelle Nelson, proved a popular number of the program, which also offered Eddie Dunstedter in an organ solo as a featured specialty of the bill.

Capitol Offers Diversified Bill With "Waning Sex"

A varied program of dance and music is being offered on the current bill at the Capitol, New York City, this week. The screen feature is "The Waning Sex." A UFA short subject titled "A Jungle Round-up," the Capitol news reel, and a Ko-Ko Song Car-Tune, complete the screen numbers.

Colin O'More, concert singer, is heard in the "Kashmiri Song" in his debut as one of the Capitol artists. Another singer, absent for several months, on the program is Caroline Andrews, coloratura soprano, who sings "The Shadow Song." The specially staged pantomime presented immediately preceding the picture is "By My Fireside," with Gitz-Rice ballad of that title sung by Sigrid Nilssen, and dances by Joyee Coles and John Triesault. Miss Coles, an English dancer appearing as guest artist at the Capitol, is also seen in a group of ballet numbers. The Chester Hale ballet is "Galop" from the "Jolly Robbers" overture. The Capitol Grand Orchestra plays "Marche Slav" as the overture.

"Tin Gods" Opens Extended Run at Rialto

"Tin Gods," the new Thomas Meighan Paramount vehicle, this week opened an extended engagement at the Rialto, New York City. The two hours' entertainment offered with this engagement opens with the overture "Fantasia Cavalleria Rusticana" by Pietro Mascagni, with Mr. Pilzer wielding the baton. The Rialto Cinemexents, a movie mirror of current news, follows; Leonora Cori, lyric soprano, will offer a vocal selection. The feature film, "Tin Gods" will precede Harry Langdon in his three-reel comedy, "Saturday Afternoon."

Gilda Gray Star of Screen and Stage at Shea's

Gilda Gray was the attraction at Shea's Buffalo Theatre, Buffalo, last week, when she appeared on the stage in her act called "A South Sea Idyll" as a prologue to "Aloma of the South Seas," the Paramount production in which she makes her debut as a screen star. The program also offered a Lloyd Hamilton comedy "Move Along," news reel, "Merry Wives of Windsor" overture by the orchestra under the direction of Herb Straub, and an organ solo by Tom Grierson.

Booking Amateurs for Circuit

Al Bothner, a former exhibitor in Troy, N.Y., now connected with the Smalley circuit, will spend his time this fall and winter in scouring the territory for amateur acts which will be presented weekly in at least eight of the thirteen Smalley theatres.

Hays Will Attend S. M. P. E. Dinner at Briarcliff

Four-Day Session of Society Opens Oct. 4; Have Planned Elaborate Program

J. C. KROESEN, Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, announces that Will Hays will be the chief speaker at the dinner given by the Society at Briarcliff Lodge, Briarcliff Manor, N. Y., on Monday evening, October fourth. This will be the opening event of the four-day session of the Society at Briarcliff Lodge, October fourth to seventh. Wednesday night, October sixth, the Society will hold its banquet and one of the features of this occasion will be a talk by Lee DeForest on the recent developments in Phonofilms. Arrangements have not been completed for the evening sessions but an elaborate program has been planned and a large attendance is anticipated.

Encourages Free Discussion

J. I. Crabtree, Chairman of the Papers' Committee, announces a full list of papers to be read at the day and night sessions, and a list of these is given herewith. Free discussion of the papers will be encouraged and this is one of most valuable features of the meetings of the S. M. P. E. The papers are of a very practical nature and touch every department of the motion picture industry. As in other fields, progress and valuable contacts are the result of such conventions as the meetings of the S. M. P. E. and these are of importance to everyone connected with the making and showing of motion pictures. The Society welcomes guests at the Convention and those desiring information about the S. M. P. ## Chicago Syndicate Plans Large Negro House

It is reported that a syndicate, which includes Harry M. and Louis Engelstein, Louis Kahn and others, will erect a huge structure which will contain a large theatre, ball-room, billiard-room, bowling alleys, an arcade, and approximately fifty shops and many offices, at the southeast corner of South Parkway (formerly Grand Boulevard) and 47th Street. Alexander A. Levy and Wm. J. Klein are the architects and work is expected to start about December 1st. This neighborhood is in the heart of the colored district and is the most ambitious building project so far contemplated for the benefit of Chicago's negro population.

Maine Theatres, Inc., Add to Augusta Holdings

Maine Theatres, Inc., have added to their holdings in Augusta, Me., by purchase of the former Courier-Gazette or Jones' block, and while official confirmation is not forthcoming, it is understood that before another year a motion picture theatre seating from 1,000 to 1,200 will be erected on the property.

Let Contract for Another Kunsy House

Birmingham, Mich., is to have a new theatre. The Briggs Investment Co., of Detroit, has awarded a contract for the erection of a $400,000 theatre. When completed the house will be known as the Birmingham. It will be built for the Kunsy Theatrical Corporation, of Detroit.

Ashdown, Ark., Contract Awarded

Sam Dudley has awarded the contract for his new house at Ashdown, Ark., to H. M. Westbrook. The house will be one story, 25 by 100 and will contain a balcony for negro patrons.

Three views of the new Jayhawk Theatre recently opened in Topeka, Kan., by the Jayhawk Theatre Corporation. The new house seats 1,500 and is said to represent an investment of $400,000.

Topeka's Jayhawk Opens

New House Said to Represent Vision Rather than Hard-boiled Business Venture

IN motion picture palaces, Topeka, Kan., now ranks with larger cities of the United States with the opening of the $400,000 Jayhawk Theatre the other day.

The Jayhawk represents the realization of a "vision," rather than a business outlook into the future. The vision was that of E. H. Crosby, president of Crosby Bros. Company, owners of the theatre, which will be operated by Maurice W. Jencks and G. L. Hooper of the Jayhawk Theatre Operating Company, under whose supervision the theatre was constructed.

The theatre, which seats 1,500, can be emptied in ten minutes, its ground space being 74x125 feet. The stage is located on the extreme southern end of the structure and is faced by a deep, wide balcony, capable of seating 650 persons, all of whom can see every foot of the stage. There are hundreds of feet of restful and inspiring lobbies extending along the north and west sides of the main auditorium. From them and leading to the foyer on the mezzanine floor back of the balcony are two grand staircases, which rise with a sweep and general gracefulness that is pleasing to the eye.

It is on the mezzanine floor that the real luxury of the theatre is to be seen. There are offices for the various departments of the theatre, the projection room and store rooms. Tons and tons of marble and thousands of feet of expensive woods have been used in the theatre's construction. From the moment a patron enters the house on Seventh Street, as he passes the elaborate box office grill inside the big main floor, as he mounts the wide easy stairs at the entrance to the main foyer, as he walks through the arcade to the theatre proper, each step is a vista of elaborate decoration.

Regardless of the weather outside, the patron in the Jayhawk will be unaware of icy winds or sultry heat. A balmy spring temperature will prevail at all times. All this will be effected by the huge refrigeration, heating and ventilating system with which the theatre has been equipped at a considerable cost. For three months mechanics and engineers employed by the American Carbonic Company of Chicago worked in installing the system, which is equipped with three motors and forces treated air through 302 openings. Toilet rooms, cloak rooms and smoking accommodations, the like of which Topeka patrons heretofore have been forced to go outside the state to enjoy, are included in the new house.

When the orchestra, under the direction of George Kristufek, is taking a periodical rest, a large organ, the product of George Kilgen & Sons Co., will be presided over by Miss Bernice Hemus. From bright daylight to sunset, to moonlight night and then a rosy dawn are the transitions possible within only a few moments by the aid of the electrical and mechanical equipment in the theatre.

"It has taken a pile of money to make

M. W. Jencks, president of the Jayhawk Theatre Corporation and secretary and treasurer of the National Theatre Corporation, Topeka, Kan.

all this possible," said Mr. Crosby, "but that money was made right here in Topeka and the Topekans who will enjoy entertainment in this theatre are the ones who have helped me pile up this money. Topeka needed a really modern theatre badly. Topekans were fast adopting the idea that if they wanted good shows they had to go to Kansas City to get them. They were spending Topeka money to build newer and better theatres for Kansas City, rather than their home town. With a stage, 30x38 feet, it will be possible to stage the best of prologues and specialty numbers."

Junior Cameramen Hold Monthly Meeting

A regular monthly meeting of the Junior Cameramen's Club of Los Angeles, was held at Brandstatter's Piccadilly on September 7. Gregg Toland, an ex-president of the club, was the guest of honor. Mr. Toland gave an interesting talk on methods and conditions in the Eastern studios from where he has just returned, as contrasted to the California Producing units.

While in the East Gregg Toland assisted Arthur Edison in the photographing of two feature productions for First National.

World's Largest Rug for Paramount Theatre

WHAT is reputed to be the largest rug in the world is coming with fifty others from Czecho-Slovakia, next month, for the Paramount Theatre at Times Square.

The largest of these rugs, one of which will cover the entresol immediately behind the loge seats, is 115 feet in length, the largest rug ever made, as far as it is known. The other rugs, of various sizes, making 619 yards of floor coverings, will be used in the lobbies and promenades of the motion-picture palace. Twenty-six of them will go in the special lounge rooms, including the ladies' smoking room, which is to be finished in atmospheric Chinese.

The decision to have these rugs made in Europe came as fitting to the French Renaissance atmosphere of the interior, which throughout reflects that luxurious period in France during the reign of Louis Sixteenth.

Announcing A NATIONAL SERVICE

OF THEATRE EQUIPMENT AND SUPPLIES

CONVINCED that a bigger and better Service should be given the theatre owner, certain leaders in the equipment field have organized the leading concerns in the country into one National Service Unit.

Such a National organization was an economic necessity to eliminate the chaotic conditions which existed, and to eliminate wastes accompanying efforts to conduct small individual businesses on a Service policy.

Gathering together the brains and ideas of the equipment field into one efficient unit, it is possible to function at less expense, and offer to every theatre owner and every large organization a better service with less' lost motion and confusion.

The following equipment companies, with very few changes in personnel, offer you in the new organization, whose names appear below, more for your investments in equipment and supplies than you have ever enjoyed before.

Inquiries and Comments

The Basis of Reflector Arc's Efficiency

TIME and again we have been asked by projectionists why a mirror, such as one of the several types used for reflector arc projection, provides such large gains in screen illumination over the ordinary plano-convex condenser set.

Seemingly, there is something quite mysterious about the operation of a mirror as distinguished from a lens because a simple explanation of the increase of efficiency of the former over the latter leaves the listener as much in the dark as ever.

The reason for this is undoubtedly due to the fact that the average projectionist has been so long accustomed to thinking in terms of lens action that the action of a concave mirror leaves him more or less befuddled.

Four Good Reasons

Passing over the theory of operation of both these devices we find that there are four very good reasons for the increased screen illumination provided by a mirror arc system.

In the first place, putting the carbons in line with each other in a horizontal position results in the crater burning to a circular shape rather than elliptical as is the case with the old carbon set employed with condensers. This simply means that no excess crater area need be tolerated in order to insure complete covering of the aperture.

With the old vertical carbon set, the smallest diameter of the crater is used when figuring the magnification necessary for complete coverage of the aperture. Since the crater, with this set, is elliptical, rather than circular, the difference between the area of this ellipse and the area of a circle having a diameter equal to the smallest diameter of the ellipse represents the excess crater area required by the first system over the second.

In the case of a 45 ampere arc, the saving in current on this one item alone would be more than 20 percent.

There is another reason why the horizontal carbon set is better than the vertical. The crater being in a plane parallel to the face of the mirror naturally provides a more favorable distribution of light so that the mirror can be placed in a position to pick up most of the light from the crater.

With the vertical carbon set, the crater faces the floor of the lamp house and the condenser is placed at a high angle to the line of the carbons so that it intercepts but little of the light emitted by the lamp. Even placing the negative carbon ahead of the positive so as to cause the crater to assume a more perpendicular position where it will better face the collector lens does not correct this error, though it helps to a considerable extent.

Large "Pick-Up"

It is safe to say that the biggest increase in efficiency comes from the extremely large "pick-up" angle, which the use of a mirror makes possible. With the old condenser lens system, the pick-up angle averaged about 60 degrees. If anything, it was somewhat less than this, but 60 degrees represented about the maximum that could be expected. It was impossible to increase this figure for the simple reason that the approach of the arc toward the lens and the diameter of lens that could be used was strictly limited.

The logical thing, of course, would have been to increase the diameter of the condenser lens in order to pick up more light, but when this was done, the increased spherical and chromatic aberration, the greater lens thickness and the increased loss of light from surface reflection greatly offset any gain which would have resulted.

Furthermore, the very position of the lens with respect to the arc acted to limit any gain resulting from increasing the lens diameter since the light distribution characteristics of a carbon arc are such that the candlepower falls off rapidly at high angles from axis of the crater.

This simply means that with the lens occupying such a position, the light pick-up does not increase in proportion with the increase in lens area.

The use of a mirror, on the other hand, permits of an extremely high pick-up angle—120 degrees—since it is easier to obtain the necessary bending with a mirror than with a lens.

It is necessary, of course, to place the arc fairly close to the mirror, but since the greatly improved efficiency permits the use of a much reduced amperage, no particular harm results from this practice.

The principal danger comes in on high angles of tilt, as there is then danger of the tail flame of the arc striking the mirror.

The placing of the carbons in a horizontal position and in line with each other also makes such a high pick-up angle effective since the axis of the crater then coincides with that of the mirror, thereby insuring the minimum falling off in candlepower toward the outer zones of the mirror.

This does not mean that the candlepower toward the outer mirror zones does not fall off since, in fact, it diminishes as the cosine of the angle, measured from the axis of the crater.

It does mean, however, that the mirror is in the most favorable position to intercept the greatest amount of light from the crater.

There is another factor, so far unmentioned, which helps account for the increased efficiency of the mirror arc. The transmission factor of the ordinary plano-convex combination is about 65 percent under ordinary conditions of use. The reflection factor of the mirrors employed with the reflector arc system is about 80 percent since they are of high optical quality. In other words, the mirror arc system has a higher efficiency of light transmission than that of the old condenser lens set.

A Corrected System

By far the most important point in connection with the mirror arc is the fact that it represents a corrected optic system. That is, it is corrected, either entirely or nearly so for spherical aberration. It might be well to say that this is true of only two systems now in common use—the one employing a parabolic reflector in combination with a plano-convex lens, and the one employing an elliptic mirror alone.

The system employing the elliptic mirror is entirely corrected for spherical aberration, whereas the other is not. In contrast with these two systems—which are by far the most popular—there is the old mirror arc system using the spherical mirror originally used in this country about four years ago. This is used even today, but in point of efficiency it cannot compare with the other two.

The correction for spherical aberration simply means that a large saving in current can be obtained for the same screen illumination and a major item with the reflector arc method of projection.

In the light of this, it seems unfair to compare the mirror arc system with the old condenser set since no common basis for comparison can be said to exist. We have on one hand a corrected system and on the other an uncorrected one.

A more practical method would be to compare the reflector arc with the parabolic lens system designed for the vertical arc. When this is done, we find that about 30 amperes are necessary to provide limiting illumination with a mirror arc and about 50 to 60 amperes are required for the same condition with a vertical arc.

Compared on this basis the reflector arc is seen to result in a saving of 40 to 50 percent in current consumption.

Freuler Company Increases Sales Operations

Vitalux Display Cabinet

John R. Freuler, president of the Automatic Movie Display Corp., of New York, national distributors of the Vitalux Display Cabinet, recently returned from a tour of the Western territory and a visit at the factory in Milwaukee, where he arranged for an increase in production activities.

The display cabinets are designed for lobby and window displays of trailers of forthcoming or current screen offerings at picture theatres. The cabinets accomplish the feat of showing motion pictures in daylight and according to Mr. Freuler are becoming increasingly popular as attractors for lobby display and window tie-ups between theatres and merchants. The company of which Freuler is the head is developing the commercial advertising as well as the picture theatre field. Industrial films are being prepared for manufacturers of various types of merchandise and are being shown in special window displays by dealers throughout the country. John R. Freuler is well known in the motion picture industry, having served as president of the old Mutual Film Company and the American Film Company.

At York Beach, Me., one of the rapidly growing and largest of the New England summer resorts, the Boston & Maine Railroad has just sold its most valuable parcel of land in the centre of the business district to the New England Amusement Co., composed of Ray Weare, George Cloutier, Ansel Garfield, Nick Wolfe and Joseph LaBonte. Plans for the development of this property with a motion picture theatre which will be opened next season are under way.

Brooklyn Exhibitor to Build Large House

ANOTHER theatre, the largest in the A. H. Schwartz chain, is to be erected in Brooklyn. Announcement to this effect was made this week when Mr. Schwartz, a pioneer in the borough's motion picture field, acquired title to a plot 140x250 feet, on the south side of Flatbush Avenue, near Lincoln Road. The property brought the record price of $175,000.

The new theatre will make the twentieth in the chain of cinema houses, the first link of which was forged in Flatbush fifteen years ago with the opening of the Linden Theatre.

Since that time Mr. Schwartz has continually added to his holdings until at present he controls the Albemarle, Farragut and Rialto theatres, all on Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn.

The Schwartz chain extends out on Long Island and into Westchester County. At present there are eleven houses in operation, four nearing completion and plans for five others under way. The four being completed include two in Brooklyn, at Flatbush Avenue and Kings Highway, and Conboy Island Avenue and Avenue U. The third is located in Flushing, while the fourth will brighten Merriek road in Freeport.

Plans for other houses include Port Washington, Huntington, Corona and another new theatre in Queens.

Views of the new Capitol Theatre, Portchester, N.Y., showing stage and auditorium, stairway in inner foyer and the outer lobby. The new house is one of Westchester County's finest playhouses and many notables attended the opening

Broadway Atmosphere Adds Zest to Premiere

Capitol Theatre, Portchester, N. Y., Draws Many Prominent Personages to Opening

THE Capitol Theatre, probably one of the finest in the country and without doubt the most modernly equipped in Westchester County, opened its doors to the public for the first time on August 18th.

The opening was a typical Broadway first night and had among its guests many of Portchester's and neighboring towns' most prominent personages as well as some of Broadway's representative first nighters. Lew Fields acted as Master of Ceremonies and received an ovation upon his entrance.

The new theatre is located at Westchester Avenue and Broad Street and presents a most prepossessing appearance. It stands three stories high; is a block long; and almost a block wide.

Attractive Entrance

The entrance to the theatre is markedly attractive. Both the inner and outer foyers are done in travertine marble, with large French mirrors panelling the walls in regular sections. The inner foyer is carpeted with an expensive oriental rug, while the draperies that adorn the entrance to the auditorium are of heavy maroon silk damask with over-draperies of silk velour.

The style of architecture of the exterior is of Italian renaissance period and is shown in the buff-faced brick and architectural terra cotta.

The interior is done in strict Byzantine style and offers one of the most individualistic efforts at theatre decoration yet seen. It is the only theatre in the east done in Byzantine and is considered an innovation in theatre design.

The general color scheme of the interior is carried out in café au lait and gold with columns and ornamental work generally of the Byzantine character depicted in red and blue. The draperies here are also of heavy maroon silk damask with over-draperies of velour. The mezzanine rivals any yet devised in the better known theatres throughout the country, and offers the same motif in colors that grace the auditorium proper. The carpet in black and red, and the tapestried period chairs and sofas lend a homelike atmosphere, while the heavy brass electrical fixtures add to the extreme attractiveness of the promenade.

The ladies' lounge is also highly decorated and for comfort and abandon is one of the most inviting spots in the theatre. The men's lounge is also attractively done.

There are two thousand seats, each more than wide enough for ordinary comfort. These are carried out the same as the draperies in color scheme. The seats are of maroon leather while the backs are of rich maroon velour. Those in the loges, however, are entirely covered in Byzantine tapestry, making them rather distinctive.

The general illuminating scheme of the interior is a multi-colored one with its strongest motif predominating in red and blue. The fixtures chosen for the house are of rare design and are probably of the most beautiful and unusual construction yet hung in any theatre. They are of the Byzantine period, and are further enriched with crystal pendants of various colors. The fixtures under the balcony are of art glass panels using the same color combinations as the main fixtures over the auditorium. The large dome at the top of the theatre contains concealed colored lights which are used with great effect. All lighting for both the house and the stage is controlled upon the stage from a pre-set, remote control switchboard with a triple color lighting system for the stage.

Steel and Concrete Booth

The picture booth is constructed entirely of steel and concrete, making that important part of the house as nearly absolutely fireproof as human invention can conceive. The most modern equipment procurable has been installed to render the best and most efficient projection possible. To this end, three of the latest models of Simplex projection machines have been installed while huge spot-lights and a stereopticon also serve to do their share in developing the program and flood the stage with their vari-colored hues.

Perhaps the most important adjunct to the mechanical equipment is the one hundred twenty-five ton refrigerating plant. This machine is driven by a two hundred horse power alternating current electric motor. This refrigerating machinery includes forty-seven hundred feet of one and one quarter inch piping used to cool two hundred fifty gallons of water per minute, this pump being operated by a twenty horse power motor.

The ventilating system is said to provide twenty-five cubic feet of air per minute to each occupant of the theatre under conditions of maximum occupancy; to change the air in the retiring rooms twenty times per hour and in the smoking rooms forty times per hour, and is equipped with a temperature regulating system.

Among the several stars in the opening program arranged for the Capitol Theatre were: Friseo, the comedian and dancer, and Lulu McConnell & Company.

The theatre is owned and operated by the Rheben Theatres Corporation comprising Albert Strauss, president; Jack E. Ungerfeld, vice-president and managing director, and Sam Weinberg, treasurer and resident manager of the house.

Wilmer & Vincent Theatres Celebrating Anniversary

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the Wilmer & Vincent Theatre Company is being specially recognized with playbills of extra merit in the fifty theatres controlled by the company in Pennsylvania, Virginia, and other states. This company operates six theatres in Harrisburg and four in Reading, Pa., and among its other important houses in Pennsylvania are theatres in Easton, Allentown, Altoona, Bethlehem and elsewhere.

Just a quarter of a century ago, Sidney Wilmer and Walter Vincent, who are still the controlling factors in the corporation, and who had previously constituted a vaudeville team, began their career as theatre managers.

Universal - Brooklyn House Well Under Way

Universal Theatre Corporation's neighborhood theatre project in Brooklyn, N.Y., is progressing in fine shape according to information recently received. At the present time the entire foundation work is in place. John Eberson, famous Chicago architect, drew the plans.

NEW YORK

Pawtucket is scheduled to have still another new motion picture theatre. Plans have been drawn for William J. Dunn of Fall River, Mass., for a theatre 100 by 170 feet, two stories, brick construction, on Main Street. The estimated cost of the construction work is $100,000. There will be stores and offices in the front of the building, the theatre occupying the rear of the structure with spacious lobby in the front center of the building.

Simon Rudnick has secured a building permit to erect his new Boston theatre and block of stores at 270-294 Washington Street to cost $150,000 exclusive of the interior work on the theatre. The playhouse structure alone will cost $100,000.

Contracts have been awarded by Wise & Upson, Inc., in charge of the erection of the new Colonial Theatre in Hartford for Joseph Walsh and work will be started at once. The structure will be Colonial in design, first class construction, five stories high and will be completed in about a year.

Rothstein Building Two at Winnipeg, Canada

N. Rothstein, owner of the Arlington Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, is constructing two other neighborhood theatres in Winnipeg. A 600-seat theatre is being built by him on Sargent Avenue while another house of similar size is being erected in the Norwood district.

West Coast Jr. to Build at Montebello

Harry Sugarman, president of the West Coast Junior Circuit, is planning the construction of a new motion picture theatre to be built on Whittier Boulevard in the Laguna district of Montebello, Cal., according to a recent report.

M. P. Theatre for Arbuckle, Cal.

John Kaintoch, furniture man and booster of Arbuckle, Cal., has started the construction of a two-story building which will house a 500-seat motion picture theatre. A good sized stage will also be provided so that other attractions may also be shown.

Canadian Theatre Overhauled

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Sparrows"—United Artists, Strand, New York

New York Herald Tribune: At the Strand the consensus was that "Sparrows" was the greatest picture of the season. We are judging by the applause, the laughter and the words of praise which we heard on every side. . . . We may as well advise every one to see "Sparrows" because every one is going to see it anyway.

New York Daily News: Our Mary in "Sparrows" again stirs the heartstrings. No official census has been made of the number of tiny lumps that rose in throats among the Mark Strand audience yesterday, but there must have been a number of lumpy larynxes. Our Mary scores again in the sort of role which it seems she will be always able to play regardless of the passage of time. A picture that nearly everybody will want to see.

New York American: Like Douglas Fairbanks in "The Black Pirate," Mary Pickford has turned to childhood dreams for her latest and perhaps finest picture. Beautiful photography. Mary Pickford is fast becoming the Peter Pan of stars, and is her own lovable, little girl self. Beautifully done.

New York World: Very beautifully photographed, sensibly put together melodrama—a melodrama old-fashioned, sweet, Pollyannish, reminiscent and splendidly pointed with that quality known as menace, a quality well known for its efficiency in holding the movie audiences' mouths open. I imagine it will find favor in most of the localities where it is shown.

New York Times: The story touches real drama and calls to mind Kiplings poem, "The female of the species is more deadly than the male." Miss Pickford's performance is as flawless as ever.

New York Daily Mirror: "Sparrows" pricks and whips its audience into nervous excitement.

New York Telegram: One of the most captivating of this perennially young star's pictures. It is called "Sparrows" and it is carried out in accordance with the best Pickford traditions. We have Mary Pickford back again in her favorite and most favored role. "Sparrows" is perhaps the most mature and adult piece of entertainment that Miss Pickford has ever offered her numerous admirers. Miss Pickford is revealed in a particularly happy vein, amusing and pathetic by turns, unfaltering in character and wholly appealing. We are inclined to consider "our Mary's" work in this picture as the best characterization she has given to the screen.

New York Telegraph: Mary Pickford has never more clearly demonstrated that she stands alone as the delineator of ragamuffin roles than in her latest picture, "Sparrows." This little star is an artiste and her latest effort should win for her many new friends. You will see a remarkable performance and a picture filled with suspense, action, thrills and enough comedy to break the tenseness of the dramatic situations. "Sparrows" is a cracking good picture. There is everything in it that the average movie audience will like. "Sparrows" should build a fine nest for "America's Sweetheart" in more ways than one.

New York Sun: Mary Pickford is as excellent as usual. It is worth seeing.

New York Evening Post: One of Miss Pickford's most energetic offerings to date. "Sparrows" finds a place very near the top in the list of Pickford productions, for it is beautifully done against a background little exploited so far, though unusually effective on the screen. It is a story of children of whom Miss Pickford is one, beautifully told with sympathy and a sense of humor. "Sparrows" is recommended as one of Miss Pickford's better films.

New York Times Mid-Week Pictorial: Mary Pickford wins new laurels in "Sparrows." One of the most effective pictures in which even Mary Pickford has been seen. We congratulate everybody concerned in "Sparrows."

New York Evening World: "Our Mary" plays a typical Pickford role and plays it as youthfully and as effectively as she played similar roles five or ten years ago.

New York Evening Journal: Movie audiences will take something away with them from the picture besides the ticket stubs. It is poignantly tense. It leaves an impression.

Overwhelming Enthusiasm Grooms West Coast Premiere of "Don Juan"

The reception accorded the western premiere of "Don Juan," John Barrymore's latest starring vehicle for Warner Bros. at Grauman's Egyptian Theatre, in Hollywood, on August 20th, was easily the most brilliant ever accorded any personality of the screen, and undoubtedly also the most enthusiastic for any one screen production.

The audience surpassed any other that has assembled in Grauman's Egyptian, long regarded as practically supreme in first-night presentations.

The crowd that congregated outside the theatre and for almost two blocks either way from the entrance along the boulevard was the largest that has ever gathered at any Hollywood premiere. Completely sold out long in advance of the opening, at $5.50 a seat, tickets were at a premium the last two days, and it was estimated that over three thousand more seats could have been sold, if available.

Frank Murphy, Chief Electrical Engineer of the Warner Bros. Studio, arranged a brilliant electrical display in the forecourt of the theatre. On the roof of the house a gorgeous electrical effect was produced through the medium of steam in spray formations, pierced by the rays of colored lights rising high in the sky and assuming the shape of a rainbow. From the surrounding hills of Hollywood flares, bombs and an elaborate display of fireworks cast a holiday aspect over the proceedings.

Charles Wellman, in charge of the Warner Bros. broadcasting station, broadcast by remote control the entrance of the celebrities and occurrences in the forecourt prior to the performance, concluding with the presentation in the theatre.

Sid Grauman, who has won an enviable reputation in motion picture circles as the creator of dazzling prologues, outdid himself.

The Maximum Emotional Effect

THE GENERAL USE of Panchromatic Negative in motion picture production means much in the way of improvement in the art.

USED WITHOUT A FILTER it helps the picture— with a filter, the color corrections are positively sensational. As one user has put it: “The use of ‘Pan’ gives the maximum emotional effect on the screen.”

EASTMAN PANCHROMATIC NEGATIVE is now the same price as ordinary negative. It keeps as well as ordinary negative and, except for the lighting in the darkroom, is developed in the same manner as ordinary negative.

Yet Eastman Panchromatic is an extraordinary product.

A New and Better Edison MAZDA Lamp for Projection

Improved construction makes the new type Edison MAZDA Lamp for motion picture projection stronger and better. The filament is now clamped to lead-in wires instead of being welded. Stronger support prevents sagging or twisting of the filament and the consequent short-circuiting of the two center coils. These features overcome most of the burn-out difficulties experienced in previous types of construction.

The new type Edison MAZDA Lamp has a much longer average life and gives a higher intensity of light during the period of its life. Your Supply Dealer can supply you with the improved lamps.

For the average theatre having a throw not exceeding 120 feet, Incandescent Lamp Projection is a money saver and a money maker. The Incandescent Lamp operates on half the current required for an arc and it gives clear, steady light that makes pictures appear at their best. There is no flicker, glare or shadows to tire the eyes of the audience and the tonal quality of the light gives pictures greater depth.

Incandescent Lamp Projection is favored by projectionists. It frees the projection room of dust, gas fumes and excessive heat—makes operating conditions pleasant and healthful.

Take advantage of the two-way profit this method of projection offers you. Remember, while you save half your current costs, you also raise the standard of your theatre through a better presentation of pictures, and that brings greater patronage.

Get full particulars from your Supply Dealer or write for descriptive literature to Edison Lamp Works of General Electric Company, Harrison, N. J.

"SWEET ROSIE O'GRADY"

Another Columbia Triumph!

GOOD FOR A WEEK'S RUN IN ANY THEATRE

"Hard-Boiled" Pete Harrison Touts It As A Winner!

"Sweet Rosie O'Grady"—with Shirley Mason

(Columbia Pictures-Regional, Oct. 1; 6 reels)

A sweet story of Irish and Hebrews, in which there is considerable comedy and much pathos. Most of the pathos comes from the kind-heartedness of a Hebrew, who rears a Christian baby girl, found at his door; her mother had left her there because she was unable to support her; she had felt sure that the Hebrew, who everybody knew was kind-hearted, would give her child a good home. The good-heartedness of the Irish policeman, too, awakens much sympathy; he had taken equal interest in the child's welfare. The love affair between the heroine and the hero, with whom the heroine had become acquainted when she and her gang of little children had saved him from being harmed by two hold-up men, is charming. The comedy is caused by the acting of the heroine and of E. Alyn Warren, who takes the part of the kind-hearted Hebrew money-lender. There is, of course, considerable comedy also in the subtitles. Cullen Landis, as the hero, is good. So is William Conklin, as the Irish policeman. The plot has been suggested by Maude Nugent's popular old song of the same name; it has been directed well by Frank R. Strayer, from a scenario by Harry O'Hoyt; it has been supervised by Harry Cohen:—

A baby girl is found in front of his pawn shop by Uncle Ben, a Hebrew money lender, while an Irish policeman was paying him a friendly visit. The two decide to rear her as a Christian, because a cross was found among her clothes indicating that she was a Christian; but Uncle Ben had kept the child. The child (heroine) grows into womanhood; she is so deeply attached to her foster father, the Hebrew, that when the Irish ex-policeman, who had become so wealthy that he had bought a home on Fifth Avenue, invites her to live in his palatial home, she refuses to leave Uncle Ben. She meets the hero and falls in love with him, and he with her. Due to a misunderstanding hero and heroine have a quarrel. Uncle Ben then finds it necessary to send her to the other foster father so that she might forget. But soon a reconciliation takes place between her and the hero; they marry.

It should be suitable for most week-run houses, for all short-run ones, for vaudeville theatres, and in small towns for any day of the week, particularly for Sunday.

THE BROOKLYN DAILY EAGLE, NEW YORK,

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1926

ALMOST all of the great directors have contracted to make Paramount pictures. Aside from the Famous-Player regulars—James Cruze, Malcolm St. Clair, D. W. Griffith, Herbert Brenon, Frank Tuttle and Edward Sutherland—the following have recently signed under this company's banner: Ernst Lubitsch, Eric von Stroheim, Frank Lloyd, Eric Pommer, Marshall Neffan, William Beaudine and Monta Bell. This is certainly the Quality Group of directors. The stars whose steps they will guide include Harold Lloyd, Thomas Meighan, Douglas MacLean, Pola Negri, Adolphe Menjou, Wallace Beery, Bebe Daniels, Richard Dix, Florence Vidor and Gilda Gray.

Of pictures on the Famous-Player schedule those most favored in the advance notices are "Old Ironsides," "The Wedding March," "The Sorrows of Satan," "Hotel Imperial," "The War of the Worlds," "Wings" and "Beau Geste," the last of which has already made an auspicious appearance in New York.

FELIX THE CAT, Cartoon—These cartoon comedies entertain and please all. Educational prints are in exceptionally good condition. (Palace, Beckley, W. Va.) As a change from the regular comedies, these cartoons are good. I notice that our audiences don't go to sleep while they are being projected, either. (Y, Nazareth, Pa.) Always good. Will make the old and young happy. (Empress, Deshler; Neb., Majestic, Hebron, Neb.) These short cartoons seem to please most of my patrons.

(Reel Joy, King City, Cal.) Going good, especially with the kids, and you've certainly got to please the children these days. (Strand, Floral, Ala.) They seem to please the kids and we notice when we advertise a Felix we have enough extra kids to pay for the Felix. (Rex, Colby, Wis.) All of these cartoons of Felix are good. (Leeds, Leeds, Iowa.) Good. (Majestic, Phillipsburg, Kan.) These are dandy on any program. Made excellent short subjects. (Woodward Hall, Hill, N. H.) I believe that Felix gets more laughs than the average two-reel comedy. All the kids come to see him. (Plainview, Plainview, Tex.)

They are always good and are enjoyed by both old and young. Among the best single reel material that can be bought. (Cabot, Marshfield, Danville and Plainfield, Vt.) Felix always good.

This one no exception. (Star, Menard, Texas.)

These are good; the old folks enjoy them almost as much as the children. (Mystic, Stafford, Kan.)

Felix always pleases, especially the kids, and most all the big kids, too. (Bijou, Conway, N. H.) Very good short reel. (Opera House, Fennimore, Wis.) Audience got a good laugh out of this one. (Auditorium, Barrington, Ill.)

Perhaps the best drawing one-reel subjects on the market. We have found these cartoons to be just the thing to shorten our programs for summer. (Strand, North Loup, Neb.) Adults enjoy this the same as the children. (Benn, Philadelphia, Pa.) Felix and — are right at the top in public opinion of short subjects. Always good. (Paralta, Oakwood, Tex.) They always please grown-ups and kids. (Selk, Scotia, Neb.) Felix better liked here than —. (Gulf, Goose Creek, Tex.) Very good. (Photoplay, Ashland, Kans.)

New York City.

My dear Mr. Bowen:

We are enclosing herewith duly signed contract covering the installation of the chairs in the Roxy Theatre.

This brings to an end a long study of the important question of what seats to install in order to obtain a maximum degree of comfort and at the same time not overlook the fact that the seats had to be more than luxurious in appearance to match the architecture and decorative effects of what we know will be the last word in theatre magnificence for years to come.

We are convinced after our exhaustive study that your firm is particularly well adapted to give us what we require and therefore this contract.

Very truly yours,

"ROXY" SELECTS

for his new theatre

WHEN S. A. Rothafel, known to the whole world as "Roxy," planned his theatre, he determined that it should eclipse in size, magnificence and comfort any similar place of amusement America could produce. The building, the architecture, interior design and decoration, and, equally important, the seats, are to be conceived on a scale hitherto undreamed of in the picture exhibiting profession.

WISE showman that he is, "Roxy" engaged the services of the world's best theatre designers for every detail. So, it is with justifiable pride that we announce the selection by Mr. Rothafel and his associates of Heywood-Wakefield specially designed opera chairs for the entire seating equipment of the new $6,000,000 "Roxy" Theatre.

S. A. ROTHAFEL ("ROXY")
Who planned and will direct this mammoth amusement enterprise.

AS in hundreds of other fine theatres seated by Heywood-Wakefield, the chair designs are in strict keeping with the whole scheme of decoration. The beautiful Loge, Orchestra and Balcony chairs for this 6,000 seat house are to be more luxurious and comfortable than any seat yet produced. The details of these handsome chairs are withheld as Mr. Rothafel wishes to make them one of the big surprises of the opening night.

SPECIAL attention is invited to the reproduction of the letter from Mr. W. E. Atkinson, Vice-President and General Manager, who signed the contract for "Roxy" Theatre seating equipment.

NO matter where you are, or what your theatre seating requirements may be, the Heywood-Wakefield Opera Chair line and facilities will meet your exact conditions.

ANY H-W warehouse will gladly, and without obligation, co-operate in planning for maximum house capacity and patron comfort. A theatre seating expert, backed by our 100 years of seat-building experience, will consult with you at your request.

A Double Exposure of

—or Dutch, as she was, and is called—lost her interest in school. I first remember her as a gangling schoolgirl wandering about the Vitagraph yard. That was before she developed into a devastating heart-breaker and a star. Constance looked like an awkward kid sister then, but a world of confidence lay behind the freckles. Constance is twenty-seven, three years younger than Norma. She was born, as she herself says, "out where" the Flatbushes grow. "In Brooklyn." Even while Norma was first making her appearance before the camera Constance was starring in amateur theatricals at school. In those days Constance was considered a homely girl. But she annoyed Vitagraph directors until she got her chance. Then she went West to join the Griffith forces. Here began her friendship with Dorothy Gish, which finally reached its climax the day after Christmas, in 1920, when the two ran away to Greenwich, Conn. Two years later Constance made her first hit as the mountain girl in Griffith's "Intolerance." About this time Richard Barthelmess went West to join the Griffith forces. On the night of his arrival, Barthelmess, with Bobbie Harron, went to dinner with Constance and Dorothy Gish. That evening began the first romance in Miss Talmadge's career. ## The Peculiar Picture

EVERY so often there comes along an unusual picture. I mean the kind like "Nanook," "Grass," "Moana," etc.; Pathe now has one in "Alaskan Adventures."

They are made by an unusual man with a sense of unusual drama. Here and there an unusual exhibitor or publicity man, or salesman puts them over and with astounding success. They may even stir the whole trade as "Nanook" did.

But generally the usual machinery of the trade—salesman and exhibitors alike—accustomed to dealing with the usual product, treats them like step-children. They don't know how to handle them, because they handle everything in the usual way.

When we arise in defence of these pictures pointing out that unless we are content to cater only to fans we must greatly broaden the scope of the picture, our words, I presume, are set down as editorial and impractical. So we quote here an observation from the columns of the Detroit News:

"The most courageous bit of movie promotion seen in Detroit in years was suitably rewarded in the engagement of 'Grass,' at Orchestra Hall, during the past eight days.

"Famous Players-Lasky, distributors of the film—a remarkable tale of Persian tribes taken by three Americans—were unable to sell the pictures through the regular channels. Exhibitors, on their guard after unsuccessful experience with 'artistic' films, refused to give it any consideration. Yet all who viewed the production were agreed that it was one of the most gripping and interesting real life dramas the screen had ever procured.

"But 'Grass,' they pointed out, lacked pulling power. There were no sexy situations, with colored 24-sheets to emblazon the fact to prospective audiences. There were no fights, love affairs or any of the other popular ingredients generally figured as 'the stuff.' So 'Grass' remained for weeks and weeks in the vaults of the company here—until a few days ago, when the management of Orchestra Hall and the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation decided to chance a fine financial whipping by presenting it.

"'Grass' was advertised carefully and honestly for just what it was and, strange to say, the crowds came in great numbers. The opening night's attendance was almost a shock to the promoters and business grew rapidly as the news of the picture's wonders spread from the throats of the early visitors. The engagement of 'Grass' was a success from every viewpoint and those connected with the enterprise are to be heartily congratulated for the good they have accomplished in paving the way for a steady reception of more pictures of this peculiar box-office type."

This, it seems to me, is most significant. And I would like to add an observation, which is not an editorial theory, but a fact, one that the most astute producers of plays and magazines today will realize. It is this: that the American public and every other public is now sick and tired of the trite love story, and most every one is trite. Even the most gaudy embellishment fails to pull them through. They may sell easily to the trade but they don't sell to the public. The public today, as is evidenced on all sides, wants vigor, action, adventure, novelty in dramatic pictures.

Speaking Editorially

IN many parts of the country, midnight benefit performances in aid of the Florida sufferers were held last week and this. The amount realized ran into a large sum, and thus was written another important chapter in the industry's public service work.

The lead was taken by Publix Theatres, which announced its benefit shows even before the extent of its own losses in Florida was known. Happily, these proved, upon investigation, not as heavy as first reported. But Publix did not wait; it did the splendid thing and went immediately to the help of those who had suffered.

Of course, the good-will value of such a step cannot be overestimated. The recognition of the need and the opportunity was nation-wide, and many other circuits and independent theatres did their bit.

Incidentally, the usefulness of the midnight performance, for charity or otherwise, is growing in many sections, and promises to become a fixture in exhibition policy.

* * *

THE foreign situation gets a lot of attention this week. In Paris, the so-called International Motion Picture Congress is being held, but the American industry is not represented for good and sufficient reasons. The Congress is, therefore, not international. The country which makes ninety per cent of the world's pictures is taking no official part.

We shall see what the Paris Congress amounts to, if anything. Just now, it looks very much like a movement against American films. In that case, it may have to be taken seriously in some respects.

But conferences with high-sounding titles do not, and cannot, affect the likes and dislikes of the masses of people the world over. The masses, voluntarily, have selected the American motion picture as their favorite screen fare. That situation will remain just as it is, unless and until the producers of other countries make pictures, in quantity, of equal excellence.

No amount of resolutions, speeches, or reports will change that simple fact.

* * *

THE superseding of vaudeville by the motion picture is not far in the future, according to John J. Daly, dramatic editor of the Washington Post, who, in reviewing current theatrical events, concludes that the inroads of the films will redound to the benefit of the theatre-goer as the threatened branches of the theatre endeavor to retain their "place in the sun," which in this case is the favor of the cash customer.

"In a little while, it will be difficult to tell a movie house from a regular theatre, what with presentations," writes Mr. Daly. "Movies are going in for that sort of thing, rivaling, or attempting to rival, vaudeville."

"Competition, ran the old slogan, is the life of trade. With so much interest in things theatrical, so much vying with one another on the part of producing managers, the public is bound to benefit. Vaudeville, as yet, has not gone in for pictures—save comic strips and news reels; but the pictures are venturing on vaudeville territory. With prices remaining the same as ever, the general public gets a run for its money."

"Taking it by and large, the theatrical lay-out looks good. The theatre is up on its toes. There is a frantic endeavor on the part of those actively engaged in the business to give the cash customers everything a dollar can buy in the way of entertainment."

OUT in North Dakota, an important decision has been rendered which hits non-theatrical competition. It is of interest to exhibitors everywhere. The judge ruled that the showing of pictures in schools where an admission price was charged was illegal.

This parallels closely a similar ruling by the Attorney-General of the State of Washington to the effect that the Superintendent of Schools of Seattle had no authority to permit the use of school buildings in competition with regular picture theatres.

The Dakota case will be appealed to the State Supreme Court, and the result will be watched with great interest.

champion's crown went to the hero—which is as it should be. The Pathe winnings will probably exceed any lucky wager made on the fight itself and come next to Tex Rickard's profits. Tunney is a popular champion, especially with the fair sex. Tunney in pictures should draw heavily.

* * *

A FILM man, and a practical one, said to me the other day that he would launch a certain and important trade enterprise if he could find enough good lieutenants.

Which brings up a large and pertinent question: are we training good lieutenants and enough of them for the fast increasing demand of this business for man power?

The First National sales department answers the question with its newly launched K. O. Club, in which salesmen get the distinction of membership and other substantial awards for merit, such as cash prizes and paid-up life insurance.

It is not only a logical and progressive step, but First National is in earnest about it. I get my impressions from a convincing talk with Sam Spring. And I hazard the opinion that the K. O. Club will become an institution and that many of its members will prove the kind of lieutenants the trade is so earnestly looking for.

ONE thing is certain; just as the public demands better pictures, so the picture business demands better executives. There's room everywhere, even at the top.

Regarding the K. O. aspirants there is only this suggestion: An exceptional salesman is always one who not only gets but gives. In other words, he gives service while he gets prices. And the man who can best give service to the exhibitor is the one who thoroughly knows not only his own, but his competitor's pictures—what their box-office appeal is and how to realize on it.

THE business at the Capitol Theatre on the revived "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" was the outstanding event of the week. The figure which the house must reach by Wednesday night in order to hold over had been passed on Tuesday night. The picture is unusually long, but despite the smaller number of shows per day, the house will reach around $70,000 on the week. "Kosher Kitty Kelly" at the Colony seems to be in for a $20,000 week, or thereabouts

—a very comfortable figure for this house. The Rivoli opened well with "You'd Be Surprised," and "Tin Gods" continues to have a line at the Rialto box-office. The Strand is below average with "Sparrows." The road show attractions continue to do capacity—"Ben Hur," "Big Parade," "Beau Geste," "Scarlet Letter" and "Don Juan."

IN a recent number of the National Board of Review Magazine is an editorial by Alfred B. Kuttner, associate editor, entitled "The Director's Alibi," which is worthy of serious consideration. You may or may not agree with all that Mr. Kuttner says, but you will find it a stimulating discussion of the problem of European film technique vs. American methods. He says:

"There has recently been considerable heart-searching in American directorial circles. The present showing of "Variety" in New York and of various films such as "Faust," "The Three Wax Works," and "Shattered," in Los Angeles, the marked success of the revivals of many foreign pictures, and the distinguished work of several recently imported directors supply the immediate cause. The dangerous preference of the public for these pictures, the unstinted praise of them by the critics, and the demand of many of our stars to be presented before their audiences in pictures of equal merit, have made our directors uneasy. And there have been alibis.

"We may dismiss the protest of our more nervous defenders that the worst of the foreign films are worse than our admittedly bad films as purely childish. It is quite obvious that the comparison lies only between the best films on either side of the Atlantic.

"The alibis take various forms. One of them is this so-called censorship of ours. Now six of our states, it is true, exercise a legal censorship variously and often arbitrarily enforced. But in the remaining forty-two states there is no censorship except the taste and standards of the state of culture in which we live. It is these standards which the National Board of Review seeks to interpret for the guidance of the industry, including directors. And the Board, contrary to the legal censors, does not believe in any limitation of theme. The treatment, not the subject matter, is the all important thing in the making of any picture."

WE had a very interesting talk with Earl Hammons, of Educational, the other day. He has recently returned from the Coast studios, where he found activities in the short subject field considerably "pepped up," and a more determined effort than ever being made to turn out quality product.

ONE of the reasons for the enthusiasm is the increasing recognition given short features in exhibitor advertising. For instance, Harry C. Arthur, Jr., President and General Manager of Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc., has voluntarily instructed his managers to advertise short subjects as much as possible in connection with the hundred per cent. showing of Educational pictures over this important circuit.

ECHOES of the big fight! Broadway and its film trade moved over to Philadelphia last Thursday. Special cars were chartered by First National, the Stanley Company, Famous Players, Joe Schenck. In the First National party were Colleen Moore, John McCormick, Sam Katz, R. A. Rowland, Robert Lieber, E. V. Richards, M. H. Finkelstein, W. R. Rothacker, Karl Kitchen, C. C. Burr, Johnny Hines, A. H. Gianinni, Levi Ash, Robert Kane, Sam Spring, Ned Marin, Ned Depinet, Ray Rockett, R. C. Seery, and others.

HARRY O. SCHWALBE, who devotes his time a good deal to the fast expanding activities of the Stanley Company, was a delightful host to several of the arriving visitors.

THE Tunney victory brought joy to Elmer Pearson and the Pathe officials. They had bet, not on Tunney in the ring, but on the Tunney serial, "The Fighting Marine," and the exhibitor contracts carry a clause increasing rental prices in case the

EMIL JANNINGS will sail from Germany on the Deutschland, October 8, to take up work under his new contract here. He will have with him his familiar red Mercedes car and a retinue of servants. . . . Conrad Veidt, another great German actor, held court for members of the press last Friday, and on the following day left for Hollywood. According to present plans, he must be back in Berlin in December. . . . Tom Reed, publicity chief at Universal City, returned to America this week. He says that Carl Laemmle's recovery and convalescence have been little short of miraculous. Tom indignantly denies that he was met down the bay and paraded up Broadway, declaring that he refuses to have all of the wastebaskets in New York dumped on his head, even if Gertrude Ederle did. . . . Directors Frank Borzage and Al Green arrived in New York from Hollywood this week. Borzage is Paris-bound to see the sights of the underworld as atmosphere for "Seventh Heaven." (We hope the atmosphere he gets on the screen is better than that staged for American tourists in the French capital.) Green will do exteriors in New York for "The Music Master." Philip Klein, son of the author, L. G. Rigby, scenarist, and George Schneiderman, head cameraman, were also in the party. . . . Sam E. Rork, the producer, accompanied by his daughter, Ann Rork, arrived in New York this week with the negative and first print of "The Blonde Saint." Sam declares it's his best to date, which means it will have to go some. . . . Dorothy Gish was to arrive on the Aquitania Friday from London, on a flying visit to her sister and mother in Hollywood before returning to do "Madame Pompadour." ### SAYS LIONEL:

LIONEL BARRYMORE, admitting that his first screen appearance was in an extra role with Henry B. Walthall in an early Griffith Biograph picture, discusses "The Present State of the Movies" in a leading article in the current issue of The Ladies' Home Journal. In a comprehensive treatise on various phases of his subject, the Chadwick star compares modern with earlier production methods, explaining his preference for the latter. His, also, is a keen analysis of the producer tendency to the Pollyanna type of story, which he, at once, explains, justifies, and condemns.

Barrymore, whose recent production of "The Bells" for Chadwick is said to be an accurate reflection of the Sir Henry Irving version of the Erckmann-Chatrian classic, laments the current practice of altering stage plays and novels in transferring them to the screen. In the preparation of "The Bells" for the screen, Barrymore insisted that the original play be adhered to.

"I think it may be said with positiveness—and it is the only thing that can be stated positively about the movies," he says in part. "that there is nothing wrong with the medium. There is no reason why it should not give great art and beauty to the public."

A CANINE ARISTOCRAT

FRANK FOSTER DAVIS, owner and trainer of "Thunder," the dog featured in "Wings of the Storm," now in production at Fox Films West Coast studios, has traced the ancestry of this canine-actor for thirty-eight generations, covering a period of fifty-two years. This, he states, is equal to 1,200 years of a human being's ancestry.

"Thunder" is registered with the American Kennel Club under his real name, Beneva Tillo Von Riedekenberg, and was born in Stuttgart, Germany. He is a thoroughbred German shepherd dog. This breed became known as "police dogs" in 1904, when the Berlin police department began training them for police service.

Kennedy Sees Rich Field in Germany

Film Booking Office's Chief Returns From European Trip With Optimistic Views on Company's Future Abroad

JOSEPH P. KENNEDY, president of Film Booking Offices, returned on Monday of this week from his annual vacation trip to Europe which, for the first time, was also in the interests of motion picture affairs. While deploring certain conditions which have been created abroad, he was optimistic over the steady, if slow, improvement in general conditions and the prospects for Film Booking Offices throughout Europe.

"Germany," he said, "represents the richest undeveloped field. The newer theatres are modern and attractive, domestic production is active and despite heavy taxes the possibilities are great. While taxes are high throughout Europe, exhibitors, like other business men, are becoming accustomed to them and simply making allowance for them in their scheme of things."

Mr. Kennedy concluded a deal with Ideal in England on this trip for the distribution in England of F.B.O. product. Rowson, of Ideal, one of the leading film executives of England, will come to this country shortly and go on to Hollywood to confer with studio executives on plans for the coming season. This will be primarily for the purpose of avoiding things which might be objectionable to British audiences, in line with the policy of F.B.O. to cultivate more harmonious relations in the European field.

Several interesting developments were noted by Mr. Kennedy as regards the opposition to American films stirred up through various causes.

"The most noticeable result has been a tremendous stimulation of local production in these countries," he pointed out. "Producers in various European countries are profiting by the agitation against American films. In England, for instance, production is booming, after being dormant for years. The same is true of France, and Germany continues busy."

The present crisis in Europe, Mr. Kennedy believes, has been created by a few tactless individuals, and is based upon misunderstanding rather than any enduring conditions. It can be righted, in his estimation, by better understanding on the part of American companies of European tastes and opinions, by care in the selection of European representatives, and by a suitable co-operative spirit between American firms and their foreign distributors.

Due to his banking connections, Mr. Kennedy on this trip had access to information and contacts not always available to visiting film executives, and he has returned with a highly valuable insight into conditions abroad which will be reflected in the conduct of Film Booking Office's European affairs. An important deal for distribution in central Europe is pending, but could not be concluded before his departure. This will be announced shortly, it is expected.

Colvin M. Brown, vice-president in charge of distribution, who returned just prior to Mr. Kennedy's arrival, was also active in arranging the details of the Ideal contract and made an intensive study of European distribution problems during his stay.

Pathe Scores When Gene Tunney Wins

Result of Fight Means Additional $500,000 for Company Says Scott; Elmer Pearson's Foresight Made Picture Possible

WHEN Gene Tunney won the heavyweight fight championship of the world, the value of the serial picture produced by Pathe in which he is starred jumped a half million dollars, says Harry Scott, general sales manager for the company. Elmer Pearson, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, achieved a master stroke of showmanship when he signed Tunney to make the Pathe serial as, even before his victory, Tunney was a popular hero due to his war record with the Marines and to the clean life he has led. Pathe officials estimate the picture as now in the million-dollar class.

The Pathe star-heavyweight champion of the world is known in private life as James Joseph Tunney. He is twenty-seven years old, having been born in Perry Street, New York City, on May 25, 1898. He was educated in the public schools of New York and graduated from high school. Strange to say, he never took serious interest in sports until he entered the army and began training. Sports training is compulsory in the marines and it stood Gene in good stead. Gradually, he began to demonstrate prowess as a boxer.

Overseas, he won the regimental light heavyweight championship and later won the light heavyweight championship of the American Expeditionary Forces.

Upon returning to his native shores in 1919, and receiving his discharge, he entered the ring, knocking out Bob Pierce in two rounds. He fought other engagements that year and in 1920 scored several knockouts. In 1922 he lost the first battle of his career, and his only defeat, to Harry Greb in 15 rounds. In 1923, he turned the tables on Greb, winning over a similar route. In 1924, he scored knockouts over Ray Thompson, Ermino Spalla, Georges Carpentier, Joe Lohman, Harry Foley and Buddy McHale, won from Martin Burke in 15 rounds and fought several no-decision fights.

After fighting a no-decision bout with Harry Greb in 1925, Gene surprised the pugilistic world by putting Tommy Gibbons away, and Tommy had stayed the limit with Jack Dempsey in the memorable fight at Shelby, Mont. This bout was his biggest forward step and since that time his legion of friends have believed that he could defeat any man in the world in the squared circle.

In his busy ring career since the war, Tunney has engaged in 61 fights, won 30 by knockouts, won 15 by decision, fought 14 no-decision engagements, one no-contest affair and lost only one battle.

The Patheserial, which is in ten chapters, was adapted from a story written especially for Tunney by Frank Leon Smith under the title, "The Fighting Marine," which title was retained for the picture. Spencer Bennett, who directed two current Pathe chapter plays, was chosen to handle the megaphone for the Tunney picture.

Other leading roles in "The Fighting Marine" are portrayed by Walter Miller, second male part; Wally Oettel, comedian, who had the third principal part. The feminine leads include Virginia Vance, Marjorie Gay and Anna May Walthall, sister of the better-known Henry B. Walthall.

A number of real pugilists including Frank S. Hagney, former heavyweight champion of South America, and Gene Delmont, now fighting in the heavyweight class, were secured for the fights in which Tunney takes part in the films.

Foreign Sales Department Complex

Size and Scope of Work Involved Shown by Analysis of Famous Players Branch, With 110 Offices and 1800 Employees

By L. C. Moen

WHILE the importance of foreign distribution in the motion-picture scheme of things is generally recognized today, probably few persons outside of this work realize fully the tremendous scope of the foreign department of a modern American film company, or the complex problems involved. For this reason, it may be interesting to analyze briefly an organization typical of the highest development in this field, the foreign department of Famous Players-Lasky, which is representative of the extensive operations abroad of the American industry generally.

Under the direction of E. E. Shafer, head of this department, come 110 offices and exchanges, owned or operated by Famous or by independent organizations distributing Paramount pictures. Approximately 1,800 persons are employed in these offices, which are scattered throughout 70 countries.

The importance of the foreign field was recognized from the very beginning of Famous Players by Adolph Zukor, and when he turned to Emil E. Shafer to head the foreign department he did so knowing that Mr. Shafer brought to the undertaking a businesslike understanding of export problems coupled with a knowledge of the motion picture—and to this day probably no one in the entire field combines these two qualities in such happy proportions.

One does not hear a great deal of this quiet executive, who is never involved in any of the controversies regarding the foreign situation, never gives out statements setting forth the wonders accomplished by his department, never seeks personal publicity—but who has opened all of the Famous Players foreign offices and has delivered an increase in business each year since the department was started.

The background of Mr. Shafer is genuinely interesting, because it explains a great many things about the success of the Famous Players foreign department. While great credit belongs to the "ambassadors" in the field, and Mr. Shafer would be the last to monopolize the credit for their achievements, the fact remains that he has been responsible for bringing together this organization and for the policy under which it has operated.

His business career began at the age of 13 in a department store, and he remained in this line for 26 years, ultimately becoming foreign buyer for Mandel Brothers, a leading Chicago department store.

E. E. Shafer, assistant treasurer and head of the foreign department of Famous Players-Lasky.

Then, in 1905, he entered the penny arcade business in association with Adolph Zukor, Marcus Loew, Mitchell Mark and other pioneers of that day. The business prospered mightily, and when motion pictures appeared the company built the Unique in New York, the Comique in Boston and other early "picture palaces." The slot machine business declined as the motion picture business grew, and Mr. Shafer began to fear that the motion picture industry in turn might suffer a similar fate.

It is interesting to note, however, that even at that early date, when he doubted the entertainment future of films, Mr. Shafer was convinced that the motion picture was the greatest educational force ever devised, and at a time when pictures were sneered at and attacked on every quarter, his advertising was built on the key-note of educational value.

At any rate, in 1908 he was offered an exceptional opportunity to sell out his interest in the theatre company, and he accepted. He turned once more to the export field, and conceived the idea of developing and commercializing the hand embroidery work which he had seen in the Philippine Islands. He shipped 2,000 dozen ladies' nightgowns to the Philippines, properly stamped with French designs, and proceeded to have them embroidered by the natives. His output was sold in advance of production, and although many serious problems arose he put the business on a highly successful basis—and founded what is today a thriving and large industry.

In 1914 Adolph Zukor suggested that he take charge of the foreign department of Famous Players, so Shafer disposed of his own business and returned to motion pictures once more. Here he proceeded to put into effect the business principles which he had learned in mercantile export lines. Each foreign branch must pay its own way—and must also pay all local taxes and tariffs, without evasion—must become a part of the life of the community in which it is located. The men selected to head them must be ambassadors in method rather than salesmen capable of fitting into the life of the city and nation in which they are located.

This policy has been held to in the 12 years which have followed, and the personnel of the Famous Players foreign department today would stand comparison with the export personnel of any American business firm. Men such as John C. Graham in England, John W. Hicks, Jr., in Australia, and Tom Cochrane in Japan, to name only three at random, are not outsiders in their communities, but leading figures in municipal and national life.

Certain features of the foreign department policy about which little is heard are particularly significant in view of the criticism levelled against American films in certain quarters abroad today. While the importance of this agitation has perhaps been exaggerated, it is unfortunate, and has been stirred up, we may safely assume, by certain men who do not realize that European nations are not suburbs of New York City, and that each country has its own customs, habits and psychology, which must be taken into consideration.

Concerning the contention that American companies seek to monopolize the world market, to the exclusion of local production in other countries, Mr. Shafer answers for Paramount as follows:

"We not only believe firmly that each country should have production of its own,

Scenes in and around foreign offices of the Famous Players foreign department. The upper row shows scenes in London, Singapore and Stockholm; the lower row, in Brussels, Batavia and Paris, illustrating the wide variety of conditions met with to maintain interest in pictures at its highest point, but we have staked—and sometimes lost—millions of dollars in efforts to keep that very thing alive.

"We built a studio in England and made every effort to produce successfully there. Owing to conditions at the time, we and our English friends lost 450,000 pounds—and Mr. Zukor made up the entire loss himself, so that British investors lost nothing.

"Production was attempted in Berlin—somewhat too soon—and the period of deflation and similar causes brought us a loss of two million dollars. A studio was equipped in India, and we were ready to embark on a program of production there.

"At the present time we are distributing seven French pictures through our French distributing organization—and financing them as well. We are distributing the productions of British National, made in England. Our Australian organization handles numerous Australian and British made films. The alliance with Ufa provides distribution for that company here.

"All of this is simply good business and plain common sense. There is room enough for all, and we neither wish nor need to monopolize the field."

Thirty-seven languages are used by the organization, and titles and advertising matter must be prepared in all of them. In Arabia, Egypt and Turkey, two and three languages are used on each. This, together with the fact that each country has its own particular rate of exchange on money (some of them still unstable), complicates the conduct of the department enormously.

In many leading countries, Famous Players operates its own distribution facilities.

In others, such as India, China, South Africa and Venezuela, it distributes through independent firms. In Germany, Paramount pictures are handled by Paraufamet, which includes Famous, Ufa and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and in 11 countries they are distributed by Panamet, embracing Famous, First National and M.-G.-M.

All of these offices must be supplied with prints and with ad sales material, and it is the boast of the department that no release date has ever been missed, even during the trying years of the World War, when the submarine attacks jeopardized all shipping and made facilities difficult to obtain. One negative of each picture is shipped abroad, from which prints for England and certain Continental nations are made, and in addition to this about 500,000 feet of positive is shipped out each week from America, not including West Coast shipments.

Advertising matter, press books, posters, publicity stories and cuts, newspaper ads and exploitation material must be supplied on each picture in every country. Some of this is done in New York, but most of it locally in each nation.

The foreign department issues a house organ for its employees throughout the world, The Foreign Legion Pledge, which serves as a means of contact between the home office and the men in the field. Two magazines, Mensajero Paramount and Mensajero Paramount, are published for exhibitors, in Spanish and Portuguese, respectively. The British organization publishes a magazine, Paramount Service, while that in Australia has The Exhibitor. In Paris is issued The Paramount Journal, for exhibitors in that country.

In recent years the organization has gone into exploitation on a scale comparable to the methods of American sales department. Special exploitation men are stationed at exchanges in Mexico, France, England, Germany, Australia, Argentina, Italy and Japan, helping to carry the message of showmanship to exhibitors in those countries.

Roughly speaking, the foreign department contributes about one-third to the total volume of business conducted by Paramount. Several interesting sidelights on the conditions met with in doing this are furnished in a report prepared by J. H. Seidelman, assistant manager of the foreign department, for the Paramount convention. A few extracts follow:

"Our foreign offices are approximately four to ten months behind United States release dates, and this condition gives us a distinct advantage over the domestic distribution, as we are in most instances able to see all pictures prior to setting them in for release, and thus benefit by the box office tests and results of the pictures in the United States. However, the release of a picture in the United States is but the beginning for us, and by no means does the success of a picture in the United States carry absolute assurance of its popularity in foreign lands.

"Success, like failure, travels fast, and we immediately set the machinery into motion to carry the reasons and psychology of this success to the four corners of the globe. Cables, wires and radiograms flash the good news around the world. Landable reviews of newspapers and critics are trans-

Huge Fund Raised for Florida Relief

More Than $100,000 Will be Totaled Through Benefit Shows at Picture Theatres—Publix Circuit Alone Expected to Raise $75,000

MORE than $100,000 will be added to the Florida relief fund through proceeds from special performances given at motion-picture theatres in the United States, according to a conservative estimate based on returns, as yet incomplete, from cities and towns throughout the country.

The total receipts from special midnight shows to be staged in theatres on the Publix circuit alone will reach from $75,000 to $100,000. Up to Wednesday afternoon Publix headquarters had returns of $32,000. A check for $25,000 on that day was sent to the Red Cross committee in charge of the relief fund. These returns represented only partial proceeds from the Publix chain theatres enlisted in the work of raising money for the sufferers from the hurricane which raked portions of Florida and Alabama. Practically all of the $32,000 turned in to the Publix headquarters in New York up to Wednesday evening was taken in at special midnight matinees last Saturday night. In many of the houses of the circuit it was not practical to hold performances at that time and these theatres, in the aggregate representing a large source of revenue for the relief fund, are expected to swell the total to $75,000 or $100,000.

Among the theatres making complete returns to Publix up to the time of this journal's going to press, the Million Dollar Theatre in Los Angeles led with a sum of $9,000. The Metropolitan Theatre in Boston raised $7,000 at a Saturday night benefit in which theatre men and stage players of the city cooperated. The Granada in San Francisco provided a total of $5,680.90; in New York the Publix benefit was held at the Rivoli, which collected $2,300 at a Saturday midnight show at which many Broadway stage stars appeared; $963.50 was raised for the fund at the Lincoln Theatre, Lincoln, Neb.

Florida itself is represented in the total to date collected at Publix theatres, for the first show held at the Liberty Theatre in Miami since the storm, given as a benefit for sufferers from the hurricane, brought returns of $2,223, which immediately were turned over to the local Red Cross committee there by Manager Harry Leah. This performance was held last Monday night.

The midnight show put on by Publix last Saturday at the Chicago Theatre, Chicago, for the benefit of the Florida storm sufferers, proved a great success. In addition to the regular Chicago program, a number of stage celebrities volunteered their services and the entire program lasted for three hours.

The Missouri Theatre, St. Louis, put on a gigantic benefit for the hurricane victims of Florida on Saturday night, September 25. Artists from all of the Skouras theatres donated their services free, as did the musicians and other attaches of the house. An admission fee of $1 was charged.

Most of the Tampa theatres gave special shows for the benefit of the storm sufferers. The Victory there offered an extra vaudeville show Wednesday evening, with the entire receipts going to the sufferers, the actors, house attaches, musicians, etc., giving their services. The local papers donated quarter-page ads and gave extra publicity to the show. The Rialto announce a special show with the Shriners getting behind it and helping sell the tickets.

Governor John C. Trumbull of Connecticut issued a proclamation this week opening theatres of the State for motion-picture shows next Sunday afternoon, the proceeds from such performances to be used to aid Florida hurricane victims. The exchanges in New Haven have agreed to furnish more than 200 theatres with screen programs gratis and theatre employees will donate their services for the benefit shows. It is estimated that the picture theatres of Connecticut will raise $50,000 or more through these benefit shows. The committee working with Governor Trumbull included Lester Tobias, Red Seal Exchange; Harry Goldman, Producers Distributing Corporation; William Scully, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Joseph Walsh, president of the Connecticut Exhibitors Association.

The New York Hippodrome, K-A's huge playhouse now showing continuous pictures and vaudeville, raised $12,000 for the Florida fund at the midnight benefit performance last Saturday night. A brilliant program which presented celebrities of the stage was given at this show.

The Wisconsin Theatre, together with the Milwaukee Journal, offered a special midnight performance Saturday, September 25, the proceeds of which were given to the American Red Cross to be forwarded to Florida for relief work among the sufferers. The program consisted of the regular picture, together with special acts from the Miller, Strand, Tower and Modjeska.

The entire box office receipts of the Poli Theatres featuring the Columbia Amusement Company shows on Friday afternoon were turned over to the American Red Cross for the Florida relief fund. S. Z. Poli, assisted by his managers, made this contribution possible.

Watertown, N.Y., responded in wonderful shape last Saturday night to a benefit given at the three Robbins theatres in that city, as a means of acquiring funds for the relief of sufferers in Florida. The benefit was arranged by Sol Manheimer, and took place in the Avon, Palace and Olympic theatres. It was put on after the regular evening shows.

Exhibitors are winning an abundance of praise in the Kansas City territory through their aid and contributions toward homeless and suffering victims in the Kansas floods of last week.

At the Newman Theatre, through a plan adopted by Bruce Fowler, manager, that theatre is staging special midnight shows as a benefit, while the proceeds of the 11 o'clock shows in the morning are shared with the homeless and suffering victims. Every effort has been put forth, through liberal cooperation of daily newspapers, to make the midnight shows a big success. Incidentally, "The Waning Sex" and Gene Tunney's "The Fighting Marine," special pictures to receive their premiere at the benefit shows, received free publicity aplenty.

E. J. and F. C. Grubel, owners of the Electric Theatre, Kansas City, Kans., contributed $200 towards a relief fund while scores of smaller exhibitors throughout the State aided in various ways.

But the Newman did not limit its assistance to flood sufferers. Tuesday eight men were killed in a tunnel under the Missouri River at Kansas City. The Newman, through Mr. Fowler, promptly announced that 20 per cent of the receipts of the midnight show Saturday night would go to the families of the workmen. Again the theatre management was praised by the press.

Mosjoukine's Name Cut For American Audiences

Carl Laemmle has decided that Ivan Mosjoukine's name is a bit too long and complicated for the tongues, ears and memories of the American public which will see his "Michael Strogoff" this year and for that reason the Russian actor will be known in this country as Ivan Moskine.

Federal Censorship Established in Cuba; Details Not Known; Unexpected Move

CABLE advices were received at the Department of Commerce in Washington, D.C., this week from Commercial Attache Todd, Havana, reporting that a national film censorship has been established in Cuba by government decree. Details of the extent of the censorship will not be known until mail arrives from Havana.

The decree came as a surprise to New York exporters as the President of the Island Republic had indicated he was averse to Federal interference in motion pictures.

Distributors have had considerable difficulty in Cuba of late. The exhibitors' association in Havana attempted to restrict distributors from supplying any non-member theatre within a certain range with films. Distributors paid no attention to the demands. A boycott then developed, but when the distributors remained obdurate in their attitude, the boycott was revoked with certain concessions by each faction. This took place about two months ago.

Sunday Blue Law Troubles Many States

Bill Prohibiting Sabbath Pictures to be Introduced in Montgomery, Ala.; Decision Left to Municipalities in Iowa

PROHIBITION of Sunday moving pictures, Sunday baseball and other amusements on Sunday in Montgomery, Ala., will be proposed by a bill which will be introduced during the early days of the regular session of the Legislature in January. This is the quadrennial fight that has been made in the Alabama Legislature for many years. However, it is taken seriously by the opposition this time because of the organization plan that has been perfected and the fact that Bibb Graves, who will become Governor in January, is a Montgomery man and has always been identified with those who have been opposed to an open Sunday.

It became known Monday that the advocates of Sunday closing will begin their fight as soon as the Legislature convenes. Their bill will propose the closing of all amusements that have been permitted to remain open by the city commission. It will have the effect of taking control of Sunday amusements from the law creating the city commission and returning it to the general state law, which prohibits Sunday baseball, moving pictures and other amusements.

Governor Graves will have an important influence in the fight. And the question of senatorial courtesy will enter into it. Senator Charles B. Teasley will represent Montgomery County in the Senate. He is opposed to the measure. He has led each fight against the bill since he has been a member of the Senate.

It is understood every member of the Montgomery house will oppose the Sunday closing bill. Tyler Goodwin and Thos. E. Martin were outspoken against such a measure during the campaign. L. A. Sanderson and Eugene Carter are also said to be opposed to closing the picture shows and ball games here.

That means that the bill will have to be introduced and championed by a representative from some other county.

If it reaches the Senate, Senator Teasley could appeal to his fellow members not to pass the bill over his protest. However, Governor Graves could make the appeal that the measure should be passed because he is a citizen of Montgomery and carried Montgomery County by a great plurality.

Only two cities in Alabama now permit the showing of Sunday moving pictures and the operation of other amusements on Sunday. They are Montgomery and Mobile. The question of Sunday amusements has long been agitated in Birmingham, but it was submitted to the voters a few years ago and they defeated it by a large majority.

The attempt of Springfield, Mo., exhibitors to test the city Sunday closing law proved futile this week. Springfield is the only large town in the State which is victimized by a Sunday closing ordinance, there being no State law against Sunday shows. W. W. Smith, operator at the Grand Theatre, and five patrons were arrested when Smith opened the theatre for a performance. That night a sign on the door of the theatre announced to prospective patrons that "the police won in the first round." However, exhibitors plan to continue the fight.

Benjamin Van Dyke, president of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Iowa, on a visit to Minneapolis last week, described the Sunday show situation in his State. He said that the State law against Sunday shows was left to the municipalities to enforce and that many were allowed to operate.

Some managers have been operating on Sunday in defiance of the law because the fine provided for was not large and it was still profitable to do business.

Pastors in Rockwell City, Ia., have moved for an ordinance assessing fines up to $100 for showing Sunday.

Walter Peterson of the Empress Theatre, Rockwell City, reports more people attending his theatre Sunday night than any other time.

The hearing of the appeal eases of the three Colorado Springs theatre managers, which was scheduled last Wednesday, was continued for one month. Managers of the Rialto, Burns, and America theatres were fined in Magistrate's Court a month ago for operating on Sunday and taking up a collection. The fine was assessed because of the collection and the theatres continued on Sunday without the collection. After the continuance of the cases until October, a conference was held and it was decided to discontinue the free Sunday shows for the present, probably for the winter months.

Call Fall Golf Tournament "Best Ever"

Large Field Plays in Eleventh Semi-Annual Meet of Film Men at Sound View, L. I. Course — Diebel Low Gross Winner

UNDER clouded, threatening skies and over a course soaked down by the rains of a showery yesterday, film men drove, approached and putted through what was generally pronounced the most successful tournament in the series so far when the eleventh semi-annual Film Golf Tournament was played at the Sound View course at Great Neck, L.I., last Tuesday. The event attracted a record attendance.

The main event was the Cohens vs. the Kelleys contest, in which the "entire company" participated, the field being divided into two teams, the Cohens led by Elmer Pearson and the Kelleys by A. W. Stebbins. The prizes went to the Cohens, who downed their rivals in the green caps—the Cohen team members sported blue ones. Each member of the winning team in the Cohens vs. the Kelleys contest was awarded with a silver ash tray suitably engraved, you may be sure. The Jack Cosman Cup went to Elmer Pearson as the captain of the winning team. Stebbins was awarded the booby prize as the captain of the losers.

Motion pictures of the event were screened after the banquet, held at the club house in the evening and the climax of an all-day frolic marked by good fellowship, the hail-fellow spirit, and golf that was good, bad and indifferent, but which nevertheless was primed with the sport and sportive quality. Felix Feist presided as toastmaster at the banquet and in that capacity played in superior form and brilliantly.

Chris Diebel of Youngstown, O., turned in the low gross eard of the tournament with a 77 which won him the Warner Bros. Cup for the best gross score, and in addition the Jules E. Mastbaum Cup for the best exhibitor score. Low net honors went to Fred Curtis of Eastman Kodak with a 71 net, which earned him a leg on the Film Daily trophy, possession thereof until the next contest and the Arthur W. Stebbins Cup. The low gross runner up and winner of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS Cup was Eddie Arnold, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with a score of 81. J. V. Ritchey, Jr., was the low net runner-up with a 73. Eddie Aarons (M.-G.-M.) carried off the Birdie trophy (F. B. O. Cup) and the putting trophy (Carl Laemmle Cup) went to Eugene Picker (Loew's).

Though rain threatened throughout the day it never put the threat into action and the Film Golf Tournament continued its record of playing each event on schedule without postponement owing to bad weather conditions.

Silent tribute to Joseph (Danny) Dannenber, late editor of The Film Daily and founder of the film golf tournaments, was paid at the banquet. Ralph Kohn outlined plans for the memorial to Danny.

Those who were awarded silver ash trays as members of the winning team in the Cohens vs. the Kelleys contest are:

mitted in all languages through the foreign publicity department. Sales letters convey the quotas and values, and the big picture of the moment in New York, Atlanta or St. Louis becomes the talk of the expectant trade in Budapest, Buenos Aires or Sydney. But it would be indeed an easy road ahead if this success could be multiplied internationally. We have thirty-seven distinct nationalities to cater to with as many principal languages to contend with, and we have learned by experience that what might please the French might be frowned upon by the Swedes, and what might be acclaimed in London may be met with derision and contempt in Mexico.

"With due regard, therefore, to the possibilities of each individual country and the attendant shortcomings prevailing in most foreign countries in respect to the number of representative theatres, we allocate a given percentage to each territory. The total of these percentages represents the average gross foreign income.

"The returns of some of our foreign offices when viewed in terms of dollars may be particularly low in certain instances and may be record-breaking results in terms of the currency of the country, depending entirely upon the existing rate of exchange.

"Our foreign offices, consistent with practicability and local requirements, are operated along lines similar to our own exchanges in the United States. Exchange form and equipment are being standardized, and modern, proved and tried American methods are the keynotes of both our old and newly organized offices."

As illustrative of the methods by which this remarkable organization has grown, and of the growth of foreign distribution generally, a few brief facts may be of interest:

1912: Famous Players Film Company founded by Adolph Zukor, who later went to Europe with a print of the first picture, "The Prisoner of Zenda," to dispose of foreign rights. First foreign exchange opened in London through the agency of J. D. Walker's World's Films. This was later taken over.

1913: Production expanded by Mr. Zukor. "Prisoner of Zenda" and "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" shown in Great Britain.

1914: Second foreign exchange opened at Liverpool. Emil E. Shauer leaves his export business at succession of Mr. Zukor, and takes charge of foreign department.

1915: Despite confusion in export situation brought by World War, exchanges opened in Birmingham, Manchester and Cardiff.

1916: John C. Graham becomes general foreign representative, Famous Players and Lasky merge, providing more product. Exchange opened at Rio de Janeiro. Branch opened at Leeds, England. Ingvald C. Oes appointed general Scandinavian representative.

1917: London made distributing center for Europe. New exchanges in Dublin, Newcastle-on-Tyne and Glasgow.

1918: Australasian distribution contract made with Feature Films, Ltd., making service world-wide outside central Europe.

1919: Department of Foreign Publicity and Advertising created.

1920: Several new exchanges opened. Australian branch taken over.

1921: French organization created.

1922: Exchanges opened in Stockholm, Oslo, Copenhagen, Lyon, Strasbourg, Bordeaux, Nancy, Algiers, Batavia, Singapore, Tokyo, Osaka and Kobe.

1923: Earthquake destroys Tokyo office. Central European distribution begun. Berlin office opened. Exchanges started in Mexico City, Guatamala, Rennes, Cairo and Surabaya. Ike Blumenthal made special representative for Europe.

1924: Paramount conventions made international at suggestion of S. R. Kent. New branches opened at Amsterdam, Rome, Tunis, Pernambuco, Porto Alegre, Botucatu, Ribeiro Preto, Sapporo and Hakata.

1925: New company organized to take over distribution in Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru and Bolivia. New exchanges opened at Athens, Sofia and Constantinople, and at Seoul, Korea. New office at Colon, Panama.

1926: Deal closed with Ufa for Germany. Parufamet and Panamet organized. Five new exchanges in Italy opened. Distributing companies taken over in Spain, Cuba, Porto Rico and West Indies.

Keith-Albee, F. P. Publix, Butterfield Jointly Conduct Mich. Chain of Theatres

BY an arrangement announced this week, the circuit of theatres of the Bijou Theatrical Enterprise Company throughout Michigan known as the Butterfield Circuit will hereafter be jointly controlled and conducted by a three-cornered combination including Keith-Albee, the Famous-Players Publix group, and the present owners represented by W. S. Butterfield. Through this new agreement Mr. Butterfield will have full charge of the management of the houses as formerly with E. C. Beatty as general manager; the vaudeville will be booked through the Keith-Albee Vaudeville Exchange, and the pictures by the Paramount-Publix organization. The latter will include the De Mille-P. D. C. Products in its schedule for these theatres.

The Butterfield Circuit includes the following theatres:—The Arcade, Majestic, Orpheum and Wuerth in Ann Arbor; the Bijou, Regent and Gardner in Battle Creek; the Orpheum, Regent, State, Columbus, Washington, Wenonah in Bay City; the Garden, Palace, Regent and New State in Flint; the Dawn in Hillsdale; the Family and Regent in Iona; the Wuerth and Martha Washington in Ypsilanti; the Regent in Jackson; the Capitol, Regent and State in Kalamazoo; the Capitol, Colonial, Gladmer and Strand in Lansing; the New State (not yet erected) in Muskegon; the Capitol in Owosso; the State and Oakland in Pontiac; the Desmond, Family and Majestic in Port Huron; the Franklin, Regent, Strand, Wolverine, Masonic and Mecca in Saginaw.

Announcement is made this week that arrangements have been entered into whereby Publix Theatres Corporation has obtained an interest in the Butterfield circuit of theatres in the State of Michigan.

Rothacker Joins Paramount

Becomes Assistant General Manager of the Production Department

WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER, for years head of the Rothacker Laboratories, this week assumed his duties as assistant general manager of the Paramount production department.

The acquisition of Mr. Rothacker, who will have his headquarters in the Paramount Home Office with Walter Wanger, general manager of production, was characterized by Jesse L. Lasky as another step in the policy of manning the Paramount production department with the highest type of the most progressive young executives in the business.

"Mr. Rothacker's coming with us," said Mr. Lasky, is a striking illustration of what we have been doing and are trying to do in the way of building the executive personnel of the production department to the highest point of efficiency. During the last year we have acquired B. P. Schulberg, who is now associate producer in our Hollywood studios; William L. LeBaron, associate producer at the Long Island studio; B. P. Fineman, who has just joined our producing forces on the coast; Erich Pommer, whom we brought from Germany to supervise our productions with a European locale, and others.

"I am particularly proud of the fact that Mr. Rothacker is now with us, because when a young business man of his accomplishments and possibilities joins our producing forces it is a distinct compliment to Paramount, because it shows that our organization is of a type that appeals to men of outstanding ability. A young man who has already made a notable name for himself in one phase of the business, as well as a host of friends, Mr. Rothacker is bound to go far in the actual production end of the industry, and we are proud to have him with us."

Mr. Rothacker was equally enthusiastic over his new work.

"I count myself particularly fortunate in having an opportunity for this association with the biggest organization in the business. The work, the scope and the plans of the Paramount producing forces afford immense possibilities for any man who has an appreciation of the developments of this industry in the last year or so."

Watterson R. Rothacker, assistant general manager, production department, Famous Players

Although known as a dominating factor in the laboratory business, Mr. Rothacker also has been the producer of several pictures, notably "The Lost World," one of the outstanding specials of last year.

Nation Honors Name of Gene Stratton-Porter

THE memory of Gene Stratton-Porter, the novelist whose untimely demise two years ago in an automobile accident in California shocked her many admirers, was most auspiciously honored by the National Gene Stratton-Porter Memorial Week which began September 26th. The State of New York planted a memorial forest of 2,000 trees in the Adirondack Forest Preserve.

The forest, located on the Northwest Bay of Lake George, will stand as a living memorial, since trees in the State Forest Preserve may never be cut. Rhode Island, likewise, dedicated a grove of trees on the Barrington Highway close by Narragansett Bay. Both memorials were given the name of "The Magic Garden," the title of the late author's last work now appearing in McCall's Magazine. Throughout various parts of the country there were other plantings and memorial exercises with dignitaries and admirers in attendance.

The Memorial Committee had the cooperation of Doubleday, Page & Co., Grossett & Dunlap, McCall's Magazine and Film Booking Offices. The film company has produced three of the Stratton-Porter stories, "The Girl of the Limberlost," "The Keeper of the Bees" and "Laddie." The company will also produce "The Magic Garden." "Laddie" is in general release this week. The story was adapted by the late author's daughter, Mrs. Leo Meehan, whose husband directed the picture.

Companies Seek New York Incorporation Charters

Motion picture companies seeking charters to incorporate in New York State during the past week, included the following: Triangle Liquidation Corporation, capitalization not specified, Daniel D. Walton, Lemuel Bannister, William O. Hubbard, New York City; Kings County Theatre Corporation, $200,000, Charles Beckman, Harry I. Rosen, Sydelle R. Rosenstock, New York City; Plastograph Film Laboratories, $150,000, C. M. Fliaschnick, William Friedman, Eman Sustick, New York; Vera McCord Productions, Inc., $500,000, George V. Reilly, Raymond J. Gorman, Harry C. Hand, New York City; Bay Theatre Corporation, $1,000, Isaac Kafke, Herman Turin, Max Levinthal, Brooklyn; Laekawanna Theatre Operating Corporation, capitalization not specified, Frank D. White, Joseph H. Shome, Mary E. Mockers, Buffalo.

Futter Buys "Curiosities" From Gaumont Company

While in Paris Walter Futter, president of Futter Productions, Inc., makers of the "Curiosities" series for Educational, concluded arrangements with the original Gaumont Company, the oldest film producing concern in existence, to procure from their vaults many scientific and natural history scenes. These will be incorporated in future "Curiosities," as will also a series of pictures, called "Yesterday and Today," purchased from the Gaumont Company, Ltd., of England.

Vitaphone Signs Schumann-Heink, Mary Lewis, De Wolf Hopper, Victor Contract

WARNER BROS. and the Vitaphone Corporation concluded four important contracts this week. They signed up Mme. Schumann-Heink and Mary Lewis of the Metropolitan Opera Company and De Wolf Hopper for Vitaphone appearances, and concluded a contract with the Victor Company by the terms of which the Vitaphone Corporation will be the only synchronizing service entitled to the exclusive services of all artists under the Victor Company's control.

The signing of these contracts is in line with the policy of Warner Bros. to secure for the invention, now attracting so much attention, the greatest and most gifted musical and operatic artists of the world.

No definite program has yet been mapped for Mme. Schumann-Heink and Mary Lewis in their appearances before the Vitaphone, but it seems a foregone conclusion one of the numbers Hopper will do will be his celebrated recitation, "Casey at the Bat."

The signing of the Victor Company contract is of the greatest importance to amusement lovers in all parts of the world, as it assures Vitaphone performances of practically all of the greatest artists. The Victor company has contracts with practically all the notables in the musical world. Vitaphone will be the only synchronizing service privileged to show these artists.

New Circuits in Kansas City, Hartford

Carver Will Head Kansas Town Chain; $2,000,000 String Initial Unit for Connecticut Company; "U" Gets Two More Houses

NEW changes in the theatre map are imminent owing to the formation this week of two more theatre circuits, one in Kansas City, Kans., the other a Hartford, Conn., enterprise in which A. M. Shuman and Joseph Walsh are interested. Officials of Universal Chain Theatres Corporation announce the acquisition of several houses.

With the resignation of Samuel Carver as manager of Universal's Liberty Theatre in Kansas City comes the confirmation of the formation of a new chain theatre company, which Mr. Carver will lead. Mr. Carver will be succeeded by A. Rittenburg of New York. The chain company, which will have four theatres in Kansas City, will be backed by Kansas City business men.

The company has not yet been named, but it is understood many theatres will be obtained in Kansas and Missouri in smaller towns. Neighborhood theatres will be constructed in Kansas City at Thirty-third and Main, Fifty-first and Main, Fifty-fourth and Troost Avenue, as well as one downtown house.

A. M. Shuman, Joseph Walsh and others are interested in the organization of a new theatre chain which will have headquarters at Hartford, Conn., and which will buy or build theatres in several of the principal cities of New England. The plan calls for a $2,000,000 chain as the initial unit.

Messrs. Shuman and Walsh are at present owners of the Lyric and Rialto theatres in Hartford, are completing the new Colonial Theatre in that city and have under consideration a fourth playhouse in East Hartford costing $150,000. In addition they are planning for one theatre each in Springfield, Chicopee Falls, and Worcester, Mass.

Mr. Shuman says that until the new company incorporates, names of the others interested will be withheld. He says the new circuit aims for quality rather than quantity and that the number of theatres in the chain is dependent upon the number of houses which can be secured which measure up to the standards determined upon.

He said that for the present operations would be confined to a radius of 75 miles from Hartford.

John E. Hostettler, who recently controlled a chain of picture houses in and around Kansas City and sold out to the Universal people, is again in the market, having bought up several theatres in the vicinity of Los Angeles. Mr. Hostettler purchased the Victory Theatre in San Diego and is quietly making arrangements, so it is rumored, for two other moderate-sized houses in Los Angeles.

In connection with his own locations, Mr. Hostettler is engaged in the interest of Universal, dickering for a chain of movie houses for that concern. As the Universal has only two houses on the Pacific Coast, one in San Francisco and the other in Portland, it very much desires to strengthen their theatre department in that territory.

The Universal Chain Theatres Corporation has just acquired two of the biggest and most important suburban theatres in Kansas City, Mo., it was announced yesterday by Al E. Fair, president of the corporation. They are the Madrid, a 1,400-seat house which opened last spring and said to be the finest suburban house in Kansas City, and the Iris, a 1,468-seat house. Both of these theatres are in excellent locations and have been acquired by Universal on a long-term lease. The Universal corporation will take over October 3rd.

The two new theatres form important links in Universal's ever-growing circuit in the Kansas City territory, which includes among others about twenty-five houses of the former Capitol Theatre Enterprises and fifteen of the Sears Circuit.

Warner Bros. have procured a one-year lease on the Capitol Theatre, Sixth and Chestnut streets, St. Louis, Mo., to be used for the presentation of Vitaphone and pictures commencing on October 1.

The Capitol Theatre is owned by the Buland Amusement Company, a subsidiary of Skouras Brothers Enterprises, and is one of the three leading first-run downtown houses. The house has a seating capacity of 1,000 seats on its main floor and balcony.

Renewed Activity in German Production

Report 218 Pictures for 1926-27; Advertising Expenditures Increased; Statistics Show Decline in Exports

THE season of 1926-27 in the German motion-picture world has commenced and both German and American companies are beginning to increase their advertising expenditures, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from Acting Commercial Attache Douglas Miller, at Berlin. The film papers sold in Germany are expanding from two or three pages to fifteen and twenty pages and all carry an increased number of advertisements.

According to reports in one of these journals, 218 German film productions are now announced for the forthcoming season and each day brings reports of additional pictures. The leading subjects for treatment in these films are said to be of a patriotic nature, a statement which is evidenced by the names of some of the productions such as "The German Heart on the German Rhine," "Submarine in Danger," "The Trumpets Are Blowing," "The Emden," "The Last Battle of Captain Franck," "Bismarck," "Autumn Manoeuvres," and other titles of a similar nature. It is predicted in Germany that most of these films will be fairly successful in that country.

The German Government has refused to accede to the request of the Theatre Owners Association that the contingent be altered by requiring two German films to be displayed for every foreign film shown, according to the report. Another proposal, which also was rejected, was to the effect that when a German compensation film was financed by foreign companies it should serve as compensation for two foreign films of the same approximate length.

There were more than 100 film companies operating in Germany on April 15 of the present year with a gold capitalization of 70 million marks.

While the number of moving picture theatres in Germany has fluctuated considerably during recent years the seating capacity of the existing theatres has shown a steady increase, states the report. In 1918 there were 2,299 theatres in Germany with a total seating capacity of 803,508. In 1920 the number of theatres had increased to 3,731, capable of seating 1,269,205 persons. The following year the theatres numbered 3,851, and the total capacity 1,304,525. In 1924 there were 3,669 theatres seating 1,315,246 persons, and in the following year the number of theatres declined to 2,748 but the capacity of those theatres was 2,037,393.

In 1923 the number of films produced which were over six reels in length totaled 237; in 1924 the number has increased to 376 and in the following year to 473.

In 1921 Germany exported 646 films comprising 836,000 meters; in 1922 474 films comprising 604,000 meters were shipped abroad; in 1923 the exports totaled 347 films and 536,000 meters; 271 films and 440,000 meters in 1924, and 228 films 474,000 meters in length in 1925. Thus it is seen that exports of German films have declined by nearly one-third in number and by more than 40 per cent in length since 1921.

In contrast to the decline in German film exports the importation of films from the United States has recorded a consistent increase. In 1921 such imports amounted to 134 films comprising 131,000 meters. In 1922, 185 American films 151,000 meters in length were imported; in 1923, 251 films of 189,000 meters were received; in 1924, 276 films of 248,000 meters entered Germany from this country and in 1925, although the number of films imported decreased to 251, their length increased to 384,000 meters. In addition to these films it is stated in Germany that 552 films with a length of 207,600 meters were imported from this country during 1925 as comedies and trick films of various kinds.

These statistics reflect the apparent fact that the German film public is growing, that the picture market is widening and that an increasing volume of films from this country is entering Germany to meet the demands of that market, while the foreign shipments of German films have declined.

Storm-Damaged Houses Get F. B. O. Credit

EXTENSION of unlimited credit to those exhibitors in Florida and other Southern States whose theatres suffered damage as a result of the hurricane which swept over that section of the country, has become operative at F. B. O. exchanges in Atlanta and Jacksonville under an order issued by Joseph P. Kennedy, president of the company. The order was issued by Mr. Kennedy immediately upon his return last Monday from a business trip abroad.

"Wire our branch managers in Jacksonville and Atlanta to notify all the suffering exhibitors that we are standing behind them in their hour of trouble," Mr. Kennedy directed. "Let this word be spread to all of them—not merely those who play our pictures. It doesn't make any difference whether they have used F. B. O. product or not, their credit is good with our company, and we are with them until they get on their feet again."

1,200 Scouts in Parade to See "Flaming Frontier"

Twelve hundred children in the uniforms of the Boy and Girl Scouts marched through the streets of New Haven on a recent Saturday morning. They marched to the music of two fife and drum corps and they were preceded by two policemen on motorcycles. The reason? One of Bob Wood's ideas for exploiting "The Flaming Frontier," at the Bijou Theatre. Mr. Wood, a former Universal exploiter, is now handling publicity for the Bijou. All scouts, wearing their uniforms, were invited to a preview of the Universal special.

Church Features Films in Sunday Evening Service

Motion pictures are being featured in the Sunday evening services of the Congregational Church in Alton, Ill. Rev. J. C. Townsend, pastor, first used the movies a year ago and has been playing to capacity at each performance since that time.

"Michael Strogoff" at Berlin Mercedes Palast

UNIVERSAL has just opened a new theatre in Berlin, according to cables received at the Universal home office, the Mercedes Palast, a 2500-seat house recently completed and located on Utrechterstrasse. The opening program featured "Michael Strogoff" the Universal-Film de France special.

The theatre was built by Oscar Einstein, Universal's agent in Germany, and Fred S. Englander, a Berlin theatre manager. Leo Czutska, a Berlin business man, is the business agent for the theatre company.

The house is unique in that, despite its great capacity, it is a one-floor theatre. The construction of the theatre has been rapid, the property only having been acquired last May. Fritz Williams the architect, is the same who built the UFA Thurmstrasse Theatre and the Piccadilly.

Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor, the Chico and Diane of "Seventh Heaven," the forthcoming Fox Films special.

Two Important Leads Chosen for "Seventh Heaven"

The roles of Diane and Chico in the screen version by Fox Films of Austin Strong's successful stage play, "Seventh Heaven," were awarded this week to Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell. Janet Gaynor, who has the role of Diane which Helen Mencken immortalized on the stage, has appeared in two Fox Films specials, "The Johnstown Flood" and "The Return of Peter Grimm." John Farrell appeared for Fox Films in "Sandy" and was then loaned to Paramount for the lead in "Old Ironsides."

Frank Borzage, who will direct "Seventh Heaven," left Hollywood last week for New York enroute for France where he will spend six weeks of research work concerning pre-war conditions in Paris. Camera-man Ernest Palmer, already in France, will join Borzage upon his arrival there.

Thieves Successfully Blow Safe of Seattle Egyptian

Thieves who entered the theatre by climbing from a marquee through a balcony window one night last week blew the safe in John Hamrick's Egyptian Theatre, a neighborhood playhouse of Seattle, Wash., and escaped with close to $1,000 in cash. The safe and the office where it was kept were demolished by the explosion, but the robbery was so well timed that police on the beat had passed just a short time before and were walking toward the opposite direction when the explosion occurred. Its force was further muffled by the thieves, who ripped up two suits belonging to Carl Mahne, the house manager, and stuffed them in the crevices of doors and windows to deaden the sound. The robbery occurred at 3 o'clock in the morning. The loss, representing part of a Sunday's receipts, was entirely covered by insurance.

Daylight Saving Did Not Hurt Canadian Theatres

Daylight saving ended Saturday, September 25, at midnight, for a number of cities in Eastern Canada, including Montreal, Ottawa and Hull. Exhibitors were not heard to complain when summer time terminated and, for that matter, nobody else raised any objections.

Theatre managers in Eastern Canada did not worry much about daylight saving this year because cool spells and periods of uncertain weather had done much to help summer business, regardless of the hours of the clock.

Royal Welcome Planned for Carl Laemmle

WHEN Carl Laemmle steps down the gangplank of the Berengaria on Thursday afternoon, October 7th, or Friday morning, October 8th, he will be met by an ardent band of enthusiasts consisting of his friends and admirers in the motion picture industry lead by Will Hays, president of the M. P. P. D. The welcome promises to be the finest ever awarded a figure in the industry. A committee is being formed to engineer the festivities. Hays, chairman of the committee, has voiced the sincerity of the reception with the order of "Let's give him a real one—officially, personally and every other way."

In part the welcome will comprise a hearty celebration when the Berengaria docks at the pier. Subsequent activities will depend on the health of the Universal president following his sea voyage.

Schenectady Managers Beset by Labor Troubles

Labor troubles are harassing the theatre managers in Schenectady, N.Y., through the demands of the operators for a 25 per cent wage increase and which, it is expected, will be followed by similar demands from other employees of the theatres. Schenectady is a thoroughly unionized city and even the scrub women around the theatres belong to a union. During the past week a theatre managers' association has been formed, and several conferences have been held.

Operators are now receiving in Schenectady a wage of one dollar an hour, the regular operator working 48 hours to the week, and the relief operator works 21 hours, making a cost of $69 a week for the booth.

Yeggs Again Deplete Safe of Winnipeg Theatre

For the second time within a year the office of the Winnipeg Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, was entered by safe-robbers early on the morning of September 18 and this time the thieves procured more than $1,500 in currency. The robbers smashed the safe combinations with chisels and heavy hammers. They made their entrance and escape through a convenient window.

New Five-Year Contract for Wm. Le Baron

WILLIAM I. LE BARON, associate producer at the Paramount Long Island Studio, was this week given a new contract for five years by Jesse L. Lasky. The old contract was voluntarily destroyed and the new one substituted in recognition of Le Baron's management of the production affairs while Lasky was away in California during the past four months.

Le Baron was made associate Paramount producer last fall. Since that time he has been in sole charge of Paramount production activities in the East.

Arbitration Boards of Canada Settle 40 Cases

FILM arbitration boards have functioned very successfully in Canada in the past few months, according to a report by Col. John A. Cooper of Toronto, president of the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada, which is affiliated with the Hays organization of New York.

Over 40 arbitration decisions have been made already in Canada by the arbitration boards, which have been established in the six key cities of the Dominion, Col. Cooper announced. These arbitration boards have comprised three representatives of a Film Board of Trade and three representative exhibitors, all in the district concerned. There is a Film Board of Trade in each of the six cities, namely, Toronto, Montreal, St. John, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver. These cover the whole country and they are situated in every city where film exchanges operate. Neutral exchange officials and neutral exhibitors are agreed upon or are appointed for each dispute and decisions are rendered after evidence is submitted. The judgments by these trade courts have been generally recognized throughout the moving picture business in Canada and certain precedents have already been established.

B. P. Schulberg

SCHULBERG FIVE-YEAR TERM SET To Control Famous West Coast Product

JESSE L. LASKY this week wired B. P. Schulberg his definite assignment as sole associate producer in executive control for Paramount at the West Coast studio for a term of five years.

Mr. Schulberg joined Famous last November and at that time signed a five-year contract which bore a clause permitting the company to terminate the compact prior to December 31 of the present year.

Mr. Lasky's wire to Schulberg said, in part:

"As evidence of our esteem I am pleased to advise that the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, through me, hereby rescinds so much of its agreement with you as enables it to terminate that agreement prior to December 31st, 1926, as in agreement provided. Our agreement is therefore to be deemed as the agreement for its entire period of five years from January 1st, 1926."

"U" Production Dept. Active

Filming on 15 of 28 Jewels Scheduled for Season Has Been Completed

WITH more pictures in production at one time than ever before in the history of the company, Universal now looks forward to an early completion of the program scheduled for the 1926-27 season. At present 15 of the 28 Jewel pictures to be released this season have been completed and prints of the majority are in the Universal exchanges.

The remainder of the Jewels are in, or are being made ready for, filming. Among those in work at this time are "Uncle Tom's Cabin," under Harry Pollard's direction, "The Cheerful Fraud," a Reginald Denny vehicle which William A. Seiter is filming; preparations are now under way for the filming by Mel Brown of the fourth of the current Denny series, "The Fourflusher."

Irving Willat has just completed production on the first Richard Talmadge starring picture for this season titled "The Fighting Don," an adaptation of the Max Brand story, "The Black Rider."

Others in work are "Down the Stretch," directed by King Baggot, "Held by the Law," an Edward Laemmle production, "The Silent Rider," a Hoot Gibson feature directed by Lynn Reynolds, "The Wrong Mr. Wright," in which Jean Hersholt will be starred, "Beware of Widows," a Laura La Plante production, and "The Sensation Seekers," featuring Huntly Gordon and Billie Dove.

In a few weeks work will begin on "Too Many Women," a Jewel from Gabriel Renter's story, in which Norman Kerry will be starred. Also, a new Laura La Plante picture is due to go into production at an early date. It will be "The Love Thrill," an auto racing story from the pen of Byron Morgan.

Then, Mary Philbin, is preparing to start work on a new Jewel production, "The Bargain Bride," from a story by A. Brode. This, with the Hoot Gibson Jewels yet unmade, will complete Universal's great Jewel output for the 1926-1927 season.

Will Produce Film Without Prior Distribution Plans

A radical departure in the production of pictures is contemplated by the firm of Asher, Small and Rogers, who plan to produce Ralph Spence's comedy mystery play, "The Gorilla," without having any definite distribution organization in mind. This method of filming a picture first and then arranging for its circulation is not due to any lack of firms as many organizations have made attractive proposals to Asher, Small and Rogers for the distribution rights of the forthcoming production which achieved popularity in play form.

Overland, Missouri, Theatre Destroyed by Fire

The Overland Theatre, Overland, Mo., was destroyed by fire on September 20. The blaze spread rapidly because there was no water supply for firemen from Clayton and University City to fight the flames.

The theatre building, a 2-story affair, was valued at $20,000. Other buildings destroyed included a drug, a garage and two doctors' offices, while a private hospital was damaged. The total loss was estimated at $70,000.

National Educator Testing Eastman Classroom Films

Experimental tests of the value of films in educational fields are being conducted at the present time in Rochester, N.Y., by Dr. Thomas E. Finegan, a nationally known educator. The films are made by the Eastman Kodak Company for classroom use. The tests will be tried out in nine other cities.

They tell a story of the man who was probably the most famous financier New York has ever had.

A young man came to him for help in getting a proper start in business in New York. He carried personal letters from a number of the financier's most important business associates, men so high that their requests carried weight.

The financier put on his hat and asked the young man to accompany him. They walked up and down Wall and Broad Streets, the financier chatting with his companion in the most friendly way. Returning to his office he grasped the hand of the younger man and wished him luck.

"But Mr.—," stammered the young man, "Aren't you going to help me?"

"I have already done so," said the financier. "The fact that I have singled you out as my companion on the street has already been reported in a dozen big offices. You can now get what you want in Wall Street."

Company It Keeps

It was so.

The public sizes up your theatre from the company it keeps, in other words the pictures that it plays.

If you show the best your theatre is rated high, and you get the patronage.

It is not enough to run the best features. The best in short subjects, the best in short comedies, are just as important to your prestige and success as the features.

Do you shop for features and let the rest of your program slide? Have you, in your own interests, had your local Pathe Exchange screen for you those splendid Mack Sennett series of comedies, — the Ben Turpins, Mack Sennetts, The Smith Series and the Alice Days?

Your house is known by the company it keeps. You can get no better prestige than by showing the Mack Sennett product, and advertising it.

Four Columbia Pictures Ready

One in Production and Plans for Balance of Product Now Formulated

FOUR Columbia productions are ready for release, another is being filmed and plans for the balance of product for release this season are well under way, says Columbia Pictures. Production work is being pushed ahead at a rapid pace, so that the entire program for the 1926-27 season will be finished well within the time allotted.

Frank R. Strayer has finished the direction of Douglas Bronston's farce comedy, "When the Wife's Away," in which George K. Arthur has the stellar role. The supporting cast includes Bobbie Dunn, Harry Depp, Ned Sparks, and Tom Ricketts, who do the comedy roles with Dorothy Revier and Ina Rorke playing the feminine parts.

Bert Lytell's second starring vehicle for Columbia, "Obey the Law," is also finished and in the cutting room. Al Raboch directed this Max Marcin melodrama and the supporting cast includes Eugenie Gilbert, Edna Murphy, Hedda Hopper, Larry Kent, William Welsh and Paul Panzer. "The Truthful Sex," co-featuring Mae Busch and Huntly Gordon, which was directed by Richard Thomas, is also being edited. Albert Shelby LeVine wrote both story and scenario.

Another production in the cutting and titling stage is "Money Isn't Everything," a drama of the stock company directed by Ralph Ince and in which he also plays a leading role. Dorothy Revier, Eugene Strong, Hazel Howell and Armand Kaliz are in the cast. "Paying the Price" is the title of the picture being filmed.

Four F. B. O. Films Put in Work

"The Desert Legion," "Her Father Said No" and "The Timid Terror" Included

FOUR pictures were put into production last week at the West Coast studio of F. B. O. Four more are scheduled for this week and three the coming week. Fred Thomson is starting work on "The Desert Legion," his next special. Another production is a Gold Bond, "Her Father Said No," a feature-length comedy adapted from the H. C. Witwer story, "Charlotte's Ruse." Kit Guard and Al Cooke are the featured players. They have just completed the "Bill Bill's Progress" series of short features.

George O'Hara is also working on feature comedies, having finished his "The Timid Terror." He plans to start "Jack o' Diamonds," his fourth starring vehicle, in the near future. Tom Tyler will soon launch "Lightnin' Lariats," with Frankie as his small support player. "The Magic Garden," Gene Stratton-Porter's story, is ready for shooting with the late author's son-in-law, J. Leo Meehan, at the directorial helm. "Tarzan and the Golden Lion," another of the Gold Bonds, is to go into work shortly. James Pierce will have the strong man's role. Viola Dana is preparing for her second picture of a series of six. She has just finished working in "Bred in Old Kentucky."

Ralph Ince has finished filming "The Breed of the Sea," Peter B. Kyne's marine melodrama. In the cast are Ralph Ince, Margaret Livingston, Dorothy Dunbar, Pat Harmon, Shannon Day and Kalla Pasha.

Sid Saylor to Play Newlywed in Universal Series

In six of the "Newlyweds and Their Baby" comedies being made by Stern Brothers for Universal release, the role of Newlywed will be played by Sid Saylor, who has been appearing as George in the "Let George Do It" series made by the same producers. The character of Newlywed was formerly interpreted by Jed Dooley, vaudeville star, in the first seven two-reelers of the series. Saylor will also continue in the "Let George Do It" series, six of which are to be filmed for the 1926-27 season. Ethlyne Clair will continue as Mrs. Newlywed.

Mabel Julianne Scott Signed For "Stranded in Paris"

Mabel Julianne Scott is the fifth player to be signed for Bebe Daniel's next starring Paramount picture, "Stranded in Paris." The others in the cast aside from the star and Miss Scott, are Ford Sterling, James Hall and Iris Stuart. Three additional roles remain to be filled. Arthur Rosson is directing "Stranded in Paris."

Sills Elected President of Hollywood Film Guild

The presidency of the newly organized Hollywood Film Guild has been given Milton Sills, First National star and one-time professor. This fills the quota of officers of the organization, which has Carey Wilson and B. P. Schulberg as vice-presidents; Madeline Brandeis as secretary; M. S. Palmer, of Hollywood First National Bank, as treasurer, and Harold Buequet, Henry Herzbrun and James F. J. Archibald as members of the committee.

Sills presided at the first showing of a Guild subject, "The Jack Knife Man" of King Vidor, which was shown in the auditorium of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce on September 23rd.

The purpose of the Guild, or Little Theatre, movement is to bring to the fore those examples of screen entertainment that are not generally shown to the public; also to welcome any ideas that aid in the advance of the motion picture.

Klein Returns from Six-Month Trip to Europe

On Tuesday, September 21st, Edward L. Klein, of the Edward L. Klein Corporation, international distributors of motion pictures, sailed from England aboard the Leviathan bound for the United States. During the past six months he has been visiting the principal film centers of Europe. Some of the deals he concluded while over there were the entire 1926-27 output of the David M. Hartford productions released by the American Cinema Association, a series of Big Boy Williams features, an Alaskan production of Captain F. E. Kleinschmidt entitled "Primitive Love"; "Santa Claus," another Captain Kleinschmidt production, and a series of twelve two-reel dramas produced by Joe Rock and released by Chesterfield Pictures.

Klein is planning to return to Europe about the middle of December.

Rivalry Keen in Robt. Lieber First National Contest

The fourth week of the First National sales contest given in honor of Robert Lieber, president of the company, sees New Jersey's (Eastern division) position of first place being hotly contested. The spirit of keen competition is evidenced by the staunch efforts Cleveland (Southern division) is making to oust New Jersey from first place and regain the lead which she had last week. Minneapolis (Western division) holds third place and Toronto is fourth.

The four exchanges mentioned above are the first in their respective localities. The country was divided in four geographical groups for the purposes of the drive. The leaders at the end of the campaign will receive substantial rewards.

Helene Chadwick Lead in "Paying the Price"

In the Columbia production, "Paying the Price," the lead will be portrayed by Helene Chadwick. Harland Tucker will also play a prominent part. Pictures in which Miss Chadwick has appeared include "Heartease," "The Sin Flood," "The Dust Flower" and "Little Eva Ascends."

Dinner Planned for First National K. O. Club

TO honor the ten salesmen who will win the K. O. button, the mark of a member of First National's exclusive club and honorary sales fraternity, Richard A. Rowland, general manager of First National, announces a special banquet, limited to the ten K. O. members and ten stars of the film colony. The dinner will be held in Hollywood during the company's spring convention. Rowland will probably act as host, although he has declared that such is not his intention unless he is specifically invited by the ten honor salesmen. No other officials will attend, as the party is strictly a K. O. affair.

The dinner will culminate the series of prizes offered to K. O. button winners, including a generous cash bonus, a trip to New York, augmented insurance and guaranteed advancement to the top ranks. In a letter to all First National salesmen, who will strive with might and main to win the coveted prizes, Rowland pledges his support to the K. O. idea. The K. O. club originated with Samuel Spring, secretary and treasurer of First National, and is heartily supported by A. W. Smith, Jr., Ned E. Depinet and Ned Marin, division sales managers.

First National's "Men of the Dawn" Completed

"Men of the Dawn," the Carey Wilson production with Milton Sills in the leading role, has just been completed. George Archainbaud directed the story, which is an adaptation of "The Legionary," the Foreign Legion story by Lajos Biro. A site near Guadeloupe was the location for the battle scenes between the legionnaires and the Riffian tribesmen. For this sequence Archainbaud engaged 250 rough riding cowboys and offered special inducements for exciting and spectacular riding. Viola Dana appears opposite Sills and the support is made up of Natalie Kingston, Arthur Edmund Carewe, William V. Mong, Claude King, Charlie Murray, Arthur Stone, Alma Bennett, Montagu Love and William Humphrey. The present First National schedule sets "Men of the Dawn" for release during Thanksgiving week.

Maynard to Start Fourth for First National Soon

Ken Maynard, the First National Western star, will, in the near future, commence work on the fourth of his series tentatively titled "Somewhere South of Sonora." He has already completed "Flame of the Border," which is now in the cutting room. It will be shipped East for pre-view as soon as the titles are appended and the film curtailed to its proper length. Besides Maynard the list of players in "The Flame of the Border" comprises Kathleen Collins, Tom Santschi, Dot Farley, Sheldon Lewis, Jay Hunt, Florence Turner, Fred Burns, William Malan, Paul Hurst and Tarzan, the horse. Maynard's second production for First National under his contract with Charles R. Rogers, "The Unknown Cavalier," is scheduled for release early in November.

Universal Abandons Title of "Kiss and Make Up"

As the Century Play Company has a play with the same name, Universal Pictures Corporation has decided not to use the title of "Kiss and Make Up," Laura La Plante's forthcoming picture. Julian Josephson, movie scenarist, wrote the story. It was after the Universal announcements of the picture that the Century Play got in touch with E. H. Goldstein, treasurer of Universal, and called attention to a play by the same name now the property of the Century Play Company. A substitute title for the La Plante film has not yet been selected. William A. Seiter will direct the picture which will probably follow "Beware of Widows" on the Universal production schedule.

"U" Promotes Phil Dunas as Manager of Denny Sales

Phil Dunas, who managed the Universal exchange at Minneapolis for seven years, has been raised to the position of sales director of Reginald Denny productions. He will establish his headquarters at the Universal home office, where he will manage the sales and exploitation campaigns which Universal is launching on the forthcoming Denny films, starting with "Take It from Me." Dunas' former position of manager of the Minneapolis exchange will be filled by Mark Ross, formerly key and city salesman in that exchange.

Fox Lists Seven for October

Versatility of Subject Matter Marks Schedule of Productions Released

FOX FILMS will release seven feature productions during October, each picture of a totally different nature, ranging from a French drama to a Far North thriller, and including the first two productions made in Yellowstone Park.

"The Lily," the first David Belasco play on the Fox program, is the initial release going out on Oct. 3. Belle Bennett has the title role. The original play was by Pierre Wolff and Gaston Leroux and was scenarized by Eve Unsell. Victor Seitzinger directed.

Richard Walling is co-featured with Janet Gaynor in "The Midnight Kiss," to be released Oct. 10. This is the screen transposition of "Pigs," a John Golden presentation. Keene Thompson did the scenario from the Patterson McNutt and Anne Morrison script. Irving Cummings handled the megaphone.

The first two pictures being screened in the National Parks to be shown are "The Country Beyond," adapted from the James Oliver Curwood best-seller, and "The Great K. & A. Train Robbery," a Tom Mix Western, based on Paul Leicester Ford's story. They will be released on Oct. 17. Irving Cummings directed the Curwood story picturization, and Lew Seiler produced the Mix vehicle.

"Whispering Wires," a mystery melodrama by Kate McLaurin, is the Oct. 24 release. It features Anita Stewart, supported by Edmund Burns. Albert Ray directed from a scenario by L. G. Rigby.

Another Belasco presentation, "The Return of Peter Grimm," will go to the screen on Oct. 31, at which time "30 Below Zero," a Buck Jones picture, also will be released.

Three From Warners in Oct.

"Across the Pacific" "My Official Wife" and "Private Izzy Murphy"

THREE of the Warner Bros. Twenty-Six Winners for this season will be released during this month. They are "Across the Pacific," which will be on the market this week, "My Official Wife," released on the 16th, and "Private Izzy Murphy," an October 30 release.

Monte Blue is starred in "Across the Pacific," a story of the days immediately following the Spanish-American War, by Charles E. Blaney. Jane Winton has the chief feminine role. Roy Del Ruth directed from a scenario by Darryl Francis Zannuck. Irene Rich and Conway Tearle are starred in "My Official Wife," which was directed by Paul Stein, European director, from a scenario prepared by Graham Baker and Raymond L. Schrock. It is a picturization of the stage play by A. C. Gunter.

George Jessel, musical comedy stage star, has the stellar role in "Private Izzy Murphy," an original story by Raymond L. Schrock and Edward Clark, for which Philip Lonergan prepared the scenario. Lloyd Bacon directed and the supporting cast includes Patsy Ruth Miller, Vera Gordon, and "Spec" O'Donnell.

Chadwick Pictures Progressing

Three of Eleven Scheduled for This Season Complete; Two in Production

REPORTS from the Chadwick studios on the Coast indicate that production on the eleven pictures scheduled for release this season is going ahead at a rapid pace. To date three on the program have been completed and two are now in an advanced stage of filming. "The Bells," one of the three completed, has been released.

On October 15, "Devil's Island," a story of the French penal settlement for life prisoners, is scheduled for general release. It has already been pre-viewed at the Colony Theatre, New York City.

"April Fool," another of the finished pictures, has also had pre-release runs in many key cities.

The two pictures are "Sunshine of Paradise Alley," and "Shamrock and the Rose." The former is Josephie Quirk's adaptation of the stage play of Denman Thompson.

"Mortimer's Millions" Johnny Hines' Next Comedy

With Johnny Hines' latest comedy for First National, "Stepping Along," in the cutting room, the tentative title of "Mortimer's Millions" has been set for the comedian's next comedy.

"The Nervous Wreck" at N. Y. Strand Oct. 10th

THE Mark Strand Theatre in New York City will open October 10th with the metropolitan premiere of "The Nervous Wreck," Al Christie's feature length comedy for Producer's Distributing Corporation release. The Christie film was pre-viewed on the Pacific Coast where it created a favorable impression. A pre-view was also staged in the East at Richmond Hill.

"The Nervous Wreck" features Harrison Ford with Phyllis Haver. In the supporting cast are Chester Conklin, Mack Swain, Vera Stedman, Hobart Bosworth, Paul Nicholson, Charles Gerrard and Clarence Burton. The scenario was prepared by McGrew Willis from the successful farce of Owen Davis. Scott Sidney directed.

: : : : "THE CHECK-UP" : : : :

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

Clive Brook With Pola Negri In "Barbed Wire"

As soon as he has finished his work in the East opposite Florence Vidor in "The Popular Sin," Clive Brook will entrain for Hollywood, where he will immediately begin work as leading man in "Barbed Wire," a Paramount picture starring Pola Negri. Production is slated to get under way about September 27th. Rowland V. Lee will direct "Barbed Wire" as his first picture for Paramount. It will be an Erich Pommer production, the second to be made in this country by the former head of Ufa. His first was "Hotel Imperial," Pola Negri's latest starring vehicle, on which photography has just been completed.

Two Sterling Releases for Month of October

Two productions of the Sterling Pictures Distributing Corporation will be released during October, "A Woman's Heart," on October 4th, and "Devil's Dice," on October 18th. The former picture was directed by Phil Rosen and was adapted from Ruth D'Agostino's novel, "The Revelations of a Woman's Heart." In the cast are Enid Bennett, Edward Earle, Gayne Whitman, Julianne Scott, Louis Payne and Lois Boyd. "Devil's Dice," a Banner production, from the Frank R. Adams novel, was directed by Tom Forman with a cast including Barbara Bedford, Robert Ellis, Josef Swickard, Tom Forman, James Gordon and Jack Richardson.

King Vidor to Direct "The Glory Diggers" for M-G-M

King Vidor, director of "The Big Parade," "La Boheme" and other films for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will direct "The Glory Diggers," an original story by Irvin S. Cobb that deals with a great engineering feat—the building of the Panama Canal. Irvin S. Cobb was brought to California by Irving G. Thalberg, associate studio manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, some time ago to do a story of the gigantic project. Data concerning the digging of the canal has been assembled by the research department of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer from the Government archives and from private manuscripts.

Tiffany Exchanges in Cuba and N. Y. State

THROUGH John N. Weber, assistant general manager in charge of foreign sales, Tiffany Productions, Inc., made known the establishment of two new Tiffany exchanges, one in Havana, Cuba, and the other in Albany, New York State.

The Tiffany exchange in Cuba is located at R. M. de Labra, 33, and will be in the charge of E. Carrea, who has heretofore been operating a leading film exchange in Cuba and the Rialto Theatre in Havana which theatre will show the twenty Tiffany productions. Carrea is also managing director of Casa Carrera y Medina.

The Albany exchange is located at 1048 Broadway with Sam Burns as manager in charge. The exchange will handle all the business embraced in the Albany territory pertaining to sales and shipment from Tiffany of films on the 1926-27 production program.

Watt L. Parker to Tour Warner Exchanges

FOLLOWING closely upon the premiere of Syd Chaplin's "The Better 'Ole," and the Vitaphone, at the New York Colony on October 7th, Watt L. Parker, director of advertising and publicity for Warner Bros., will start on a trip which will cover all of his company's exchanges, his ultimate destination being the West Coast as far North as Seattle. Parker will see that the field men are fully informed concerning advertising and publicity campaigns planned by Warner Bros. for the twenty-six productions on the season's schedule, the road show attractions and the Vitaphone.

As Parker has been spending the past several months preparing the advertising and publicity campaigns for 1926-27, he will, after finishing the business end of the trip, enjoy a vacation of a few weeks on the Coast and will return to his desk at the Warner Bros. home office around the first of next year.

Chadwick Has Special Aids for "April Fool"

Chadwick Pictures Corporation is offering a special line of accessories in Jewish characters in conjunction with April Fool, the third First Division for the present season, which goes to exhibitors on November 15th. "April Fool" is an adaptation of "An April Shower," a stage success of several years ago by Edgar Allan Woolf and Alexander Carr. Carr in the film portrays the same role he created on the stage. His characterization is expected to prove popular in Jewish communities. Chadwick is offering lithographs, heralds and window cards for this purpose.

G. Brockwell Has Supporting Role in "Long Pants"

Gladys Brockwell and Al Roseoe are the only players selected thus far to appear in support of Harry Langdon in the latter's "Long Pants," his third starring vehicle for First National. Although only three people figure in the story to date much progress has been made in the filming of the feature comedy, according to William H. Jenner, general manager of the Harry Langdon Corporation. "Long Pants," is the first production to be made by Langdon at the Burbank First National studio. The story was written by Arthur Ripley. Frank Capra is directing.

Lumas Releasing "Winning Wallop" During October

"The Winning Wallop," the Lumas Film Corporation starring William Fairbanks, was released during the latter days of the month of October. It was originally scheduled for November release but due to the request of many exchanges the date was changed. The cast of "The Winning Wallop" includes Crauford Kent, Jimmy Aubrey, Charles K. French, Melbourne McDowell, Frank Hagney, Shirley Palmer and Leroy Mason. The production was directed by Charles Hutchinson and produced by Camera Pictures Corporation.

Complete Cast for Lyon's "Not Herbert" Announced

The complete playing roster of Ben Lyon's next for First National, "Not Herbert," which Ray Rockett is producing at New York, has just been made public. Besides Lyon, who is the featured player, Pauline Starke has the principal feminine role. The others are Sam Hardy, Virginia Lee Corbin, Lloyd Whitlock, Diana Kane, Tammany Young, Charles Craig, Christine Compton, Byron Douglas and Helen Rowland, a little newcomer to the screen. Howard Higgin is directing "Not Herbert" now in its second week of production. It is an adaptation of Howard Irving Young's stage play of the same name.

Michalove in New York for Candler Decorations

Dan Michalove, assistant sales and theatre manager for Universal in the South-east, has arrived in New York to close with various firms for decorations and fittings for the new $1,000,000 Candler Theatre in Atlanta, which is to be about the best in Universal's chain of theatres.

Michalove will look after the painting, seats, decorations, floor coverings, scenery, pipe organ, projection equipment, refrigerating system and other necessities. He reports that the theatre is well along in production, being almost ready for interior work.

Roy D'Arcy Signs Exclusive M-G-M Contract

Roy D'Arcy, polished heavy of the screen, has signed a new contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by the terms of which he will appear only in pictures of that company. Before D'Arcy was discovered as a screen possibility and cast for the role of crown prince in "The Merry Widow," he was at various times a traveler, musician, rancher and stage star, explorer and writer. He has played important parts in "La Boheme," "The Masked Bride," "The Temptress" and has been recently cast for a featured role in Mae Murray's "Valencia."

Sax Celebrates Lumas-Gotham Anniversary

SAM SAX, president of Gotham Productions and Lumas Film Corporation, is celebrating this week the third anniversary of his entrance into the motion picture industry as an independent producer and distributor. His friends and business associates have been sending him many messages of congratulation upon the growth and success of his organization.

Sax is now working on a nationalization plan for Gotham Productions. Five exchanges are known as Gotham exchanges and applications for future franchises are more than the available supply. Over ninety per cent of the original franchise holders who did business with Sam Sax during his first year in business are still active customers and firm friends.

Huge Technical Force to Aid in Filming of "Wings"

When the battle of St. Mihiel in the Paramount special "Wings," is filmed there will be twelve cameras in airplanes and six at the top of a parallel one hundred feet in height to reproduce the battle scenes which form the climax of the Paramount roadshow depicting the American airman in the late war. More than eight thousand men will take the part of the troops on the ground and three hundred planes will re-enact the historic battle.

Clyde Cook in Next Pola Negri Picture

Clyde Cook, well known acrobatic comedian of stage and screen, will provide comedy relief of a unique variety in Pola Negri's next starring vehicle for Paramount, "Barbed Wire."

Rowland V. Lee will direct this Erich Pommer production, to be the screen adaptation of Hall Caine's tale, "The Woman of Knoekaloe." Others already selected for the picture are Clive Brook, Paramount featured player, and Gustav von Seyffertitz.

First National Secures Novel and Short Story

First National Pictures have closed contracts covering the world's motion picture rights to "The Light of Searthy," the novel by Agnes and Egerton Castle. This novel of the last decade will be given a modern picturization. The story concerns war, a bootleg and hi-jacker plot and romance.

First National has also purchased the late Gerald Beaumont's story, "Said With Soap," for screen purposes.

Paramount Engages Estelle Taylor for "New York"

To the featured list of players in Paramount's "New York" has been added Estelle Taylor. Work will be started on the feature within a few days with Luther Reed directing at the Astoria studio. Other featured players in "New York" are Ricardo Cortez, Lois Wilson, Mary Alden and William Powell. The story was written by Barbara Chambers and Forrest Halsey, who also did the screen adaptation.

Von Stroheim Resumes on "The Wedding March"

Production has been resumed on "The Wedding March," the Paramount special now being made at the Associated studio under the sponsorship of P. A. Powers. The production was halted two weeks ago when Director Erich Von Stroheim was taken ill by a severe throat infection which his physician diagnosed as tonsillitis but which failed to respond to the usual treatment.

Preparations Under Way for F. B. O. "Wisecrackers"

Paul Gangelin is now at work on the continuities of the "Wisecrackers," the second series of F.B.O. Comedies scheduled for the 1926-27 program. James Wilkinson, production supervisor of comedies at the F.B.O. Studio, announces that the series will feature the two F.B.O. stock comedians, Kit Guard and Al Cooke.

Seven Tiffany Films Completed

Four Others Now in Production; Casts for Remaining Pictures Assembled

WITH the last scene for "College Days" filmed, Tiffany Productions has now completed seven of the features scheduled for the 1926-27 program. Four others are now in work and casts are being chosen for the remainder of the product for this year. The pictures thus far completed include "Lost At Sea," suggested by the Louis Joseph Vance story, "Mainspring," directed by Louis J. Gasnier; "That Model From Paris," suggested by the Gouverneur Morris story, "The Right to Live," and directed by Louis J. Gasnier; "Fools of Fashion," suggested by the George Randolph Chester story, "The Other Woman," and directed by James C. McKay; "College Days," by A. P. Younger, directed by Richard Thorpe under the personal supervision of the author.

"The First Night," a farce comedy by Frederica Sagor, directed by Richard Thorpe; "One Hour of Love," based on the story of the same name by Leete Renick Brown, directed by Robert Florey. "Joselyn's Wife," suggested by the story of the same name by Kathleen Norris, starring Pauline Frederick; directed by Richard Thorpe.

Casts are now being assembled for "Sin Cargo" with Shirley Mason and Robert Frazer already engaged for the principal roles, "Enchanted Island," "Lightning," by Zane Grey, and "Redheads Preferred," by Douglas Bronson.

Preparations are also under way for the filming of the Tiffany special, "Wild Geese," from the novel of the same name by Martha Ostenso. The adaptation is by A. P. Younger.

The other pictures scheduled are "Flaming Timber," "The Broken Gate," suggested by the novel of the same name by Emerson Hough; "Snowbound," "Song of Steel," "Squads Right," by A. P. Younger, "The Life of a Woman," by Guy de Maupassant, "Tale of a Vanishing People," by Rex Beach, and "The Husband Hunters."

Special advertising and exploitation campaigns are being prepared for every one of the Tiffany productions, and in addition a national advertising campaign has been inaugurated covering every part of the United States, it is said.

Barthelmess Completes "The White Black Sheep"

Richard Barthelmess has finished work on his latest First National picture, "The White Black Sheep." The general release date for the new production is December 19th. After the cutting and editing on the film have been finished the prints will be shipped East for pre-views. In "The White Black Sheep" will be seen Patsy Ruth Miller in the leading feminine part, Constance Howard, Erville Alderson, William H. Tooker, Gino Corrado, Albert Prisco, Sam Appel, Col. G. L. McDonell and Templar Saxe. Sidney Oleott directed. The story is an original by Violet E. Powell.

Almost All M.-G.-M. Units Busy

Majority of Pictures Now in Production Scheduled for Release in Spring

WITH practically every director, contract and stock player working at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Culver City studios the production executives have their hands full. Most of the pictures now being filmed are scheduled for late Winter or early Spring release.

At least two will be road-showed and others will be marketed as specials. Productions in work at present include "The Mysterious Island," Hunt Stromberg's production of the Jules Verne story which will be filmed in Technicolor under direction of Benjamin Christian; "Annie Laurie," an Irving Thalberg production starring Lillian Gish, "Flesh of the Devil" directed by Clarence Brown, and "The Understanding Heart," directed by Jack Conway, a Cosmopolitan production.

Another Cosmopolitan picture is "The Flaming Forest," directed by Reginald Barker under supervision of Hunt Stromberg. "Valencia," written and directed by Dimitri Buchowetzki, is to be one of the most elaborately staged productions on the program. John M. Stahl is directing "The Great Galeoto," which Thalberg is producing. Sam Taylor's initial directorial effort for M.-G.-M. "Exit Smiling" is in work; this is a Harry Rapf production.

rectorial helm. Bernard Hyman, assistant to Thalberg, has four productions under his supervision, including "War Paint," "The Taxi Dancer," "Slide, Kelley Slide" and "A Little Journey."

Stories being prepared for filming include "The Red Mill," a Cosmopolitan picture, "Friseo Sal," "The Grey Hat," "The Magician," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, and "Faust," an Ufa picture, are also on the list.

Productions ready for release early in the new season are "Tell It to the Marines," "The Temptress," "The Fire Brigade," "Upstage" and "Tin Hats."

Court Finds "Bad Men" For Ballyhoo

Open Letter Sent to Magistrate Offering Jobs Exploits Show

THE Louisville engagement of "Three Bad Men" at the Strand Theatre, that city, received a smashing campaign at the hands of Manager Fred Dolle and the Fox exploitation force.

The opening shot of the campaign was fired with an open letter read in the local criminal court by Judge Eugene Daily, whereby Mr. Dolle expressed his desire to employ three bad men for advertising purposes. At the close of court, word was dispatched to Mr. Dolle stating that another day's harvest of derelicts would have to be reviewed to find three bad men to aid him. Next day this story broke, the local newspapers stating that there were no bad men in all Louisville.

A novel "ad" in eighteen point type was placed in the classified section of the newspaper and immediate results were obtained.

Twenty thousand doorknob hangers and one thousand special teaser tack cards were printed. The hangers contained a three and a half inch number "3" and the balance of the copy in smaller type. The tack cards were the regular window card size and contained the following copy: "Look out—3 Bad Men are coming," also "Warning—3 Bad Men are coming to town." In order to properly circulate these accessories, another novel "ad" was placed in the newspapers calling for two hundred boys to earn free tickets distributing them. The results were more than expected, as every section of the city was completely sniped.

The fire department of Birmingham assisted the Fox exploitation man in hanging a giant streamer banner on the Florence Hotel to exploit "3 Bad Men" at the Lyric Theatre, Birmingham

Cut-out Displayed on Easel Makes Attractive Lobby

Manager G. M. Pedley, of the Strand Amusement Company's interests in Owensboro, Ky., as a stimulator for "Mlle. Modiste" for its run at the Empress Theatre, used a cut-out with easel back of the star, made of beaver board, using a three sheet.

Lobby Movie Cabinet Now Feature of Hipp Display

The New York Hippodrome, Keith-Albee house now showing pictures and vaudeville on a continuous program, is "advancing" the showing there next week of "Gigolo" with a Vitalux Display Cabinet, which shows daylight motion pictures and stills from the production itself. The display cabinet, which has been installed at the Hippodrome by the Automatic Movie Display Corp., of New York, occupies a prominent place in the front of the house. According to observers investigating the attraction value of the display, it is estimated that each day from 3,000 to 5,000 people witness the running of the two-minute "trailer" and the eleven still pictures exhibited in the machine, which operates continuously.

The Vitalux cabinet will be retained as a permanent display feature.

Short Comedy Featured On Opening Bill at Irving

Every now and then evidence comes to light which proves that the short comedy is fast coming into its own as a program unit which is being given display space regularly in newspaper advertising copy. This statement is exemplified in the opening of the new Irving Theatre, San Francisco, a house seating 1,500, when W. Harold Wilson devoted three-fourths of the newspaper advertising space to the comedy, "The Hansom Cabman," featuring Harry Langdon. A Pathe cornerblock illustration was used, giving the short comedy the only break in this respect. The comedy was also featured on the marquee.

Newspaper Seeks "Unbobbed" Beauty

Contest Carried for 3 Weeks in Sydney, Australia Newspaper as Stunt for "Don Q, Son of Zorro"

FROM SYDNEY, Australia, comes the report, accompanied by documentary evidence in the form of newspaper clippings, presenting a mass of publicity for the showing of "Don Q" at the Crystal Palace Theatre, that a contest to find the most beautiful "unshingled" girl or woman of the city caught the interest and enthusiasm of the public as few "stunts" or newspaper contest tie-ups ever do. The question "is woman's 'erowning glory' more glorious bobbed or un-bobbed," agitates Australia as violently as it does America, and England and France, and Germany and Italy for that matter. At any rate, the tie-up between the Crystal Palace and the Sydney "Evening News" "caught on" like wildfire and for a stretch of 18 days occupied a feature position in the daily issues of the paper.

The idea is a variant of the "bobbed hair" theatre contests which have been used by exhibitors in this country with a number of pictures, notably with "Bobbed Hair," in which Marie Prevost starred. However, in the case of the Crystal Palace the contest was used as an advanced newspaper publicity stunt, and in this way worked up a great amount of interest in the forthcoming showing of "Don Q."

The mechanics of the stunt were simple enough. The theatre offered a prize of about $100 to be awarded the "unshingled" girl or woman judged the prettiest. In addition to the cash prize, the winner was to be offered a leading part in the prologue staged with "Don Q" at the Crystal Palace, with a salary of $40 a week.

The newspaper found the stunt an excellent feature, and daily many photographs sent in to the judges were reproduced. In this way full pages of publicity were ac-

"Sparrows" Featured in New York "Bob" Contest

A CONTEST patterned after the one used in Sydney, Australia, and described in the article on this page, created widespread interest in New York, where it was featured by the "New York Telegram" in conjunction with Mary Pickford's picture "Sparrows," currently showing at the Mark Strand on Broadway.

The "Telegram" contest featured the question "To Bob or Not to Bob," and offered prizes for the best essays by women of shingled or unshingled tresses on why they preferred the style they affect. The contest ran for a week, concluding last Tuesday, during the second week's run of "Sparrows" at the Strand, when the winners were announced. It was liberally supported by the newspaper, which gave generous space to selected letters and articles during the run of the contest. Thousands of letters were received by the newspaper. Mary Pickford's reasons for not bobbing her hair was one of the feature articles printed on the last day of the contest.

corded the contest frequently during the course of the competition. News stories and feature articles giving data concerning the attitude at the Court of St. James with regard to bobbed hair, which may not be seen at Court functions owing to Queen Mary's decision against the "shingle," and other items of this sort appeared frequently during the run of the contest.

The whole-hearted and clever manner in which the "Evening News" handled the stunt was largely responsible for the tremendous interest created in Sydney by the "Don Q" beauty contest.

The announcement of the contest as printed by the "News" is quoted below because it describes fully the entire plan under which the Crystal Palace obtained a three weeks' intensive campaign as a result of the "unshingled contest."

The announcement reads:

"Fame and a big prize await the girl who is adjudged the possessor of the most beautiful long hair in Australia.

"The Crystal Palace Theatre offers her £25, and an engagement to star in the prologue to 'Don Q, Son of Zorro,' the new Douglas Fairbanks' film at a salary of £10 a week.

"All that Sydney's girls with flowing tresses have to do is to forward their photographs to 'Douglas Fairbanks,' care of Union Theatres, Ltd., Crystal Palace Theatre.

"The competition is open to all girls of more than 14 years of age. Entrants must forward photograph, head and shoulder preferred, with name and address and color of hair, to 'Douglas Fairbanks,' care of Union Theatres, Ltd., Crystal Palace Theatre, George Street, Sydney. No entries will be received after July 29, 1926. All entrants must agree to appear personally before the judges, if so called upon. General beauty of face and figure will be taken into consideration when judging. Mr. E. Benson, representative of Douglas Fairbanks; and Mr. Wynne Davies, the well-known artist, in association with a representative of Union Theatres, Ltd., will be the judges. The judges' decision is to be absolutely final. No undertaking will be given to return any of the photographs."

Merchants Stage Campaign for "It Must Be Love"

FOUR "de luxe" window displays were the exploitation harvest reaped by Manager E. R. Rogers through the national tie-up between First National and the Kellogg Cereal Company for co-operative local drives featuring "Pep" breakfast food and the Colleen Moore picture "It Must Be Love." The photos above show two of the important displays which publicized the showing of the picture at the Tivoli Theatre, Chattanooga, in store windows featured by merchants of that city. A special window card showing the star and featuring her endorsement of "Pep" proved an important factor in facilitating the work of arranging the merchant tie-up with the Tivoli.

Studio Briefs

For five years more Albert Ray and Orville Dunn will be seen at the Fox Films studio as both have signed contracts for that length of time. The former has just finished production of "Whispering Wires," a screen version of the mystery play of that name, featuring Edmund Burns and Anita Stewart. Dunn's latest picture was "The Flying Horseman," starring Buck Jones.

In Florence Vidor's new Paramount starring film, "The Popular Sin," will be seen Iris Gray, a Paramount Picture School graduate who is a member of the supporting cast headed by Clive Brook, Greta Nissen and Philip Strange. Nine other Junior Stars are in the same picture. They are Thelma Rodd, Thelda Kenvin, Jeanne Morgan, Ivy Harris, Dorothy Nourse, Greg Blackton, Irving Hartley, Robert Andrews and Claud Buchanan. Malcolm St. Clair is directing at the Paramount Long Island studio.

J. G. Bachmann, producer of Preferred Pictures, has signed Edith Yorke for a mother role in "His New York Wife," which Albert J. Kelly is directing from an original comedy drama written by Leon Abrams. Other featured players are Alice Day, Theodore Von Eltz and Ethel Clayton.

A new contract has been awarded by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to Marcel De Sano, the Romanian director who recently finished "Blarney," an adaptation of Donn Byrne's novel, "In Praise of James Carabine." His next directorial effort will be "Ordeal," starring Lon Chaney.

The screen play for "It," Elinor Glyn's first production for Paramount, is being prepared by the scenario team of Hope Loring and Louis Lighton. Clarence Badger will direct "It," with Clara Bow in the featured role.

"The Wag Lady," one of the short stories in the Rex Beach volume, "The Crimson Gardenia and Other Stories," will be transferred to the screen, according to an announcement from Harry Rapf, associate studio executive of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who will produce the story. Reginald Barker, who has just completed the filming of Cosmopolitan's "The Flaming Forest," will direct. Harvey Gates, adaptor of "The Mysterious Island" to the screen, expects to have the Rex Beach story in continuity form next month.

Production has already been started by Warner Bros. on "The Third Degree," an adaptation of the Charles Klein stage play of the same name. Graham Baker and Bess Meredyth collaborated on the screen version. Dolores Costello has the starring role, with Louise Dresser in the chief supporting part. The European director, Michael Curtiz, has started his first American production in "The Third Degree." Important roles have also been assigned Rockliffe Fellows, Jason Robards, Kate Price and Harry Todd.

Robert Anderson, character actor of the screen, is the latest addition to the cast of Mae Murray's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring film, "Valencia." The story, a romance of Spain, is being directed by Dimitri Buchowetzki. Lloyd Hughes has the part of hero.

Supporting Jack Holt and Georgia Hale in Paramount screen version of the Zane Grey tale, "The Man of the Forest," Warner Oland will play a leading role. The production unit left for location at Mammoth, Cal., in the Sierras, on September 25th. John Waters is the director.

In addition to the group of players, Claire Windsor, William Haines, Harry Carey and Claire McDowell, the former stage actor Lawford Davidsen, has an important characterization in "A Little Journey," which Robert Z. Leonard is directing for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Albert Lewin translated "A Little Journey" to the screen from the story by Rachel Crothers.

William Black, who recently played important roles in two Paramount productions, "Fascinating Youth" and "So's Your Old Man," is the latest player to be added to the cast of Frank Tuttle's "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em." The featured players are Louise Brooks, Lawrence Gray and Evelyn Brent. In supporting positions are Osgood Perkins, Marcia Harris, Vera Sisson, Ed Garvey, Elise Cavanna and little Joseph McClunn.

As a reward of merit Fox Films has given a long-term contract to Sammy Cohen, young Los Angeles actor, who renders a comedy characterization in the Fox Films special, "What Price Glory?" He is now working in "The Return of Peter Grimm" wherein he interprets a circus clown.

The gossiping "Mistress Hibbins" of "The Scarlet Letter," Marcelle Corday, a former French stage actress, is the latest player to be added to the list in "The Flesh and the Devil," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of Sudermann's "The Undying Past." The picture features Greta Garbo, John Gilbert and Lars Hanson.

Sam Hardy, featured comedian, has been added to the cast of "Orchids and Ermine," Colleen Moore's current vehicle, which John McCormick, manager of West Coast productions and husband of the star, is producing in New York for First National. Jack Mulhall is seen opposite Miss Moore. The story, an original by Carey Wilson, is being directed by Alfred Santell.

Frank Condon, writer of humor for the Saturday Evening Post, is now in New York working in collaboration with Tom J. Geraghty on "Sweethearts in Every Port," W. C. Field's next starring vehicle for Paramount. In this comedy feature Fields, an inland barge captain, imagines himself to be a daring deep-sea mariner.

In the Warner Bros.' production of "Mama Kiss Papa," the team of George Sidney and Vera will once again come together as mama and papa. Their son Lew is played by Arthur Lubin, his sweet-heart by Helene Costello. Louise Fazenda has another comedy role as Reba, the well-to-do sister, and Nat Carr as Maurice, her stock-promoting husband.

A new contract to direct pictures exclusively for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has been signed by William Nigh, who has just completed "The Fire Brigade." This picture was produced in co-operation with the International Order of Fire Chiefs and other national and state fire associations. It has just been completed and will soon be released as a special on the M.-G.-M. list.

The Blanche Sweet-John Griffith Wray combination was once again brought together through Winfield R. Sheehan of Fox Films who purchased Adela St. Johns' original screen story, "Love o' Women," for the actress and the director who made "Anna Christie" together.

Marshall Neilan, husband of Miss Sweet, originally purchased the St. Johns story for his wife. It will be given an elaborate production by Fox Films.

Large Portion of Preferred Program Completed

The first five pictures of the Preferred Pictures schedule have already been completed. J. G. Bachmann, producer of the Preferred product for the season of 1926-27, has left Los Angeles for New York, where he intends staying for a short period. He brings with him prints of his most recently completed production, "His New York Wife," a comedy drama in which are featured Alice Day, Ethel Clayton and Theodore Von Eltz. It was directed by Albert Kelly and will be released during November.

After Bachmann has been in New York for about one week he will return to the West Coast to make the eight remaining pictures on his Preferred schedule, "The Aristocrat," "Studies in Wives," "Shenandoah," "Shopworn," "Exclusive Rights," "Eden's Fruit," "The Worst Woman" and "Horses and Woman."

Asher Obtains Edington Novel for Corinne Griffith

E. M. Asher, producer of the Corinne Griffith features for First National release, has purchased the screen rights to May Edington's novel, "Purple and Fine Linen," as a vehicle for Corinne Griffith. Asher states that "Purple and Fine Linen" will be put into production immediately upon the completion of her current film, "The Lady in Ermine," now being filmed at the Metropolitan Studio, under the direction of James Flood. The scenarist and director will be assigned shortly.

Young Fiddlers in Contest at Tower, Milwaukee

The Tower Theatre in Milwaukee, under management of H. Sticklemeier, has just completed an interesting contest for youthful violinists. The contest boomed business for the Tower and provided material for future special acts.

Short Subjects and Serials

Tunney Episode on Pathe List

Schedule for Week of October 10 Has "Aesop Fable" and Regular News Issues

THE fifth chapter of "The Fighting Marine" in which Gene Tunney, world's heavyweight fight champion, is starred, is scheduled for release the week of October 10 by Pathe. Other productions to go to exhibitors this week are "The Road House," an Aesop Fable; "Journey of the Israelites," one of the Pilgrimage to Palestine series; Topics of the Day No. 41, Pathe Review No. 41 and two issues of Pathe News.

"Entombed" is the title of the fifth chapter of the Tunney serial. In this the leaders of the hostile faction find themselves blocked at every attempt to keep Lady Chatfield, the heiress, from living six months on the mine property to thus fulfill the demands of her grandfather's will. Dick (Gene Tunney) and Lady Chatfield (Marjorie Gay) are persuaded to visit the mine and when they are below ground an explosion takes place. Spencer Bennet directed from the scenario of Frank Leon Smith.

Pathe Review No. 41 presents: "Demon Masks," how the American Indian fooled his "devils," offered through the cooperation of the Museum of American Indian, Heye Foundation; "The City of Watchers," Pathecolor scenes of Bonifacio, Corsica; "The Boyland Flier," the White Mountain Narrow Gauge Railroad and "Zoo Babies," the youngsters at Luna Park Zoo, Los Angeles.

"The Road House" is the latest of the Aesop's Film Fables animated cartoon comedies. "Journey of the Israelites" is the newest release of the "Pilgrimage to Palestine" series of twenty subjects, over half of which are now available for exhibition. Topics of the Day No. 41 offers the latest quips and jokes from the press of the world. Issues Nos. 84 and 85 of Pathe News complete the Pathe short feature for the week of October 10th.

Fox Has Ten Shorts for October

Month's Schedule Includes "Van Bibber,"
"O Henry" and "Helen and Warren" Comedies

DURING the month of October ten short subjects will be released by Fox Films, in addition to the Fox Films news issues. Starting with October 3rd, "The Lyin' Tamer" and "Dizzy Dancers" will be issued to exhibitors.

"The Lyin' Tamer" is the second of eight, the new Animal Comedy series set for this year. It features Ernie Shields and Barbara Luddy. Gene Cameron and Jean Lorraine have the leads in "Dizzy Dancers," which is one of the twenty Imperials that Fox Films make yearly. Another Imperial, "Honeymoon Hospital" is scheduled for October 17th. The same team is featured in this vehicle.

The second of the Helen and Warren comedies is titled "Back to Mother" and will be released October 24th. In it Allan Forrest plays Warren which role was recently portrayed by Hallam Cooley. Katherine Perry remains as Helen. "Babes in the Jungle" is the O. Henry comedy. Hallam Cooley and Joan Renee have the leads. The Van Bibber comedy for the month is "King Bozo." Earle Foxe and Florence Gilbert are the featured players in this twenty-first of the Richard Harding Davis series to reach the screen. It comes to the exhibitor on October 10th.

The three Fox varieties for October are "The Australian Alps," which comes out on the 3rd; "Maryland, My Maryland" scheduled for the 17th and "The Great Lakes" to be issued on the 31st.

Has Films of Leading Events

Producer of Educational's "Curiosities" Reels
Draws on Library Covering Past Twenty Years

WALTER FUTTER'S statement that every historical film so far suggested as being suitable for placing in the new Washington Archives building as part of the nation's proposed permanent historical record in motion pictures, is now in the vaults of Wafilm, Inc., subsidiary corporation of Futter Productions Co., gives some idea of the great quantity and variety of subjects available for use in the Curiosities series released by Educational.

In the editing of the novelties in the Curiosities series, the new pictures of the world's oddest people and things often appear to best advantage when accompanied by a flash of some older picture for contrast or atmosphere. Mr. Futter is said to have access to three million feet of film collected in the last twenty years. Included in these pictures are ten important collections of past years including those from Gaumont Graphic and Gaumont News Reel, Triangle Film Corporation, Pictorial Life, Reel Life and others in existence as far back as 1905.

Prize Winners Chosen in Felix the Cat Contest

THE winners in the Felix the Cat Drawing Contest, which ended September 15th, have been selected. The contest was conducted by Motion Picture Magazine, through the courtesy of Pat Sullivan, Educational and George Bergfeldt Company, manufacturer of Felix the Cat novelties. Approximately 15,000 drawings were submitted by young artists. The winners were judged by their originality and cleverness and the neatness of their sketches.

Guila May Replogle of Holton, Kansas, won the first prize for girls with three pencil drawings of Pat Sullivan's feline character. R. Melvin Quinn of Reading, Pennsylvania, won the first prize for boys with a typical ink sketch of Felix. The second prize winner among the girls was Norma Beausoliel of Montreal, Canada. The boys' second prize was won by Pasquale D'Angelo.

Bray Engages Wanda Wiley for Comedies Series

Bray Productions this week announced the acquisition of Wanda Wiley to appear with Lewis Sargent in a series of twelve two-reel Fistic Culture Comedies for 1926-27 release. Miss Wiley has been working for the past four years in Century Comedies. She makes her screen debut in Bray Comedies in "Look Out Below," the third of the Fistic Culture series.

Davis Now Featured Player In Mermaid Comedies

George Davis, recently seen in supporting roles with Johnny Arthur in Educational-Tuxedo Comedies, has been promoted to feature parts in Educational-Mermaid Comedies. Davis will head a cast consisting of Robert Graves, Jack Lloyd, Marcella Daly and Bert Young, in a comedy built around one of New York's night clubs.

"The Motorboat" New Van Bibber Comedy Started

A new Van Bibber comedy, "The Motorboat," with Earle Fox and Florence Gilbert has been put into production by Fox Films. Ralph Sipperly, who appeared in "The Blue Eagle" and "Womanpower," is a member of the cast. Jess Robins will direct the comedy.

Katherine McGuire Leading Lady to Lupino Lane

Kathryn McGuire has been added to the roster of beauties at the Educational Studios. Miss McGuire will have the principal feminine supporting role with Lupino Lane in his first comedy for Educational of this year's series.

Christie Preparing Elaborate Sets for "Shell Shocked"

At Westwood, part of the Christie property on the West Coast, elaborate sets are being prepared as atmosphere for Jimmy Adams' war comedy for Educational release titled "Shell Shocked." Trenches are being dug, with barbed wire entanglements and machine gun nests lending a realistic appearance. Walter Graham, Christie director, presides at the microphone of the broadcasting apparatus used to control the movements of the troops, airplanes and automobiles used in the picture. Christie made several war comedies as far back as eight years ago when "Red Crossed" was produced. Other offerings around that time were "Marching Home," "Oh, Buddy," and "War Gardens." In "Shell Shocked" Eddie Baker, besides acting as assistant to Graham, also interprets the role of a hard-boiled top sergeant. Vera Stedman is the girl.

Johnny Arthur Starring on Stage and Screen

Johnny Arthur, Educational-Tuxedo Comedy star, is mighty busy these days—and nights. In the day time, he is working at the Educational Studios in a Tuxedo Comedy now in production, while at night he is being starred in the stage comedy, "The Butter and Egg Man," at the Mason Theatre, Los Angeles.

Charlotte Stevens, formerly with Christie Comedies, is Johnny's leading lady in the stage production. Arthur will continue his screen work during the run of the play in Los Angeles and then will obtain a leave of absence to appear in it at San Francisco.

Hal Roach Stars Busv with New Pathe Comedies

The Hal Roach stars are now busily engaged upon their new comedies for Pathe winter release. Charles Chase is working at the Hal Roach studio on a story conceived by his brother, James Parrott, who is directing him. The supporting players are Eugenia Gilbert, Anita Garvin, Eugene Paulette, Amber Normand and Bull Montana. Mabel Normand, whose latest comedy, "The Nickel Hopper," is now in the cutting room, is resting up a bit before starting work on her next offering, which has to do with "water stuff."

Stephen Roberts, Director for Educational, Ill

Stephen Roberts, director of the Educational-Mermaid comedy unit starring Al St. John, suffered an attack of appendicitis shortly after returning with the company to Los Angeles from San Francisco. Chem Beauchamp has taken over the direction of the comedy which Roberts had been working on previous to his illness.

"Back to Mother" Another He'en and Warren

"Back to Mother," the latest Helen and Warren comedy featuring Kathryn and Allan Forrest, has been started at the Fox Studio under the direction of Harry Sweet.

An abundance of varied incidents are to be seen in these extracts from "Kink Bozo," a Fox Films Van Bibber comedy

Gold and Cliff Dwellers (Fox Varieties—One Reel Each)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

"NO, Rollo, the two subjects are not correlated and they do not refer to Manhattan and its feminine gold-diggers." Each is a short travelogue and put in the same series because in the same part of these United States.

"Rocky Mountain Gold," an 800-foot reel, shows in a town such as Telluride how the gold is mined, carried to the local bank under armed guard and the bars of gold exchanged for currency. It is almost a western, but with the villains left out of the picture. For one unfamiliar with the subject it is an interesting story of a section of the country as rich in fact and fiction tales as any part of the United States. Good, well-selected shots by the camera characterize the picture.

That is also true of "The Cliff Dwellers" 845 feet of film. These are taken in the Mesa Verde Park in Colorado and show how the people lived there thousands of years ago. After many shots, showing from a distance and close-up these weird dwellings of a by-gone age, the camera man peoples them with Indians to recreate the life of that period. They cook, hunt, dance and live their lives before the camera as though it were in a B. C. age. Both are educational pictures and worthy of a place on any program.

"Rocky Mountain Gold" was released September 19, while "The Cliff Dwellers" will be released December 26.

"Felix the Cat in School Days" (Educational—One Reel)

THAT little black cat—Felix, though small in stature is truly and undisputably great in the other dimensions. He possesses all the qualifications of a matinee idol to please his enormous following. He leads such a wide and varied life, traveling all over the face of the earth and meeting all sorts and conditions of men. All these adventures of his prove vastly entertaining. In his latest encounter with the conspiring fates, he calls Mary, little girl, mistress, and is so exceedingly fond of her that he follows her to school. For a cat to come to school is horrid and Mary gets punished with double homework. A difficult question must be answered to satisfy the peeved teacher, "Where in the world is it hottest?" Felix, with characteristic gesture of generosity, volunteers to supply the fugitive answer. After covering an amazing amount of ground in an equally amazing short time, he arrives at the equator and from there he goes to the North Pole. At both places he meets with trouble and as he tells Mary later, they made it hotter for him at the North Pole than at the Equator. It ends with a closeup of Felix laughing—a suitable end for a reel packed full of the delightful pantomime of Felix.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"A Man's Size Pet" (Universal-Tuttle—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE title might imply to the uninitiated that a woman was referred to, but that is not correct, as a pet bear is the hero or villain of the piece. It is a rather heavy-handed bit of western humor. A pet bear is given some snuff and supposedly runs amuck at a party and chases everyone present through the house and the adjoining country. Ben Corbett and Pee Wee Holmes, the featured players, are two cowboys whose sense of humor is open to at least mild comment, as the practical jokes they attempt to play on each other would be ignored or sniffed at by any ten-year-old boys with even a semblance of humor in their system. A masquerade party makes it possible for one character to dress up as a bear and that justifies the masquerader being roped and dragged down the road at the end of a lariat by the playful duo in chaps. Another never failing property character in this sort of farcical rough-house is the fat girl whose amorous advances are always unwelcome to the characters, who all fall for the fair heroine. Not much can be given this particular Universal offering for originality or real laugh-provocative qualities.

It is released October 23, 1926.

"Wanted a Bride"

(Universal-Blue Bird—One Reel)

THAT ingratiating young man, Arthur Lake, is the featured player in this comedy, with Mildred June as his feminine lead. Her name is consistent if one reflects on the association of that month with roses, brides, weddings, etc. Slim Summerville directed the piece, which is scheduled for release October 18th. Arthur and his boy friend are kicked out of school for some infringement of the rules. Naturally the respective families are peeved. Arthur's father decides on the rather drastic penalty—drastic in any case and unusually so here—of insisting upon his son's marrying or being disinherited. Arthur's chum makes up as a girl and poses as the demanded bride. The father-in-law—and for the most part moving picture masculine parents are an amazingly amorous, susceptible lot when it comes to falling for a female impersonator—does the obvious and capitulates to the charms of Arthur's supposed wife.

Arthur's sister falls in love with the school-mate and her girl friend with Arthur, so the quartet all get married and live happily "ever afterward."—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Whatnots"

(Educational-Curiosities—One Reel)

CATHOLICITY is the keynote of this series of picture novelties. That this is true may be gained from the start of two German sailors with a barrel which they are to roll around the world sleeping in it (barrel not world) each night. Then come microscopic pictures of the crystals that result from so commonplace a thing as the hardening of a piece of fat; a plant that subsists on insects; how alcohol evaporates and leaves nothing whatsoever that is tangible or visual; a zebra and its young, also a hippo and baby hippo, an eclipse of the sun, taking two hours to photograph, and two minutes to show on the screen. Scenes in Germany's picturesque Spreewald complete the list of truly curious views making up the reel.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Rare Bits"

(Educational—One Reel)

INTERESTING little news pictures offering great contrast and variety are culled from all different parts of this globe of ours for these Curiosities series of Walter Futter. The eye does not get a chance to tire of any one subject because of the rapid succession of themes arrayed for our amusement. There are ten subjects recorded here. The most interesting of all, we believe, are the scenes of a ferry which never touches the water; a Texas cat which has mothered several broods of chickens; the most sensitive plant in the world, whose branches and leaves wilt as soon as they are touched; roosters of old Japan with tails twelve feet in length and shots of strange undersea fish and growth. There is enough "curiosity" lurking in the depths of these scenes and they form food for thought besides possessing entertainment and educational values.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"A Jungle Round-Up"

(Third Ufa Short Subject Shown)

AN interesting series of German pictures is being shown in this country through M.-G.-M. In New York the theatre is the Capitol, whose destinies Major Edward Bowes presides over. The first was an undersea picture, as was the second, featuring a fight to the death between an octopus and a shark. The third of the series gets back to land. It is in many ways the most effective of the three. It deals with the cowboys of the pampas, the vaqueros of South America, hunting crocodiles. It is in this manner that the beasts are secured for zoos throughout the world and the skins for the various uses to which they are put.

Once the river is located where the crocodiles are to be found, the vaquero lassoes the beast and drags him to the river-bank, where he is tied and placed in a bag. It is an amazing sight to see the skill with which the hunters place the noose around the shoulders of the game and bring them ashore. In the picture at the Capitol one river was truly alive with the animals, while above, on tree tops, hovered flocks of carrion crows waiting for a possible meal from the dead. The picture is taken with the same thorough care that has characterized the other nature studies of the German company.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Jane's Troubles"

(Universal-Sterns Bros.—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THREE suitors for the hand of the fascinating but elusive Jane (Wanda Wiley); one favored by father, one by mother, and the third disapproved of by both parents but, much more important, the only one of the trinity who has scored with Jane. Start with that premise and imagine how each of the first two suitors is forced on daughter, who is always trying to side-step them and be with the favored one, and you have some idea of the farce's possibilities. A prize fight to determine which one shall get the girl inevitably results in everyone figuring in the combat at some stage of the proceedings. Jane and Goerge finally extricate themselves from the situation by eloping, leaving the two losers to decide quite logically and sensibly that they are really better off. Judging by the kind of life which the parents live there is something in their philosophy. Personally I would hesitate very much before getting into a family that is quite as strenuous as the Thrashers are. The future promises anything but repose and quiet for the eloping George. But, then, all bridegrooms think they can beat that game as long as the prized girl is won.

"Two Lip Time"

(Educational-Felix Cartoon—One Reel)

TO the land of windmills and wooden shoes Pat Sullivan takes his leading man or star, Felix the Cat, and the supporting company. His excuse for boarding the ship is his pursuit of a mouse going up the cable. Seasickness minimizes Felix's interest in the mouse game. Once in Holland an attractive girl catches the eye of the amorous cat. To see is to act. Jealous lover and equally inhospitable father are vanquished in turn. A sprinkling can filled with Holland gin instead of the conventional water does all sorts of things to impressionable tulips and other flora and fauna in the neighborhood. The inevitable chase finds Felix perched on a windmill. He converts this into an electric fan and with this power blows away all opposition on the part of his pursuing enemies. The piece is characterized by effective Holland settings and maintains the Educational-Pat Sullivan standard, and that is high praise.—PAUL THOMPSON.

The Yellow Back

Horse Cowardice—Not Money—Involved

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

FRED HUMES afraid of horses; can you imagine such a thing? Yet that is the basic theme of his latest starring vehicle in the Universal-Blue Streak Western series. Love for a namesake of mine, named Lotus Thompson, is what causes him to lose this fear and ride like the dare-devil centaur that he is and always has been up to the birth of this picture. Not such a bad idea at that; at least a bit out of the beaten path. It is amusing watching the cowboy actor trying to be afraid of horses until the end of the picture. Incidentally, the phrase adds a new one to our vocabulary; "yellow-back," in cowboy parlance, one who is afraid of horses and as such generally despised by the hard-riding boys with the quirt or lariat.

His regeneration comes about in this wise. Humes has been fired from one ranch by the villain because of this weakness. En route to get another job he rescues from a pond where her mount has catapulted her blond Lotus. She introduces him to her father, poor old Buck Connors, about to lose his ranch because he is presumably a bad business manager. His difficulties are added to by Claude Payton who wants the girl with the memory-destroying name for wife and incidentally her father's ranch to boot. He is thwarted because Fred, the valiant now through love, rides a race on which the family plate is wagered—among other things—and wins.

Plausible? No, but entertaining? yes. And that would seem to be enough to ask.

The Cast: Fred Humes (starred), Lotus Thompson, Claude Payton and Buck Connors. Directed by Del Andrews from his own story.

THEME: Love conquers fear—in this case not of a woman but horses.

with a steer and the final horse race.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Same and the fact it is a comedy western.

PRODUCTION HIGH-LIGHTS: Humes wrestling

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Produced and Distributed by Universal.

Length, 4,726 feet. Released October 3, 1926.

The feminine athlete is seen to good advantage as is plain from these stills of a current Paramount production, "The Campus Flirt"

The Ice Flood

Wherein Men Are—and Ice Is Ice

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

FOR a setting a lumber camp in the Northwest. The usual characters, including the superintendent's daughter, in this case Viola Dana, and the camp bully. Into this setting place the lumber king's son, Kenneth Harlan, who also happens to be an Oxford graduate. Mix these ingredients with the spring thaw and the release of tons and tons of ice on the rivers and you have the latest Universal-Jewel melodrama. And it is good melodrama, too, that will thrill and hold you. Director George B. Seitz has done a good piece of work with the story by Johnstone McCulley, adapted by James O. Spearing. Seitz is ably aided by a most excellent cast that includes not only the two above-mentioned featured players, but also Frank Hagney, DeWitt Jennings and James Gordon.

To straighten out affairs in his various lumber camps in disorder because of bootleggers and the inevitable turbulence their product causes, young DeQuincy (Harlan) is sent by his father (King) to the property incognito, incidentally father and son making a ten-thousand-dollar wager on the outcome. Harlan, a boxing champion at Oxford, licks all the bullies in the various camps, rescues Viola Dana from a launch threatened by destruction by the released ice floe, wins his bet, and the girl, and gets a specialist from Portland to straighten out the crippled boy's foot. They certainly do graduate some fighters from that English university. Too bad some of them do not go into the game professionally.

The Cast: Kenneth Harlan and Viola Dana (featured), Frank Hagney, Fred Kogler, DeWitt Jennings, Kitty Barlow and James Gordon. Director, George B. Seitz.

THEME: Boss's son "cleans up" lumber camps with ice flood background.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Torrent scenes. Clean-cut story of American youth.

PRODUCTION HIGH-LIGHTS: Spring thaw on river; Harlan's fight with Hagney.

DRAWING POWER: Should be excellent.

*Produced and distributed by Universal Pictures
Length, 5,747 feet. Released January 23, 1927.*

Five episodes from "The Waning Sex," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy drama

The Campus Flirt

Bebe Daniels Has a Lively Comedy

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE college story is surely having its innings on the screen. While the track stuff is a little out of season—what with football upon us, still this one serves as a novelty, if for no other reason than its star appears in running pants. The idea behind it is the typical collegiate pattern. It doesn't make any difference whether "Red" Grange used it for "One Minute to Play" or whether it appeared in "Brown of Harvard." The main point is it serves in dishing up a most pleasant hour of celluloid capers.

The star—who is certainly vivacious enough—plays one of those snobs whose dad prefers she earn a diploma instead of a debut. So upon matriculating at dear old Colton she high hats everybody and everything until she learns a lesson in humility—and another one is democracy. And she absorbs the collegiate manner so thoroughly that upon appearing on the cinder-track she speeds to victory. It is a picture which unfolds some amusing complications—particularly when Bebe takes her lessons in democracy—and again there are several moments when it invites tedium. It may be of interest to many to know that the fastest human, Charlie Paddock, appears in the opus—and he does his specialty.

The Cast: Bebe Daniels, James Hall, Charles Paddock, El Brendel, Joan Standing, Gilbert Roland, Irma Kornelia, Jocelyn Lee. Director, Clarence Badger.

THEME: Revolves around haughty, aristocratic girl who is taken down a peg in deportment when she goes to college.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The relay race. The lessons in democracy. The sorority episode. The gags and incident. The breezy work by star and good support by cast. The subtitles.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The title should provoke interest. Tie up with schools and colleges. Get out the collegiates and students from your local colleges and schools. Play up Bebe Daniels and Charlie Paddock.

DRAWING POWER: O. K. for first run or any other type of house

Produced and distributed by Famous Players. Length, six reels. Released September, 1926.

The Waning Sex

Pleasant and Diverting

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A BRITTLE, but enjoyable light comedy is dished up in "The Waning Sex"—which again places Norma Shearer in the role of a business woman—a role in which she can extract the utmost in satire and sparkle. Let it be said that the star's personality is substantial enough to carry this inconsequential piece through with flying colors—aided and abetted by Conrad Nagel—and some highly appropriate subtitles.

The idea is the age-old battle of the sexes—done to the tune of exaggeration. Which is the only way to handle it without getting in a lot of hot water. The heroine is determined to get on in the world—while her boy friend is determined to have his way—that woman's place is in the home. And so it goes—revealing in a mild manner first woman's superiority, then man's. The upshot of it all is the two principals put on a wager. If the woman wins two out of three contests the man will have to find a new sweetheart. If he wins—well, she must march up to the altar with him.

The pantomime—the easy gags—and the subtitles keep it going. Everybody seemingly has a good time in the picture—especially George Arthur, who does a "nanece" without making the type vulgar. It is neatly mounted—the sets are in good taste—and the direction is on an even key.

The Cast: Norma Shearer, Conrad Nagel, George K. Arthur, Mary McAllister, Charles McHugh, Martha Mattox, Tiny Ward. Director, Robert Z. Leonard.

THEME: Comedy satire upon the battle of the sexes—with heroine determined to enter business while the hero argues her place is in the home.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The easy acting by star and Mr. Nagel. The pleasant comedy and romantic scenes. The contests.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up the conflict of the sexes—which can be put over with plenty of argument. U-throwaways—asking which is the waning sex.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for first runs and neighborhood houses.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn. Length, six reels. Released September, 1926.

Children of Fate

Sympathetic Story of Human Hearts, Well Told

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

THERE have been numerous presentations of the Jewish Gentile theme cast in a broad comedy vein, but in "Children of Fate," Ivan Abramson has written and directed a picture stressing the human values of the situation, though humor is not lacking. The outstanding thing about the picture is its quiet sincerity. The players are convincing types, the settings are thoroughly realistic, and the situations, which might easily have become melodramatic, have been made believable through the authentic detail and atmosphere in which they are placed.

While "Children of Fate" is primarily a story of Jewish life in America, there is no reason why it should not appeal to audiences of all races and creeds alike, since it deals with problems and emotions common to all.

The picture is absolutely clean, containing nothing suggestive, brutal or objectionable in any way. Photography and general production O.K. The story deals with the daughter of a rabbi who falls in love with a young violinist. Her father, the rabbi, opposes the match because he is of another creed, and wishes her to marry a wealthy member of his congregation. A situation arises which leads the rabbi to believe that she has eloped with the violinist, and he orders her from the house, but happiness is restored all around when the wealthy woman whom the violinist believes is his mother reveals the fact that he is Jewish, having been adopted.

The Cast: Richard Bennett, Betty Hilburn, Joseph Shoengold, Bessie Thomashefsky, Willis Claire, Charlotte Walker, Charles Edwards. Written and directed by Ivan Abramson.

THEME: Conflict between love and religion when rabbi's daughter loves supposedly Gentile youth.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Fine atmosphere and detail. Performances by Joseph Shoengold and Bessie Thomashefsky, as well as others.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up title and human interest angle of story.

DRAWING POWER: Tremendous in Jewish neighborhoods, and should be satisfactory in others as well.

Produced by Abgol Film Productions.. Length, 6,605 feet. Released October 15, 1926.

The Lily

Nance O'Neill's Greatest Hit On the Screen

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

ONE of the first of the many stage successes secured by William Fox for moving picture translation or transferral was "The Lily." When David Belasco produced his adaptation of this play from the French of Pierre Wolfe and Gaston Leroux it provided Nance O'Neill with probably the greatest success of her long and meritorious career. Inasmuch as the play's success was so largely dependent on the dialogue and the characterization of the leading feminine character and, to a lesser degree, the other personalities, it was hard in advance to see how this particular type of play could be successfully made into a screen drama. Seeing the picture with Belle Bennett in Miss O'Neill's role to a great extent justified these forebodings on the part of the reviewer.

To me it moved slowly and unconvincingly. It did not hold me as it should. Not that it was not well cast, for it was, with Miss Bennett, Ian Keith, Reata Hoyt, John St. Polis and others of equal calibre. It seemed artificial and stilted (possibly it did in the long ago when I saw the dramatic version, if so I have forgotten but I do not think it did). And then too at that time it had the unquestioned great dramatic and emotional acting of the star as an indispensable asset. The settings are luxurious and massive as befits the station in society occupied by the characters.

The Cast: Belle Bennett and Ian Keith (both featured), Reata Hoyt, Barry Norton, John St. Polis, Richard Tucker, Gertrude Short, James Marcus, Thomas Ricketts, Vera Lewis, Betty Francisco, Rosa Rudami and Lydia Teamans Titus. Directed by Victor Schertzinger. Scenarist, Eve Unsell.

THEME: Father's selfishness in sacrificing daughters' happiness for own ends.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Difficult to designate.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The great Belasco-Nance O'Neill stage success.

DRAWING POWER: Fairly good.

Produced and distributed by Fox Films Corp. Length, 6,268 feet. Released October 3, 1926.

Comedy highlights in the Pathe feature comedy offering "Atta Boy"

Fools of Fashion

Proving That the "Woman Pays and Pays"

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE point of this George Randolph Chester story, originally called "The Other Woman" before Sarah Y. Mason made a scenario out of it, is that if you are a woman and your husband's income is inadequate for the fine clothes your feminine soul craves you must have a "boy friend" with a bank-roll on the side to do the buying or charging. His age does not matter; it can be elastic; in this instance he is a senile bounder named William Norris and played by Albert Roccardi in the most approved Broadway, Fifth and Park avenue manner. Marceline Day, a charming bride with a handsome Theodore von Eltz for husband, is taught the system by her friend, Mae Busch, wife of simple and trusting Robert Elder, Theodore's business associate and social friend.

Anyway, Mae shows Marceline how she personally does it with the assistance of dear old satyr Norris. Marceline even attempts to add to her income by posing for lingerie or stocking ads and then teas with the woman-hunter. By one of those theatrical coincidences both husbands call on the countess while this is all going on and murder is out. Mae Busch commits a moving-picture suicide and the first-year honeymooners have a reconciliation. It is a not particularly weighty social document but is well acted and staged. The best things in it are the morning-bath episodes (behind the usual shower all-concealing rubber curtain) of the Young family.

The Cast: Mae Busch, Marceline Day, Theodore von Eltz, Robert Ober, Hedda Hopper, Ross Dione, James Mack and Albert Roccardi. Directed by James C. McKay. Art Director, Edwin B. Willis.

THEME: Cheating for frocks. EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Point moral of story; virtue the great asset.

PRODUCTION HIGH-LIGHTS: Marceline's bath. DRAWING POWER: Good. Acting of entire cast.

Produced and Distributed by Tiffany Productions, Inc.

Length, 6,484 feet. Released October 1, 1926.

Interesting sequences from the Abbot Films' presentation, "Children of Fate"

Atta Boy

Pathe Shows How Reporters Are Made

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

PLAYS on the legitimate stage or on the screen which deal with newspaper offices and the making of star reporters out of copy-boy material never should be entrusted to ex-newspaper men for reviewing. We are apt to be a bit too captious. For some reason or other the genus "Newspaper man" defies the ninety and nine producers and that applies, as I have said above, to both branches of the entertainment game. "Atta Boy" is no exception even though a lot of time, thought, trouble and expense obviously have gone into the making of this comedy.

An over-grown copy boy on a newspaper, with the ambition that every similarly situated copy-boy unquestionably possesses of becoming a reporter, Monte is hoaxed by the smart-Alecky star scrivener into the belief that he has been promoted to the desired state. He goes in his simplicity and guilelessness to interview a man whose child has been stolen and who has sworn vengeance.

To tell the story every possible comedy situation is devised. It is really a quite amusing melange or pot-pourri of melodrama, comedy, fashion show, etc.

THEME: Copy-boy made reporter.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Excellence of names in cast. Amusing qualities.

PRODUCTION HIGH-LIGHTS: Banks' comedy scene in club; anti-climax of baby not black but colored.

DRAWING POWER: Should be good.

Produced by Monte Banks Enterprises (A. MacArthur).

Distributed by Pathe.

Albany

ON account of having trained a year ago at White Sulphur Springs on Saratoga Lake, and for a week or two this year at Speculator, an Adirondack village, north of this city, Gene Tunney, the new heavyweight world champion, is well known to many exhibitors in this part of the State. This was particularly true with Isaiah Perkins, owner of the motion picture theatre at Speculator, who became a warm friend of Tunney when the latter was training in his village.

One of the old-time theatres in Schenectady, N.Y., the Crescent, which has been run during the past three years by Betty Feuer, is now about to give way to the demands of business. Miss Feuer hopes to continue in the business, but will probably be located in the northern part of New Jersey, or some city in close proximity to New York.

Nearly seventy film salesmen and managers from along Albany's Film Row attended the get-together dinner held in this city last week, at Farnham's Hotel. During the evening, there were short talks by Alec Herman, president of the Film Board of Trade; Howard Morgan, H. C. Bissell, Jack Krause, Isidor Schmertz, C. R. Halligan, and others. The presentation of a wrist watch to Jack Krause was made by Ted Hayes, local manager for Pathe. It is now planned to hold similar dinners from time to time during the winter in an effort to bring about the cleanest possible methods of salesmanship in this territory.

Ralph Bishop, who was succeeded last week by Alec Herman, as manager of the Pro-Dis-Co exchange here, left for Cleveland in a dismantled Cadillac car, and with a one-man tow consisting of a Ford in the back. Friends of Mr.

Bishop are now wondering if he has reached Cleveland.

Howard Morgan, manager of the Educational exchange here, has the distinction of being the only manager along Film Row who hasn't a lot of salesmen. Mr. Morgan covers the entire territory himself and is generally on the road from Monday until Saturday.

Albany's film salesmen declare that Charles Marshall, an exhibitor at Ausable Forks, is the hardest man in the State to locate. Mr. Marshall also deals in cars and is in New York City nearly every week.

O. R. Reiffel, former manager of the Fox exchange in this city, is once more back in Albany territory, but this time as a salesman for the Paramount exchange.

George Wright, one time owner of the Clinton Square Theatre in Albany, and later connected with the Universal exchange here, escaped death in the hurricane that swept over Florida resorts a couple of weeks ago. Friends of Mr. Wright are anxiously awaiting some word from him. He has been located in Miami for the past year, having a large boat on which he took out fishing parties.

William Van Dyke, of the Bijou and Vaudette, of Kaukauna, was in the city recently arranging bookings.

New York and New Jersey

THE Annual Entertainment and Dance of the combined moving picture companies in New York, sponsored by the Motion Picture Athletic Association, will be held at Mecca Temple on Saturday evening, November 27th.

These columns reported last week that the foundation work for Universal's new 3,500-seat theatre project on New Utrecht Avenue in the Boro Park section of Brooklyn was completed and the house was well under way. This week comes a report from a nearby resident of Boro Park that a high board fence has been erected around the entire site and that all building operations have apparently ceased, at least for the present time.

In connection with the above it might be stated that a Brooklyn builder by name of Schwartz has under construction and well-nigh completed a 2,000-seat house within three blocks of the Universal Theatre Corporation's proposed structure. In addition to the foregoing, Loew's Boro Hall Theatre on New Utrecht Avenue is but six blocks away from the incomplete Schwartz house.

Although the Boro Park section of Brooklyn is thickly populated and growing at a fast rate, perhaps after all there is more than just talk in all the conversation one hears about oversteering in the several boroughs.

Canarsie, long the butt for small time vaudeville and other jokesters as being the edge of the world and the one place not to go, is at last coming into its own; and it is possible that these same wisecrackers, in their efforts to escape the heat and high rents of Manhattan, have made Canarsie's first theatre a reality of the near future. Plans for a 1,800-seat house have been filed by Charles H. Krieger, representing Samuel Friedman, head of the holding company which has taken title to the tract at Rockaway Avenue and Smith Lane. The site is but a short distance from the Canarsie terminal of the B. M. T. According to Krieger, negotiations for a lease are pending between the holder and one of the large producer-distributors of our industry.

Floyd Vogt, Pathe South Jersey salesman, after returning from a check up of that portion of the State, reports a thriving situation and that future prospects are particularly bright.

Dave and Charles Esterman, two exhibitors, who hail from the State of Connecticut, recently secured title to the theatre properties known as the Garden, Springfield Gardens, and the St. Albans, St. Albans, Long Island. Con Nolan is manager of the Garden, while Charles Litt is in charge of the St. Albans house. The recent real estate boom on the Island, which has included these towns, augurs well for the new owners.

Coleman Brothers, Abe and Sol, who were the former owners of the above-mentioned theatres, are now engaged in building a 2,000-seat theatre at Glen Cove, L.I.

Ben Antler, New Jersey exhibitor who now has three houses to his credit, was over this week attending to bookings and other matters pertaining to his recently acquired houses. Mr. Antler will make a number of improvements to both the Strand at Clifton, and the Warren Square, at Newark. This work will not interfere with the daily operation of either theatre. Antler also operates the Park at East Rutherford.

Moe Goldman, present owner of the Chatham Square Theatre, 5 Chatham Square, New York City, and former operator of the Arch Theatre, Bronx, will reopen the Chatham Square house this coming Sunday.

Now that the football season is getting under way, all the film boys who can claim the acquaintance of Samuel Struve, operator of the Arcade Theatre, Princeton, are more than ever cordial to the college town exhibitor. The reason for this is that Mr. Struve has for several years generously undertaken to procure the much sought after tickets for important games.

Although extremely busy as a result of the heavyweight championship changing hands, Milt Kro-nacher of Pathe stopped long enough from fixing up contracts, to inform us that these columns carried an error in the last issue. It has to do with the location of William Salkin's new Eagle Theatre and that house is situated at 103d Street and 3d Avenue instead of 132nd Street, New York City.

At the same time, we were taken aside by Eddie Carroll, who made mention of a certain deal he made in an unguarded moment with Milt for a bungalow clock. Eddie says the point is, that while Milton is a very fast worker (his sales record proves this statement), the clock won't work at all.

Stanley Sobelson, New Jersey exhibitor, has concluded the deal whereby he and his associates acquire a theatre site in Elizabeth where they will erect an 1,800-seat house. Messrs. Unger and Thompson are his partners in the project. The location of the new house will be on Elizabeth Avenue, the site of the old Avenue Theatre. On the completion of this new house, Elizabeth will have ten theatres. The Fabian-Stanley organization own most of them.

There is a rumor around to the effect that certain theatre operators are planning a new house for Woodbridge, N.J.

If the truth were known, there are not many who can say today that they picked the winner of the recent heavyweight championship fight at Philadelphia. But this writer knows of one and his name is Maurice Ross of Lakewood. If Maurice succeeded in getting some of his bets covered he must have cleaned up, but up until the time this writer left him last week Tuesday, while several other exhibitors were doing considerable shouting about Mr. Dempsey, they failed to back their sentiments with anything else but words.

Al Sautelle, Pathe non-theatrical man, has left his suburban quarters at Montclair, N.J., and outside of office hours can be located on the corner of 42nd Street and Broadway during the winter months.

M. Frey, former manager of the A. H. Schwartz Rialto Theatre, is now in charge of the house at College Point, L.I.

Rosensweig and Katz' Leader Theatre, under construction on Coney Island Avenue, Brooklyn, is fast nearing completion and is expected to soon be ready for its opening. The Leader seats approximately 2,000.

Blinderman and Steiner's new theatre, a 2,000-seat project at Woodhaven, is also well under way, according to report.

Community Hall, a new 500-seat house at Seacacus, N.J., opened last week under the management of William Marz.

The Mayfair Theatre, now being completed at Avenue U and Coney Island Avenue, Brooklyn, as the latest addition to the A. H. Schwartz circuit, will be opened with appropriate ceremonies Monday evening, October 11th. The playhouse, with a capacity of 2,000, will be devoted to vaudeville and first-run photoplays, thus providing a new center of amusement to the communities of Sheepshead Bay, Flatbush, Gravesend, Midwood and Coney Island.

With the opening of the Mayfair Theatre, the Schwartz circuit will consist of twelve houses in operation. Of eight more under construction, one will open shortly at Kings Highway and Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn while other new houses will also be opened in Flushing and Freeport.

Commenting on his latest theatre project, the largest yet to be erected for the A. H. Schwartz circuit in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn, Mr. Schwartz said: "It is my object to give the people of Flatbush a theatre of which they will be proud; a theatre, modern in every detail, possessing every comfort and convenience, and devoted to the finest in entertainment on stage and screen. I can do no more toward showing my appreciation for their support than to provide a playhouse, if not the best, then at least the equal of any in the country."

Detroit

THE Seventh Annual Convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan has been postponed until October 19th and 20th. The postponement was necessary owing to the time which was spent during the operators' strike.

The Academie Theatre, Detroit, was sold at public auction Tuesday, to the Federal Bond and Mortgage Co. for $19,000.

Harry Abramson, who had managed a good many theatres in Detroit, died last week from double rupture and appendicitis.

Paul Schlossman of Muskegon recently motored to Detroit in his new Packard.

The Theatorium Theatre on

Baker Street was recently robbed of $130, the night's receipts. John M. Bowie, the cashier, was held up by two men as he was about to leave for his home.

The Grande Theatre has installed an eight-piece orchestra, and has given the house a new coat of paint and decorations. Glen Pierce is the manager. He conducts a singing night once each week, at which time slides of the latest songs are thrown on the screen, and everybody in the house tries out their voices.

Jake Schrieber of the Blackstone Theatre has just returned from President Coolidge's farm, where Mr. Schrieber had met the President. Mr. Schrieber, who had taken his little cub bear with him, stated that while he was talking to President Coolidge the bear had escaped and had jumped into the President's car. However, the bear was captured again and Mr. Schrieber had brought him back again to Detroit, where he will be donated to the Detroit Zoo at Belle Isle.

Jess Fishman, general manager of the Standard Film Co., was a visitor at the Detroit exchange for several days.

Al Boasberg, former Detroit Exploiteer for Paramount, and who now is with F. B. O. in New York, was married last Sunday to Miss Rosadel Staderker of Chicago. The wedding had taken place at the Chicago Beach Hotel, Chicago.

Al W. Gillis, manager of the Gladmer Theatre in Lansing, Mich., has been transferred to the Powers Theatre at Grand Rapids.

The Senate Theatre in Detroit is about completed, and Arthur Bacher has stated that the new house will open on September 27th.

W. A. Kent, salesman for Warner Bros., is a proud father these days, as a bouncing baby boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. Kent last week.

H. R. Clark, assistant General Salesmanager of Producers Distributing Corporation, has paid the Detroit branch a short visit.

Ora DeGuibert, of the Colonial Theatre at Jackson, paid the exchanges a visit this week.

ED COLLINS, Galveston representative for Publix Theatre Corporation, was in Houston last week visiting with Harry Van Denmark, local Publix manager.

Col. A. L. Fardwell, general manager for the Interstate Amusement Company, passed through Houston several days ago, enroute to Birmingham, Ala., where his company is opening a new theatre.

The Schulmans, Houston and New Orleans theatre owners, have purchased the three Bryan, Texas, theatre houses. The deal was consummated several days ago, according to Harry Schulman, manager of the Houston Strand Theatre. The consideration was $35,000.

The Bryan theatres are the Queen, Dixie and Palace. They were purchased outright from William R. Fairman, Bryan theatre man, who operated them for the past ten years.

Morris Schulman has moved his family from Houston to Bryan and will take over the active management of the theatres.

Jesse Warden has been named manager of the Royal Theatre, Houston, succeeding R. L. Carter, who has returned to the theatre supply business. Mr. Warden was formerly connected with the William Lytle Theatre in San Antonio.

Theatre managers have reported better business since the bay shore summer resorts have closed for the season.

The foundation for the new Loew Theatre, Houston, is well under construction. The theatre will be located on the north corner of the same block with new Publix Theatre, which is two-thirds completed.

In one of the stormiest elections ever before held in the local office, Oscar A. Morgan, branch manager for Pathe Exchange, Inc., was elected president of the Dallas Film Board of Trade while he underwent a minor operation in a local hospital, Monday.

Harmony prevailed until regular business was finished. Joe Luckett, long-time film exchange manager, now with United Artists, was thought to be the logical selection. There was some talk along the Row of LeRoy Bickell, manager for M.-G.-M. While Morgan underwent the knife at a local sanitarium his name was put before the members who, after failing to come to a decision on other candidates, elected Morgan almost unanimously.

Directors who were elected at the meeting are: Jack Adams, Home State Film Co., Joe E. Luckett, United Artists, P. K. Johnston, Fox, R. C. McIlheran, Universal, Harry T. Peebles, Liberty-Specialty Film Distributing Corporation, and Don C. Douglas, secretary.

What was perhaps, one of the largest openings ever heralded a theatre in West Texas was given Ross Dixon's new Palace in Colorado, Texas, last Tuesday night. Dixon has one of the most pretentious playhouses in the states in a town the size of Colorado.

Thoroughly modern and equipped, upholstered seats, Da-Lite screen, Blizzard Cooling and Ventilating system with an atmospheric finish, the Palace is truly "The Pride of West Texas," as Dixon puts it.

With the unverified report that Pathe has concluded to follow the trend of the distributing film trade through acquiring its own houses, the walls of the new Pathe Exchange Building on Film Row, here, are being poured this week. Contractors announced that the work thus far advanced would enable them to complete the fireproof edifice on schedule time if weather permitted.

The building is of the latest Spanish architectural design, two-story and of reinforced concrete structure. Elaborate offices will be separated from the film and pre-viewing rooms by a mammoth fire wall with automatically controlled doors.

For the convenience of the exhibitors a special office with telephone, stationery and desks and free stenographer will be furnished. The building is expected to be completed by November 15.

L. E. Brewer, who has the Hamly and Victory theatres at Pauls Valley, is planning a third theatre for that city. The new theatre will show western pictures and will operate for ten cents. We understand that he does not renew his lease on the Hamly, but will redecorate the Victory and will show first-class pictures. The Victory will be run at 10 and 20 cents regularly, with a top price of 25 cents for specials.

The new H & S Theatre opened at Chandler September 16th, to a capacity house. The theatre seats 600 and has a large, spacious balcony, and a stage built to accommodate any kind of road show. One of the unusual features of the new theatre is the "cry room"—a large sound-proof room with a plate glass front, to which mothers may take their children when they start to cry, and still witness the picture. Hoover and Stettmund, the managers, also operate the Odeon Theatre at Chandler.

It is reported that Walling and Murphree, who have the theatres at Bristow, and until recently owned two theatres at Cushing, are putting in a theatre at Sand Springs. The new theatre will be in the location of a former theatre there, and will make the third house for Sand Springs.

H. L. Ritter was in town last week buying equipment and booking pictures for the theatre he is putting in at Freedom, Okla.

Kommie Weinberger, champion Dallas salesman, is now selling for the Specialty-Liberty Exchange here.

As the result of recent purchase of the Yale Theatre Supply and the Southern Equipment Co. by the National Supply Company, the Yale stock is being moved into the Southern location.

Kansas City

FOLLOWING the merger of the Cole Theatre Supply Company of Kansas City and the Yale Theatre Supply Company, which were purchased by the National Theatre Supply Company, C. D. Cole will remain in Kansas City in charge of the local store, while C. D. Struble has departed for Chicago, where he will be secretary of the new concern.

Kenton Franklin, who has been in charge of exploitation for the Newman and Royal theatres, Paramount houses of Kansas City, has been made advertising manager at the Newman, while William Jacobs, who has been in charge of advertising at both houses, will direct the advertising at the Royal, the changes coming as a result of the policy of long run attractions at the Royal.

There are many alleged humorous adjectives in the English language, but not enough to serve as proper equipment for the "free-for-all" baseball game which was scheduled for Saturday between a team of Kansas City film exchanges and exhibitors. Art Levy of Associated Exhibitors, who gave birth to the idea, will be captain and surgeon of the exchange team while Jack Langan of the the game being scheduled for old Film Inn will head the exhibitors, American Association Park at 2 o'clock.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City territory this week were: Mark T. Wilson, People's Theatre, Chanute, Kans.; Mrs. C. A. Whitney, Ottawa, Kans.; G. L. Rugg, Atchison, Kans.; S. E. Wilhoit, Springfield, Mo.; Walter Wallace, Orpheum, Leavenworth, Kans.

Milton H. Feld, former managing director of the Newman and Royal theatres, Kansas City, but now with Publix, was in Kansas City this week making arrangements for the installation of Publix's new entertainment plan at the Newman.

Manuel Shure has been appointed as house manager of the Royal Theatre, Kansas City. It will be Mr. Shure's first venture into the film game.

The Neely Theatre, Dighton, Kans., has been opened by C. R. Neely. R. C. Buxton has disposed of his interests in the Strand Theatre, McCracken, Kans. George E. Planck has resigned as manager of Universal's Sedalia Theatre to accept a position in the publicity department of Publix theatres.

From exchange representative to exhibitor, then back over the fence again goes W. P. Bernfield, Kansas City veteran who has been named as branch manager of Tiffany Films in Kansas City.

F. Wynne-Jones, president of U.F.A., of Germany, was a Kansas City visitor, as were John C. Flinn, vice-president and general manager of P.D.C., and Hayen Duke, assistant secretary.

Bert Edwards and "Rube" Melcher have joined the sales force of Warner Bros. branch.

The Fox exchange announces that its salesmen have reached their quota in the second week of their nine-week sales drive.

A special squad of home office salesmen of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is due to report at the Kansas City exchange this week.

Ed O'Neil, Educational salesman, has had a big week, according to "Red" Jones, branch manager.

Harry Silverman, Independent Film Corp., salesman, disposed of the old Ford last week and now is trying out a gear-shift car for the first time.

Sidney Kent, general sales manager for Paramount, was a Kansas City visitor.

H. L. Gray, for more than thirty years employed as property man in various Kansas City theatres, died Sunday. He was 65 years old.

Baltimore

AN operation for appendicitis was performed on Rodney Collier, assistant manager Rialto Theatre, Washington, D.C., recently.

LeRoy Sherman, manager of the Savoy Theatre, Washington, D.C., and Miss Mildred A. Crandell, eldest daughter of Harry M. Crandell, of that city, were married recently and are now on their honeymoon to Europe.

T. C. Cunningham, formerly manager of United Artists' Exchange, Washington, D.C., has resigned and been succeeded by Arthur M. Wineberger.

The Palace and Princess theatres, of Maryville, Tenn., have been purchased by the Crescent Amusement Company, Nashville, Tenn., of which Tony Snidekum is president. The playhouse will be entirely overhauled and remodelled and reopened to the public.

A theatre building is to be constructed at Memphis, Tenn., by Anselmo Barrasso, to cost approximately $25,000. It will measure 120 by 65 feet and be located at Jackson Avenue and Decatur Street. The design was drawn by Hanker and Cairns, architects.

Cleveland

SEVERAL years' talk about an outdoor theatre for Cleveland, has at last crystallized into something definite. W. R. Hopkins, City Manager, just back from New York, announces that plans for the theatre are being drawn by R. H. Burnside, stage manager of the New York Hippodrome and Peter Clark, architect of that theatre. The location selected is in the Shakespeare Garden at Rockefeller Park. Work will be started the first of the year so that the theatre will be available for summer opera next summer. $100,000 is available for the project.

Charles L. Casanave, head of the Associated Theatres of Ohio, whose main object is collective theatre booking, is now permanently established in offices of his own at 203 Film Exchange Bldg. Although Casanave has been in town only a little over a month, his organization has taken root, and is rapidly spreading. He has lined up about twenty-two houses at this time, and others are preparing to join him in his efforts to protect the individual theatre owner's investment through collective theatre buying, collective equipment buying, and collective exploitation.

The Jacob Baker Motion Picture Studio property at Winterhaven, Florida, was not affected by the storm which wreaked so much damage in that state last week. Jacob Baker, who was in Cleveland at the time conducting his Cleveland office, states that luck was with him this time and that the storm did not come as far north as Winterhaven. Baker recently suffered a $75,000 loss in his Cleveland studio at Prospect Avenue and East 22nd Street, when he lost his entire equipment by fire due to crossed wires.

Paul Gusdanovic's renewed Regent Theatre at Buckeye Road and East 117th Street has sent out 1,800 invitations for the formal opening of the house on Friday of this week. Some time ago Gusdanovic bought the Regent theatre which had 800 seats. He bought the property just back of the theatre and built on it, increasing the seating capacity to 1,800. All summer the work of building and alteration has gone on without the house being closed a single day. A temporary wall was built separating the old from the new part so that the performances could go on without interruption. Now the new part, erected at the cost of approximately $75,000, is finished. For a few days the performances will be discontinued so that the two sections may be thrown into one. Everything about the Regent, as it now stands, excepting only the four walls, is new. A complete stage has been built to take care of the vaudeville, which will be a part of the policy starting Friday. Vaudeville, however, will not be shown during the week, but will be confined to Sunday. On this day admission price will be 35c. Other times, with a straight picture policy, admission price will be 25c. In addition to entire new equipment, Gusdanovic has provided the theatre with a seven-piece orchestra. Matinees are presented Sundays and holidays only. During the week evening performances only are offered. The opening of the Regent on Friday is entirely invitational. It will open to the general public the following Saturday.

Billy Exton, heavyweight manager of E. Mandelbaum's Temple Theatre, Toledo, was visiting around the local Film Exchanges last week, finishing up the details of his fall bookings.

E. Mandelbaum, owner of the Temple Theatre, Toledo, was conspicuous along the Rialto last week. Mandelbaum spent the week in New York.

Fred Desberg, general manager of Loew's Ohio Theatres, and Mrs. Desberg landed in New York last Tuesday after a summer abroad. Desberg remained in New York the rest of the week to transact some business.

Not many local exhibitors answered the roll call at the Dempsey-Tunney fight last Thursday in Philadelphia. Those who are known to have made the journey are Tom Scoville and Percy Essick, of the Scoville, Essick and Reiff circuit; S. W. Manheim, of the Manheim Theatres, John Royal, manager of Keith's Palace, Cleveland; Howard Feigley, of the Rivoli, Toledo, and M. B. Horwitz, of the Washington circuit, Cleveland.

Milton Korash, recently manager of the New Broadway Theatre, Cleveland, a first-run suburban house, is now managing the Strand, Akron, a first-run downtown house.

Leo Greenberger, manager of the Strand Theatre, Cleveland, has just returned from a summer of European travel. Greenberger was gone three months.

Sam Deutch is busy these days remodelling his Sun Theatre. The changes will include a new box office, lobby, and interior decorations.

Angelo Vitale, musical director at Loew's Park Theatre, has a true story to offer which will be hard to beat. He recently received a letter from a gob in Ireland saying that he had gotten Vitale's music on the air, and wanted to express his appreciation. Ireland's a long way off from the Park Theatre at Cleveland, Ohio, and Vitale was delighted that he was drawing an audience from that distance.

Ben Abrams, who, at one time, was special representative for J. D. Williams, has joined the Fischer Film Company's organization, as special sales representative. The Fischer Film Company, with offices in Cleveland and Cincinnati, now has six men covering the field regularly. Abrams, whose territory will be confined only by the state boundary line, makes the seventh.

John C. Flynn, general manager for P. D. C., was in town on Monday and held a meeting of the entire Cleveland office force.

Gotham Film Exchange is now marked up on the Film Exchange Bldg. directory. This exchange was opened last week with M. C. Howard as manager, at 301 Film Bldg.

C. J. Sonin of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer home office was a guest of local exchange manager Harris P. Wolfberg last week.

Mrs. Georgia Moffett, secretary of the Film Board of Trade of Cleveland, called it a vacation last week and went on a visit to Indiana.

C. H. Parker has resigned as assistant manager of the local Pathe exchange. Parker is at present in Washington, D.C., his former home.

W. C. Bachmeyer, central division manager for the Fox Film Corporation, was in the city the latter part of the week on his tour of the territory. Bachmeyer says that he has found the picture business in a healthy condition wherever he has been recently. Theatres are all doing normal and better-than-normal business. Exhibitors everywhere are optimistic and are preparing for a good season.

St. Louis

GEORGE P. SKOURIS, 33 years old, of Skouras Brothers Enterprises, Inc., operators of the Missouri, Ambassador, Grand Central, West End Lyric and many neighborhood houses in St. Louis, and Miss Julia Ghiglione, 4948 Botanical Avenue, St. Louis, were married by Justice of the Peace Schuler at the St. Louis City Hall Saturday, September 25.

The couple later departed for New York on their honeymoon. They were accompanied to the marriage license office by Leto Hill and Mrs. M. S. Schuler, who acted as witnesses to the ceremony.

Mrs. Stella Miller, 2119A North Twelfth Street, St. Louis, foiled two men who attempted to rob the Webster Theatre in the same building with her living quarters.

From a window of her home she saw the men break the glass of a rear window of the theatre. She yelled at them and the men fled.

Charles Werner, formerly active manager of the local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange, and Joseph Desberger, have taken over the ownership of the Washington Theatre, Belleville, Ill., and the Kirkwood Theatre, Kirkwood, Mo.

Desberger will make his home in Belleville and manage the house there, while Harry Wagner will continue as manager of the Kirkwood. The consideration paid for the two houses has not been made public. The new owners plan to put on high-class feature pictures and other attractions in keeping with that standard.

S. Parker has sold the theatre at Portageville, Mo., to W. A. Collier, former owner of the house. Ralph Anderson has sold his house at Gideon, Mo., the new owners taking charge September 24.

Jack Weil, proprietor of the local Gotham Pictures Exchange, has taken quarters with Progress Pictures, at 3320 Lindell Boulevard.

Barney Rosenthal, president of Columbia Pictures, is back from a trip to Hannibal and Quincy, Ill.

Tommy Charack, district publicity director for Universal Pictures, departed for Dallas, Tex., on Sunday, September 26, to take over the publicity and exploitation work in the territories served by Dallas, New Orleans, El Paso and Oklahoma City. Bob Gary of Kansas City will look after St. Louis, Kansas City, Des Moines and Omaha in the future.

Paul Maricle, formerly of Kansas City, Mo., is now traveling Illinois for United Artists, Herman Goldstein has northern Missouri and Emil Courte, a recent arrival from New Orleans, has southern Missouri.

T. Y. Henry, district manager for United Artists, is in town and plans to spend a week or so in our midst.

Visitors of the past week included Messrs. Leber and Hirsh, Pacific, Mo.; Jimmy Clayton, West Frankfort, Ill.; Tom Reed Duquoin, Ill.; Bob Cluster, Johnston City, Ill.; Roy Nicely, Cuba, Mo.; Frank Barnes, Carmi, Ill.; Kenneth Gray, Rolla, Mo.; William Karstetter, Columbia, Mo., and H. E. Whitney, Mexico, Mo.

J. F. Ragland was another film luminary to pay us a call during the past week.

Elm Creek, Neb., is to have a new theatre with a seating capacity of 300. It will be one-story and basement, 30 by 85 feet, and plans are now being prepared by J. P. Helleberg, Masonic Building, Kearney, Neb. Local interests are behind the project.

FORMAL exercises on Labor Day marked the opening of the new $500,000 Capitol picture and vaudeville theatre, erected in Hazleton, Pa., by the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, which operates a big chain of Pennsylvania theatres. The house has a seating capacity of 2,400 and is modern and beautiful in design. The dedication was attended by M. E. Comerford, president; M. B. Comerford, general manager, and other executives of the company, who had among their guests in the evening a number of city officials of Hazleton and prominent business and professional men of Luzerne County.

The house manager is J. L. Fitzpatrick, who got a great reception on the opening night. There were organ selections by Mona Jones, resident organist, and Professor Edward Benedict, of Kimball Hall, Chicago. The opening picture attraction was Bebe Daniels in "The Palm Beach Girl," and the leading stage attraction was Al Moore's band, composed of former marines. There was excellent music also by the theatre orchestra, which is under the direction of Harry Schmitt.

Five hundred hard boiled eggs, contributed by children as the price of admittance at a recent matinee at the Colonial Theatre, Harrisburg, were donated by the theatre management to the Home of the Friendless.

Announcement is made of the birth of a daughter, Gloria Mae, to Mr. and Mrs. Clayton D. Buss, of Easton, Mr. Buss being head of the Twin City Theatre Company, Inc., of Easton and Allentown.

October 15 is the date set for the formal opening of the handsome new West Side Theatre, which has just been completed in West Scranton as an addition to the big chain of Pennsylvania theatres operated by the Comerford Amusement Company. It is a three-story brick and steel theatre and business building on North Main Avenue. The seating capacity is 2,200, of which 1,500 is in the main floor and 700 in a balcony. Arthur Luce is manager. The theatre is equipped with a stage and can be used for vaudeville and legitimate shows as well as pictures.

High-powered radio receiving sets brought the news of the Dempsey-Tunney fight to the patrons of all the six Wilmer and Vincent theatres in Harrisburg. Manager C. M. Gible, of the State Theatre, arranged for reception of the news over leased wire from Philadelphia and relayed it from a central point to the theatres. Similar service was given in Loew's Regent and other Harrisburg photoplay houses.

Harold Shadbolt has been transferred from the management of a theatre in Norfolk, Va., to manage the Rajah Theatre, a leading Wilmer and Vincent house in Reading. Mr. Shadbolt is a former resident of Reading.

George Kilpatrick, assistant manager of the Strand Theatre, Easton, married Miss Loletta Kennedy, of that city, on September 8. They went to Florida on their honeymoon trip.

The new Park Theatre, Reading, was scheduled for formal opening on October 1, or thereabouts. It is located in the new building of the Reading Lodge of Moose, at 1018 Penn Street, and it is to be operated by the Penn Theatre Company. The theatre, designed by W. L. Lee, architect of Philadelphia, has a seating capacity of 2,000 and the exterior is finished in Egyptian and Spanish architecture. It contains a Wurlitzer pipe organ and space for an orchestra, and will be devoted to pictures and vaudeville.

Theatre executives were conspicuously identified with the fourth annual Good Fellowship Cruise of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce, which carried 320 business men on a four-day jaunt from Harrisburg, Pa., to Plymouth Rock, Mass., and back, September 13 to 16, inclusive. C. Floyd Hopkins, head of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres in both Harrisburg and Reading, was a member of the "Stunts Committee" and a member of the board of trustees of the cruise fund. Mr. Hopkins is a past president of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce.

All the 320 Harrisburg business men who went on the fourth annual cruise to Plymouth Rock and return, were invited to be guests of the Wilmer & Vincent Theatre Company at the State Theatre, Harrisburg, on the night of September 20, when motion pictures of the cruisers, taken in many of the cities visited during the cruise, were thrown on the screen.

Des Moines

CARL REESE, formerly salesman for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer out of the Des Moines office, is now traveling for Universal. He is a key-town man.

W. A. V. Mack, mid-west division sales manager for Pathe, has been at the Des Moines office for the past week. All the salesmen were called into conference with Mr. Mack before they went out on the road on Monday. Mr. Mack goes from here to Minneapolis.

W. O. Kale has opened up the new Capitol Theatre at Truro, Ia.

The theatre is a very pretty little house and opens up a new territory for the picture business as Truro has not previously had a motion picture house.

Bob Booth, who was formerly in charge of the theatres at Nebraska City, has taken charge of the houses at Belle Plain, while Wes Booth, who had the Belle Plain houses, has gone to Nebraska City. The brothers are in partnership with their father in the ownership of the string of theatres.

Six special built lobby frames are being made for the LeClare Theatre at Moline, Ill., which was just last week bought by A. H. Blank. The sale was made by the Des Moines office of the National Theatre Supply Company. The six frames cost over $640.

Vera Furman of the Universal exchange has gone to Chicago to be associated in business there.

Visitors in Movie Row were N. L. Dixon of Mt. Pleasant; Wes Booth and Bob Booth of Belle Plain, J. A. Michaels of the Strand at Jefferson, Bernard Gilrath of Grand River, F. H. Brink of Dawes, B. G. Tyler of La Porte City, Dysrat and Grimes, and Harsh of the Strand at Boone.

W. F. Armstrong of Cleveland has come to Des Moines to travel in Zone D for Universal.

Carl Stephens, shipping clerk for Universal, has had clean-up day in his department, getting ready for the fall rush of shipping.

Chicago

THE first of the arbitrations under the agreement entered into between the Chicago Federation of Musicians and the Exhibitors' Association of Chicago, affecting about forty-three theatres, seeking relief from the contract of September 4, 1925, was completed this week. The theatre involved in this arbitration was Gumbiner Theatrical Enterprises' Commodore, which desired to dispense with the services of its orchestra. Karl A. Meyer, chairman of the Arbitration Board, submitted the following opinion: "The present clause of the contract which requires of the Commodore Theatre the employment of an orchestra for forty-four weeks of the year be altered to read thirty-two weeks in place of forty-four. It is the belief of the arbitrator that the above change will result in sufficient relief to the owners of the Commodore Theatre without working an injustice upon the Chicago Federation of Musicians." The Exhibitors' Association was represented by L. P. Newhafer and Jack Miller, and the Chicago Federation of Musicians was represented by James Petrillo and Edward A. Benkert. The next theatre to present its case to be arbitrated is the Bryn Mawr.

The Hurst Theatre at Hurst, Ill., has been taken over by John Marlowe, who operates houses in Herrin and Murphysboro.

James MeVickar of the F. B. O. publicity department is making his headquarters at F. B. O.'s local exchange and is putting over an elaborate publicity and exploitation campaign for an opening at Jones, Linick & Schaefer's Rialto Theatre.

R. C. Wheeler of Lloyd's Theatre, Menominee, Mich., was in Chicago this week and reports this beautiful house will be ready to open on October 7th. This theatre was built as a gift to the city by Mr. Lloyd, a millionaire resident of Menominee, and it will rank with the famous Ringling Memorial Theatre at Baraboo, Wis.

Manager H. C. Young of National Screen Service, has completed improvements in his company's offices on the seventh floor of the Seeberger Building, rearrangements and redecorations adding much to the facilities for handling the growing business of this concern.

Frank Cook of the Bijou Theatre at Appleton, Wis., is now operating the Gem Theatre at Plattsville.

Jack Sampson of F. B. O.'s Chicago exchange has returned from a week's visit to F. B. O. headquarters in New York City. While there Mr. Sampson attended the Dempsey - Tunney championship contest.

The new four hundred seat Fairy Theatre at Napanee has been opened by Manager Lauder milk.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT EQUIPMENT CONSTRUCTION OPERATION

Managers Discuss Plans for Theatre Success

"What Service Means" and "Making Houses Attractive" Leading Topics at Convention in Canada

DISCUSSION of various phases of theatre management in addresses before the Western Division Managers' Convention of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation at Calgary, Alberta, recently, brought forth many interesting theories and plans suggested to solve certain everyday problems and increase box office receipts by means of added comforts and attractions afforded the picture-going public at the average cinema playhouse.

The convention, which inaugurated a drive to realize the "first $1,000,000 year" of the theatres in the division, was attended by all house managers and resulted in an exchange of ideas and viewpoints in which every department of theatre operation was treated in addresses by many members of the organization.

Two topics which occupied positions of leading importance during the convention were "Service" and "Making Theatres Clean and Attractive."

Walter F. Davis, formerly manager of the Rialto Theatre in Des Moines and now manager of the Metropolitan at Winnipeg, went a long way in reducing to concrete and understandable terms the significant, yet often very abstract, commercial term "Service" as applied to theatre operation, and pointers on "How to Make a Theatre Clean and Attractive" were covered in a speech by J. F. Winning, manager of the Dominion Theatre in Vancouver, B. C. Through the courtesy of Messrs Davis and Winning, this department is enabled to report the addresses which they delivered at the convention in Calgary.

IN my opinion the word "Service" covers all the activities of the theatre manager. More than any other word in the dictionary it can be used in every case to explain the reason for the success of a successful theatre.

The Picture's the Thing. When you give a suitable picture program to your clientele, it is "Service." When you give appropriate musical presentations and accompaniments to the picture, it is "Service." And when every employee, visible and invisible, give their best to the patron, it is "Service."

When your theatre is kept clean and well ventilated, it is "Service." When any employee of the theatre assists a lady or gentleman with their coats and wraps, it is "Service." When the cashiers or ticket takers, give a look of recognition and a modest "Thank You," it is "Service." When an usher takes a fretful baby a glass of water or an "all day sucker"—a liberal supply of which, by the way, we keep on hand at our theatre—it is "Service."

When the manager will spend the peak of the afternoon and evening on the floor, giving aid, and setting the pace for the rest of his staff, that is "Service."

When advertising copy is written to be used in any form, and which avoids giving insult to the public's intelligence and leaves out all the much abused and superfluous adjectives, but gives your telephone number, starting time of features—since there are always prospects of new patrons unfamiliar with the routine of the house—that is "Service."

When, at the finish of the evening's entertainment, you have the orchestra play a lively exit number which brightens up everyone, and turn on all lights in the front of the house, just the same as you did when you took their money on their entrance, that is "Service."

Thus we see as a result of the mention of a few of the essentials of theatre management I have recited, that "Service" covers the whole subject of theatre operation.

KEEPING the theatre clean and attractive is a very important factor in catering to the amusement lovers of any community, and a manager should never fail to realize his responsibility in this connection.

I am of the opinion that the most important item of cleanliness in a theatre is having at all times a plentiful supply of clean air. There is nothing more noticeable or obnoxious to patrons who will, say for the sake of argument, attend a second show, and on entering the theatre are met with the various odors which have emanated from the audience which has preceded them. It is essential therefore that every theatre should have an up-to-date ventilating system, which can be made use of at any time the theatre is open to the public.

Clean air means health, when you are healthy you usually crave amusement, therefore endeavor to give your patrons lots of clean air.

Keeping the toilets and restrooms clean is also a very important matter and at times a difficult one to deal with. With regard to toilets, we all know how the walls are disfigured by nasty words and rhymes, etc. A manager and his staff should always be on the lookout for tricks of this nature and have the writings removed immediately. To overcome this I would suggest that a framed notice be put on the walls which would read as follows: "We endeavor to give clean entertainment. We ask you to help keep our premises clean. Please do not write on the walls."

A manager depends upon his janitor to keep the theatre spick and span and it is essential that this particular member of his staff be thoroughly competent in his work.

Daily Inspection Important

In closing my remarks about cleanliness I would give as an example the C. E. F. in the recent war. In all the large training camps every morning after breakfast, the camps of the men were inspected by an officer. Sanitation, sleeping quarters, etc., were thoroughly inspected and the result you all know. I would suggest therefore that the first duty of a theatre manager in his daily routine be a thorough inspection of the theatre premises from sidewalk to stage, to satisfy himself that the theatre is clean and safe to entertain his public.

Now to deal briefly with the subject of making your theatre attractive.

When a person goes seeking amusement, he or she naturally turns to the theatre with the homelike atmosphere and on this account it is up to the manager to make his theatre homelike and attractive.

Attractive Lobbies Asset

An attractive lobby is a big asset to a theatre and care should be given your display so that it will attract the eyes from street cars, automobile or pedestrian.

Ushers should be neat and courteous, and should be clothed in a style that will look pleasing to patrons. A manager can do a lot in keeping his customers coming to his theatre by cultivating an attractive, personality, and in order to do this must be continually meeting his public in the lobby as they come and go.

Colored shaded lights along the walls render a pleasing and homelike effect and should be changed continually. The music you render is important and it is necessary to keep strictly up-to-date in this as the movie fan very often thinks more of the music than the picture.

Elaborate Programs Offered in Seattle

Competition Forcing Second Runs to Add Stage Specialties

A NEW era in the motion picture exhibition field in the Pacific Northwest has dawned and as a result theatregoers are offered, more than ever, elaborate programs.

The Coliseum Theatre, under the management of A. C. Raleigh, has been featuring a stock ensemble of twelve dramatic vocalists, under the tutelage of Jacques Jou-Jerville. This ensemble has been offering the principal scenes from opera, affording twenty minutes of musical entertainment that has met with the high favor of Coliseum audiences.

At John Hamrick's Blue Mouse, Walton McKinney, a popular vocalist, is a weekly feature, with such assisting artists as he requires in his presentations. "An Irving Berlin Song Revue," one of his latest presentations, was among the most novel and pleasing picture house acts seen in Seattle in some time. At Hamrick's Egyptian Theatre, a suburban showhouse, elaborate stage presentations are offered by the "Nile Serenaders," assisted by vocalists, dancers and entertainers.

Manager Robert W. Bender at the Columbia Theatre, devotes his presentation to acts which relate to the picture that he is screening. His prologue for "The Midnight Sun" featured a male vocalist and a dancer and was further improved by the excellent orchestral prelude by Francesco Longo and the Columbia All-Artist Orchestra.

Dance Ensemble

So popular has the stage form of entertainment become that even the second-run houses are taking up the plan. Joe Danz's new Embassy Theatre, devoted to the screening of the larger second-run films, features an ensemble of girl dancers that are a regular weekly attraction at his house, in addition to the regular musical specialties that he features.

And now, at the height of the season, the heads of the North American Theatres Corporation, soon opening their magnificent new Fifth Avenue Theatre, promise stage shows and presentations second to none in the United States, for the Seattle showgoers. As the opening attraction at the Fifth Avenue, advance sheets report an elaborate Fanchon and Marco Revue from California, with a cast of fifty persons and an orchestra of twenty-five.

Petroff Production Staged at Rivoli, New York

"Miracle of Love," a Publix presentation staged by Boris Petroff, and Kearum, Persian pianist, are the stage attractions offered this week at the Rivoli Theatre, New York City, in connection with the showing of Raymond Griffith's new screen feature "You'd Be Surprised." The Petroff production combines ballet, pantomime and vocal music in a rather richly costumed piece concerned with the discussion by two sages as to what will awaken from her trance-like sleep, the beautiful young maiden. Jewels, the perfume and beauty of flowers, the musical strains from a violin, etc., all fail, whereupon as a last resort, love is introduced in the form of a "prince charming," whose kiss and tenor solo accomplish the feat.

The Rivoli orchestra offers a compilation of Lehar melodies as an overture, and Murtagh plays "Ting-a-Ling" as the organ novelty.

Landry Completes 16 Weeks Engagement at Grand

Art Landry and his orchestra played a "farewell week" program at the Grand Theatre, Pittsburgh, last week, thus bringing to a close an engagement of sixteen weeks' duration as a popular attraction at that house. The Landry organization has offered a new act each week on the stage of the Grand, dances and specialties being introduced in conjunction with the orchestra music on the stage. The feature picture last week was "Mismates."

Paris-Gimbel Fashion Revue Staged at Stanley

The Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia, presented an elaborate fashion revue as the leading attraction of the bill for the week of September 20. The show was put on in co-operation with Gimbel Bros. department store. Models displayed gowns and other articles of feminine apparel imported from Paris as advance styles for the year. A special music score was played during the revue by the Stanley Orchestra under the direction of Graham Harris.

The Stanley program of stage events for the week included an act by Marion and Martinez Randall, international dance stars. The screen attraction was "You Never Know Women."

Style Show Presented at Palace, Memphis

In place of a Publix Unit show, Loew's Palace Theatre, Memphis, last week offered a style show presented in conjunction with H. I. Summerfield, local merchant. The display of gowns, wraps, furs, etc., was staged on an elaborate scale. The feature picture was "The Black Pirate." The stage portion of the Palace bill included appearance of Peggy Dunlap, local high-school girl, who represented Memphis in a national Charleston contest; Jack Major, who specializes in whistling and yodling, and Judson House, tenor soloist. The production was under the supervision of Boris Morros, conductor of the orchestra at the Palace.

"Sparrows" Plays Hold Over Week at Strand

Joseph Plunkett is holding over "Sparrows" for a second week at the Strand, New York. The entire surrounding bill as presented for the first week of the Mary Pickford vehicle has been retained with the picture. The bill includes a prologue staged by Plunkett and featuring the song "Sparrows," written by Jacques Grumberg.

Frances White Stars at Shea's

Frances White appeared as a popular "added attraction" on the stage bill at Shea's Buffalo, Buffalo, last week. The bill offered "Tin Gods" as the screen feature and included the John Murray Anderson presentation for Publix, "Lovers in Porcelain."

Wrestling Bouts with Pictures

The Hampton Theatre, St. Louis, is now featuring wrestling bouts in conjunction with double-feature picture programs.

"College Night" Amateur Shows at Park Theatre

When Bob Pank started to put on Discovery Nights at Loew's State Theatre in Cleveland last season, he didn't know that he was working up a good job for himself. The State Theatre Discovery Nights proved such good business boosters that this season they were introduced at the Liberty and Doan Theatres. And now they have been started at the Park. Only at the Park it's called College Night instead of Discovery Night. Because the Park Theatre is located right in the heart of the university district, Pank aims to put on principally college amateur acts.

Talent must be youthful to get a hearing at the Park, for every effort will be made to make the theatre a community centre for youth attending schools and colleges. The first one of its kind was put on last Wednesday night and went over very big. With the colleges opening this month, more youthful talent will be available.

Policies Changed at Great States Theatres

Further changes in the policies of the Great States Theatres, Chicago, became effective last week, a dramatic stock company splitting weeks between the Majestic at Kankakee and the Plumb at Streator; half the week at each house being given to speaking drama with a picture, and the balance of the week being devoted to motion pictures with one or two stage novelties.

Modistes' Revue Featured at Louisville Strand

An elaborately staged "Modistes' Revue" with Gladys Imogen King, "Miss Louisville of 1926," appearing as the star of the models, was the stage feature of a double program at the Strand, Louisville, last week. The screen attraction was "Broken Hearts of Hollywood." Charles Barns, "The Boy with the Golden Voice," and Teddy Osborne, billed as "The Miniature Prima Donna," contributed their specialties to the stage presentation.

"Super Specia's" Card for First Two Days of Week

The Lincoln Theatre in Schenectady is now running super-specials at regular prices on Monday and Tuesday of each week, as a means of overcoming what are generally conceded in that city as the worst two days of the week from the standpoint of business. The remainder of the week at the Lincoln is given over to daily changes.

Lewis Resigns Post in Eureka

Jack Lewis recently resigned as manager of the Orpheus Theatre in Eureka, Cal. Lewis, with his wife and two children, is now living in San Francisco, where he will assume a new position in the theatrical profession.

Feature Ten Piece Orchestra

The State Theatre, in Schenectady, has increased its orchestra to ten members and plans to do considerable in the way of presentation acts during the months to come.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

J. R. THURSTON has been assigned as manager of the Liberty Theatre, Herkimer, N.Y., to succeed Herman S. Vineberg, recently promoted to the managership of the Glove Theatre at Gloversville. Thurston has been associated with the Schine Company, operator of the houses, for the past three years.

ORMOND ROBERTS will be made house manager of the new Eagle Theatre in Albany, which is scheduled to open within the next week or two. He was formerly manager of the Hudson Theatre there. The Eagle will feature an organist from New York City.

STEFFES AMUSEMENT COMPANY has transferred M. J. Amlie to its new Logan Theatre, Minneapolis, and sent Ralph Parker, of Duluth, to Amlie's former berth at the Colonial Theatre, Watertown, S.D.

WESLEY BOOTH has taken over management of two theatres in Belle Plaine, Ia., operated by J. J. Booth and Sons, while R. R. Booth goes to Nebraska City, Ia., to handle three houses.

GEORGE H. GRATIAS, formerly of Canadian Universal offices at Toronto, has been appointed manager of the Starland Theatre, Winnipeg, by C. A. Schaefe, managing director of the three Universal houses there.

MARTIN TUOHEY, formerly manager of the Emery Theatre in Providence before it was taken over by the Fay interests, has been appointed manager of the Rialto Theatre in Providence.

H. A. BERG is the new manager of the Hyperion Theatre at New Haven, Conn.

Start Vaudeville Season at Broadway, Charlotte

Warner's Broadway, Charlotte, last week inaugurated the policy of vaudeville and pictures the first three days of the week and straight pictures the last three days, which is to be maintained throughout the season. Five acts of Keith vaudeville are offered Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays in conjunction with a feature picture, with prices at 10, 25 and 50 cents for matinees and 50 and 75 cents for evening shows. The feature pictures last week were Harry Langdon in "The Strong Man," shown the first three days, and "Across the Pacific," starring Monte Blue, the final half of the week.

L. Carkey Named District Manager for Schine

L. J. Carkey has been named as district manager for the Schine houses in northern New York and will move his headquarters from Lockport to Ogdensburg. Frank Lupien will be continued as house manager of the Strand in Ogdensburg, by the Schine brothers who recently took over the theatre.

Aaronson Signed by London Plaza

Al Kaufman has signed Irving Aaronson's Commanders to appear in the Mangan Presentations at the Plaza Theatre, London. This is in addition to Frank Tours Fifty Piece Symphony Orchestra.

Noon Openings at Capitol During "4 Horsemen" Run

Six full performances a day are being presented at the Capitol Theatre, New York City, during the return engagement of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." The doors of the Capitol are being opened at noon and owing to the length of the picture, which is being screened in its original form, no other features are on the program.

With the Rex Ingram production as the one and only attraction of the bill, with the exception, of course, of a full orchestra accompaniment at the de luxe shows, the Capitol drew capacity crowds on its opening day last Sunday. At the time he booked the picture for this revival engagement, Major Edward Bowes declared that it would run at least two weeks at the Capitol.

Rialto Drops Vaudeville During Grange Run

On October 4th Jones, Liniek & Schaefer, Chicago theatre chain operators, will change the policy of the Rialto Theatre for the first time since its opening nine years ago as a vaudeville theatre. On the above date it will become a picture house for the Chicago premier of "Red." Grange's feature, "One Minute To Play." It is understood that the contract calls for four weeks' run and that during this period no vaudeville or other acts will be part of the program.

Tulare Citizens Present Gift to R. A. Hazel

Robert A. Hazel, manager of the Tulare Theatre, Tulare, Cal., was the recipient of a gold wrist watch tendered him at a meeting of the Lions Club of Tulare, last week, as a gift of the people of Tulare in recognition of his "thoughtful co-operation with all committees and organizations working for the betterment of the community." The presentation was made by Dr. C. E. Harper, president of the Lions Club. It bore the inscription, "To Bob Hazel, a real showman, from the people of Tulare."

Play on City Slogan Used in Ads of Farash Houses

The Farash Theatres, Inc., of Schenectady have coined a new slogan which is being used in all its advertisements. The regular slogan of the city is to the effect that Schenectady "lights and hauls the world." The Farash slogan is "We amuse the lighters and the haulers."

K. C. Girl Featured in Unit Show at Newman

The Newman Theatre capitalized the local angle of the presentation there last week of the Publix unit show, "The Side-walks of New York," of Grace Butterly, winner of the Charleston contest last spring, to represent Kansas City in the Publix act starring Charleston dancers from various cities. The Newman presented the first episode of "The Fighting Marine," a serial starring Gene Tunney, as the feature of the morning performances throughout the week. "The Campus Flirt" was the screen attraction of the bill.

Capitol Theatre, Hazleton, Pa., Equals Fine Theatres of the World

THE opening of the Capitol Theatre, Hazleton, Pa., under the direction of the Comerford Amusement Company, marked an epoch in the theatrical life of the northeastern section of that State, for in points of architectural design, fine proportions, stage and lighting effects and luxurious furnishings and fixtures, this playhouse equals the fine theatres of the world.

The Capitol occupies the property adjoining the Altamont Hotel in Hazleton, having a frontage of 120 feet on Broad Street and extending back to Spruce Street a distance of 150 feet. The building is constructed of steel and concrete throughout.

The front building contains five spacious stores, the stairways to the offices above and the theatre lobby and vestibule. The stores and lobby occupy a space of 37 feet in depth.

The lobby is finished in harmonious tones with mural paintings on the ceiling and with marble and ornate relief work. The side walls are covered with rich poster and display cases featuring the present and coming attractions. The foyer lies directly to the rear of the inner lobby doors.

No columns interfere with the vision from the balcony, that part of the theatre being built on the cantilever principle. At the sides of the foyer are the wide marble stairways leading to the mezzanine and beyond these are the retiring rooms for men and women on the first floor. Back of the five rows of loges at the balcony front extend nineteen rows of opera chairs, spacious and comfortable as those on the orchestra floor. The total number of seats in the theatre approximates 2,400.

The entire front portion of the theatre, including the private boxes, organ fronts and proscenium, is illuminated by indirect lights set in the front of the balcony. The massive dome of the main auditorium is also fitted with the same system, as are the various coves and cornices of the side walls.

Inasmuch as the Capitol Theatre management has planned to follow a more or less permanent policy of feature pictures and vaudeville, the stage portion of the house has received thorough attention. Dressing-room space is ample and the lighting, scenery and all stage equipment is strictly up-to-the-minute in every respect.

Another important item of theatre equipment which has received favorable mention is the large Kimball organ. There are several unique attachments such as the "Vox Humana," producing a human tone effect, the "pizzicato" touch, which, it is claimed, breaks the contact faster than the human hand, and also a special set of pipes called the "Kinura," which is Hebrew for wailing, and reproduces the chanted wailing singsong of the old-time Jewish laments. The console of the keyboard has three keyboards of 761 notes in each.

Pictures and Vaudeville

Feature pictures from the foremost producers and vaudeville attractions from the Amalgamated Vaudeville Agency, New York City, will form the program, which will be changed twice weekly. Daily performances will commence at 1:30 p.m. and continue until 5 p.m., when it will break over to the evening show, which starts at 6:30 p.m., finishing at 11 p.m.

One of the phases of theatre management stressed by the Comerford Amusement Company, is usher courtesy. No gratuities are permitted and there is always the strong insistence that patrons shall have the utmost consideration.

J. L. Fitzpatrick, managing director of the Capitol, has followed out the Comerford system and his many years of experience in this field has made him worthy of directing this fine new playhouse. Mr. Fitzpatrick has been through practically every branch of the theatre end of the industry and in addition to being a capable manager, is also an expert musician.

The house staff of the Capitol is as follows: Managing Director, J. L. Fitzpatrick; Assistant Manager, Lloyd Hause; Orchestra Leader, Harry Schmitt; Organist, Miss Mona Jones; Publicity Manager, Michael Coll; Chief Projectionist, Edward Parsons.

The owners of the Capitol Theatre are the members of the Capitol Theatre Company of Hazleton, of which Andrew J. Feeley, the well known theatre man of this city is president. Other officers include Frank C. Walker, of New York, Vice President; M. E. Comerford, of Scranton, Treasurer, and Andrew J. Hourigan, of Wilkes-Barre, Secretary.

Make Rapid Progress on Georgia Theatre

Construction on the new $250,000 Motion Picture and vaudeville theatre at Albany, Ga., is progressing rapidly, according to a recent report. Steel work is expected to be completed next month and the entire building ready for the lessees, Gortatowsky Bros., within six to eight months.

Approach to the theatre foyer will be through an arcade, the first of its kind in this section of Georgia. The seating capacity will be 1,700 and the new house will have one of the largest and best equipped stages in the state.

While a picture and vaudeville policy has been planned for this theatre, it will also be equipped for road shows of the better class.

Kerasotas' Project Starts at Springfield, Ill.

Gus and Louis Kerasotas, the well-known Springfield, Ill., motion picture exhibitors, have started construction on a new 1000-seat theatre at Sixth and Washington avenues, Springfield, Ill. Workmen are now tearing down the existing buildings and otherwise clearing the site for the new house, which will be opened about February 1, 1927.

The new building will be four stories and basement and contain several stores and a number of offices as well as the theatre.

The Kerasotas boys now operate the Strand and Savoy theatres in Springfield.

Waukegan's Big Project Gets Under Way

Work has started on the Motion Picture theatre to be erected in Waukegan, Ill., by a group of that city's business men at the reported cost of $1,000,000.

The structure will be five stories high, the theatre will seat 2,000 and on completion of the building it will be equipped and operated by Great States Theatres, Inc., a subsidiary of the Balaban & Katz organization.

A CALL

The improved Proctor Projector is now ready for the market.

It is planned to make this the nucleus of an operation which will cover the country with twenty stores, handling a complete line of projectors and accessories for theatrical and non-theatrical demands, as well as non-theatrical and educational films; everything, in fact, except theatrical films. In detail the line will include:

- (1) Professional projectors for the theatre.
- (2) Semi-portable and portable projectors.
- (3) All accessories and supplies for both theatrical and non-theatrical use; carbons, curtains, spotlights, chairs, lenses, electrical appliances, etc.
- (4) Motion picture cameras and projectors, for amateur and industrial work; for standard width negatives and positives as well as 16 and 11 millimeter widths.
- (5) Stereopticons and magic lanterns for schools, colleges, etc.
- (6) Lantern slides for the theatre, schools and colleges.
- (7) Standard films for non-theatrical entertainments, principally for societies, schools and churches, on non-inflammable stock.
- (8) Technical educational films.

The variety of merchandise outlined above is homogeneous and can be logically handled by one company.

Preliminary to a meeting to be called for either New York or Chicago, we want to make contact with every dealer and jobber in projectors and accessories, and every manufacturer of supplies, who is not obligated to any combination.

"Repeat Sale" Depends on Proper Projection

What the manager does for the audience is just as important as what he does to get the audience.

The importance of this is being recognized throughout the country. A selection of good films is exceedingly important if the theatre is to maintain its maximum attendance. The "Repeat Sale" depends upon the audience securing its full share of enjoyment at the theatre and that depends in a large measure upon good projection.

One of the most important factors is proper projection equipment, says Mr. Hertner, President of The Hertner Electric Company. The Transverter is one of those unseen yet ever present pieces of projection equipment that make the showing of pictures easier for the audience and operator alike.

It is economy to have it in every theatre. This is being evidenced by the ever increasing number of installations in large and small theatres.

A few of the new theatres recently installing the Transverter include:

Wallace Theatre, Bradenton, Florida; Strand Amusement Co., Laurel, Mississippi; Tenth Street Theatre, Atlanta, Georgia; Big Lake Oil Company, Texon, Texas; Oxford Amusement Co., Oxford, North Carolina; Palace Theatre, Raleigh, North Carolina; Rialto Theatre, Norway, Michigan; Rialto Theatre, Enid, Oklahoma; Ellen Theatre, Bozeman, Montana; Strand Theatre, Gallup, New Mexico; Edgemont Theatre, Chester, Pennsylvania; Plaza Theatre, Englewood, New Jersey; Uptown Theatre, Detroit, Michigan; Palace Theatre, Waterloo, Iowa; Lathrop Theatre, Omaha, Nebraska.

The Roxy Theatre, 50th Street and 7th Avenue, New York City, as it looks at the present time

Latest Photograph of Roxy Theatre Illustrates Rapid Progress

THE Roxy Theatre now being built at 50th and 51st streets and Seventh Avenue, is probably one of the most ambitious enterprises of the theatrical world. It is said that when completed, it will be the world's largest theatre, covering an acre and a half of land and boasting a seating capacity of 6,200 seats.

The huge steel framework for the Roxy was finished last week, and this in itself is a triumph of engineering. Take, for example, the main truss of the theatre. Weighing over 210 tons it took four trucks to haul it from the waterfront to the foundation for installation, and it proved to be so unwieldy a process that for an hour and a half one morning last spring, Broadway traffic was jammed during the journey crosstown. The weight of the largest truss of the Mecca Temple, which has a seating capacity of 5,000, is 2 tons.

While the theatre itself is coming along fast, Roxy is preparing the entertainment for the new house. He is engaging the personnel of the theatre, H. Maurice Jaquet, Kurt Schindler and Clark Robinson having already been engaged as musical director, choral master and art director, respectively, and he is completing the arrangements for the artistic presentations which will mark the high spot of his career.

All the mechanical trades are now working on the project, plumbing, electrical work, heating, ventilating, air conditioning, plastering, etc. The stairways are partially installed, and the grand stairway is now under construction. The stage equipment is being manufactured, together with the orchestra consoles, stage lifts, fire escapes and fire doors.

The elevator drums have been set for the two main passenger elevators, and the conduits for all electrical work, including a 100-line switchboard, are being put in.

The painting and decorating specifications are out, also the bronze and marble work, and the chairs and carpets have been selected and are now being prepared.

An interesting feature of the theatre is the stage which measures 70 feet in width, 65 feet in depth, with the gridiron extending 84 feet above the stage level and the proscenium opening 43 feet in height. It has already been erected.

Some idea of the proportions of the theatre can be gathered from the fact that the theatre opposite, now being built to seat 500 persons, could be placed in the foyer.

The Maximum Emotional Effect

THE GENERAL USE of Panchromatic Negative in motion picture production means much in the way of improvement in the art.

USED WITHOUT A FILTER it helps the picture— with a filter, the color corrections are positively sensational. As one user has put it: “The use of ‘Pan’ gives the maximum emotional effect on the screen.”

EASTMAN PANCHROMATIC NEGATIVE is now the same price as ordinary negative. It keeps as well as ordinary negative and, except for the lighting in the darkroom, is developed in the same manner as ordinary negative.

Yet Eastman Panchromatic is an extraordinary product.

Inquiries and Comments

The Proper Selection of Generator Capacities

SHORT while ago we answered the inquiry of a theatre proprietor concerning the proper size of Hertner Transverter, required for use with a mirror are under the conditions set forth in his letter.

Attention was called to the fact that this make of generator was of the series type and was available in two principal sizes—a double-20 and a double-30. It was also pointed out that as far as motion picture projection is concerned, the use of either a series or multiple type generally was largely a matter of choice.

Where it is desired to operate such auxiliary devices as spotlights, effect projectors, etc., from the same generator, it is important to know that the use of a series generator is impracticable for the reason that the same current is provided to all connected devices so that it would be necessary for all such devices to have the same current carrying capacity.

Boiled down, this simply means that a multiple type of generator is required for supplying current to a number of projection devices if the current required by each one differs.

Overlooked

When describing the Hertner machines, the series type only was mentioned in connection with the mirror are. It was known, of course, that the same company manufactures and markets the multiple type in a range of capacities but evidently John H. Hertner, of the Hertner Electric Company, Cleveland, Ohio, believes we had slipped up on this point so he very graciously takes us to task and sets us straight in the matter.

However, since he presents us with some useful information concerning generator capacities and the like, along with his complaint, we will pass his information along to the rest of the fraternity.

Here it is:

"Gentlemen:

"In your issue of September 4 on Inquiries and Comments, you speak of the Transverter as being made only in the Series Type. It might be of interest to you to know that for some years we have also made the multiple machines, and are now producing them in sizes ranging from 20-40 to the 200-400 ampere capacity."

Two Generators Recommended

"The production of these machines has become of considerable importance since the introduction of the mirror are, because of the great many theatres where spotlights and other current conserving devices are being used, which require more current than that provided to the reflector are projectors.

"In order to gain the very best results, a large number of theatres are now installing a double-20, or double-30, unit, to operate the mirror are projectors and a larger capacity unit of the multiple type to operate the spotlights, double dissolver, etc.

"Other theatres, at less first cost but greater operating expense, will install only a multiple generator and operate everything, including the motion picture projectors, from it."

Vary the Field

"Taking, for example, the case where you speak of using 50 amperes for motion picture projection along with a Brenkert effect projector requiring only 35 amperes, and a spotlight using 40, it is quite possible, of course, by field regulation, to cut a double-50 down to 35 amperes. If, however, the theatre were using a pair of reflector arcs drawing 20 amperes each, together with a Brenkert effect projector and a spotlight—the effect projector using 35 amperes and the spot 40, the greatest economy could be obtained by using a series Transverter double-20 along with a small multiple machine, the size depending upon how long a spot or Brenkert were to be used at one time. This would call for either a 30-60 or 40-80 multiple generator."

How to Pick Them

"The matter of choosing the proper machine is also partly determined by the cost of current per unit. If the cost of power is 12 cents per unit, (12 cents per kilowatt hour.—Ed.) the manager must decide differently from what he would need were the power cost only 2 cents per unit.

"The comparative efficiency of the series and multiple sets is almost in the same proportion as the voltage generated by the multiple machine is to the voltage used at the arc.

"In other words, if a multiple machine is operated at, say, 85 volts and the arc consumes 55, then the efficiency of the series machine is to the efficiency of the multiple machine as 85 is to 55, and the power bills would naturally follow the same proportion. If, then, the projectors in a theatre are used the better part of the time, and the spotlight or Brenkert effect projector only occasionally, it is best to select the generating equipment as to realize the highest efficiency from the projectors.

"We are enclosing one of our late bulletins, as well as a list showing the entire line, both of multiple and series machines, and we believe this information will be of interest to you."

Relative Efficiency

We would like to stress the point Mr. Hertner makes regarding the relative efficiencies of the series and multiple types of generators, as we believe it to be an important one.

It should be obvious that the series generator, requiring no ballast resistance, is more efficient than the multiple type, since it involves a complete conversion of the energy at 110 volts (as the case may be) to that required for arc operation instead of making the energy available at a voltage higher than that required by the arc to be then lowered by a resistance consuming the same current as the arc.

This simply means, as Mr. Hertner has pointed out, that the multiple generally used for the same current capacity, will have an efficiency which is lower than that of the series machine by an amount equal to the power wasted in the rheostat. In other words, assuming that the series machine, which has a terminal voltage equal to that required by the arc, has an efficiency of 100 percent (in point of arc Wattage required) then the efficiency of the multiple machine will be lowered to a degree shown below.

$$E = \frac{55}{55} \times 100 = 100 \text{ percent}$$

Multiple Machine—E—  $\frac{\text{Output}}{\text{Input}} \times 100$

That is to say, the multiple machine requires  $\frac{100}{64.7} = 1.545$  times the power for the same operation and by the same token, the power bills with this machine would be 54.5 percent higher than those for the series machine for the same screen results.

To our mind this represents a big advantage for the series type generator, but the fact still remains, as we pointed out before, that when two or more devices, requiring different currents, are to be operated, the multiple machine is the only thing to be had which will turn the trick.

Mr. Hertner's recommendation concerning the use of two machines, a series type for picture projection and a multiple type for miscellaneous devices, is a good one as concerns cost of operation over an extended period of time.

It represents, however, a balancing of initial cost against operating cost, and that is something which the theatre man must decide for himself.

In the final analysis, the most efficient condition is the correct condition, but the period of operation must also be considered.

$75,000 for Improvements on Kansas Theatre

Bids are being taken from sub-contractors on work in connection with the remodeling of the theatre in Independence, Kas., owned by Thomas Booth, of the Booth Hotel and operated by Glenn W. Dickinson as the Bowersock Theatre. The owner is building with local labor. He plans the complete remodeling of the three-story building which is of brick, re-inforced concrete and terra cotta construction, and will add an additional one story and balcony and part basement, 50 by 120 feet. The seating capacity will be 1,000 persons and the improvements will cost from $75,000 to $100,000.

Orlando's New Playhouse Will Seat 2,100

Contracts for the new Marshall Theatre to be erected at Orlando, Fla., by Orlando Enterprises, Inc., were recently let to a Jacksonville firm.

The newest of Orlando's chain of houses will have a seating capacity of approximately 2,100. The building is three stories in height and will occupy a space of 115 feet wide by 223 feet deep. In addition to housing the theatre, plans call for the provision of several stores and offices. The estimated cost of construction is $450,000, allowing for equipment which will run in the neighborhood of $114,000.

Iowa Theatre Increases Seating Capacity

The Zenith Theatre in Shenandoah, Ia., is to be remodeled, redecorated and enlarged to provide 100 additional seats, a new stage and dressing rooms for actors. The improvements will cost about $5,000. B. B. Holdridge is the owner, while the plans were prepared by Charles Rosenberry, 348 Brandeis Theatre Building, Omaha. The work is being done with local labor.

Plan 40 x 50 Addition to Springfield Empress

The Reisch Investment Company, owners of the Empress Theatre in Springfield, Ill., plan to build a one-story and basement, 40 by 50 ft. addition to the theatre. The improvement will cost about $25,000. The Empress is located at 1106 East South Grande Boulevard.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Three Bad Men"—Fox Films, Majestic Theatre, Portland, Ore.

Morning Oregonian: "Magnificent settings, brilliant scenes, top-notch cast, headed by George O'Brien and Olive Borden, feature 'Three Bad Men.' . . . 'Three Bad Men' enjoys settings and thrilling scenes, some of which are as pretentious and stirring as any in 'The Covered Wagon.' . . . This great tale of the opening of the West will hold its place among the leaders in that type of motion picture. It is a blending of magnitude, romance, action and comedy in proper proportions. . . . Fit for the most epicurean motion-picture appetites."

Portland News: "'Three Bad Men' are dare-devil heroes whose exploits will thrill boys of every age and make the women love them. . . . The picture was produced by the man who made 'The Iron Horse' and is a worthy successor to that celebrated film. . . . Its scenic grandeur adds an impressive background. . . . J. Farrell McDonald, Tom Santschi and Frank Campeau, beside George O'Brien and Olive Borden, are perfect in their roles."

Oregon Daily Journal: "'Three Bad Men' . . . a presentation that will stick in the memory, the immensity of which will be more and more realized as one mulls over the great scope of this notable spectacle. Crowds stood in line at each of the presentations of the picture on Sunday and it was well worth while. . . . All the fast-moving events lead up to the great land rush and the forward movement over miles of frontier gives a long remembered thrill. It is a notable picture, equal in scope and detail to 'The Covered Wagon' and 'The Iron Horse.'"

"Three Bad Men"—Fox Films, Miller's Figueroa Theatre, Los Angeles

Examiner: "Gripping story vividly filmed, . . . beautiful photography is a marked asset. . . . This film climaxing in beauty all the Westerns we have seen. . . . The cameramen have made the most of every opportunity. . . . the story has action in plenty, brilliant building of suspense. . . . J. Farrell McDonald, Frank Campeau and Tom Santschi, the three bad men, contribute vividly to the progress of the plot. . . . The great directorial achievement, which reflects much credit on Ford, lies in the land rush. . . . this one is tremendous and so varied in effect. . . . the sequence is handled with masterly skill. . . . entertaining from the first reel to the last."

Times: "There is a running fire of amusing titles in the early part of the picture, which causes laugh to follow laugh in quick succession. . . . Olive Borden has distinct personal appeal."

Herald: "'Three Bad Men' is more than a mere thriller; it is an epic picture deserving to rate among the best that have been produced on the subject. . . . from the cheers which greeted it there can be no doubt as to the triumphal impression made by the film."

"Three Bad Men"—Fox Films, Capitol, Cincinnati

Daily Times Star: "Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon 'Three Bad Men,' at the Capitol. It possesses everything a good photoplay should have—good acting, good settings and quick motivation. . . . No more beautiful screening was ever done, we believe, than the shots of the land rush. No better work in heroine roles has been done in previous pictures than by Olive Borden. . . . Tom Santschi, Frank Campeau and J. Farrell McDonald make picturesque bad men. Their acting is good. . . . George O'Brien gives us all we want in the character of a hero. A review is not supposed to be an advertisement. But the way we should like to review 'Three Bad Men' is to put an eight-column advertisement in the paper urging everyone to see the picture."

Post: "This is as good a picture in comedy, melodrama and romance as you should desire. The acting of the three bad men is extremely good. The scenes brim over with excitement and emotion. The director, John Ford, deserves a world of praise. . . . Although the development is dramatic and tense, it abounds in comedy of the best kind. There are many delightful moments."

"Don Juan" and Vitaphone—Warner Bros., McVicker's, Chicago

debut at McVicker's last night and proved itself one of the marvels of the age. 'Don Juan,' is gorgeous, beautifully acted and it must have cost a fortune. John Barrymore alone is enough to put it over."

Chicago Evening Post: "The Vitaphone has solved the problem of synchronization. The music was in itself so pleasing and the pictures of the players so interesting that the whole thing made a great impression on the public. They have a marvelous device, and to judge from the impression produced on the public last evening, everybody will wish to hear it. They have carried things a step farther on."

Chicago Evening Post: "One comes away from the first hearing of the Vitaphone with the feeling of having sat in on the making of history. The picture, 'Don Juan,' with John Barrymore as its star, is too good to be overshadowed even by Vitaphone. Highest expectations had been aroused by reports from eastern showings of the Vitaphone and the photoplay. To judge by the enthusiasm of last night's audience, those expectations have been more than realized."

Chicago Evening American: "Another milestone has been reached—another page turned in motion picture history. Today Chicago is in possession of a new and wondrous amusement program—a concert, vaudeville and movie show all rolled into one. Then, too, the picture as a photoplay stands alone. It would be a hit were it shown without the sound of a single violin."

—let's get together

THE owner of a small theatre wrote us a letter of thanks for a favor rendered and added that he was surprised to find that a concern such as ours with a great multiplicity of matters of importance would go so far to assist a customer whose request was of its very nature negligible.

Why do we do it?

Simply because individual and indiscriminate service is written right into our business policies. We do not think of business as an abstract thing. We think of it in the light of so many human beings, among whom we are numbered, each dependent more or less on the others for the successful accomplishment of his purposes. We believe there is as much "sentiment in business" as in ten thousand different types of people and that it is subject to the same reactions. So we try to humanize all our business relations—to treat each customer as a friend and each transaction in a manner deserving of mutual confidence.

We make Simplex Projectors as good as it is humanly possible to do and we sell and service them with sincere regard for the requirements of our customers and the desires of the public. Our reward is a healthy, ever increasing business and the good will of the entire theatrical industry.

Robert Morton Organ Co.,
1560 Broadway,
New York City.

Gentlemen:-

It is indeed a pleasure for us to be able to take this opportunity to thank you and your concern for the wonderful instrument you have installed in our Congress Theatre.

There is no unit in our program which gives our patrons more pleasure than the musical accompaniment to our pictures. It has been very satisfying to us to know that our music has been such an overwhelming success.

An organ as complete and successful in every detail as your style #49 can only be surpassed by the wonderful service you have rendered in installing and maintaining the instrument. Although we have needed comparatively little attention it has been pleasing to know that skilled mechanics are ready at a moments notice to give us every service possible.

The success of this organ has prompted us to enclose an order for the next Robert Morton Organ
to be installed in our Grove Theatre, Irvington N.J.
in place of our present instrument.

With best wishes for your continued success
we beg to remain,

Very truly yours,

2nd WEEK

The crush was so great at the Capitol Theatre that it was necessary to call out police reserves to keep the crowd in order.

—Front Page News Story in N. Y. Telegraph

Thousands of men, women and children flocked into the theatre. Hundreds were packed in the lobby waiting to get in after many standees had been seated. The box-office lines stretched blocks to right and left of the theatre entrance. All roads seemed to lead to the Capitol.

—Dorothy Herzog, Daily Mirror

Rudolph Valentino's adoring public flocked to the Capitol yesterday. They crowded the sidewalks in lines of twos and threes to gaze upon Valentino as Julio, the picturesque character that first brought him fame.

—Louella O. Parsons, N. Y. American

Before the doors of the Capitol were opened, there were scores waiting to get in. At 4 the lobbies were jammed, while a line from both sides of the box-office stretched around the block.

—H. D. S., Morning Telegraph

Better than it was six years ago. We wouldn't have missed it even if we had to stand.

EDDIE CANTOR writes advance notice of the SEASON'S COMEDY HIT!

EDDIE CANTOR

Dear Mr. Exhibitor:

Just as long as you're going to show "Kid Boots", my first picture, I think we should know each other - pleased to meet you. Although I played the show for three seasons throughout the country, I got more of a "kick" making the screen version which took but three months.

The motion picture producers claim that they want new faces for the screen. I have been out in the sun so much that my face has peeled twice, which means that I am showing two new faces in this picture.

The other day in the projection room five people besides myself who witnessed the picture claimed that I was the greatest comedian on the screen. Now why should my wife and four daughters lie about it?

The leading lady in "Kid Boots" is Clara Bow and I picked her myself - say, I'm no fool. In two of the reels I kiss Clara seven times and Lasky and Zukor pay me for it. What a business!

Hoping you and your customers will enjoy "Kid Boots" as much as I enjoyed making it, with love and kisses, I am,

Sincerely,

Eddie Cantor

The best directors in the industry have been assembled to produce Fox Pictures.

You exhibitors only need to look at the names and faces on this page to be convinced of that. You know what these men have produced.

You have made money on their pictures in the past—and you know what to expect when they are given the plays and stories on the Fox schedule and a brilliant array of actors from which to select their casts.

The first of this season's product has proved the box-office quality of Fox Pictures. As the season advances, each new production will prove that this box-office quality is absolutely dependable.

Fox has the stories and plays!

WHAT WE PROMISED

1. "That Model from Paris"    2. "Lost at Sea"    3. "Fools of Fashion"

WHAT WE ARE DELIVERING

1. "That Model from Paris"

Good for week run as well as short run theatres of all classes.
—Harrison's Reports.

One of the best of the new season's offerings by Tiffany—it is a winner.
—Motion Pictures Today.

"That Model from Paris" is excellent entertainment for any theatre.

Drawing power: Unquestionably should be good.
—Motion Picture News.

Should find favor wherever shown.

—Exhibitors Daily Review.

A more felicitous combination of laughter and tears has not been seen in some time.—Morning Telegraph.

Pleasing story, nicely told. Popular box office ingredients pleasantly mixed. Fashion show certain to appeal to women.
—Film Daily.

2. "Lost at Sea"

Not a bad society drama—the action is pretty fast, there is considerable human interest in it. Good for week run houses and for all short run ones.
—Harrison's Reports.

Is interesting at all times and filled with suspense. Drawing power: Should be good. Well done.
—Motion Picture News.

One that should bring in the shekels to the box office.
—Exhibitors Daily Review.

The production itself is of the first order. —Variety.

3. "Fools of Fashion"

Very good. Has been produced lavishly. Suitable for week run as well as for short run theatres.
—Harrison's Reports.

Interesting drama with fine cast. Offers good entertainment for the majority of patrons.
—Moving Picture World.

Tiffany has a winner. "Fools of Fashion" is definitely a box office picture.
—Motion Pictures Today.

Is well acted and staged. Drawing power: Good.
—Motion Picture News.

A Typical Carrier Theatre Conditioning System. The proportions of the equipment are much enlarged.

Air -- at the Breathing Zone First without Draughts

CARRIER introduced the practice of the downward diffusion of air within the theatre. The design of each Carrier air distribution system is an engineering problem carefully worked and constructed to meet the particular need of each installation.

Through the Carrier system, air reaches every corner, every seat in the theatre. There are no hot spots, no draughts, no less desirable seats. The high balcony is as comfortable as the orchestra; the front row is as pleasant as the rear.

Intelligent cooperation with the architects attractively conceals the air diffuser openings within the ceiling. From these, the air passes down over the audience so gently that no one is aware of its source. There is just that feeling of perfect comfort.

The Carrier system of air distribution is the third of the very important Carrier features which has been described in MOTION PICTURE NEWS. See the description of Carrier Centrifugal Refrigeration in the issue of September 18th. Read of the Carrier air cleansing spray chamber and humidity control in the issue of October 2nd.

The Carrier system is an assembly of equipment guaranteed to maintain uniform conditions of Temperature, Humidity and Air Purity in the theatre, every day in the year. It is the development of more than twenty years of specialized Air Conditioning experience.—A recent development provides the same complete system for the fine small theatres.—Describe your theatres.—Ask for the book, "Theatre Cooling."

Opportunity Knocks

Motion picture history is being made—and P. D. C. is writing its most significant page.

The unprecedented record made by DE MILLE-METROPOLITAN PICTURES is a graphic demonstration of what can be accomplished when production craftsmanship and showmanship vision are allied.

“Nothing succeeds like success.” P. D. C. closed its 1925-26 season in a blaze of glory, with a veritable conflagration of hits—“Silence”, “Three Faces East”, “The Volga Boatman”, “Up In Mabel’s Room”—everyone a Box Office Bellringer.

The 1926-27 program of P. D. C. surpasses even the sensational product that set new box office records for exhibitors who played DeMille-Metropolitan Pictures the past season. “Gigolo”, “Young April”, “The Nervous Wreck” and “The Yankee Clipper” form the vanguard of a magnificent array of productions destined to register box office bull’s eyes with a bang that will startle the industry.

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS—and WISE SHOWMEN are heeding the summons. Thousands of wide-awake exhibitors, keen and discriminating judges of box office values, have read the “signs of the times” and confirmed their faith in the great DE MILLE-METROPOLITAN STUDIOS by signing for the entire 1926-27 program of hits. They have answered the summons of golden opportunity and every one of these thousands will reap a rich harvest of dollars. “SIGN FOR SUCCESS” is the P. D. C. slogan that is blazoned across the film firmament. If you have not already signed for SUCCESS, you are jeopardizing your chances for a big season. DON'T WAIT TOO LONG! A representative of P. D. C. is at your service. Be one of the happy crowd of P. D. C. exhibitors who are going to CASH IN on the BIGGEST SCOOP in the history of motion pictures. WE ARE BACKING UP THIS GREAT PRODUCT with a brand of Showmanship Service that spells sure-fire success. Giant press books that match—and surpass—anything ever turned out to boom the showing of pictures—packed to the brim with seat-selling, crowd-pulling ideas, ad cuts, mats, posters, lithos, lobby displays prepared and designed by experts. Here is real service for real pictures. Exhibitors who are going to make the biggest cleanup in the history of the industry, are those showmen with the foresight and wisdom to see a big opportunity and to seize it.

YOUNG

How To Sell It To Your Patrons

(Epes Sargent in M. P. World)

"You have three big angles in the schools, the newspapers and the libraries. You have additional aids in the windows, The Better Films Committee, if you have one, and the various clubs.

Don't sell the schools on the educational value alone. Sell rather that you visualize Alaska.

Work through the school boards and the principals. See that each teacher receives a free ticket. Offer small prizes for the best essays or compositions on Alaska, but do it before you show the picture. Don't offer prizes on the best essays on the picture. That will come too late. Work this stunt a week or ten days in advance, starting the offer two or three weeks ahead. You might hook the newspapers to the composition, through letting the paper ostensibly offer the prizes.

Stories of Art Young will be of real interest. The campaign book has them. . . . See the managing editor and try and sell him rather than the photoplay editor.

The libraries will welcome you. . . . If you can help move the novels of Alaskan life, the travel and educational volumes, the library will be glad to use book markers, still displays and posters.

Make plentiful displays in the store windows. . . . Try and obtain from the game warden the names and addresses of those who have taken out hunting and fishing licenses. Every one of these is better than just a prospect.

Sell the Boy Scouts. They are interested in the outdoors. . . . If possible get a preview for educators and others who may be interested.

A Real Novelty, worth the Sales Effort."

Better Projection At Half The Cost

Clean, healthy operating conditions

A New and Better Edison MAZDA Lamp for Projection

Improved construction makes the new type Edison MAZDA Lamp for motion picture projection stronger and better. The filament is now clamped to lead-in wires instead of being welded. Stronger support prevents sagging or twisting of the filament and the consequent short-circuiting of the two center coils. These features overcome most of the burn-out difficulties experienced in previous types of construction.

The new type Edison MAZDA Lamp has a much longer average life and gives a higher intensity of light during the period of its life. Your Supply Dealer can supply you with these improved lamps.

For the average theatre having a throw not exceeding 120 feet, Incandescent Lamp Projection is a money saver and a money maker. The Incandescent Lamp operates on half the current required for an arc and it gives clear, steady light that makes pictures appear at their best. There is no flicker, glare or shadows to tire the eyes of the audience and the tonal quality of the light gives pictures greater depth.

Incandescent Lamp Projection is favored by projectionists. It frees the projection room of dust, gas fumes and excessive heat—makes operating conditions pleasant and healthful.

Take advantage of the two-way profit this method of projection offers you. Remember, while you save half your current costs, you also raise the standard of your theatre through a better presentation of pictures, and that brings greater patronage.

Get full particulars from your Supply Dealer or write for descriptive literature to Edison Lamp Works of General Electric Company, Harrison, N. J.

Finance

THE luncheon tendered by F. B. O. to Fred Thomson—who sat shoulder to shoulder with his friend Gene Tunney—proved to be one of the most colorful and expressive occasions of its kind in this writer's memory.

The keynote of the speeches was young America, its natural aspiration toward clean living and courage, its tremendous inspiration to these ends through the hero worship of Tunney in the ring and Thomson on the screen.

* * *

By no means the least important speech was that from Joseph P. Kennedy, in which he indicated, sensibly and sincerely, his belief in European film production, and the future of American films abroad.

In brief, he said: "Film production must be adequately financed; the financing must come from the bankers; bankers have come to look upon the industry as a stable one for several reasons, important among which is the leadership of Will H. Hays."

All of which is full to the measure, with truth and common sense.

In America today, the operations of film production and distribution require banking aid on a large scale. The business has become too big and fast for private capital. And as the industry grows and stabilizes, banking resources will continue to parallel its progress. We will have bond issues as large as those placed on any other manufacturing industry.

* * *

Evidently, London is feeling this way about the matter. Dr. A. H. Giannini, who has just returned from there, calls our attention to an article on the financial page of the London Times, known the world over for its conservatism and influence.

In addition to complimenting British National Pictures for its production activities and distribution contracts in this country, the Times says in connection with the broad subject of British production:

"It will be seen, therefore, that the problem of the British film industry turns very largely upon finance. In this respect the American producer is much more favorably situated than the British. So great has been the development of the film industry in the United States that it now ranks among the largest industries in the country. Practically every large banking institution finances the production of films, and banks readily lend to producers against the negative, which is deposited with them as collateral. This is a great advantage to producers, since it prevents the locking-up of a large amount of capital pending exhibition, which frequently takes place months after a negative has been completed.

"Hitherto, British banking and financial institutions have been very reluctant to give the British producers the same facilities as the American banks give their customers. In view of the disadvantage under which British film production has been carried on as compared with American production, this disinclination is only natural; but there is good reason to believe that if British producers were able to improve their position by widening their market, the banks would be ready to recognize the fact by giving them any reasonable financial assistance that might be required."

This is significant. It is, we believe, the first expression of opinion from this powerful paper on the subject of motion picture finance.

Speaking Editorially

THE increasing popularity of short features is strikingly shown in a recent article in the Cleveland News. In a signed story, Ed H. Jacobs, photoplay editor, quotes Manager John F. Royal, of the Palace, a Keith-Albee house, to the effect that "shorts," once regarded as mere "chasers," are now being featured on the bill and will continue to be. The article continues:

"For our part we could sit through and relish an entire bill made up of these special features, preferably one that included a short story or two and at least one good comedy. There is talk of such programs in certain theatres, not locally necessarily, though it would not be surprising if the experiment were made in Cleveland also—'vaudeville movies.'"

"THERE was a time when these 'odds and ends' of short films were employed as 'chasers'—a means of emptying the theatres so that a new audience could be taken care of, but in those days the 'specials' were pretty bad and today would hurt rather than help the theatre's business. Royal tells of the days some years back when the Keith people engaged the services of a lecturer; it was in Boston, if we remember rightly; he delivered a stock talk on the Alps and did it in such monotonous manner that the theatre was soon emptied. It wasn't much of a lecture, but it served the purpose—sooner than sit through the lecture until the better program repeated, the audience, almost to a man, would leave.

"But such tactics would not do nowadays and are not necessary. Theatres are larger and most of them were built to take care of film requirements, and the wise showman of today eliminates from his programs anything of a tiresome nature, even among the 'fill-ins.' The movie following is a knowing lot and wants good entertainment from the moment they enter a theatre until they leave. It doesn't take them long to find out where they get the best 'ride' for their money and such theatres get their patronage."

THE work of the motion picture in bringing good literature to the attention of countless persons who never before had contact with it was pointed out in a recent address by Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Hays organization, at the annual convention of the Special Libraries Association at Atlantic City.

One State Library Association last year reported an increase in calls for books of 34,000 over the preceding year, the cause being attributed to the influence of pictures and the radio, Mr. Milliken said. "And," he added, "the commission reported that the demand, especially from rural districts, was chiefly for the old standard works, many of which have been picturized."

* * *

FORMERLY it was feared, Mr. Milliken declared, that motion pictures would decrease reading but those who believed that, he said, were the same ones who thought that radios would eliminate symphony orchestras and that free libraries would exterminate book sellers. The very reverse in each of these cases has been true.

MR. MILLIKEN called special attention to the progress of the industry along the lines of artistic development. "In the late months," he said, "so many fine directors, skilled writers and talented actors have come forward that the moving picture is producing, at least once a week, a story that compares favorably with the best in the spoken drama or in literature.

"Producing companies are taking experienced writers into their studios and teaching them the technique of motion picture composition. Actors, newspaper men, dramatists, stage directors, photographers, men whose training would make them readily acceptable for motion picture direction, are being given every opportunity to learn this new art. And the results are most encouraging."

AN EDITOR ON BROADWAY

The Week in Review By William A. Johnston

John C. Flinn

BACK from a country-wide tour of exchanges—thirty-one offices in as many days—John C. Flinn, of P.D.C., was welcomed home Saturday at a meeting of home office executives and the personnel of the New York and Jersey exchanges.

The meeting resolved itself into a general business discussion, with Mr. Flinn reporting on conditions as he saw them at first-hand throughout the country. These impressions we expect to print in some detail later.

ACTIVE touch with the field is, of course, essential to distribution executives. In no other way can they keep informed on the market; and carry its needs into execution, not only in shaping sales policies but production problems as well.

RUMORS of mergers continue to fill the air, but nothing definite has materialized. Rather close investigation at the source discloses that "the mergers" are only in the rumor stage.

RECIPROCITY of a definite and practical sort is making headway in many quarters. Simon Rowson, prominent British renter, President of the K. R. S. and joint managing director of Ideal Films, is in America, and is, at the moment, on his way to Hollywood to confer with Joseph P. Kennedy and his production forces on the pictures F. B. O. is making and which Ideal is to release in Britain.

MR. ROWSON is going to give the F. B. O. directors the British slant on these pictures, thus contributing to the real internalization of the film, which starts—and importantly—when and where pictures are produced. The Ideal contract was one of the significant things done by Mr. Kennedy while abroad; Mr. Rowson's visit follows quickly and naturally as a result of that step.

WE shall also have another prominent British visitor shortly. Ernest W. Fredman, managing editor of The Film Renter, is coming over to survey the situation here, and renew acquaintance with many friends.

ISPOKE last week of pictures out-of-the-ordinary which need unusual handling, and one of the most interesting of this group is now being shown at the Rivoli, New York. This is Eugene Roth's Romance production, "The Blue Boy," for Educational, done in Techni-color. Following this run, this short feature will play over the Loew circuit for 130 days' booking—the only two reel subject, with a single exception, to play this number of days on the circuit.

DAVID LOEW believes the picture will do a lot in building up the prestige of the theatres; and, with this thought we are heartily in accord.

ON this same subject of pictures of high artistic merit, Eric Clarke, general manager of the Eastman Theatre, Rochester, made some interesting points at the meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

It is his view that exhibitors themselves should establish special theatres for the showing of films of limited appeal:

"We should divorce our big appeal business from our little appeal business," argues Mr. Clarke. "Publishing houses have done this and so must we. Profits would then be possible where now there are losses. A different public would be developed without disturbance to the greater public reached by pictures of general appeal. . . .

"We, like every other large theatre, are organized to please the big public. Compare, if you like, the movie business today with current literature. It is clear that we are in a class with the Saturday Evening Post and not with publications appealing to limited circulation. The Eastman plays to more than 2,000,000 people a year and our problem is the same as with the Post, which sells more than 2,000,000 copies a week. To cater to the few while the many stay away is fundamentally wrong. We owe weekly entertainment to our steady movie public and the essential quality of audience appeal must be the foundation of any show we may arrange."

"Where then and how is our public to be led to appreciate the better things in films? Only by greater subtlety and artistry in the pictures which the public will anyhow want to see. Nobody will deny that this is taking place; that pictures are improving in their quality and their art. Many pictures with distinct artistic appeal will today succeed where a few years ago they would have failed. The progress is sure but slow. You cannot suddenly get people to appreciate better art. It has taken four years for our theatre to establish any liking for the quiet, dignified show which most other houses would characterize as lacking in punch and box office appeal. But it is no less true that it is by the very pictures of limited appeal that the box office successes grow more artistic. The picture made in disregard of the box office may fail but if it has artistic merit it will leave its mark on the box office product of the future.

"My point is that it is up to us exhibitors to organize special houses for the showing of these pictures of limited appeal. Let us divorce our big appeal business from our limited appeal business. At present there is not a sufficient number of pictures of this kind to supply a theatre in the city of average size but it is possible to make a beginning. Once this outlet for pictures of high artistic quality is established suitable product will soon be forthcoming in sufficient quantity."

WR. ROTHACKER, after fifteen years of being his own boss—and during that period building up a large and important business, now hangs his hat in the F. P. L. offices on Fifth Avenue. His title is Assistant General Manager of Production. That, however, we construe as merely a title. He will undoubtedly do important work, whatever it will later on appear to be, and he will do it in his quick, intelligent and forceful way. He is enthusiastic about his new affiliation, and production is the gainer for having enlisted so able an executive.

BUSINESS showed a little tendency to soften in spots along Broadway this week in the face of unseasonable warm weather. Grosses for the week, therefore, depend a great deal upon conditions from the middle of the week (when this is being written) until Saturday.

The Capitol Theatre last week came very close to the $70,000 forecast for it on "The Four Horsemen," the announced total being $68,738.15. Business eased up this week, partly because of the repeated bill and also the warm weather. If conditions are favorable the balance of the week, a gross of from $40,000 to $45,000 is likely—making a nice total for the fortnight. "The Temptress" comes to this house next week.

"It Must Be Love" at the Rivoli (the first Colleen Moore picture to play in one of the Famous Broadway houses) opened with a smash. Business continued lively the first part of the week, and a good figure for the week may be expected—perhaps over the $30,000 mark.

Business continued good on "Tin Gods" at the Rialto in the third and last week of the run. A heavy campaign is being put behind "Kid Boots," which opens Saturday night, which naturally detracts somewhat from the current attraction. The reliable dopesters have it that Eddie Cantor and "Kid Boots" will clean up. The picture is said to be such that it will stand comparison with a Lloyd or a Chaplin favorably, and with Eddie Cantor appearing in person throughout the Rialto run, (he played 65 weeks on Broadway in "Kid Boots" with balcony seats at $3.85), the engagement should be good for 15 or 20 weeks. That, at least, is the best of advance information.

RECEIPTS at the Mark Strand took a strong upward turn this week with "Paradise," after a disappointing two weeks with "Sparrows." The Ray Rockett opus opened with a bang on Sunday, and continued to stand them up during the early part of the week. It is not unlikely that business will go over the $40,000 mark, if the picture holds up as it is going when this is written.

The Colony is being prepared for the Vitaphone opening on Thursday night of "The Better 'Ole." This is figured as a strong box office contender, not only because of the Bairnsfather story and Syd Chaplin, but because the Vitaphone program will include Al Jolson, George Jessel, the Howards, Elsie Janis and Reinald Werrenrath, which should draw a large clientele quite distinct from that which is going to hear and see the Metropolitan stars at the Warner with "Don Juan." The latter, incidentally, continues to do capacity.

The Colony sprang a surprise last week with "Kosher Kitty Kelly," business picking up enormously during the week. As a result, the gross went way over the $20,000 forecast for it the middle of the week—something else for Film Booking Offices to be proud of.

The roadshow pictures continue to pull them in, "Beau Geste" leading in public favor, "Big Parade" at standing room also, "Ben Hur" holding its own strongly, and "Scarlet Letter" showing slight signs of dropping off but with a considerable distance to go before it leaves the money-earning class.

AT a preview the other evening at the Lexington Opera House in New York, we had an opportunity of seeing for the first time the initial effort in America of Lothar Mendes, the German director under contract to Robert Kane—"The Prince of Tempters." We were particularly interested in this, since those who had seen the rushes during production were lavish in their enthusiasm.

A little work still remains to be done on the film, and it is not yet ready to be reviewed, but it is not too much to say that "The Prince of Tempters" represents a genuine and unquestioned triumph for Mendes. He has given the picture a vitality, a punch, not to have been expected from the story.

Mendes presents an interesting case. He came to this country without any of the advance prestige which preceded Lubitsch and Murnau, and started under a heavy handicap. There are plenty of men to acclaim a new director, or a foreign one, after he demonstrates what he can do—but it is typical of motion picture executives that while they want new talent, new faces and new ideas, they prefer to have someone else take the chance first. Then they rush in with contracts.

Robert Kane, however, is nothing if not courageous, and he gave Mendes the opportunity he desired. Mendes started work, and his forceful, decisive personality, his definite knowledge of what he wanted and how to get it, his unwavering self-confidence, quickly won him the support of those around him. Any outsider coming into a studio organization has a difficult problem to solve in becoming "one of the gang," but Mendes gained the vitally necessary moral support of his staff in short order.

It is typical of Kane that he is interested only in results, and when he began to see the daily rushes on "The Prince of Tempters," he quickly altered his plans for the picture. Knowing that he had a directorial "find" on his hands, he gave Mendes carte blanche to make the picture a special.

The result more than justifies his decision. Ben Lyon, regarded as a most capable actor in light comedy and farce, does work of which he may well be proud. Lya de Putti has never been seen to better advantage, and Sam Hardy does a bit of character work that is a gem. Other members of the cast, Ian Keith, Mary Brian, Judith Vocelli, contribute some of their most brilliant screen work.

Having predicted, some months ago, that Mendes would make his mark here, we are happy to state that we have no reason to regret the prophecy.

An interesting group was present at the preview, including Kane, Mendes, Samuel Spring, A. W. Smith, Jr., Ned E. Depinet, Ned Marin, Jules Levey, Sam Katz, Mal St. Clair, Ben Lyon, Ian Keith, and practically all of the metropolitan film critics.

SAM E. RORK is wearing a happy smile these days as the results of opinions on his latest picture, which he has brought to New York with him. Although a title change was announced earlier in the week, "The Blonde Saint" will be retained as the release title—an extremely wise move, it seems to us, in view of the evident popularity of "blonde" topics this season.

WHAT makes good pictures? This query was submitted recently to directors, scenario writers, actors, cameramen and others connected with the Paramount production department and the resulting symposium yielded much thought provoking comment for serious students of the cinema. The statements appear in "Greater Paramount Pictures," published by the workers of the Hollywood and Astoria studios.

Erich von Stroheim, who made "Greed" and "The Merry Widow" and who has just completed a spectacular production for Paramount, "The Wedding March," gave the following detailed opinion of what makes a good photoplay:

"A good motion picture story must appeal alike to men, women, children.

"There are many good stories which are unsuitable because they reach a limited class. The story must strike the taste of the millions. Even then it is useless without the co-operation of a cameraman who is the last word as an artist, and a scenario writer who is not only a skilled dramatist, but a finished technician—one who can get over to the public not only sensational acting, but emotion and thoughts in symbolism, not only for the educated but for those of lesser intelligence, and the nonpossessing class—in other words a dramatist who understands that the camera must appear to have eyes, like the unseen spectator following the scene.

"A great motion picture story cannot respond to fixed means of that producer who labors under the delusion that the public has fixed likes and dislikes. In my humble opinion many pictures with the so-called bad endings have failed because they were bad pictures, or bad stories, or had had direction.

"The motion picture story must avoid monotony in story, action, settings and costumes; in fact it must be an attractive potpourri with changes at appropriate moments from the sombre to the light. Just when the tears well up there must be a laugh ready of just the right intensity.

"The cutting must be done by an artist. It must be titled in the way people usually speak to each other.

"The music is of overwhelming importance and should be specially scored and synchronized by real musicians. Half the time the music for a picture is arranged by the orchestra leader who digs down under the chair and picks out a few pieces during the lunch hour."

Chancellor Dr. Stresemann of Germany and Ambassador Jacob Gould Schurman at the continental premiere of "Ben Hur" (M-G-M) at the Pavillon, Berlin

MY TRIP TO THE U. S.

By Emil Jannings

(Exclusive to M. P. News)

I AM pleased at the opportunity of a big trade paper of the big American film trade opening its columns to me on the eve of my departure for my first trip to the U. S. I have been looking forward to this trip for many years, but somehow or other it never "came off." In future, however, I am going to spend half of each year in America in order to fulfill my Paramount contract. In the other half of the year I am going to work in German productions which, thanks to the recent agreement between Ufa, Paramount, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will get an American release just as well as a German one.

This is my first trip to America, although it is my second crossing of the Atlantic. The first time, being a born New Yorker, I came from your side of the big pond. This, however, was at so infantile an age that I do not harbor the slightest recollections of the event. I was only six months of age, when my parents moved over to Europe, spending the first few years in Switzerland and then going to Germany, where I was brought up and started my career as an actor; at first on the stage, later on in front of the camera.

It would take far too much of your space if I were to give you a detailed account of my life story which was a rather adventurous one. So I'll just briefly mention that, as a boy of 17, I ran away from school in order to become a sailor, an effort which gave me the first big disappointment of my life.

After a few weeks of hardships which I had never thought to be connected with the "Romance of the Sea" I ruefully returned home, and a few months later I went in for acting.

Emil Jannings, who sails for America on October 8, to take up his Paramount contract, autographs a photo to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, to which he contributes an article this week

Emory Johnson, director, who is reported to have come through strongly on "The Fourth Commandment," his first special for Universal Pictures Corp.

Harry Beaumont, Fox Films director, who has recently returned from England where he filmed exterior scenes for "One Increasing Purpose" in interesting spots

Merle Johnson, of Pathe, who won the open singles tournament in the Motion Picture Tennis matches, playing brilliant tennis throughout the season

When Al Christie (right), comedy and feature producer, sailed for Europe on the La France recently, he was bid bon voyage by Carroll Troubridge, general representative for the Christies

Dietz and Beecher, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, winners of the Grantland Rice Sport-light trophy in the round-robin singles and doubles tournament of the film industry

Stage and concert stars who make their bow as Vitaphone artists this week in connection with the opening of "The Better 'Ole" (Warner Bros.) at the B. S. Moss Colony Theatre, New York City, on October 7th; left to right: Reinold Werrenroth, George Jessel, Willie and Eugene Howard, Elsie Janis and Al Jolson

For many years I toured the whole country, playing on the very smallest of small "Penny Gaffs," years which may have meant a hard, but naturally, a very good lesson for a young actor.

Later on I was "discovered" and got a job with Professor Reinhardt's theatres and then my career was "made easy," and very soon I started work in films. I distinctly remember that, when I first viewed myself on the screen, my performance made such a terrible impression on me that I ran out of the projection room, swearing that I'd cut out the whole thing for good, and it took a lot of persuasion to restore my self-confidence.

A short time later I got in touch with Lubitsch and had my first really big chance in "Passion." As regards the rest of my film career I think this is known and I needn't mention anything about it.

As regards my forthcoming trip to America—I am leaving on the 8th of October—I have mentioned at the beginning already how much I am looking forward to America. I have heard, seen, and read such a lot already about American film land, and I have got so many good friends over there that I don't think I should be afraid of feeling strange and, maybe, homesick. Although I will never deny the fact that I love the country where I have been brought up, educated, and lived all my life.

I do hope that American film technique and the personal connection with those who have done such a lot towards improving the standard of films in general—that all this will give me an opportunity to increase my experience and widen my horizon—in short, to learn. That's what I am after and that's why I am all the more looking forward to my work in an American film studio.

FOX NUPTIALS

MEMBERS of the Fox Film home office force have been kept busy lately with congratulations, dinners and what not, attendant upon the marriages of two of the most popular members of the organization. Clayton P. Sheehan, manager of the Fox foreign department, was married on September 30 to Miss Mildred Doyle, of Buffalo, in that city. Then, on October 5, Daniel M. Doherty, the Titian-haired member of the Fox publicity department, and Miss Helene Williams, of Brooklyn, were married at St. Rose of Lima Church, Brooklyn.

OFF TO HOLLYWOOD

PAULA GOULD, one of our best and most popular feminine publicists, left on Sunday for a month's vacation in Hollywood, having obtained a leave of absence from the Warner Bros. publicity department. In addition to a strenuous year in publicity work she has been unusually successful recently in the disposal of a number of short stories—and hence the well-earned rest.

ROWLAND SAILS

BOUND on a five-weeks' business and pleasure trip, Richard A. Rowland has sailed for Europe. Among those who went down to the pier to see him off were Colleen Moore, John McCormick, Robert Kane, Sam E. Rork, Lothar Mendes, Ray Rockett, Al Santell and Samuel Spring.

The inevitable flashlight of the remarkable luncheon tendered to Fred Thomson by Film Booking Offices at the Hotel Astor on October 1, attended by Thomson, Gene Tunney, Will Hays, Joseph P. Kennedy, president of F. B. O., other executives of the company and the leading writers on the trade, fan and daily papers

LADY HAMILTON

THERE must be something in a name even if many people do not agree with the dictum of John Shakespeare's boy Will, on that score. Today Hamilton is acknowledged to be the first and greatest (with apologies to the venerable Dexter Fellowes) of a long line of brilliant publicity-seekers—and finders—for the circus. Lady Hamilton unintentionally gave to Lord Nelson and herself a modest amount of fame even if there is no twin statue of her in Trafalgar Square in London, alongside of the tall, granite shaft with the lions at its base to the famous admiral. This member of the famous Hamilton family,

Gene Tunney, new heavyweight champion, with Lewis Sargent, star of the Fistic Culture comedies, a series being distributed by Bray Studios. Tunney visited the studios during the filming of one of the comedies through his interest in things pertaining to the squared circle with innumerable Episcopal bishops for generations to its credit, hails from Quebec. Her new mission in life is to get publicity for Bray Pictures in newspapers and magazines with the credit for same to Christine Hamilton. As a somewhat well-known night club hostess of New York, Texas Guinan, would say, "Give the little lady a hand."

A DIRECTOR'S DRAMA

EVERYBODY we know has recently written a play. Several of them bid fair to be sold. A few of them have been sold. . . . All of which leads up to the fact that Denison Clift, one of the De Mille directors and writers, has spent the past six weeks in New York working with Al Woods on the production of "The Woman Disputed," which opened at the Forrest Theatre, September 28, amidst critical acclaim and every indication of a run. Clift is returning to Hollywood this week to resume directing and to write a play of Washington diplomatic life. Incidentally, an old picture favorite, Crane Wilbur, is in the cast of "The Woman Disputed."

*“MICHAEL STROGOFF”

UNIVERSAL'S French production, "Michael Strogoff," received the only merit asterisk to be handed out by the National Board of Review this week. Reports we have heard from those few persons who have seen it in the projection room report that this is one of the best pictures, for action and color, ever to come out of Europe.

THESE PARIS LOCATIONS

WHEN the Aquitania sailed on Wednesday of this week her passenger list included Frank Borzage, bound for Paris to make exteriors for the Fox version of "Seventh Heaven" and Lew Borzage, his brother and assistant. Ernest Palmer, chief cameraman, preceded them to Paris.

A NATURAL DOUBT

JOSEPH P. KENNEDY, President of F.B.O., tells an amusing story on himself in connection with his recent trip abroad. In Paris,

E. H. Allen, general manager of the Educational studios, Los Angeles, with Arthur Maude, director, and Eugene H. Roth, producer, of Romance Productions in color, based on famous paintings, released through Educational Exchanges

Kennedy called upon the editor of a French film journal, and after discussing international conditions the editor asked him for a photograph to accompany the article which he intended to write. The F.B.O. chief apologized for the fact that he had none with him.

"But can you not send to your hotel and direct your press agent to bring me your photograph?" the editor inquired.

Kennedy was obliged to confess that he had no press agent with him, either. The French editor looked at him very suspiciously, and then, in an altogether serious manner, asked:

"Monsieur Kennedy—are you really in the motion picture business?"

HEADIN' HOME

PAT DOWLING, Christie sales and publicity chief, has left Chicago in the Citroen "Christie Comedy Doodle Bug," and is heading westward toward the great open, etc., expecting, or hoping, to reach San Francisco the last week of this month.

Gene Tunney, new world's champion heavyweight and Patheserial star, is heartily congratulated on his victory by Elmer R. Pearson, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc.

WINGED WARFARE

IT is safe to say that no mimic warfare has ever been staged on a scale which will be carried out in 'Wings,' says Lucien Hubbard, who is now at San Antonio, Tex., where preparations are being made for production of this big Paramount special.

"Eighteen miles from San Antonio, at Camp Stanley, an army maneuver ground, trenches are being laid out, and a war area constructed that will carry as far as the eye can see. About 7 o'clock each morning the entire city of San Antonio is shaken by the first blast of explosives set off to dig out the monster shell holes which are necessary to give an appearance of 'No Man's Land.' Throughout the day, at intervals, other such blasts occur.

"This is only a part of the tremendous amount of preparation necessary. A small army of laborers, under the charge of a war staff of army officers drawn from all branches of the service, are constructing a series of trenches which begin at the American reserve line before St. Mihiel, carry on past the American advance trenches, across 'No Man's Land,' through the German advance and reserve trenches and over the ridge of a hill to a fortified hill position, similar to that occuried by the German high command in this salient for year after year until the place was captured by the Americans and the French. Here a series of luxurious dugouts, such as the German officers occupied, will be constructed, and the capture of this by the Americans will be the culmination of the battle which is to be the climax of 'Wings.'

"Being a picture of the air, it was necessary in 'Wings' to perfect this battle terrain in a degree that would not be necessary if the action was shot from the ground. But 'Wings' will give an aviator's view of warfare, and as the camera will be skimming along through smoke and bursting shells at an elevation of 100 feet or less above the ground, and moving at the rate of two miles a minute, the amount of territory covered in each shot will be unprecedented."

"GLORY" CAST PROSPERS

MEMBERS of the "What Price Glory" company have been doing well since the completion of that picture at the Fox Film Studio. Edmund Lowe is in "One Increasing Purpose," Victor McLaglen and Ted McNamara in "The Story of Mother Machree," Dolores Del Rio has been played in "Upstream" and "My Wife's Honor," and will do "Carmen"; Sammy Cohen will be in "The Auctioneer"; Barry Norton is playing in "The Lily" and "The Canyon of Light," and Leslie Fenton has an excellent role in "Going Crooked."

Four of the nearly two thousand entries in the Funny Girl contest conducted by Educational and Film Fun magazine, which ended on September 1. The winner will appear with Billy Dooley in one of his Educational comedies. Photos were received from all parts of the country. ### SEDGWICK SHOOTS THE SERIES

STEEPED in the atmosphere of big league baseball—a natural consequence of intimate association with the Yankees when they played through the final series with the White Sox and the St. Louis Browns—Edward Sedgwick and his unit, producing “Slide Kelly, Slide” for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, arrived in New York last week to make scenes at the Yankee Stadium during practice for the World Series and the games in which the Cardinals and the Yanks played in Gotham to decide the right to the title “world’s champions.” Sedgwick and his unit, with William Haines as the leading actor of the troupe, joined the Yanks in Chicago.

As author and director of “Slide Kelly, Slide,” Sedgwick draws upon a thorough knowledge of the National Pastime. He played with the Texas University team and later took a flyer at pro baseball. But that he soon deserted for the theatre, to which he devoted his talents until he guessed—and how—that the pictures were “the works.” His start in the films—he recalled to a reporter for this journal in a bright and early interview at the Algonquin—was made in Houston, where he, King Vidor and Ralph Spence formed a film company, the result of which enterprise was a feature which still awaits a release date. Then the Coast for Sedgwick and later, King Vidor and still later, Spence. The varying and varied roads of all three took each through a period of hard work and now the trails converge—at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer plant and top-of-the-class positions in their particular fields of artistic endeavor.

DUKE TO TRY IT AGAIN

DUKE KAHANAMOKU, three times Olympic champion swimmer, who lost his crown to Johnny Weissmuller at the last meet, will attempt to swim from the West Coast to Catalina as a part of his training to try to recapture his title. He will not compete for the Wrigley prize of $25,000, however, as this would impair his amateur status. He says that the greatest difficulty is not the distance but the constantly varying temperature of the water.

Just at present the famous swimmer is appearing in Pathe’s “The House Without a Key,” much of which is being made around the Catalina waters.

A BUSY BANKER

ALTHOUGH “banker’s hours” is a phrase commonly used to denote ease and idleness, there is a banker in the motion picture industry who sort of upsets this tradition—Joseph P. Kennedy, President of F.B.O. He put over an important distribution deal in England recently, returned to New York for a few days, dashed off to Boston to see his family, and on Sunday is scheduled to leave for Hollywood to take personal charge of the production situation.

TUNNEY SERIAL ENDORSED

GENE TUNNEY’S Pathe serial, “The Fighting Marine,” was recently accorded high praise by a committee representing the California Federation of Women’s Clubs. The fact that the story lacks exaggerated characters and preposterous chapter endings, and is really clean, was particularly commented upon.

EARLE ABOUT AGAIN

RALPH EARLE, the plucky Pathe News cameraman whose Miami hurricane exploits were recounted by Paul Thompson in a recent issue of THE NEWS, was released from Murray Hill Hospital, New York City, on Friday of last week, fully recovered from the effects of his difficult feat.

SEADLER BATS FOR DIETZ

HOWARD DIETZ, director of advertising and publicity for M.-G.-M., sailed for Europe last Saturday on the Paris. During his six weeks’ absence, Silas F. Seadler, advertising manager, is in charge.

RE-VIEWS

TWO pictures which have already been reviewed in THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS were unreel'd this week for the benefit of New York picture-goers. The first of these, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," based on Vicente Blasco Ibanez's first popularly-known and probably most widely-read novel with the World War as its background, was re-issued after all these years. The second, seen in a projection room and reviewed by this magazine last July, "The Marriage Clause," was given to the theatre-going public for the first time at the Hippodrome. Both plays more than justify themselves.

The Ibanez play, which made its success originally because of Rex Ingram's direction, the popularity of the novel, and the casting of the piece, now makes its appeal presumably on the fact that it was the piece which first gave Vanentino his recognition as a screen actor. It does not need that fact to justify its re-appearance. It has aged less than the great majority of pieces of the kind and might have been written and produced this year of 1926 as far as effectiveness and appeal are concerned. It shows its age very slightly. It recalls and amazingly recreates the war feelings of 1914-19. Aside from the natural interest in the astonishingly young appearing tangoing Valentino and Alice Terry, to both of whom it meant fame, it is amazing the number of names since become important listed in the long list of characters. Some of them in quite minor seemingly-unimportant roles. They number among others Joseph Swickard, Alan Hale, John Sainopolis, Jean Hersholt, Wallace Beery, "Bull" Montana, and Arthur Hoyt.

"The Marriage Clause," reviewed by Laurence Reid in the July 3, issue, is an outstanding Universal picture. It reflects the greatest credit on Lois Weber for her direction and also for her scenario version of Dana Burnett's Saturday Evening Post story. Compelling, hardly ever flagging in interest with an excellent suggestion of thought-transference, it is even more important because it proves that Billie Dove is an actress and not what she has principally been regarded up to now, a manequin. She displays ability and depths that any of her sisters of the screen might well envy. Because of that, and Miss Weber's direction, it is a picture which will go far to enhance the reputation of star, director and company.

FRENCH AUTHOR HERE

LUCIEN LE MAIN, French author, playwright and journalist, and once a student at various American universities, has arrived in this country as correspondent of a leading French paper—an event which is likely to be reflected in our screen fare of the coming season. Le Main, who is the author of several successful plays and a new musical comedy, "Marianna," was one of the first French writers to turn attention seriously to the screen, 15 of his stories having been filmed in France, three of them under his own direction. Now, in association with Miss Viola Foster, his New York personal representative, he will seek to duplicate this success on the American screen.

PRAISE FROM "SIR HUBERT" BROWN

DEVOTING two of his daily columns "It Seems to Me" in the New York World to answering questionnaires in regard to the possible decadence of these United States, Heywood Brown, the omniscient Harvard graduate conductor, pays this tribute to moving pictures: "And now there comes the motion picture, growing fast and showing upon occasion such extraordinary improvement that I don't see how anybody can longer question the fact that this field of expression is also potentially among the art forms. Possibly America's ultimate major contribution to world culture will be some marvelous movie."

TILLIE'S IN TOWN

MARION DAVIES arrived in New York from Hollywood this week to purchase a wardrobe for "Tillie, the Toiler," based on Russ Westover's comic strip, which she will start immediately upon her return to the West Coast.

OFF FOR STORIES

J. C. DE TABIBE, authors' representative associated with Miss Viola Foster in New York, sailed for Europe on October 2 on his annual trip in search of screen stories. He carries abroad with him a number of contracts for European authors whom he represents to write original screen stories for American companies, and will bring back a variety of other material representing the new output of his group of writers.

Mr. de Tabibe sees a strong future for European stories on the screen, since their originality and subtlety makes them refreshing and popular. While abroad he will visit Spain, France, Germany and Italy.

TEXAS MOVIE MAD

WITH both "Wings" and "The Rough Riders" being filmed in Texas, citizens of that extensive State have been having more than their share of excitement lately. Clara Bow was fairly mobbed by a thousand students of Texas State University when she visited the campus lately, and early in the same week she addressed the members of the State Senate and House on the subject of aviation. Distinguished visitors to the "Rough Riders" unit, near San Antonio, have included Dan Moody, Democratic nominee for governor, and Mrs. Moody.

AT FIRST NATIONAL

ROBERT KYLE, formerly with the First National exploitation forces, has joined the scenario department as a literary and dramatic scout under the supervision of Mrs. Florence Strauss. Morton Blumenstock, for four years a member of the First National advertising and publicity department, will go to the West Coast with John McCormick to enter the titling department, in recognition of the work he has done in aiding in the titling of "Subway Sadie," "Paradise" and "Not Herbert," under the pen name of Morton Barnard.

MUSICAL WASHINGTON

MAURICE T. ANDREWS, formerly on the reviewing staff of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, is the New York representative of Musical Washington, an interesting new weekly publication, the first issue of which is now off the press. It deals capably with musical activities and the allied arts, and seeks to promote Washington as the cultural centre of the United States. Andrews is represented by picture and theatrical reviews, as well as several interesting articles.

LAUPHEIMER VERKUENDIGER

AN interesting feature of Carl Laemmle's stay in Laupheim, his native city in Germany, was an English-German edition of the local paper commemorating his recovery, copies of which have just been received here. The issue is printed in both English and German, and contains a multitude of tributes which should be heartily gratifying to the Universal chief.

GRIMM WITH FOX

BEN GRIMM, well-known trade paper and publicity man, has joined Fox Films to make the Picture Play Story Strips, running serially in newspapers. Leonard Mitchill, who has been creating these, has been appointed by the U. S. Steamship Lines to act as personal and press representative for Queen Marie of Roumania during her tour of this country.

REAL PRESS AGENCY

TWO genuine publicity scoops have been put across recently by First National, well out of the beaten track and of great value. Constance Talmadge covered the Dempsey-Tunney fight for the United Press, the story going over the wire to about 800 papers. This was then followed up by Colleen Moore, who covered the first two games of the world's series for the same service.

NEW BRITISH CONCERN

CLAUDE W. SOMAN, formerly associated with the United International Corporation, Ltd., has severed his connection with that firm and formed Film Exploitations, Ltd., in London. The company will deal, primarily, with the importation into England of productions, and is also figuring in production. It is soundly financed and should become an important factor in the field.

COAST REPRESENTATIVE

HELEN HANCOCK MASON, popular and well known in Hollywood, has been chosen by Miss Viola Foster, New York authors' representative, to represent her on the West Coast. She left for California this week with advance copies of the newest novels, to be submitted to Coast producers.

Athlete, Cleric, Stunt Man, Star

Remarkable Career and Personality of Fred Thomson Brought Out in Interview, Revealing Unusual Ideals and Background

By Paul Thompson

AN ordained minister of the gospel crossing the continent from Los Angeles to Philadelphia, three thousand and some miles to see, not to oppose and attempt to stop, a prize fight for the heavy-weight championship of the world! A bit unusual, the reader will concede, yet that is what Fred Thomson, unquestionably one of the best known men in the moving picture world, did. But to anyone who knows it is not at all unusual but characteristic of the man. His friend, Gene Tunney, was fighting Jack Dempsey for the title and being interested not only in his wartime buddy but also in the so-called manly art of self-defense, or, possibly more truthfully, to quote that famous sporting editor, Bill McGeehan, "the art of modified murder," there was nothing else he could do but make the trans-continental pilgrimage to the City of Brotherly Love.

To the countless thousands who know Fred Thomson on the screen, and they are countless, because they embrace not only the younger generation of the country en masse but those older children, their fathers and uncles and grandfathers, it may come as a shock to learn, not that he is interested in prize-fighting but that he is entitled to wear a clerical collar and quote scriptures from in or out of the pulpit. And to how many of his followers and admirers is it known that he is one of the greatest athletes of the last two decades? But he is all these things and for several years his name was on the lips of anyone who pretended to have even a superficial knowledge of the track and field stars of these United States. He held the amateur records for the sixteen-pound shot-put and for the 120 high hurdles and the 220 low hurdles. As though this were not enough glory for one man, he was the all-around American amateur athletic champion for one year and a member of the American Olympic team at Antwerp in 1922. It is of such material that your favorite "western" actor is made. And that, gentle readers, is only part of the story.

If you insist upon more melodrama in the story of Fred Thomson than the following paragraphs provide ponder on this: A Princeton man managed by a Harvard graduate being interviewed by a man who graduated from Yale; certainly an unusual trinity. In the case of the two first named Fred Thomson and Joseph P. Kennedy, the latter played baseball on the Crimson varsity team back in 1911-12 and after an apprenticeship in banking now controls the destinies of the Film Booking Office Corporation. It is a striking illustration, all too seldom offered, of how some men can triumph over the handicap of being university graduates. But that, as the recently become acidulous Mr. Kipling would say, "is another story."

A Remarkable Personality

Possibly it will be better to tell the Thomson story chronologically, although it really starts with the luncheon which was given in his honor on the second Friday after the battle of the Sesquicentennial at Philadelphia. It was opportune for the star was in the east and that seldom happens. As "an added attraction," to quote the phraseology of Walter Kingsley of the Keith-Albee forces, the newly-crowned heavyweight champion was a sort of co-star with the hard-riding Princeton Technological Seminary graduate. Present also were General Will Hays, the host, Joseph P. Kennedy, and lesser luminaries. It was in the Hotel Astor ballroom where the luncheon was held that the present writer gained some slight inkling of the interesting background of the guest of honor. Hence the determination, if it were humanly possible, to get the story before a six o'clock train that evening carried the subject back to the coast and his resumption of picture-making. It was twenty minutes to six when more or less tactfully I gave an imitation of the Arabs and folded my tent and stole away from the Algonquin. Thomson and his aide-de-camp were still struggling with leather straps around the suit cases.

Love for horses and for the type of life his pictures so consistently represent dates back to his youth. There must have been some predestination that later in life he would capitalize this love and knowledge. In Pasadena, where the Thomson family lived, he was, as a youngster, practically in the saddle all the time when he was not in school. Camping out in nearby deserts and woods he early in life became inculcated with the spirit of the outdoors. Even when he went to high school and after that to Occidental College in Los Angeles vacations were spent preparing unconsciously for what was years afterward to be his life work.

In preparatory school and in college athletics claimed him as it naturally would, the physical and mental type that he is. In football he excelled and played a game at Occidental that, had he been in the east under observation, would have won him all-America honors. His interest in the gridiron was greater than in track and field sports although it was in the latter that he was to become famous.

When Fred Thomson came east to enter the Princeton Theological Seminary, because he had decided that he would enter the ministry, his football playing was of little value to the university or to himself. The fact that he had played on the coast and that he was a graduate student at Princeton made his participation in the

Fox Holds Option On Phonofilms

AN option on Phonofilm is held by the Fox Film Corporation, it was learned this week from an authentic source. The option has only a few days to run.

If the deal goes through, Phonofilm would be developed under the jurisdiction of the inventor, Dr. Lee DeForest, at whose disposal would be placed the added facilities of the Fox company. Further experiments would be carried on at the DeForest studios in New York and at the Fox Eastern plant.

Reports have been in circulation for several weeks that a deal between Fox and Phonofilm was in progress, but these were not confirmed until this week.

Detroit Sowing Ground for Theatres

NEW houses for the suburban districts of Detroit, Mich., are contemplated by Keith-Albee who are not alone in these projects as Kunsky-Balaban-Katz are also turning their attention to the conquest of the suburbs.

E. F. Albee recently paid a visit to the city of Detroit and vicinity and new houses are to be constructed in the near future, as might be indicated by the closing of a deal which gives Keith-Albee the house now under construction at Highland Park. An East End theatre is one of several planned.

Kunsky-Balaban-Katz are free to devote their time to the suburban field now that their new Michigan Theatre is fully launched and does not require their immediate care. They have a house under construction at Birmingham, sites obtained at Royal Oak and Redford. The Lincoln Square on Fort Street was also recently acquired by the firm that has purchased half interest in the Kramer, 5743 Michigan Avenue, and the Martha Washington, 10341 Joseph Campau Avenue. In addition, six neighborhood houses are planned, according to George W. Trendle, general manager of Kunsky-Balaban-Katz.

game as a representative of Old Nassau out of the question. What he could and did do was the organization and heading of a team of men ineligible, situated as he was, to play the varsity. They were called the "Yannigans" and numbered among the eleven players several all-American players and other stars. The sort of practice and opposition they afforded the Varsity may be gained from the fact that it was Captain Eddie Hart's 1911 team they were opposing. Between the Harvard and the Yale games the "Yannigans" scored a total of 18 points to nothing in one game, whereas Yale, Harvard and all the other teams on the schedule had not been able to cross the Orange and Black goal line the entire season. Seven of "Captain" Thomson's team were on the Princeton varsity the following fall. It showed that they could play football rather well in the west as in the east and at a period when such an idea was heretical.

A Champion Athlete

It was, however, in the field and on the cinder path that fame was to come to the young athletic Lochinvar out of the west. He could not represent Princeton on the track team that carried the New Jersey colors at intercollegiate meets because of the same bar that operated against his playing football in an orange and black jersey. He could, however, compete in the amateur athletic championships of the country. This he did with such success that in 1910-11-12 he won consistently and in 1912 held the all-around championship of the United States. His records for the 16-pound shot of 45 feet and for the hur-

May Eject Two Members of Philly Board

DECLARING that exchangemen largely interested in the operation of picture theatres should not be in controlling positions on the Philadelphia Film Board of Trade, representatives of the national distributing companies are attempting to oust from office Oscar Neufeld and Ben Amsterdam. Through a secret ballot the offices were declared vacant and nominations made by those who led the movement against the exhibitor-exchangemen. The nominations follow: President, Bill Heenan, First National, and Oscar Neufeld, De Luxe; Vice-President, Percy R. Bloch; Treasurer, Ben Amsterdam, Masterpiece, and Miles Gibbons, Pathe. It is understood that Jack Greenberg will be re-appointed secretary of the Board regardless of the regime.

Neufeld and Amsterdam, the two men whom the representatives of the national distributing companies are attempting to oust from office, have been president and treasurer respectively of the Board for the last five years. Mr. Neufeld, in addition to being interested in the operation of the De Luxe and Independent exchanges, is also a half owner in a chain of eleven theatres operating in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Mr. Amsterdam has a half interest in the Masterpiece exchange and is also a part owner of the Franklin Theatre Company, which recently acquired a long term lease of the theatres operated in the vicinity of Reading by Carr and Schad.

Judge's Decision Affects North Dakota Theatres

SEVERAL theatres in North Dakota are affected by the decision of Judge C. W. Butts, Devils Lake, who held that the school board of Maxbass had no authority to rent a school regularly for motion pictures. On request of taxpayers for an injunction Judge Butts decided that the board might permit use of the school for temporary and non-exclusive purposes that had no aspect of commercialism.

Officials of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri are watching with interest the outcome of a recent purchase of motion picture equipment by the rural high schools of Sublette and Moscow, Kans. The exhibitor organization has no objection to motion pictures in schools as purely educational aid, but when the pictures are used as entertainment, as has been done in the past, it is there that the line is drawn.

dles of under 16 seconds stood for several years. Then in 1912 came his journey to Antwerp as a member of our Olympic team. More honors for the Princeton theologian. Incidentally he has a brother who he expects will carry on the Thomson athletic tradition.

Then came the work for which he had been ordained if not anointed, the preaching of the gospel. But here came the unrest and dissatisfaction with his theoretical life-work that was to bear fruit later on. He felt then that he did not fit in the church. His field for work was too large, too much outside church walls for him to do his best. Before he really had crystallized this self-analysis the war came and with it, in 1918, our entry into the world conflict. The football-playing minister was in Goldfield. He at once enlisted with the 143d Field Artillery division of California and went overseas.

This was the division of which Mary Pickford was the honorary colonel. Fred went as a chaplain. But what a chaplain! Knowing engineering, mathematics and the kindred and allied subjects, his was not merely a matter of ministering to the spiritual needs of his men. He could and did go up and down the lines of the various batteries and help the gunners get their correct range, showing them why mathematically and practically, and not merely theoretically, his suggestions were sound. If it were a question of part of the mechanism being deranged he fixed it, or showed how it should be fixed. He was an artilleryman as much as a minister, even if he was not always actually operating a gun. That is what a knowledge of logarithms and projection will do for a clergyman on the fighting line.

This is eloquent as showing the type of brain Thomson has. There are few subjects with which he is not conversant. His engineering skill is so great that he has perfected a two-cycle motor that may revolutionize the automobile industry. This was done while he was confined to a hospital bed through injuries received in his moving picture work. His is essentially an academic brain.

With Tunney in A. E. F.

After the armistice the chaplain's task and that of others wearing the cloth became more difficult than ever. His and theirs, the business of keeping up the morale of the men naturally impatient to return to the States and be mustered out. Football games, baseball, boxing and every other sort of sport that would divert them. Here, of course, he was at home and happy doing the thing he loved to do himself and consequently delighted to teach others. At the inter-allied games in Paris in April, 1919, he met Gene Tunney. This marked the start of the ascendancy of the marine's pugilistic star which reached its zenith at Philadelphia at the fight which the moving picture star crossed the continent to witness. It also marked the beginning of the friendship between the two champions, with many bonds other than the athletic one to hold them close to each other.

It is interesting to note here the effect of the work of men like Chaplain Thomson among the members of the A. E. F. in France. It put boxing, or prize fighting if you will, on a different, a higher plane. This because of the diversified character of the men making up our army abroad. Boxing bouts could be staged anywhere any time and needing little equipment gained a popularity that transcended that of other sports such as football and baseball, which could be played only at certain times. It leavened the army under Pershing so that at Philadelphia bankers as well as bankers' sons, brokers, school teachers, college professors and presidents, in short men from all walks of life, made up that mob of spectators in contradistinction to the usual aggregation of plug-uglies and corner loafers and the previously accepted partisans of boxing.

In Goldfield, where he heard the clarion call for service abroad in behalf of the world's democracy being made safe, Thomson was unconsciously carrying on his athletic tradition of Occidental and Princeton. Preaching at night, by day he was swinging a sledge-hammer and drilling. It meant not only earning a living to supplement the

Canadian Organized Labor Opposed to Tax

DURING the week of September 27th, the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress dealt with motion picture questions at its annual convention in Montreal, Quebec. A resolution calling for the abolishment of the amusement tax in the various provinces on the ground that it had outlived its usefulness, was presented by the Ottawa Allied Trades and Labor Association. To this motion was added an amendment suggested by delegates from Quebec which read, "unless same is devoted to the maintenance of hospitals and charities." Though the proposed amendment developed opposition, the resolution, as amended, was carried and the Provincial Governments are now faced with the cry of Canadian organized labor to abolish the amusement tax.

The amusement tax system is already in vogue in Quebec, where it was abolished by the Quebec Provincial Government, only to be taken over by the municipalities for hospital and relief purposes. The convention unanimously approved of a resolution providing for legislation which "would control in greater degree the operation of moving picture machines, including the examination of operators of such machines." There was little discussion on this motion.

none too great financial rewards for preaching the gospel but, equally important, from the theologian's viewpoint, keeping physically fit. This he has done consistently ever since he was a kid. Not content with the hard-riding he does for his pictures he even has a wild bull on his ranch which he wrestles with because of the exercise this strenuous opponent invariably supplies.

For a matter of fact, the only vacation or surcease from work or exercise which he has had in twenty years, or rather his entire life, came from his enforced isolation in a hospital for six months. This was the result of a mixup of a stage coach and his horse in a picture. Two compound fractures and a broken leg would not be denied. Even in this period he was not mentally idle as the above mentioned two-cycle motor engine will bear out.

From Ministry to Movies

His determination to leave the field of the ministry and enter the moving picture industry was characteristic of the man. He had become more and more conscious of the fact that he "did not fit" in the church. His opportunities were too limited. His audience was too small. For this reason, and knowing nothing of the game and honestly and sincerely because he felt it was his duty and not because of any financial lure, he determined on his course.

His first years were those of other novitiates. On his return from Europe in 1919 he made his moving picture debut. One of his earliest bits was with Mary Pickford in "The Love Light." Single reels and two-reelers followed. Joseph Brown was one of the men who helped to guide his footsteps and those of his horse in those early days. Association with Dustin and William Farnum and other equally well-known actors, almost always in typical western pictures, served as an additional apprenticeship for what was to come. The usual cheap serial came about this time—this one called "Evil's Talons"—the sort of serial that the star years afterward when he has arrived would give much to kill.

Kennedy and Thomson

Through the F.B.O. Thomson met Joseph P. Kennedy, the Boston banker who had come into the picture business by way of Wall Street. Kennedy, a Boston man starting with nothing, who had made his way to the top of the financial ladder with

Permanent Theatre On First National Lot

WITH a view to production economy First National has erected a theatre on the studio grounds at Burbank which has been so constructed as to allow for changes in appearance in both the interior and exterior, the foundation and the outer shell only being permanent.

The building may easily be transformed into a modern type of theatre, a small town opera house, or music hall. It has already demonstrated its usefulness in one picture. Colleen Moore's "Twinkletoes." Its dimensions are: width, 60 feet; length, 105 feet and height inside in the clear, 40 feet.

a reputed at least ten millions, had decided to do the unusual for a banker, got himself into the moving picture business. Having proved his gameness covering first base for Harvard baseball teams back in 1911-12, it was inevitable. His marriage to Rose Fitzgerald, the daughter of Boston's famous mayor and the minnesinger who, under the pseudonym of "Honey Fitz," made famous "Sweet Adeline" at baseball games and elsewhere, indirectly led to the film industry and to that particular company which handled the output of that famous Princeton athletic star, Fred Thomson. From the marriage came seven children and these, as soon as they were old enough to visit moving picture theatres, became, as all youngsters do, the most rabid and devout Fred Thomson fans. Once Joseph Kennedy was discovered by his offspring to be associated with the hard-riding hero of their film world they would not have permitted him to go back to the prosaic business of stocks and bonds. Kennedy's own meeting with the star and the fine friendship that immediately was born between men so much alike but confirmed his children's idea. He would carry on today for the sake of the Thomson pictures even if other products of the F.B.O. studios were not always as profitable as had been expected. That, then, is the bond between those two men, two of the best types in the industry today, even if the domain of one is the business end and that of the other acting, directing and producing.

Incidentally, Kennedy's is the company that introduced "Red" Grange to the screen. I have a vague unsubstantiated suspicion that he will be the one to "do" Suzanne Lenglen, Vincent Richards, et al, and make F.B.O. known as "the athletes' screen company, unlimited."

This appeal of the Fred Thomson pictures to children is universal. Will Hays said the same thing about his and his brother's children. The star's own trip east to the Dempsey-Tunney fight proved this conclusively. At every stop which his train made there would be vast crowds waiting to see him and hear him speak and the juvenile element was the predominant one. It was as though a sort of Pied Piper of Film-land were making a pilgrimage across the country. Everywhere he was recognized and acclaimed by his youthful hero-worshippers. Curious in a way, because without make-up and a complete absence of the broad-brimmed hat, chaps, shirt, open at the throat, lariat, quirt, horse, etc., he seemingly was as well known to them and as recognizable as John Drew would be to an older generation of legitimate play-goers. There is no question of the hold Fred Thomson has on the youth of this country and of his appeal. And in that he is happy aside from the monetary return his pictures represent. This is the realization of his ambition, the compelling motive that made him leave the ministry and go into pictures.

A Practical Idealist

Possibly this ambition and the star's ideas are best expressed in an extremely sapient paraphrase which the once all-around champion made of a Gilbert K. Chesterton paradox, that master of such things. The brilliant Irishman said "The most dangerous heretic is the one who is nine-tenths orthodox." In other words one suffering from half-truths is worse off than one suffering from untruths because that fifty per cent. is damnably persuasive against the truth. So Thomson feels that "The most effective idealist is the man who is nine-tenths entertaining. You can preach the propaganda, if you wish to call it that, of clean living and other virtues by entertaining the congregation, which is what a moving picture audience really is. For people physically and mentally tired and eagerly seeking, whether they are conscious of it or not, a sort of unsensed idealism, you can best give them what they seek by entertaining and amusing them in the way in which I am trying to do.

"People resent propaganda, and I do not blame them, but you can teach a lesson without their being conscious that that is what you are doing. But that is like Christianity. It seems hard to put it into practice yet it isn't difficult at all. You live it, not preach it. As that famous Princeton man, Robert Speare, said to a caller: 'You are a very ordinary man; most

Maryville, Mo., Sunday Shows Incur Outburst

AS a result of Sunday shows attempted two weeks ago at Maryville, Mo., a war is on between the Protestant ministers of the town and exhibitors with the ministers taking the aggressive against "the use of the Sabbath day for commercialized amusement."

C. E. Cook, business manager of the Missouri M. P. T. O., and his brother, Ray Cook, are among the exhibitors involved, the two being partners in Maryville. The former branded the outburst as "just another flareup." He further stated that "the majority of citizens in Maryville want Sunday shows. A victory for the ministers would have a bad effect upon other smaller towns which enjoy Sunday shows and we do not intend to allow any tyrannical imposition from the ministers."

For one week after the initial Sunday showing there was no talk of dissension. Then came the combined attack and fight on the part of the ministers which will split the town into two factions. The ministers adopted a resolution declaring that the outside attractions "of an appealing nature," such as motion picture shows "tend to destroy the Sabbath fellowship of the home and family life," and that "the Sabbath day should be safeguarded from the irroads of worldliness and that its sanctity should be zealously perpetuated and preserved."

There is no state law prohibiting Sunday shows or any other type of amusement in Missouri.

Exhibitor Voluntarily Pays More for Film

THAT an exhibitor actually voluntarily paid more than the contract price for a film feature because he liked it so much and had secured such good business with the picture has been reported by Maurice Davis, Montreal branch manager of Regal Films, Limited, Toronto. After playing "The Volga Boatman" at the Victoria Theatre, Quebec City, Quebec, A. Mirsau, proprietor of the theatre, sent a check for $75 extra to the Montreal Regal office as an appreciation of the quality of "The Volga Boatman." In his letter, Mr. Mirsau declared that he made one mistake and that was his failure to raise admission prices for the feature.

of us are, but by extraordinary effort you can do some good thing.' His comment to the undergraduate applies to us all. What we all want to do is something for the youth of today and tomorrow and that to me is the finest idealism a man can have in this world."

You would expect from the Fred Thomson type of man that he would deprecate a certain kind of moving picture. He does. He absolutely is incensed when the subject of some foreign directors brought to this country is brought up. And the millions that they are entrusted with to spend on pictures with no moral purpose, so called soul-searching themes which are pornographic in intent if not in expression. One famous director, whom he dislikes above all others, he says, has had the spending of enough money on unworthy pictures of this kind to build and endow a university of the size and importance of Princeton.

The clergyman-actor's fans may be supposed to have some interest in his famous horse "Silver King." He told me he had spent five months in and around New York before he found the horse he wanted. This raw Irish equine companion in all his pictures is, of course, beyond jewels and rubies of great price. It is not only because of his intelligence and his training to be almost unbelievably human but the manner in which he photographs. Other colors would be muddy or colorless on the screen. And then, too the majestic sweep of that plumed white tail in action in the pictures! It cannot be duplicated. If it can and a successor or understudy can be found there is a twenty thousand dollar check for the person who brings Fred Thomson and the horse together.

It is consistent in view of his Theological Seminary birthright that I should quote: "For to them that hath shall be given." in this valedictory to Fred Thomson. It is not enough that while he has had only one picture on Broadway, to my inexpert knowledge, yet he is one of the biggest money makers in the business. He simply had to have a wife who could do her bit to eke out the family income. Her name is Frances Marion. She has a rather promising future. To date she has only written such pictures as "Stella Dallas," "Abraham Lincoln," "Humoresque," "Tolerable David," "Potash and Perlmutter," "A Thief in Paradise," "Secrets," and several of the earlier Mary Pickford successes such as "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

Melville Brown Recovering From Auto Accident

Melville Brown, the Universal director who suffered internal injuries and two broken ribs in an automobile accident last week, is reported to be slowly along the road to recovery. Brown, on vacation in Redwood forest, was driving along when a car ahead caught fire. He stopped to help subdue the flames when another car, coming along on the wrong side of the road, bore down upon him, seriously injuring him. He was driven by his wife two hundred miles to a hospital from which he has just been discharged. It is likely that Brown will have to postpone production on "The Four Flushers," in which he is scheduled to direct Reginald Denny.

Conn. and Mass. Companies Incorporated

Regional Chain Theatres of New England, Inc., is the title of a newly organized corporation with $100,000 capital, to operate motion picture theatres. Incorporators are Benjamin M. Siegel of Cambridge, Mass.; Marion E. Steeves of Somerville, and Kathryn A. MacDonald, Framingham, Mass.

Amusement & Realty Co., is the title of a new corporation organized in Hartford, Conn., to own and operate theatres, with $100,000 capital. T. C. McKane of Hartford heads the corporations.

German Photographic Concerns in Merger

FOUR largest German factories of photographic apparatus, moving picture and cinema machinery and supplies, optical instruments and apparatus (Contessa-Nettel A.-G., Stuttgart; Ernemann Werke A.-G., Dresden; Optische Anstalt, C. P. Goerz A.-G., Berlin, Zehlendorf; Ica A.-G., Dresden), which are already functioning under a preliminary agreement for the purpose of protecting mutual interest, will undergo a fusion that will be consummated in a general meeting to be held soon, states a report from Consul George P. Waller, Dresden, Germany, made public by the Department of Commerce.

The C. P. Goerz Co. plans according to reports to consolidate its capital stock and increase it in the proportion of 8 to 3, bringing it from 9,450,000 marks to a total sum of 12,600,000 marks. From this increase, 4,200,000 marks are intended to be applied for the exchange of shares with the Ica A.-G.: 2,850,000 marks worth of shares with the Ernemann A.-G., and 2,400,000 marks for the exchange of shares with Contessa-Nettel Co.

The C. P. Goerz Co. closed its last accounts with a loss of more than 1,000,000 marks. Other firms booked losses of from 50,000 to 450,000 marks. The final fusion has been effected as the only means to overcome the crisis. The accomplishment of the present merger is reported to be due to the initiative of the Zeiss A.-G., Jena (Thuringia), which owns the majority of the shares of the C. P. Goerz Co., while the Ernemann A.-G. controls the Ica A.-G., which again has been controlling the Contessa-Nettel Co. for some time past.

S.M.P.E. Holds Semi-Annual Convention

Motion Picture Engineers Hold Three-Day Session at Briarcliff Lodge, New York; Many Interesting Subjects Discussed

THE Society of Motion Picture Engineers held its semi-annual convention at Briarcliff Lodge, New York, the first three days of the past week. This is the 22nd conference of this organization formed in Washington, D.C., in 1915. Papers on many interesting technical subjects were read by the attending delegates and officers for the coming year were elected.

The feature of the first day's session was a dinner tendered to Will Hays at which Mr. Hays discussed the internationalization of films, a detailed report of which is given elsewhere in this issue.

The morning period of the first day was devoted to the opening address by W. B. Cook, Kodascope Laboratories, Inc., business reports and "The Progress of the Industry," a paper read by Carl E. Egler, National Laboratory Works, Cleveland.

In the afternoon talks were made by Martin J. Quigley, Exhibitors Herald, on "Technical Advance;" E. T. Clarke, director Eastman School of Music, discussed "An Exhibitors Problem in 1926;" Symon Gould, of the Film Arts Guild, addressed the convention on the subject of "The Little Theatre Movement in the Cinema" and F. W. Perkins, director of the Motion Picture Division, Department of Agriculture, spoke on "Preservation of Historical Films."

Exhibitors should organize special theatres for pictures of limited appeal, in the opinion of E. T. Clarke. Pictures like "The Last Laugh" and "Alaska Adventure" should be played under a two-a-day policy, he said, adding he intends to test this theory at a 500-seat theatre in Rochester.

In vastly greater degree than any other art, the motion picture is dependent for its existence and advancement upon science and invention, Martin J. Quigley stated in calling upon technicians of the industry to insist upon "thoughtful consideration of their activities by the whole industry." The obligation of the industry to its technicians is not properly or proportionately recognized, he said, pointing out that the motion picture was born into the world as an invention and not as an art.

Tuesday's sessions were given over to the election of officers with W. B. Cook of Kodascope Laboratories re-elected president. H. B. Gage, Corning Glass Works (Corning, N.Y.), is the new vice-president, succeeding M. W. Palmer of Famous. W. C. Hubbard, Cooper Hewitt Co., is treasurer and L. C. Porter, General Electric Co. (Harrison, N.J.), treasurer. The latter succeeds J. C. Summers, Edison Lamp Works (Harrison, N.J.). Board of governors are in addition to officers: J. C. Kroesen, Edison Lamp Works; F. H. Richardson, "M. P. World."

More delving into the technical end of the business by means of papers: "Some Considerations in Spotlighting" by J. H. Kurlander, Director, Engineering Dept., Brenkert Light Projection Company, Detroit, Mich. "Light Sources in Motion Picture Work" by P. R. Bassett, Sperry Gyroscope Co., Brooklyn, N.Y. "The Effect of Motion Pictures on the Eye" by Guy Henry, Director of the Eyesight Conservation Council of America.

Reports of Standards and Nomenclature Committee. "Reflection of Characteristics of Motion Picture Screens" by L. A. Jones and C. F. Tuttle, Research Laboratory, Eastman Kodak Company.

The evening session was devoted to motion picture demonstrations; "Wild Birds and Animal Habits in Motion Pictures" by Norman McClintock, Photo-naturalist, University of Pittsburgh.

"Colored Motion Photomicrographs Showing the Formation of Crystals of Organic Compounds under the Polarization Microscope" by L. A. Jones and C. F. Tuttle, Research Laboratory, Eastman Kodak Company.

"The Business of International News by Motion Pictures" by Emanuel Cohen, Editor in Chief, Pathe News.

A picture of audiences of the future seated in the theatre viewing newsfilms, transmitted by ethereal waves, of events throughout the world even as they are transpiring was drawn by Emanuel Cohen, Pathe News editor, for delegates to the fourth annual convention of the Society.

When and if this is accomplished, Cohen stated, the whole world will be linked together in instantaneous understanding.

Tracing the newsfilm from its beginning, in sporadic fashion, more than a decade ago, Cohen detailed its development from 1910 to the present, stating that it was in that year that a regular and systematic medium of news dissemination by films was instituted by Charles Pathe.

Committee on Standards urged the adoption for six months of the standard intermittent sprocket. No action was taken, but it was determined to co-operate with foreign engineers during that period.

Among the delegates are: A. C. Dick, Westinghouse Electric Co., Bloomfield, N. J.; H. Griffin, P. J. McGuire, International Projector Corp., New York; Carl E. Egler, National Lamp Works, Cleveland; J. Manheimer, E. J. Electric Co., New York; Kenneth Hickman, E. E. Richardson, J. I. Crabtree, L. A. Jones, J. G. Capstaff, C. F. Tuttle, M. W. Seymour, Eastman Kodak Co., Rochester, N.Y.; J. H. Kurlander, Brenkert Light Projection Co., Detroit; P. R. Bassett, Sperry Gyroscope Co., Brooklyn; W. V. D. Kelley, Kelley Color Films, Inc., Los Angeles; Roscoe Hubbard, Consolidated Film Laboratories, New York; Otto Nelson, National Cash Register Co., Dayton, O.; O. A. Ross, consulting engineer, New York; Carl H. Gregory, New York Institute of Photography, New York; E. J. Wall, Walleston, Mass.; F. H. Richardson, "M. P. World"; Raymond S. Peck, director Canadian Government Motion Picture Bureau, Ottawa, Canada; Roger M. Hill, theatre equipment engineer, U. S. Army Motion Picture Service, Washington; J. H. McNabb, Bell & Howell, Chicago; C. L. Chamer, Pathe; Irving Samuels, Allentown, Pa.; John H. Powrie, Robert Conklin; H. M. Raess, Warner Research Laboratories, New York; H. N. De Witt, William Redpath, Toronto; Dr. Kenneth Mees, Eastman Kodak Co.; William C. Kunzman, Cleveland; J. A. Norling, A. B. Loucks, Loucks-Norling, New York; L. C. Porter, General Electric Co., Harrison, N.J.; J. C. Kroesen, J. A. Summers, Edison Lamp Works, Harrison, N.J.; W. C. Hubbard, Cooper-Hewitt; H. B. Gage, Corning Glass Works, Corning, N.Y.; Earle Dennison, M. W. Palmer, Famous Players, Astoria, L.I.; T. Clarke, Eastman Theatre, Rochester; Fred W. Perkins, Department of Agriculture, Washington; S. R. Burns, vice-president, International Projector Corp.; H. J. Yates and H. M. Goetz of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc.; Harry Rubin, chief projectionist, Public Theatres; Art Smith, projectionist, Capitol Theatre, New York; C. A. Grey, projectionist, Lancaster Theatre, Boston; Edward Horn, Tremont Film Laboratories, New York, and A. Gordon, Akron Orpheum Theatre, Akron, O.

There are 204 members in the society, 111 of whom are acting. Fourteen new members have been added, and there have been no resignations since the Washington meeting.

Pictures taken on September 21st of the Palace Theatre, at Fort Myers, Florida, three days after the hurricane and high water had swept over the state. The exterior, with the street flooded, and the interior are shown. Part of the roof was also damaged. The remodeling and cleaning of the theatre had to be held up until the latter part of the week when the water finally receded. Charles K. Ellis, manager of the Palace, remarked that he was going to fix things up better than ever for "we can't let a little thing like a hurricane get our goat."

Profits of $848,356 for Third Quarter for "U" Indicate New High Record for Year

NET earnings of Universal for the third quarter year period ending August seventh show a sharp increase in profits, the figures being $848,356, after deducting Federal taxes. This is equivalent, after preferred dividend requirements, to $3.11 per share on the 250,000 shares of common stock outstanding, as compared with $1,549,199, or $5.28 per share of the common for the first nine months of the year. Gross income for the third quarter totaled $6,115,404, while the nine months gross is placed at $20,848,939.

This increase in profits is due to a 50 percent increase in the production schedule and the great number of pictures released during the first six months of the year; also to the company's policy of charging off, at the time of release, the total cost of films, income from which may be spread over several months following.

Novel Reception for Laemmle

Leading Figures in Film and Finance

Greet Universal President on Return

A WELCOME home committee comprising the leading figures in the film industry and financial world greeted Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, on his return from Europe Friday morning. The delegation assembled aboard Mayor Walker's official boat and went down the New York Bay to meet the S.S. Berengaria, bearing the Laemmle party in Quarantine.

There Mr. Laemmle was taken aboard the Mayor's boat and landed at the Battery from whence the party proceeded to City Hall, where Mayor Walker, a warm friend of the Universal chief, welcomed him personally and officially.

From City Hall the entire party wended its way to the Universal home offices at 730 Fifth Avenue where a general reception was held for all Universal employees and Mr. Laemmle's business associates and friends.

The welcome is characterized as the reaction of the industry to Laemmle's game fight for his life. Stricken with appendicitis on his way over to Europe last June, he was rushed to the operating table in London, and passed several critical weeks when it was thought he could not live. Since then he has been recuperating in London, Carlsbad and in Laupheim, his native home. Reports which have preceded him indicate he is now in excellent health again.

Included on the welcoming committee, of which Will H. Hays was chairman, were Earl W. Hammons, of Educational; Elmer Pearson of Pathe, William Fox, Albert Warner, Harry Warner, J. A. Jacobs of the Bray Production, G. McL. Baynes of Kinograms, Henry M. Hobart of the Distinctive Pictures Corporation, Jules Mastbaum of the Stanley Co., R. F. Woodhull of the M. P. T. O. A., Joe Seider of the same organization, J. J. Murdock of the K-A interests; Jack Cosman, Hugo Riesenfeld, J. T. Wood of Screenland, David Strauss of the Morning Telegraph, Epes W. Sargent of the M. P. World, Martin Quigley of the Exhibitors Herald; Maurice Kann of the Film Daily, Fred J. McConnell of the Daily Review, William A. Johnston of the M. P. News, Dean Mathey of Dillon Reed and Co., I. N. Landaner and others.

Returning to America with the Universal chief was Julius and Abe Stern of the Stern Film Corporation, his brothers-in-law; Miss Rosabelle Laemmle and Carl Laemmle, Jr., his children; Mrs. Abe Stern, Maurice Fleckles and Mrs. Fleckles, Jack Ross, Laemmle's secretary, and Joseph Krame.

New Corp. of Tarentum, Pa., Incorporated in Harrisburg

A Pennsylvania charter has been granted at Harrisburg, Pa., to the Palace Theatre Corporation, Tarentum. The amount paid is totaled to $7,000, par $100. The corporation was incorporated to maintain and operate theatres and amusement enterprises. Louis Stein, New Kensington, is treasurer and holds 698 shares. The other incorporators are W. M. Leibovitz, Parnassus, one share, and Albert S. Yoder, New Kensington, one share.

Wash. School Boards Work With Exhibs. Against Non-theatrical Competition

FOLLOWING the victory scored against non-theatrical competition in the State of Washington by the M. P. T. O. W. last week, when the States Attorney General ruled it was unlawful to show motion pictures in schools for profit, J. M. Hone, executive secretary of the M.P.T.O.W., immediately advised all school authorities of this decision and secured promises of cooperation from practically every group.

The Seattle School Board resolved that:

WHEREAS, The Attorney General rendered an opinion to the Superintendent of Public Instruction, holding that school districts had no authority to exhibit motion pictures, or to permit school buildings to be used for the purpose of exhibiting motion pictures in competition with the regular picture theatres;

WHEREAS, The exhibition of motion pictures for entertainment only would probably fall within the ruling of the Attorney General;

BE IT RESOLVED, That the school buildings of the district shall not be used for the exhibition of motion pictures merely for entertainment, nor for the raising of funds, but the Educational Department may select educational films which have a direct bearing on the regular education work of the public schools, and an admission fee charge may be made sufficient to cover the expense of the films used and any other direct expense to which the District may be put in connection with the showing of these films.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) Reuben W. Jones,

Secretary.

McCormick Plans Four Films Abroad

Colleen Moore Pictures Would be Made in London, Paris, Rome, Berlin, with Native Talent Wherever Possible

AN interesting new development in the international production situation was forecast this week by the announcement, made by John McCormick, general-manager of production on the West Coast for First National, that plans were being considered under which Colleen Moore would make four pictures abroad next year, one in London, one in Berlin, and probably one each in Rome and Paris.

This means a recognition by First National of the importance of the international angle in picture making, and of the need of production abroad for the general stabilization of conditions. The foreign department of First National has urged the adoption of some such plan, and a number of interesting angles may develop.

Richard A. Rowland is abroad, and no general statement of policy can be forthcoming at this time, but he has stated repeatedly his belief in the advisability of European production as a wise business move, and it is known that it is his idea to aid this international situation by sending American stars to Europe and bringing European directors to the United States, thereby making it possible to make pictures in Europe which will be acceptable for American release, and giving to American films, in turn, better angles for the European public.

Two moves in this direction now become apparent—the proposed sending of Miss Moore to Europe and the importation of Alexander Korda to direct for First National. Korda will arrive with Rowland at an early date.

The plan for filming these four pictures abroad is not final, but it has progressed well beyond the tentative stage. The unit would go to London in the fall of 1927, and would work with British talent as far as possible in every department; Berlin, Rome and Paris would follow. The stories have not been definitely selected, but each, presumably, will be a popular work of the nation in which it is to be filmed.

While the idea is still in a very tentative stage, it is possible that out of this plan would develop a basis of operation under which First National would make a program of 12 pictures a year abroad. In the event that the company decided upon this, it may be said, the matter would be handled on a "circuit" basis. That is, when Colleen Moore left London to proceed to Berlin, the staff would remain behind and a new one be formed in Berlin. Other First National stars or featured players would then arrive in London to make a picture with the same unit. In that way, gradually, production units would be built up to high efficiency in the four European capitals, and First National players would make the circuit of the four. This, however, should be considered as a possibility rather than a definite plan. Further developments may be forthcoming upon the return from Europe of Mr. Rowland.

McCormick and Miss Moore returned to the West Coast this week after spending a busy fortnight in New York, seeing new plays, considering stories and conferring with home office officials. Two stories purchased just before his departure were "The Prince of Clowns" and "Glitter," for two leading First National male stars.

McCormick reports himself as highly pleased with the manner in which operations have gotten under way at the new Burbank Studios. Six productions will be started during October, five during November, two in December and five each in January and February. This heavy schedule will afford opportunity to a considerable amount of talent, and McCormick emphasizes in this respect the determined hunt which is going on for new faces.

"I know it sounds rather trite in print," he said, "but it is really true. We are trying in every way possible to uncover new talent and to develop it. For instance, we have in Arthur Stone a genuine comedy find. His work has been remarkable, and with a year or two of experience he will make them all watch their step."

Universal Expanding Theatre Holdings

Acquires New Houses in Nebraska, Massachusetts and Kansas City; Loew Interests Plan $1,000,000 Playhouse in Conn.

UNIVERSAL has secured a number of new theatres situated in strategic points throughout the country during the week just past. Houses purchased or being constructed in Nebraska, Massachusetts and Kansas City, Mo., will considerably strengthen the company's position in those states.

The Bonham, a 1,000-seat house in Fairbury, Neb., will be the first of the new houses to open. It will have its premiere next week. A week later, the Rivoli, a 1,000-seat house in Beatrice will throw open its doors.

Later in October, the Rivoli, a new 1,200-seat house in Hastings, Neb., will be opened. This house replaces the house that burned down last Spring. It will run combined pictures and vaudeville. Later in the season, probably between December 15th and January 1st, the Capitol, a new 1,400-seat house in Grand Island, will be opened by the Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises. This is a house of the finest type, costing more than $300,000.

Universal has acquired two New England theatres which are now under construction and which will be ready for use before the first of the year, and it is negotiating for theatres or for sites in several of the more important New England cities.

The new theatre under construction in the Winter Hill section of Somerville, not yet named, has been acquired and work of completing this playhouse is being rushed. The house will have a seating capacity of 1,800 and will be ready about January 1st.

At Lowell, Universal has acquired another playhouse in process of construction which will have about 1,200 seats and which will also be completed, under present plans, about the first of the new year.

With the acquisition of the Isis and Madrid theatres, two of Kansas City's largest suburban houses, Universal now has control of a large percentage of seats in Kansas City. The Isis and Madrid, acquired last week and confirmed this week, seat 1,470 and 1,500, respectively, the latter being a new house just opened recently.

The Westport Amusement Company, which owned and operated the Madrid, will retire from the field, while the Blackstone Amusement Company, controlled by George Trinastich and Henry J. Vanden Boom, may continue to manage the Isis, although the operating control will not be determined definitely for several days, according to Fred S. Meyer, general manager for Capitol Enterprises, a Universal unit.

The new Garde Theatre in New London, Conn., erected by the Arthur S. Friend Companies of New York, was formally opened last week and will present feature pictures, news and comedies and presentations under the present plan.

The theatre, the largest in New London, is the second Connecticut house to be built and opened by the Friend interests. It is located on the main business street one block west of the Hotel Mohican.

Two new theatres are in prospect for Providence, R.I., according to announcements made almost simultaneously from the Rhode Island capital.

Loew's, Inc. interests are having plans drawn for a $1,000,000 playhouse and office building to be erected in the block bounded by Weymosset, Paige, Pine and Richmond streets in the heart of the shopping district, as part of their program of expansion. It is understood that some of the property has been purchased and the balance acquired on long-term leases.

Actual construction work on the properties will probably not start until early next spring. The Edwin A. Smith Real Estate Co. is lessee of the office section of the proposed structure.

Jacob Conn plans to erect a new theatre on Broad Street, Providence, within a few months, and this theatre would be located near the proposed Loew's Theatre, being bounded by Broad, Chestnut, Pine and Claverick streets.

Famous's Earnings $6,500,000 for 1926, Says Wall St. Journal; $1,000,000 Gain

ACCORDING to a detailed report in the "Wall Street Journal" the net earnings of Famous Players-Lasky for 1926 will be about $6,500,000. This figure, against that of $5,718,053 for 1925 shows an increase in profits of nearly a $1,000,000.

At present 575,070 shares of common stock are outstanding, comparing with 235,000 ten months ago. Earnings on each of the latter shares this year approximate $15.80, and $13.80 on the average number of 422,984 shares outstanding during 1926.

Over $20,000,000 was put into the firm a little more than a year ago, used largely to buy two-thirds of the outstanding stock of Balaban & Katz at $80 a share. All F. P. theatres are now under B. & K. management, and there is a fair chance of Famous Players ultimately dividing its stock, giving holders an equal number of shares in theatre stock and production stock.

Much of the funds acquired by F. P. was used to build new houses. Aside from the Paramount, opening in New York with 4,000 seats on November 18, theatres averaging 3,000 seats have been completed or are in construction at St. Petersburg, Jacksonville and Miami, Fla.; Birmingham, Ala.; Knoxville, Tenn.; Toledo, Ohio, and Chicago; affiliated interests are building F. P. houses in Denver, Portland, Seattle and Omaha, and a 4,500-seat theatre in Brooklyn. Moreover, two houses in London and one in Paris are building and one is planned in Brussels.

H. Stark, 5774 Goodfellow Ave., St. Louis, Mo. (St. Louis Times); Miss Mildred Steinfeld, Y. W. C. A., Memphis, Tenn., (News Scimitar); Maud Stone, 8130 Jos Campan Ave., Detroit, Mich. (Times); George Walton, 1st Natl. Bank, Auditing Dept., St. Louis, Mo. (Times); Evelyn M. White, 1846 Illinois St., Lawrence, Kansas, (Journal-World); Mrs. F. E. Wood, Box 396, Davenport, Okla. (Shawnee Morning News); Mrs. Francis E. Young, Ridgeview Place, Taylorsville Road, Louisville, Ky. (Louisville Courier-Journal); Henrietta G. Young, 1708 Bryn Mawr Road, East Cleveland, Ohio. (Cleveland Plain Dealer); Frank Zwinak, 1808 Elm Ave., Norwood, Ohio (Cincinnati Times Star).

More than 700,000 persons entered the contest through the 57 newspapers that conducted it in co-operation with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of which Will H. Hays is president.

The twenty-eight best entries chosen by each newspaper were sent to New York, and there the national judges selected the winners.

The judges were: Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson, associate editor of the Woman's Home Companion; the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; Rex Beach, author; Richard Washburn Child, author and former ambassador to Italy; and Dr. R. S. Woodworth, professor of Psychology at Columbia University.

Admission Tax Collections for Fiscal Year Show Decrease of $6,927,132.43

ADMISSION tax collections during the fiscal year ended June 30, last, showed a decrease of $6,927,132.43 as compared with the fiscal year 1925, totaling $23,980,676.66, it is reported in a preliminary statement of the 1926 collections just issued by the Bureau of Internal Revenue at Washington, D.C.

As compared with the fiscal year 1921, when $89,730,832.94 was collected, a decrease of more than $65,000,000 is noted in the 1926 total, representing the taxes collectible on admissions of 50 cents or less.

Over 75 per cent of the taxes collected from admissions in 1926 was derived from nine States, the remaining 39 States contributing less than 25 per cent to the total. These collections, in the order of their importance, were as follows: New York, $7,782,036.80; Illinois, $2,575,197.97; California, $1,892,752.76; Pennsylvania, $1,821,589.97; Massachusetts, $1,330,935.86; Ohio, $1,109,132.76; Michigan, $1,023,051.85; New Jersey, $683,518.40; Missouri, $674,689.21.

The total collections of taxes from all sources during the year were $2,835,999,892, as compared with $2,584,140,268 in 1925, an increase of $251,859,624. Of this, $1,974,104,141 was from the income tax and $861,895,751 from the miscellaneous taxes, the former showing an increase over 1925 of $212,445,092 and the latter $39,414,532. The heaviest taxpayers among the States were New York, $733,729,533; Pennsylvania, $252,317,837; Michigan, $225,629,148, and Illinois, $216,719,787, these four States contributing more than 50 per cent of the total collections.

The cost of collecting the revenues was $34,948,483, or $1.23 for each $100 collected, as compared with $1.44 for each $100 collected in 1925.

German Motion Picture Advertising

Advance of Exploitation and Increasing Appreciation of the Importance of Suitable "Reklame" Seen by Writer

By Harry Knopf

THE development of motion picture advertising must keep step with the development of the motion picture. Without suitable advertising it is difficult to win widespread public support such as good motion pictures need. That is an accepted truth here, but in Germany the importance of exploitation has been realized only in recent times. Compared with America, German film men have been rather poor in ideas as regards exploitation, and efforts there can hardly be compared with publicity and advertising methods in the United States.

More and more attention is being paid to this, however, and the German firms are rapidly learning the importance of advertising of every sort—poster, newspaper electrical display, street ballyhoo, and the like.

As here, each company has its own poster department, with artists to design the lithographs. In special instances, however, outside poster artists of prominence are engaged to design the posters for important productions. In the case of "Faust," recently completed, a competition was held in which all artists were eligible to take part, with prizes aggregating $1,000 for the best designs.

In the early days of motion pictures in Germany, advertising was confined to placards carried through the streets by old men, handbills passed out on street corners, and a small amount of newspaper space.

Albany Theatres Favor Eastern Standard Time

THERE was a big jump in business in the Albany, N.Y., district, last week on the first night when daylight saving was not effective. A trip over the territory listed the information from exhibitors that business had increased fully 25 per cent, and furthermore that a stiff fight would be staged next spring in the hopes of making the daylight saving season in this vicinity at least a month shorter than at present.

Electrical display, it must be remembered, was forbidden by law all through the war and up to 1921, so that it is only in recent years that theatres have commenced to go in for illuminated fronts and elaborate electrical signs.

Now all of this is changing. The banners and handbills have disappeared, and high-grade newspaper advertising, well illustrated, together with suitable newspaper publicity material, is now the backbone of all campaigns, with electrical signs also important.

Berlin theatres which lead in this latter respect include the Palast am Zoo, Capitol and Gloria Palast. The Palast am Zoo is brilliantly lighted, with marquee signs, billing of picture and music, an indirectly illuminated dome over the entrance and special signs and lighted scenes from the picture along the entire front, so that the electrical display features extend almost the entire length of the block, for a distance of perhaps 200 feet. Above the entrance a moving electric sign, such as used on the Capitol in New York, announces the entire program for the week.

The Capitol Theatre has over the entrance a three-sided sign, visible from all directions, on which the name "Capitol" is spelled out, a letter at a time, first in white, then in blue and then in red lights.

At the Gloria Palast, a large sign over the entrance carries the name of the theatre, and signs on three sides announce the title of the picture. Under the entrance, 15,000 small green bulbs, suspended below green drapes, give an odd lighting effect. On the side of the building, in a row of 12 large windows, large letters, one in each window, spell out the name of the theatre in white and violet so prominently that it may be read at a distance of 15 to 20 blocks.

These three theatres are outstanding in Berlin, but even the smaller theatres are rapidly turning to more elaborate electrical displays.

An interesting feature of German motion picture advertising, not seen here, is the use of the "Litfasssäule," or round "tanks" on the streets on which posters are placed, as in Paris. A large share of the posters on these are devoted to motion picture advertising, and they play an important part in each Berlin campaign.

Exploitation proper is also beginning to be employed in Germany to some extent. In the Berlin campaign for "The Lost World," a large reproduction of one of the prehistoric monsters was mounted on a truck and taken through the streets. For another film, in which boxing figured importantly, two boxers put up a sham contest in a ring on a truck, with the referee in evening dress and all the paraphernalia of the prize ring. This attracted a great deal of attention in Berlin.

Recently an exploitation stunt of considerable magnitude was put over, to boost pictures and the theatre generally, in connection with Kadewe, a leading Berlin department store. For one afternoon, from 4 to 6:30, the leading stars of the screen and stage world, 51 in number, acted as salespeople in the store, scattered through all departments, giving the public an opportunity of meeting its favorites face to face under unusual circumstances.

All of this, however, is small compared with the size which exploitation has reached in America, and Germany has been much interested in the striking campaign given "Variety" at the Rialto Theatre in New York City, as well as "The Waltz Dream" at the Capitol. Germany has much to learn, but she is awake to the need of better exploitation and advertising, and these developments will surely come.

American advertising is international. When an important film is made in America, the whole world knows of it. That sort of international publicity is something which Germany will have to develop in connection with her big pictures.

Premiers Queried on Films

Canada Memo to Empire Conference Will Ask Definition of British Film

FROM official sources it has been learned at Ottawa, the Canadian capital, that a list of pertinent questions on the subject of British-made moving pictures is to be placed before the Imperial Conference of Dominion Premiers at London this month in the official agenda of the conference. The plan favored by the British Government involves a compulsory quota system by which a certain proportion of all films shown throughout the Empire must be of British make, according to information cabled from London to Ottawa. At the same time, the Canadian Government is looking on the situation from a somewhat different angle, namely, that encouragement should be given toward the making of film subjects in Canada for preferred release throughout the Empire.

To get at a basis of operation along this line, it has been stated at Ottawa that the following memorandum will be submitted to the Conference:

1. That a clear-cut definition is required as to what constitutes a British film.

2. What is the most feasible plan for distribution and presentation of British or Empire-made films on a commercial basis?

3. Is the British Government and the film trade in the British Isles concerned in the production of films in parts of the Empire outside of the British Isles?

4. Would a film made jointly in Canada by Canadian and American capital, technical labor and cast be classed as a British film? If not, what proportion of Canadian interest and effort would make the film recognized as a British or Empire-made picture?

5. Would a film entirely produced in Canada with regard to capital, labor, etc., be called a British film; or would it be preferable to call it a British Empire film or by some other designation?

It is pointed out at Ottawa that rulings on all of these points are important if Great Britain adopts legislation regulating film importation by establishing a quota system aimed against American films.

Expect Cuba Censor Date Delay

Film Board and Government Will Decide Moot Points Before Drafting Regulations

ALL motion pictures produced for profit, of domestic or foreign production, offered for sale, rent or exhibition in Cuban territory will be censored under the decree of September 25, reported by cable last week to the Department of Commerce, according to further details of the order just submitted by Commerce Attache Todd, at Havana, to Clarence J. North, chief of the motion picture division of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce.

The censorship will cover not only the morals of the films but will also be exercised with a view to consideration for the feelings of friendly countries which might be hurt over some direct or indirect reflection against them.

The censorship board is to be headed by the Secretary of the Interior, the other members being the Chief of the Bureau of Public Order, the Chief of the Bureau of Statistics and General Affairs, the Inspector of Normal Schools and the Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

Some time must yet elapse before the censorship is exercised, it is indicated by Mr. Todd's report. While the decree provided for the formation of the censorship commission by September 30 and that the regulations under which the censorship would be exercised should be drafted and submitted to President Machado for approval by October 10, it is believed that some delay will be encountered in the drafting of the regulations, the Cuban Film Board of Trade having made representations to the government with regard to certain points on which an official hearing will be held before the regulations are compiled. There is no question, it is stated, but that the film board and the Theatre Owners' Association will have a liberal part in writing the regulations.

It is believed in Cuba that the new board will show a liberal disposition and that the censorship will be exercised with as little pressure and expense upon the motion picture business as is possible.

C. Brookheim New Universal Manager in Cuba

C. Brookheim, formerly manager for Universal in France, and later special agent in Europe for Carl Laemmle, has been put in charge of the Cuba exchange, according to an announcement from the Universal home office. He replaces Nat Liebeskind, formerly of the Big U exchange.

Minneapolis May Abolish Poster Exchanges

THE Minneapolis Film Board of Trade has opened up on poster exchanges and is said to be bent on exterminating them from the territory. Provisions of the uniform contract binding the exhibitor to purchase advertising matter from the exchange furnishing the film will be used as the weapon. The copyright law may also be used as an auxiliary weapon to prevent poster exchanges from copying posters.

Milwaukee is also said to be up in arms on this matter and the Omaha and Des Moines film boards are moving in the same direction. Use of paper issued for "The Son of a Sheik" to advertise "The Sheik" is said to have set off the fireworks in Minneapolis. An exhibitor bought paper on the new film and, substituting the name of the reissue at the top, let the new title remain at the bottom of some of the one-sheets, it is alleged.

Equipment Dealers Meet in Chicago Oct. 18th and 19th

President C. D. Struble, of the Motion Picture Equipment Dealers of America, announces that arrangements have been made to hold this organization's postponed annual convention at the Congress Hotel in Chicago, on Monday and Tuesday, October 18th and 19th.

Mr. Struble urges full attendance of both the active and associate members in view of the great importance of questions to be presented at this meeting. He also suggests that members make their reservations now for the Congress Hotel.

Chadwick to Start Soon on "Shamrock and Rose"

I. E. Chadwick, president of Chadwick Pictures Corporation, is preparing for an early production of "The Shamrock and the Rose," an adaptation of the play by Owen Davis, author of numerous Broadway successes. The director and cast will be announced shortly.

Kans.-Mo. M. P. T. O. Warns Against Tax and Blues

The admission tax and blue laws again are expected to pop up in the terms of the Missouri and Kansas legislatures this winter, but no time is being lost by the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, which already has sent out a bulletin warning exhibitors to be on their guard against adverse movements.

H. S. Koppin Acquires State and Strand in Flint, Mich.

Henry S. Koppin of Detroit, has made another addition to his chain of theatres, through the purchase of the State and strand theatres in Flint, Mich. The two houses were formerly controlled by Lester Matt who has not announced his future plans. Lloyd Bacher will be in charge of the two Flint houses for Mr. Koppin.

Ont. Classification System Might Be Adopted

THE hint that the 400 moving picture theatres in the Province on Ontario would be required to classify their shows for adult only and family patronage as is done in the United Kingdom, was given by Premier G. Howard Ferguson, of Ontario, at a convention of the Ontario Social Service Council at Toronto, Sept. 24.

Premier Ferguson suggested that exhibitors in Ontario could use the lobby signs "Adults Only," or "Family Pictures," as required to designate the type of picture that was being shown and to assist parents in selecting the theatre which their children might properly attend. This was following the method which was adopted in England, it was pointed out, pictures being divided into "A" and "U" classes, the former being for adult consumption and the latter for general attendance. It was suggested that the categories could be indicated in newspaper and other advertising by Ontario theatres.

French Studios Going at Top Speed

Forty-four Productions on Current Schedules; Theatre Receipts for 1925 Showed Substantial Gains Over 1924

UNUSUAL activity in production is reported from Paris, where studios are humming with production of every sort. Recent lists show 11 films completed, 23 in production and 10 more about to start. These include the following:

117,443,324 Francs Gross

Gross receipts of all motion-picture houses in Paris during 1925 amounted to 117,443,324 francs, a total which was 16,837,249 francs, or 16.73 per cent more than in 1924, when they aggregated 100,606,575 francs, states Trade Commissioner G. R. Canty in a report to the Department of Commerce. Combined State and poor taxes paid by these theatres totaled 25,121,747 francs in 1925, or 21.39 per cent of the total receipts, as against 20,479,416, or 20.35 per cent, in 1924, an increase of 4,642,331 francs, or 22.66 per cent over 1924 figures.

For the purpose of comparison, figures are submitted below showing also gross receipts and taxes paid by Theatre Subventionnes (State controlled) theatres, and music-hall and concerts:

Theatres Subventionnes: Gross receipts for 1925 amounted to 37,252,157, as compared with 35,643,837 francs in 1924, an increase during 1925 of 1,608,320 francs, or 4.51 per cent. Total taxes from these receipts were 5,364,332 francs, or 14.40 per cent, in 1925, as against 5,022,930 francs, or 14.10 per cent of the total receipts, during the previous year, an increase during 1925 of 341,402 francs, or 6.79 per cent.

Theatres: Gross receipts of all houses under this classification amounted, in 1925, to 114,461,030 francs, compared with 98,253,251 francs during the preceding year, an increase in 1925 of 16,207,779 francs, or 16.49 per cent. Taxes paid by these theatres in 1925 totaled 17,192,339 francs, or 15.02 per cent of gross receipts, as against 14,263,022, or 14.51 per cent, during 1924, an increase of 2,929,317 francs, or 20.53 per cent, over 1924 figures.

Music-hall and Concerts: The gross receipts for 1925 amounted to 112,706,784 francs, an increase of 18,693,077 francs, or 19.88 per cent over the previous year, when they totaled 94,013,707 francs. Taxes paid totaled 19,241,689 francs, or 17.08 per cent of the total receipts in 1925, as compared with 15,79,279 or 16.78 per cent during 1924, an increase in 1925 of 3,462,410 francs, or 21.90 per cent.

Only eleven motion-picture houses of the 157 listed by the Chambre Syndicale Francaise de la Cinematographie as having paid taxes to the State during the year 1925, showed receipts above the 2,000,000-franc point. They are listed below in the order of their total receipts, showing also their State and poor taxes:

Name	Receipts	Taxes for the Poor	Taxes for the State
Marivaux ...	6,033,154	440,394	1,182,242
Gaumont-Palace ....	4,700,887	345,182	903,906
Cameo (ex-Pathe-Palace) ..	3,397,184	252,605	618,538
Aubert-Palace ....	3,113,227	232,327	557,647
Max Linder..	3,097,902	231,144	555,330
Madeleine ...	2,783,909	208,775	489,394
Lutetia .....	2,656,560	199,694	459,934
Omnia .....	2,480,339	187,112	422,121
Palais des Fetes .....	2,298,605	174,074	283,812
Tivoli .....	2,068,243	157,520	335,546
Parisiana ...	2,005,680	153,111	321,477

The above receipt table is no indication of the relative sizes of the theatres listed, since admission prices vary in most cases. For example, the Gaumont-Palace, which is by far the largest motion-picture house in Paris, finished second to the Marivaux in total receipts for the year, this latter house, which incidentally books all productions of a leading American producing organization for premiere exhibition in France, being the costliest admission-price "movie" house in Paris.

U. A. and Minn. Arbitration Board in Dispute Over "Direction to Salesmen" Clause

IS the clause "Direction to Salesmen" an enforceable part of the standard exhibition contract?

That is the question involved in a case which has resulted in Minneapolis in the forfeiting of arbitration rights by the Minneapolis branch, United Artists.

The Minneapolis Joint Arbitration board recently decided that it was and ordered the company exchange to give relief to Al Steffes, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the Northwest, and owner of the Colonial Theatre at Watertown, S.D.

Steffes was awarded $300 damages in a dispute over "The Son of the Sheik," for the sale of which United Artists dickered with both Steffes and his competitors, Hess & Rau. The exchange was ordered to comply within 10 days. It has failed to do so, thus forfeiting its standing before the board.

The exchange is said to be taking the matter up with New York in an effort to have the verdict set aside.

The clause, "Direction to Salesmen" states that a company which has accepted an application for contract from one house will make no further effort to sell the same service to any other exhibitor directly competing with such exhibitor until application so forwarded has been rejected.

United Artists contend that, although their own contract accepts the provisions of the standard exhibition contract, it does not include this clause.

All Nations Join U. S. in Making Pictures for the World, Hays Declares

Will H. Hays

ALTHOUGH Hollywood is located in the United States, and the great majority of motion pictures shown throughout the world are American made, in reality all the nations of the earth make the pictures for the world," said Will H. Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., at a dinner given in his honor by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers at Briarcliff Lodge this week.

"The motion picture challenges the best in science and art, in literature and business, in religion and the humanities," he said.

"It is drawing from every corner of the world the greatest artists and artisans to aid in its service to the world. Hollywood is an international enterprise.

"American films may predominate in every country in the world, but every country is contributing to them. Great numbers of those in the key creative positions are direct from supreme accomplishment in other countries.

"A recent survey of important actors, directors and camera men in Hollywood showed that 60 were Englishmen, 26 were Canadians, 23 were Germans, 16 were Russians, 12 were French, 10 were Austrians, 11 were Swedes, 7 were Italians, 6 were Hungarians, 4 were Japanese, 3 were Mexicans, 3 were Danes and others came from India, Argentine, China, Roumania, Brazil, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Serbia, Ireland, Switzerland and Turkey.

"The artists who heretofore have been able to reach thousands can now with this new medium reach millions. This extension of possible service commands them.

"In another few years Hollywood may very well be the art center of the world."

Another arrival from Europe was Anna H. Sessions, foreign exchange manager in Central Europe, who will report to Mr. Johnson conditions in her territory.

Tax-Assessment Board Puts Loew's State First

The most valuable theatre in New York City showing motion pictures, second in value only to the Metropolitan in Brooklyn, is Loew's State, according to the assessments announced by the Board of Taxes and Assessments. The valuation of the State is put at $4,675,000, while the Metropolitan has a valuation of $5,200,000.

Estimates placed on property among the more valuable of the New York motion picture houses include the Capitol, $3,000,000; Rialto, $2,620,000; Astor, $1,615,000; Rivoli, $1,600,000; Strand, $3,450,000.

Yeggs Make Manager Open Safe and Obtain $1,500

For the second time within a month, bandits held up the Park, one of Jack Miller's theatres in Chicago, and secured a substantial amount. The latest robbery was early Monday morning when hold-up men awaited the arrival of the house manager and compelled him to open the safe and departed with approximately $1,500.

Sydney S. Cohen in Stamford, Conn., Real Estate Deal

Sydney S. Cohen has leased for Stumpf Stores, Incorporated, to the American Hotels Corporation, through its vice-president, Capt. Stephen N. Bobo, for a term of 25 years a ten-story hotel and store building to be erected at the corner of Atlantic and Bell Streets, the main business thoroughfare of Stamford, Conn., on the site of the Bell Block.

The entire plot owned by Stumpf Stores, Incorporated, is 85 x 254 with frontage on Atlantic and Bell Streets. The hotel will have its entrance on Atlantic Street side, and negotiations are pending now for the leasing of the ground floor store space to national chain-store merchants. Stumpf Stores, Incorporated, will occupy the corner store. The balance of the plot has been retained by them and will be improved with a 3,000-seat vaudeville and motion picture theatre, with the entrance on Atlantic Street. The aggregate investment will approximate $1,200,000.

Ralph Ince to Direct "Birds of Prey" for Columbia

The success achieved by Ralph Ince in directing "The Lone Wolf Returns" for Columbia Pictures has resulted in his being chosen to direct two more productions for that company. He is directing "Paying the Price" at the present time, besides playing one of the important roles in the picture. He is also scheduled to direct "Birds of Prey" for which production plans are now being outlined. The cast has not been disclosed, the names of the players being under consideration.

Geo. Zigiob, Leading Lorain Exhibitor, Passes Away

George Zigiob, 32 years of age, and one of the leading exhibitors and theatre owners of Lorain, Ohio, died last week. Zigiob had been in poor health for the past year. He owned and operated the Dreamland, Cosy and Palace. He also owned the building which contains the Paris Theatre, run by George Shenker. Miss Zigiob has been running the theatres during her brother's illness. Zigiob is survived by his widow and four small children.

J. Victor Wilson Returning to Brooklyn from Florida

A telegram received last week by Sol Manheimer, in Watertown, carried the first news that Dr. J. Victor Wilson had survived the hurricane in Miami, and was returning to Brooklyn. Before going to Florida as manager of Spiegel theatres, Dr. Wilson had been handling the Robbins theatres in Watertown. The telegram also carried the information that Dr. Wilson had lost everything.

Adoption of Australian Duty Increase Bill Improbable

Although the Australian Parliament still has under consideration the bill to increase the duty on motion picture films imported into the country, its adoption is believed doubtful, according to reports to the Department of Commerce from the assistant trade commissioner at Melbourne.

Foreign Trade of F. N. Increasing 25%

THE first nine months of the year saw the foreign department of First National, under the management of E. Bruce Johnson, average an increase of 25% over the same period of last year. The total increase amounts to $701,533.01. Last year's figures were $2,905,037.80 while this year's totaled $3,606,570.81. With the season still in its infancy Johnson predicts a substantial increase before the end of the year.

"Out of the Inkwell" Films, Inc., in Receivership

Max Fleischer, for the past six years president of "Out of the Inkwell" Films, Inc., through his counsel, N. William Welles, has submitted a bill in equity to the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, requesting the appointment of a receiver for that corporation.

The bill in equity alleges that the company is solvent, but Mr. Fleischer states that the action of a film laboratory has forced it to seek the protection of the courts in order to work out its problems. The appointment of the receiver will insure the corporation its continuance in business. Max Fleischer will continue in active management of the company.

Blanche Sweet Signs to Star in Fox Film Pictures

A contract has been signed by Blanche Sweet with the result that she will be seen at the Fox Films West Coast studio for some time to come. The star will portray the leading role in John Griffith Wray's production, "Love o' Women," adapted from an original story by Adela Rogers St. Johns.

Cranfield and Clarke, Ltd. Holds Sales Convention

At the Canadian offices of Cranfield and Clarke of Canada Limited in Montreal, W. F. Clarke of Cranfield and Clarke, New York, has been holding a sales convention. Among those in attendance were R. J. Romney and E. L. Lingley, of the Toronto office; George A. Balsdon, Montreal; J. M. Anderson of St. John and W. A. Noble, of Winnipeg. Enthusiasm was displayed at the prospective 1926-27 business. The convention moved to Toronto after completing the business in Montreal. At Toronto a conference was held at which many important matters were discussed, such as production in Canada, the opening of a new office in Vancouver and the further expansion of sales.

Lists October and November Releases for Preferred

J. G. Bachmann, producer of Preferred pictures, has announced that on October 15th first playdates will be taken on "Shameful Behavior?" a farce comedy based on Mrs. Belloc Lowndes' story, and featuring Edith Roberts, Harland Tucker, Richard Tucker, Martha Mattox and Grace Carlyle. The first showing of "His New York Wife" will be held on November 15th.

Hawn New Publicity Director of Feature Productions

John W. Considine, Jr., president of Feature Productions, Incorporated, announced last week his appointment of Gavin Campbell Hawn as director of publicity for his organization. Hawn is well-known in the publicity field and was formerly West Coast manager of Motion Pictures Today.

Queen Marie Harn't Accepted Film Offer

NO arrangements have been entered into with any American film company whereby it will be permitted to take motion pictures of Queen Marie of Roumania during her visit to the United States, it was announced from the Roumanian Legation this week. Rumors that an offer of $25,000 had been made and accepted for the privilege brought prompt denial from Roumanian diplomats in Washington, where it was declared nothing was known of the proposed arrangement. "Under the 1864 guarantee to every citizen of free countries by their constitutions, no citizen can be prevented from writing anything he desires," it was pointed out in the official statement of denial.

"A certain film company is reported to have announced that an offer of $25,000 has been made to Her Majesty the Queen for Her Majesty's appearance before the camera. The film company had all the liberty to do so. But there is a long way from offer to acceptance. This legation has no knowledge whatsoever of Her Majesty's alleged desire to swell her 'charities fund' nor of the 'unofficial assurance' that the Queen will accept such an offer. If anybody gave such assurance it was done without the consent of Her Majesty the Queen or of this legation."

Grainger Holds Fox Sales Meet

Outlines Plans for Next Five Months to Branch Managers Prior to Chicago Trip

JAMES R. GRAINGER, general sales manager for Fox Films, held a sales conference in his New York office this week which was attended by branch managers off the line of his last trans-continental tour. Selling plans for the next five months were outlined and Mr. Grainger told the visiting executives of the work which is now being accomplished.

One of the results of the intensive campaign which has been carried on through every territory is the fact that more theatres will show Fox product this season than ever before in the history of the company, said Mr. Grainger. While the work of the sales force up to the present time has been all that could be expected, he continued, yet there must be a never-ending effort on the part of each man in the organization to hold the record that has been established.

Mr. Grainger likewise reminded his managers that the company's greatest production efforts are yet to come, naming "What Price Glory", "One Increasing Purpose", "7th Heaven", and "The Music Master" among others.

Warm tribute to the capabilities of Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general production manager for the pictures turned out thus far, was paid by the sales head of Fox. The sales force was also addressed by William Fox who lauded the work of both sales and production departments.

Those attending the conference were: District Managers Lou Remy of Dallas, Harry Campbell of Boston, George W. Fuller of Washington, W. C. Bachmeyer of Cincinnati and Ira H. Cohen of Kansas City; Branch Managers Harry Buxbaum of New York, Bill Kupper of Pittsburgh, Joe Lee of Northern New Jersey, Harry Gibbs of New Haven, Izzy Schmertz of Albany, Ward E. Scott of Cleveland, Rudolph Knoffle of Cincinnati and Lester Sturm of Detroit; Home Office Representatives William J. Clark, and Max Milder; Assistant Sales Manager Jack Sieheman, Assistant Short Subject Sales Manager George Roberts, Milton Schwartz, Nat Finkler, and Assistant Manager Eddie Schnitzer of New York.

Following the conference Mr. Grainger started off on a four weeks' sales trip during which he will visit branch offices in Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Des Moines, Denver, Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Changes Made in Universal Story Department

The scenario staff at Universal City underwent a realignment this week. Edward Montagne, under whose jurisdiction all of last year's program was made, remains as head of the department. He recently returned from New York with the announcement of the purchase of many important stories for the coming schedule. Joseph Franklin Poland has been made associate editor in charge of feature continuities. Charles Logue will hold a similar position handling dramatic features. Frank Beresford continues as head of the story department. Under his supervision are Gladys Lehman, Reva Love Weil, Nan Cochrane, Dr. Ernst Redlich and Mrs. Lois Kennedy. Faith Thomas continues as executive secretary to Mr. Montagne.

Among the contributing authors to the year's schedule are: Peter B. Kyne, Stuart Lake, Harvey Thew, Rex Taylor, Al Kenyon, Marion Orth, Katherine Newlin Burt, Al Cohn, Richard Barry, Edwin Mayer, Byron Morgan, James Oliver Curwood, William Dudley Pelley, George Weston, Earl Derr Biggers and Bayard Veiller. The regular staff includes Charles Kenyon, Curtis Benton, Leigh Jacobson, Raymond Cannon, Harry Dittmar, Max Kummich, Frederic Arnold Kummer, Winnifred Katon Reeve and Hugh Hoffman.

Story in Preparation for Norman Kerry

Evelyn Campbell is now at work on the continuity of "Too Many Women," Universal's coming production which will star Norman Kerry. The adaptation is being done from the original story by Gabriel Reuter, a newspaper woman of Berlin and Rome. Olga Linek Scholl did the English translation. The supporting cast and director have not as yet been chosen.

Cast Being Selected for Tiffany's "Sin Cargo"

Among the principals signed for roles in "Sin Cargo," the Tiffany feature suggested by "End of Steel," a story by Johnston McCulley, are Shirley Mason, Robert Frazer, Earl Meealf, Lawford Davidson, Pat Harmon, James Maek and Billy Cinders.

First National Advances Release Dates

RELEASE dates on two First National productions, "Twinkle-toes" and "Stepping Along," have been advanced from December to November. Photography on both pictures has been completed. "Twinkle-toes" is a John McCormick production starring Colleen Moore. In "Stepping Along" Johnny Hines is the star.

Einar Hanson Supports Pola Negri in "Barbed Wire"

Einar Hanson has been assigned an important role in "Barbed Wire," Pola Negri's next starring vehicle for Paramount, which is an adaptation by Jules Furthman and Lajos Biro of Hall Caine's story of war, "The Woman of Knockaloe." Hanson's role in the cast ranks second only to that of Clive Brook, Paramount featured player, who appears opposite Miss Negri. Hanson is now working with Corinne Griffith in a production for First National, but he will transfer his activities to the Paramount lot as soon as the final shots of the Griffith film have been taken. Besides Hanson and Brook, the supporting cast of "Barbed Wire" includes Gustav von Seyffertitz and Clyde Cook.

Broadway Stage Actor in U. A. Swanson Film

Gloria Swanson has drawn again on the New York theatres in selecting the supporting players who will be seen in her first picture for United Artists. The star has already chosen John Boles, leading man in a Broadway musical comedy, to act in the same capacity in her production. Her latest addition to the cast is Raymond Hackett of "The Cradle Snatchers," the stage play. Hackett acted for the films about eight years ago doing work with the old Reliance, Imp and Lubin companies. Albert Parker has arranged his camera schedule to permit Hackett to alternate between the Cosmopolitan studio where the Swanson film is being made and the theatre where "The Cradle Snatchers" is playing.

Albee in Middle West for Theatre Supervision

E. F. Albee arrived in Columbus, Ohio, on Saturday of last week to personally supervise the completion of the new Keith-Albee theatre in that city which will open about November first. It will be a combination vaudeville and picture house. Mr. Albee also attended the inaugural performance at the Orpheum Circuit's new Palace Theatre in Chicago on Monday of this week.

Owen Moore Male Lead in "The Taxi Dancer"

The featured male lead opposite Joan Crawford in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "The Taxi Dancer," will be played by Owen Moore. The actor has just finished working in "The Red Mill," the Cosmopolitan production starring Marion Davies. Harry Millarde will direct "The Taxi Dancer."

"Bardelys" Premiere at Los Angeles Carthay

WITH a brilliant audience of screen folk and exploitation and exterior lighting above the average, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Bardelys the Magnificent," the widely serialized novel of Rafael Sabatini, was given a most auspicious premiere at the new Carthay Circle Theatre in Hollywood.

A vivid electrical display was used at night to announce the event. The driveway to the theatre was lined with studio lights of various hues while before the theatre a 180,000,000 candle power searchlight, reputed to be the largest in the world, was focused on a captive balloon, more than two miles away, from which was suspended a huge sign announcing the opening. The locality for a mile around was lit up by the many beams of light used for the illumination of the theatre's exterior. Another phase of the premiere was the radio broadcasting through Station KMTR from the interior of the house with fashion experts and studio writers relaying details to the microphone.

All the arrangements were under the direction of Fred Miller of the Carthay Circle staff, and Peter Smith, publicity director at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio.

Winfield R. Sheehan in East

Visiting Fox Headquarters to Confer on Plans for Present and Future Films

INTERRUPTING prolonged activities at the company's studios in Los Angeles, Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of Fox Films, is now at headquarters in New York City for the purpose of conferring with William Fox and other executives in connection with the present and future productions scheduled for both the New York and West Coast studios.

Mr. Sheehan, upon his return from Europe last fall, went almost immediately to Los Angeles, and with the exception of a brief visit to New York in February, has been constantly at the company's studios in Hollywood. From the time of his arrival last fall until his departure a week ago, the Fox West Coast studios have experienced the greatest activity in their history. And that activity has not been solely confined to the production of pictures. More than half a million dollars have been expended in improvements at the studios in Hollywood and the 125-acre outdoor studio at Fox Hills and work on further improvements tending toward the complete equipment of the properties with everything that will facilitate production activities, is now under way.

Mr. Sheehan's greatest work, however, has been in connection with the supervision of the entire West Coast production department. Since his arrival in Hollywood last fall, 63 feature productions, costing more than $10,000,000, have been made. Included in these productions, many of which have already been released, are "What Price Glory," "3 Bad Men," "Fig Leaves," "The Return of Peter Grimm," "The Country Beyond," "Sandy," "Womanpower," "Marriage License," "No Man's Gold," "The Lily," "The Midnight Kiss," "The Great K. & A. Train Robbery," "Whispering Wires," "Going Crooked," "The City," "The Family Upstairs," "The Blue Eagle," "The Flying Horseman," "One Increasing Purpose" and "Summer Bachelors."

In production at the present time are: "The Monkey Talks," "On the Wings of the Storm," "Gaby," "Mother Machree," "The Music Master," "The Auctioneer" and "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl."

Soon to go into production will be the John Golden stage play, "7th Heaven," a part of which will be made in and around Paris by Frank Borzage, the director, who is now enroute to the French capital; "Cradle Snatchers," "Is Zat So?" "The Holy Terror," "Frozen Justice" and a number of others. Added to these feature pictures, 52 comedies, 26 Fox Varieties, 104 issues of Fox News, have been produced.

To Mr. Sheehan also belongs the credit for having brought a number of newcomers into the Fox organization. Among these are Janet Gaynor, Olive Borden, Sally Phipps, Nancy Nash, Charles Farrell, Richard Walling and Barry Norton. He also placed Raoul Walsh, Alfred E. Green, F. W. Murnau, Allan Dwan and Irving Cummings — all prominent directors — under contract, and they, in addition to Frank Borzage, Victor Schertzinger, John Ford, J. G. Blystone, Howard Hawks, Lew Seiler, Harry Beaumont, George Melford, John Griffith Wray, R. William Neill, Benjamin Stoloff and Scott Dunlap are now handling megaphones in the Fox studios.

Mary Brian Loaned to F. B. O. for Witwer Story

The leading feminine role in "Her Father Said No," F. B. O.'s forthcoming Gold Bond, adapted from the H. C. Witwer story, "Charlotte's Ruse," will be played by Mary Brian, the Famous Players-Lasky star loaned to F. B. O. Kit Guard and Al Cooke, the two F. B. O. stock comedians, will be part of the specially chosen cast to support Miss Brian.

Fox Films Obtains Screen Rights to "Mud Turtle"

William Fox has acquired the screen rights to "The Mud Turtle," Elliott Lester's stage play which was produced on the New York stage last season.

F. Nat'l Man Broadcasts Fire Prevention Address

IN his fifteen minute talk over Station WTIS, Hartford, Connecticut, on the evening of October 2nd, R. G. Sidley, of First National Pictures, particularly emphasized the organized and systematic care assumed by the motion picture industry from Will Hays down to the film boards in developing the spirit of fire prevention consciousness, the maintenance of the idea of "safety first" in all branches of the industry. His talk, which was one of the features of National Fire Prevention Week, covered a variety of industries in their relation to fire hazards. Few of the industries with which he dealt received as many complimentary remarks as that of the motion picture.

Mr. Sidley mentioned the fact that out of the 15,000 persons who lost their lives in fires during 1925, none of them were engaged in the business of producing and distributing pictures. He spoke of the fireproof structure equipped with all fire-preventing devices that is the modern distributing branch of a motion picture company. "The great investment in these new buildings has established a standard of safety heretofore unattained," Mr. Sidley said. He also mentioned the illustrated posters and monthly bulletins issued by the Hays organization.

Another item of interest in Mr. Sidley's address was the classification by the National Board of Fire Underwriters of the position of the motion picture industry under the heading of miscellaneous causes of fire. To use his own words, "they consider that the fires caused by film were so insignificant, in contrast to those in other industries, that they were not listed separately but under the heading of miscellaneous causes."

Johnny Hines Organization to Leave for West Coast

C. C. Burr, producer of the Johnny Hines pictures for First National, plans to bring the Hines organization to the West Coast where "Mortimer's Millions," the comedian's next feature comedy, will be produced with the First National Burbank plant as the probable studio. Mr. Burr plans to leave New York at once to make all necessary arrangements for the production. He will be followed by the comedian and his brother and director, Charles Hines, about October 20th. No studio, technical nor camera staff will be taken to the Coast from New York, it is asserted.

John F. Goodrich Signed to Write for Paramount

John F. Goodrich, scenarist, has signed a long-term contract to write for Paramount. Some of his more recent works have been the adaptation of Hermann Hagedorn's story of "The Rough Riders," a Paramount special based on the career of Theodore Roosevelt and his renowned cavalry regiment in the Spanish-American war; and the screen plays "Puppets" and "Men of Steel."

Seventy-eight-Year-Old Actor in "Atta Boy"

Appearing with Monty Banks in the latter's Pathe comedy feature, "Atta Boy," is the seventy-eight-year-old actor, Albert Fisher, one of the "grand old men" of the stage and screen. The veteran, who plays the part of Banks' grandfather in the new comedy, an original by Charles F. Horan, has played all parts; low and light comedy, comedy old men and strong sympathetic roles.

Advance Release Date for "Syncopating Sue"

The release date for "Syncopating Sue," Corinne Griffith's latest starring vehicle, has been advanced by First National from November to October 17. The change was made in order to secure Lieber Month playdates for this production which is considered by First National officials as even bettering Miss Griffith's "Classified."

Changes in Warner Bros. Foreign Field Force

FOLLOWING the announcement of the contemplated expansion of production and sales in the foreign field the Warner Bros. have made two important changes in executives in England. Arthur Clavering, formerly managing director of the Film Booking Offices, Ltd., has been made managing director of the Vitagraph Company, which company will in the future handle the Warner product abroad. The second appointment is that of Mrs. Leila Stewart, who has been placed in charge of the publicity for the Vitagraph Company. Herman Starr, home office executive, has been in Europe for the past seven weeks completing plans for extended representation and a wider distribution of the Warner product.

Announce Premiere of "Sorrows of Satan"

ONE of the outstanding events in the New York picture world will be the premiere of D. W. Griffith's "The Sorrow of Satan," at the George M. Cohan Theatre on Tuesday night, October 12th, at 8:15. A large and distinguished audience is expected to be on hand to witness the picturization of the Marie Corelli novel on which the director has labored for months, and in which, it is said, he displays a new and finer technique. The cast that Griffith has assembled includes Adolphe Menjou, as the ingratiating modern Satan, Ricardo Cortez, as his chief victim, Lya de Putti in a role of greed and sin and Carol Dempster, embodying the sustaining and faithful love.

Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld has arranged a special orchestral accompaniment for the occasion. Beginning with the Wednesday matinee there will be two performances daily at 2:30 and 8:30, Sundays included.

John Barrymore's Villon Film Has Change of Title

Supplanting all previous titles announced for John Barrymore's first production for United Artists, "The Beloved Rogue" has been decided upon as most expressive and appropriate of the characteristics and traits of Francois Villon, the French poet who is the central figure of the picture and the character that Barrymore brings to life on the screen. Conrad Veidt, the German actor who arrived in Hollywood during the week, joined the cast immediately, as the scenes in which he appears as King Louis XI of France were held up pending his arrival. The production, which is Barrymore's first independent effort, is being filmed at the Pickford-Fairbanks studio in Hollywood with Marceline Day as leading lady.

Columbia's "Stolen Pleasures" Goes Into Production

With Phil Rosen directing a strong cast selected by Harry Cohen, vice-president and director general of production for Columbia Pictures, the next Columbia production to be put in work at the West Coast studio is "Stolen Pleasures," a story by Leah Baird, author of "The False Alarm." Helene Chadwick heads the cast, which includes Gayne Whitman, Harlan Tucker, Dorothy Revier and Armand Kaliz. Phil Rosen and his staff are busy selecting exteriors for the film, which deals with the fashionable set. J. O. Taylor, cameraman of many Columbia pictures, will handle the photography.

Suzanne Lenglen Will Start Work Middle of January

Suzanne Lenglen, France's world champion woman tennis player, who is now in New York under the management of C. C. Pyle, manager of "Red" Grange and other celebrities, will begin working before the camera around the middle of January. Byron Morgan, author of "One Minute to Play," starring "Red" Grange, will write the story for the French tennis ace. It is expected that Sam Wood will direct.

Blystone and Bard Again Sign With Fox Films

J. G. Blystone, Fox Films director, and Ben Bard, screen actor, have both signed long term contracts with Fox Films. Blystone's contract is of five years' duration and goes into effect immediately upon the completion of his current production, "On the Wings of the Storm," featuring Thunder, a new dog star. This will be the director's thirty-eighth production for Fox Films.

Bard, a star of the vaudeville and musical comedy worlds, made his screen debut about a year ago in a Tom Mix production. He is at present working in "My Wife's Honor," Lou Tellegen's initial production in which Dolores Del Rio and Don Alvarado are featured.

"Tarzan and Golden Lion" Goes Into Work

Under the direction of J. P. McGowan, "Tarzan and the Golden Lion," the forthcoming F. B. O. special production was put in work last week at Chatworth, Cal. A new "discovery"—a former football half-back by the name of James Pierce—makes his screen debut in the role of Tarzan. Besides Pierce, who was chosen particularly because of his athletic form and good looks, the other players who will make their appearance in the picture are Edna Murphy and Dorothy Dunbar, D'Arcy Corrigan, Boris Karloff and Lin-Yu-Ching, a Chinese giant, who claims eight feet as his height and who weighs 300 pounds.

"Cock o' the Walk" Gilbert's Next for M-G-M

John Gilbert's next starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer goes into production next week at the Culver City studio. The film will bear the name of "Cock o' the Walk," and is based on "The Day of Souls," a novel by Charles Renny Jackson. Tod Browning will direct a script by Wlademar Young. Gilbert is now completing the featured role opposite Greta Garbo in "Flesh and the Devil," an adaptation of Sander Mann's "The Undying Past," directed by Clarence Brown.

"Alaskan Adventures" to be Released Oct. 17th

ON October 17th, Pathe Exchange, Incorporated, will release "Alaskan Adventures," the six-reel photoplay and scenic that combines with adventure the mystery and lure of nature in the Northland. The film took two years in the making and records the experiences of Captain Jack Robertson, explorer, and Arthur H. Young, expert bow-and-arrow shot and big game archer, on their trip across the Arctic wastes carrying with them no weapons of defence save bows and arrows. They pledged themselves to kill no animal, bird or fish, except in case of necessity.

When the pictorial visits to the little-known parts of Alaska were completed the two adventurers had filmed the Midnight Sun, the Valley of 10,000 Smokes, the ice break-up in the Yukon, the birth of an iceberg and other scenes of nature seldom before revealed to the camera's eye.

"The Fire Brigade" Preview Car Begins Tour From Coast to New York This Week—Celebrations Planned for Principal Cities

METRO - GOLDWYN-MAYER last week started the campaign of publicity on "The Fire Brigade."

Arrangements for the spectacular "fire run" of a Los Angeles fire chief car from that city to New Orleans, carrying the pre-view print of "The Fire Brigade" to the annual convention of the International Association of Fire Chiefs, have been completed.

The production of "The Fire Brigade" has consumed nearly a year. It was produced with the technical assistance of California State Fire Marshal Jay Stevens, Los Angeles Fire Chief Scott and San Francisco Fire Chief Murphy.

Parades to Greet Car

The departure last week of the big Packard Six "pre-view car" carrying the prints of the picture from Los Angeles will be made a huge civic affair in that city. Practically the entire fire department of the city will participate in the ceremonies, as will May Cryer, Louis B. Mayer, head of the big Culver City studios; Hunt Stromberg, William Nigh and members of the cast. A parade will usher the car on the first leg of its journey with Fire Chief Scott driving the pre-view car the first fifty miles. Similar receptions will be accorded the car en route to New Orleans in all cities along the line, as well as from New Orleans to New York, where the first public showing of the production takes place. In every instance the car will be met on the outskirts of each city by fire engines, hook-and-ladders and other apparatus which will speed behind the car to the city hall, where civic ceremonies will be staged. Reports from a number of cities bring the news that half-holidays will be declared to honor this movement on the part of the fire chiefs of the country to raise funds for fire prevention work from part of the profits of "The Fire Brigade."

"The Fire Brigade" preview car speeded on its way from Los Angeles to New York by Louis B. Mayer, Charles Ray and May McAvoy at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios

The arrival in New Orleans of the M-G-M. car carrying the pre-view print will be one of the high lights of the fire chiefs' convention and the entire city is co-operating in an effort to make its reception there the outstanding affair of the entire run. Shop whistles, fire engine sirens and bells and church chimes will herald the arrival of the car here. The entire body of fire chiefs in convention will turn out to welcome the car, as will various departments of the city. Among those who will participate in the New Orleans convention ceremonies will be Secretary Hoover, Louis B. Mayer, Mayors and fire chiefs of this district, Hunt Stromberg, May McAvoy, Governors of different states, Bert Woodruff, who plays the part of the old chief in "The Fire Brigade," California State Fire Marshal Jay Stevens and others.

Officials Interested in Stunt

Plans now completed indicate that the arrival in each city of the M-G-M. fire car will make this cross-country run one of the most spectacular exploitation stunts attempted. The cause of the fire chief and the fireman is one that brings the ready response of every person in Federal, civic, social and club life and the receptions to be given the cross-country run of the fire car in every city are receiving the whole-hearted support of every individual approached on the matter.

The cross-country run of the M-G-M. automobile from Los Angeles to New Orleans is under the management of Pete Smith, publicity director at the studios. From New Orleans to New York and subsequent runs will be under the charge of Howard Dietz, director of publicity and advertising assisted by William Ferguson, exploitation manager.

Those in charge of the stunt have completed plans for city-wide celebrations which will attend the arrival of the ballyhoo car in the principal towns along the route from Los Angeles to New York. The active participation of firemen's organizations who have been interested in "The Fire Brigade" picture from the start of its production is proving an important factor in making the cross-country exploitation campaign a notable advertising success. This alignment gives the exploitation stunt a direct tie-in with the municipal affairs and in consequence it is getting the active support of city officials.

THE CHECK-UP

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."
The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

Studio Briefs

Approximately one hundred members of the "Wings" unit have left Hollywood for San Antonio, Texas, the location where the spectacular battle scenes which will figure so prominently in the course of the film will be photographed. This mammoth sequence in which more than eight thousand troops will participate on the ground and three hundred fliers in the air in the reproduction or re-enacting of the famous battle of St. Mihiel. The production unit is scheduled to remain in San Antonio for about two months.

Julian Moss and Sidney, the playwright team organized several years ago at New York University, has been acquired as a scenario writing duo at the M.-C.-M. studio. Their first task will be the writing of an original comedy drama as yet untitled.

J. G. Bachmann's newest Preferred picture, "His New York Wife," was held up for forty-eight hours, when the director, Len Abrams, was taken ill and was unable to proceed with the feature. Doctors declared that he would not be able to resume activities for several weeks. Albert Kelly was re-engaged by Bachmann to complete "His New York Wife," which is being made at the Mack Sennett studio. Alice Day has the title role.

Because Luther Reed has not yet recuperated from the operation for appendicitis that he underwent upon completing "The Ace of Cads," a short time ago, William Le Baron, associate producer at the Paramount Long Island studio, has postponed the starting date to September 27th. William Powell has been added to the cast which includes Lois Wilson, Ricardo Cortez, Lya De Putti and Mary Alden. Reed is now at White Springs, West Virginia, where he is conferring on the story of "New York" with Forrest Halsey, who wrote the screen play after being co-author with Barbara Chambers on the original story.

The first of the two Arthur Somers Roche stories, "Wolf's Clothing," a serial now running Hearst's "Cosmopolitan," to be included in the twenty-six Warners Winners, will soon be put into production with Patsy Ruth Miller and Monte Blue heading the cast. Blue is at present in New York, where he is resting from his strenuous exertions in "Across the Pacific." Miss Miller is expected in New York in a week also. As soon as they are sufficiently rested they will return to Hollywood, where production will be started immediately. The director and supporting cast have not yet been decided upon.

Paula Howard, a Hollywood schoolgirl, who has risen rapidly in the screen world during the past year, is the latest player to be added to the cast of "Jewels of Desire," a Metropolitan production starring Priscilla Dean. Miss Howard is a protegee of Marie Prevost and made her first appearance on the screen in the latter's "For Wives Only."

Besides Louise Brooks, Lawrence Gray and Evelyn Brent, the principals of Frank Tuttle's Paramount picture, "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em," Dorothy Hughes has an important role. Miss Hughes made her screen debut in D. W. Griffith's "The Sorrows of Satan." She also did her share in "The Quarterback" and "The Popular Sin."

Dr. Alexander Arkatov, the Russian director whom J. G. Bachmann brought to America to make Preferred pictures, is writing an original Russian story as his first American production. Contrary to previous announcements, the director will not make "Studies in Wives" until later in the year. His new story will probably be released under the title of "The Aristocrats."

The Warner Bros. production, "While London Sleeps," starring Rin-Tin-Tin, is now well under way under the direction of Walter Morosco, who is also the author of the story. During the past week, the sequences dealing with the Limehouse district of London were shot. Supporting the dog star in "While London Sleeps" are Helene Costello, Walter Merrill, De Witt Jennings, Otto Mattiesen, Carl Stockdale, John Patriek and George Kotsonaros.

Jack Nelson, director, has been added to the directorial staff of Chadwick Pictures corporation. He has not been assigned to a unit as yet but will probably direct either "Sunshine of Paradise Alley" or "Shamrock and Roses." Both pictures will be started within two weeks.

Willis Goldbeck, scenario writer, who prepared the continuity for Rex Ingram's "Marie Nostrum," has been assigned the preparation of the script for "The Garden of Allah," which Ingram will film abroad for Metro-Goldwyn. Goldbeck, not yet thirty years of age, is an Ingram discovery. He was a motion picture fan magazine writer when the director engaged him to handle the publicity for "The Prisoner of Zenda." He also prepared the scenario of "Searamouche."

The male lead opposite Clara Bow in "It" will be played by Antonio Moreno, who was recently seen in "Marie Nostrum" and "The Temptress." Miss Bow is now on location at San Antonio, Texas, where she is playing the leading feminine in "Wings." She has also recently played in "Mantrap" and "Kid Boots." "It" is Miss Bow's first starring vehicle under her new contract with Paramount.

Scott Dunlap has returned to Fox Films to direct "Desert Valley," starring Buck Jones. Virginia Brown Faire has the feminine lead and Malcolm White is the heavy. Others in the cast are: J. W. Johnston, Eugene Palette and Charles Brinley. Dunlap has directed many Westerns in the past, many of which starred Harry Carey. He has turned out thirty-two features for leading producers.

Greta Rue, blonde German ingenue, whose work on the Berlin stage and in pictures attracted the attention of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer officials, has been signed to a contract as a stock player. She will be given an intensive course of studio training, and will then be entrusted with important roles in future productions. No announcement has been made as to her first assignment.

Carmelita Geraghty has been assigned one of the leading roles in "Jocelyn's Wife," the Tiffany production starring Pauline Frederick. The story was suggested by the novel of the same name by Kathleen Norris.

On November 8th, Frank Lloyd will begin production on his second picture for Paramount. He will make "Children of Divorce," an adaptation from Owen Johnson's novel of that name as yet unpublished. Lloyd has just recently completed his first production for Paramount, "Eagle of the Sea."

All shooting on "The Missing Link" was taken on board ship last week under the direction of Chuck Reisner, who is making rapid progress with the production and continually augmenting the cast, which is already assuming large proportions. The cast supporting Syd Chaplin, who is starred in "The Missing Link," includes Ruth Hiatt, Crauford Kent, Sam Baker, Theodore Lorch, John T. Murray, Joseph Swickard, Henry Barrows and John Patriek.

Having completed the final cutting and editing of "The Knight Before Christmas," the last chapter of the "Bill Grim's Progress" series, Director Arvid E. Gillstrom expects to begin work soon on a feature production for F. B. O.

In Leo Maloney's next Western production for Pathe, "The Outlaw Express," the Western star does some difficult riding. He guides a team of six mountain horses along a mountain road at a fast pace. "The Outlaw Express" is scheduled for release on November 14th. Maloney himself directed.

Claude Gillingwater, veteran character actor of the stage and screen plays an important role in "Barbed Wire," Pola Negri's next starring vehicle for Paramount. Members of the cast previously chosen are Clive Brook, Einar Hanson and Clyde Cook.

Michael Curtiz, European director under contract with Warner Bros., devoted last week to the shooting of the prologue of "The Third Degree," in which Dolores Costello is starred with Louise Dresser in the leading supporting role.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer writing staff has been augmented by the addition of Vernon Smith, short story writer, scenarist, and for the past year head of the scenario department at the Mack Sennett studio. Smith is now busy with the continuity for "Frisco Sal," an original story by Edmund Goulding. He is regarded as an excellent comedy constructor, having written many of Harry Langdon's earlier screen vehicles. He is the creator of the Smith family series produced by Sennett.

Lawrence D'Orsay Added to Cast of "Popular Sin"

Lawrence D'Orsay is the latest addition to the cast of "The Popular Sin," the Monta Bell story which Malcolm St. Clair is directing for Paramount with Florence Vidor in the starring role.

Short Subjects and Serials

Feature Version of Pathe Tunney Serial

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC. announces a feature version of the Patheserial, "The Fighting Marine," starring Gene Tunney, the recently crowned heavyweight king of the prize ring. This Pathe production contains the dramatic highlights of the serial and retains many of the daring and hair-raising escapes in which the popular ex-Marine figures. It is claimed that the interest is heightened by the shortening of the serial to feature length. The thread of mystery that runs throughout the entire length of the story is presented in the feature with rapid-fire action and with a surprising finish.

Included in the cast of the feature version of "The Fighting Marine," are Walter Miller, Marjorie Gay, Virginia Vance, Frank Hagney, Sherman Ross, Mike Donlin, Wally Oettel, Jack Anthony, and Anna May Walthall.

Start Work on "The Fighting Kangaroo" Fox Imperial

Jules White has just started work on a new Fox Imperial comedy, "The Fighting Kangaroo," with Lige Conley and Mildred June playing the principal roles.

Shots depicting the comedy to be found in the Fox Films comedy, "Dizzy Dancers."

Castle Films Lists Product

Will Release 26 "Short Shots" and Like Number of "Castle Novelties"

CASTLE FILMS will release two series of 26 single reels during the 1926-27 season known as "Short Shots" and "Castle Novelties" respectively and also a series of 13 half reels titled "Music Legends."

Eugene W. Castle, head of the company bearing his name, is one of the pioneers of the film business, having started back in the days of the Mutual Company. He has seen service in many branches of the industry, at one time as West Coast editor for one of the national news reels and in the laboratory end; Mr. Castle was with the Gaumont Company for four years.

"Short Shots" releases contain a variety of subjects gathered throughout the world; the "Castle Novelties" are views of natural and man-made wonder spots of the world; "Music Legends" are a combination of story with scenic backgrounds and are so produced as to be adaptable to orchestras.

The following distributors are handling the Castle single reel product throughout the United States:

In Illinois and Northern Indiana, the Security Pictures Company, 808 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago; Cleveland and Cincinnati territories, Lande Film Exchanges; Eastern Pennsylvania, Liberty Film Corporation, 1339 Vine Street, Philadelphia; New England States, Golden Distributing Company, 57 Church Street, Boston; and New Haven; in the Northwest, Greater Features, Inc. Seattle, Portland and Butte, San Francisco and Los Angeles Cooperative Film Exchanges; Minnesota, Screen Classics Corp., Minneapolis. Film Distributors, Ltd., London are the general agents of Castle Films for Europe.

All Short Subject House Success in Boston

AFIVE weeks' engagement of all short-subject programs at the Repertory Theatre in Boston has been pronounced a "box office success" by the management of the house. During the regular season the Repertory offers dramatic stage productions by a stock company. The house was opened five weeks in advance of the season with picture programs made up exclusively of short subjects distributed by Pathe. Admission charge was 50 cents. Season tickets were sold for $5. The theatre served refreshments during intermissions.

New Serial Endorsed For Junior Matinees

TWO prominent Womens' Club associations in California have endorsed the new Pathe serial "Snowed In" for presentations at Junior matinees, and commended the picture for the wholesome quality of its entertainment.

Mrs. John Vruwink, Chairman Junior Matinee Committee, C. F. W. C., Los Angeles District, in a letter to Pathe officials in which she highly commends the picture, said, "We are glad to approve its use at Junior matinees and to tell you that we consider it a great improvement over other serials approved for use earlier in the year."

The State Chairman of Motion Pictures, California Federation of Women's Clubs, wrote: "I heartily endorse this picture, not only for Junior matinees, but as a picture that any adult audience will enjoy."

"Snowed In" features Alleen Ray and Walter Miller. It is being screened at previews for various organizations.

Comical incidents in the Pathecomedy, "Tell 'Em Nothing"

Pathe Releases for October 17

Schedule Includes Mack Sennett and Hal Roach Comedies, Tunney Episode

AMONG the subjects listed for release during the week of October 17 by Pathe is a comedy from the Hal Roach studios and one from the Mack Sennett lot; also on the schedule is the sixth episode of the Gene Tunney serial, a Grantland Rice Spotlight, an Aesop Fable, Topics of the Day, Pathe Review, and Pathe News.

"Tell 'Em Nothing" is the title of the Hal Roach comedy in which Charley Chase is starred, supported by Vivian Oakland, Gertrude Astor, Harvey Clark and Albert Ricardi. Leo McCarey directed under the supervision of F. Richard Jones.

Raymond McKee and Ruth Hiatt are co-featured in "Smith's Visitor," one of the "Jimmy Smiths" series, produced by Mack Sennett. Mary Ann Jackson and Janet Royce make up the supporting cast for the picture which was directed by Gil Pratt. Through the misinterpretation of some popular songs sung by Jimmy to a female guest, a divorce is imminent, but love conquers.

Chapter six of "The Fighting Marine," starring Gene Tunney, new world's champion heavyweight boxer, leads to further adventures. Spencer Bennet directed from Frank Leon Smith's story.

"More Ways Than One," is another analysis of sports for which Mr. Rice and Mr. Hawkinson are famous in their Sportlight Series.

"The Phoney Express" is the latest of the Aesop's Film Fables animated cartoon comedies.

Pathe Review Number 42 presents: "The Butterfly Congress," a tale of winged lovers; "The Lost Empire of Africa," a camera chronicle of the American excavations at ancient Carthage, led by the Count de Prorok; "The Workshop of Nature," a new series of studies in color by Arthur C. Pillsbury.

Topics of the Day offers the latest quips and jokes from the press of the world. Issues Numbers 86 and 87 of Pathe News complete the Pathe short feature program.

"Movieland," Lupino Lane's First Educational Comedy

The first Lupino Lane comedy on the Educational 1926-27 program now nearing completion has been titled "Movieland."

Stern Bros. Units Await Signal at Studio

THE new Stern Bros. studio, recently rebuilt to replace the old Stern plant that was wiped out by fire in the latter part of the summer, is now ready to resume concentrated activity on the Stern Bros. output for the Universal schedule. The Gus Meins company started working at the plant three weeks ago and have now reached the ninth of the "Newlyweds and Their Baby" comedies. The other four companies that are "rarin' to go" are those making "Buster Brown," the "Let George Do It," the "What Happened to Jane" and "The Excuse Maker" comedies.

Since the fitting out of the new studio, the Stern production staff has been greatly enlarged in the number of directors, gag-men, technicians and experts of various kinds. The forthcoming two-reelers are also promised to be better from a story viewpoint than the previous numbers.

The Stern Bros., Julius and Abe, are expected back from Europe this week. While over on the other side they looked over the foreign field and sought new ideas for comedy production. Julius Stern, president of the Stern corporation, is expected to en-train directly for Hollywood where he will start the wheels of the production plant going again. Abe Stern, vice-president, will probably remain in New York to confer with Universal executives on the broadened distribution of the Stern product.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Don Juan"—Warner Bros., Woods, Chicago

Chicago American: "There was but one phrase on every lip last night at McVicker's Theatre: 'A magnificent show.' For the first time in my life I heard music and saw it produced at the very same time it was given birth, by the motion picture process. Last night's exhibition was an extraordinary progression in our wizard-age of wonders."

Chicago Herald and Examiner: "It is more than a novelty, more than a sensation; I have no doubt it will become an industry."

Chicago Daily News: "This very comprehensive feat of reproducing personalities, their speech, their song, their instrumental virtuosity is accomplished by the Vitaphone, which synchronizes motion with sound to a remarkably high degree. It was in many respects a most uncanny experience."

Chicago Daily Tribune: "Synchronization of music and movement was perfect. It left nothing to be desired and created an illusion of reality."

"The Flying Horseman"—Fox Films, Isis, Indianapolis

Indianapolis Star: "'The Flying Horseman' is a thrilling story of the West by Max Brand. It is a skillful blending of comedy and thrilling action with the athletic young star appearing at his best."

"Fig Leaves"—Fox Films, Rivoli, Toledo, Ohio

Toledo Blade: "Numerous novel touches make quite pleasant entertainment—most amusing. The fashion parade filmed in technicolor is the last word in pictorial gorgeousness."

"Marriage License?"—Fox Films, Pantages, Los Angeles

Louella Parsons, Los Angeles Examiner: "Certainly there is much to recommend it . . . Alma Rubens' ability as an actress . . . She runs the gamut of emotions. . . . Miss Rubens is one of the best dramatic actresses on the screen. . . . I liked her best . . . in the court-room scenes."

"Marriage License?"—Fox Films, New Theatre, Baltimore

Baltimore Daily Post: "'Marriage License?' is a new and brighter edition of 'Stella Dallas.' . . . Alma Rubens plays the mother role with deep understanding. . . . The crisis makes 'Marriage License?' powerful to the end."

Baltimore American: "An intensely human story, different from the ordinary run of films. . . . An unusual climax. . . . Alma Rubens gives a most convincing portrayal of a difficult role."

"Fig Leaves"—New Theatre, Baltimore

Evening Sun: Critic hails Olive Borden as acme of loveliness, de-

Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, creator of "The Better 'Ole," the motion picture version of which opens in New York at the Colony on October 7 with Vitaphone in conjunction, photographed in his studio claring her latest picture, "Fig Leaves," at the New, looks like a million dollars . . . 'here is just the loveliest thing that has walked down the gelatin gangplank. . . . After the second reel of this delightful film we felt like yelling out: 'Where have you been all our life?' . . . This picture looks like a million dollars . . . its episodes in natural color are gorgeous. It has humor, wit and dash . . . they have turned cute Olive Borden loose in this film and what a beauty she is . . . she wears dozens of gowns and boy, the way she wears them! George O'Brien is quite good and the light touch he employs is effective . . . see this one!"

"No Man's Gold"—Fox Films, Province, Winnipeg, Canada

Free Press Evening Bulletin: "Tom Mix in his most dashing role. . . . Mickey Moore, a brilliant juvenile . . . the action is dazzling at times. . . . Photography is amazingly clear."

Winnipeg Evening Tribune: "A real treat . . . the producers have done well by Mix in providing him with a good story, rich in drama and incident."

"3 Bad Men"—Fox Films, New Theatre, Baltimore

News: "'3 Bad Men' is stirring melodrama. One particularly effective scene is the race across the line in the land rush. . . . The chief parts are excellently portrayed by George O'Brien, Olive Borden, J. Farrell MacDonald, Tom Santschi and Frank Campeau."

Post: "Master hands created '3 Bad Men' . . . so artistically that all pistol play becomes drama instead of just thriller stuff. . . . The three bad men come riding into the film silhouetted against the prairie sky. That scene itself is a work of art, just as the closing scene is when they cross the Great Divide."

"Don Juan" and Vitaphone—Warner Bros., Capitol, St. Louis

Star: "Vitaphone scored a triumph at the premiere here. The Capitol Theatre was jammed for Warner Bros. production. The audience came away agreeing definitely that the Vitaphone is a success and that it is destined to greatly alter, if not revolutionize the program of motion picture theatres. 'Don Juan,' the drama played by John Barrymore, offered with this program, is not a talking movie the sole function of the Vitaphone in its production being to furnish the melodies. 'Don Juan' is a great picture, great in its settings, acting and costuming."

Times: "A packed audience was amazed at the new Vitaphone. Warner Bros. synchronized film and sound device went over big. An amazing invention was given its initial St. Louis demonstration last night to a large and enthusiastic audience which packed every available seat at the Capitol Theatre. Those who went as skeptics after the showing were not skeptical. The uninterested became interested and those who were enthusiastic from the first became more enthusiastic. In 'Don Juan,' John Barrymore gives, as usual, one of his great characterizations. His acting alone makes the photoplay great."

Globe Democrat: "Vitaphone made its bow to St. Louis at the Capitol Theatre before a capacity audience last night. In less than an hour Vitaphone was declared a sensation. It is amazing and uncanny. There have been many attempts to perfect a system of co-ordination of shadow movement on the screen and sound, but results were not forthcoming until the Warner Bros. perfected the Vitaphone."

"Smith's Visitor"
(Pathe-Sennett—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

MANY and varied are the uses of adversity. One of them is the plot ideas which they supply to the domestic affairs of the Jimmy Smiths. Clare Brigg's "Mr. and Mrs.—" in this series are, as possibly you may know and remember, Raymond McKee and Ruth Hiatt, who are justly featured in each release of the series. Mary Ann Jackson is still their child and the attractive Janet Royce the trouble-making, albeit innocently, school girl friend of Mrs. Jimmy. You see it all happened in this wise. Janet was stopping over on her way to Paris. What more logical than that she should be the guest of the Smiths? While Mrs. Jimmy was doing the dishes friend husband was supposed to entertain Janet. Due to the baby's discovery of a lip stick or rouge and kissing her daddy, mother comes in to fall into the natural wifely error that her girl friend had been imprinting a kiss on hubby's cheek. Other circumstantial evidence makes Jimmy look decidedly guilty. Result, divorce court. The warring parents are reconciled through the medium of the baby, cause of the original disension, and the family leaves to go onto another set or on location for more troubles for the Pathe-Sennett Jimmy Smith family.

The Pathe rooster is justified in crowing not only because of this comedy but also for the other releases on this October 17th. This applies to "Tell 'Em Nothing," the Aesop Fable, Grantland Rice's Sportlight, the Gene Tunney chapter in his serial, "The Fighting Marine," and Topics of the Day, all reviewed elsewhere in this issue of the MORTON PICTURE NEWS.

Amusing, convincing, ingenious; tack those three adjectives on "Smith's Visitor."

"The Restless Race"
(Pathe-Sportlight—One Reel)

THE October 3rd release of Grantland Rice's series of sports is a homily that this age, being unusually restless, seeks and finds surcease in the race. It matters little whether it is sailing yachts (the thought of having money enough to own and sail one is enough in itself to make one restless, with no outlet for the feeling) riding motorcycles with and without sidecars (count me out on that form of diversion) or high-powered automobiles. The latter, yes, by all means. With each different sport shown on the screen Promoter and Director Rice, through appropriate captions, drives home the point he is trying to make. But then he doesn't need to limit it to today for expression of nervous energy logically has sought outlet for all time in some sort of sport.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"The Dizzy Dancers"
(Capitalizing Terpsichore for Comedy Purposes)
(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

MAKE money out of the dance madness of your local town and city and thus elevate your own economic position; save your prospective father-in-law financially and win the girl; that is the moral of this two-reel William Fox comedy. It has an excellent idea and some amusing situations. The type of hero played by Gene Cameron in the lead is one that most of us are familiar with and seldom tire of; a chap who is always putting up a front and usually getting away with it. His introduction and that of the girl, Jean Lorraine, is one such amusing instance. She is about to be arrested for speeding but gets out of her scrape because Cameron is sitting in the automobile of the police chief where he belongs about as much as you or I do in the presidential chair at Washington. Then his boarding the street car on which he is motorman and changing to his uniform and back again when the girl boards the car with her father, Frederick Sullivan, president of the street railway line.

The street railway company is threatened with bankruptcy until the ingenious Cameron hits on trailers for the street cars on which passengers may dance. This makes a combination of the bus and trolley lines possible and profitable for the girl's father and naturally—you can fill in the sequence yourself.

The Cast: Gene Cameron, Jean Lorraine, Frederick Sullivan, J. Clifford Rice, Rodney Hildebrand, James Donnelly and William Gilbert. Directed by Jules White. Story and scenario by Henry Johnson.

Summary—An amusing, well-acted, two-reel satire on the country's dance madness, released October 3.

"Felix the Cat Seeks Solitude"
(Educational—One Reel)

WHEN a person is in the throes of a moral conflict—tempted to assent in the face of the negative decision that conscience and good upbringing dictate—he surely wins our respect when in the face of the temptation he chooses the path of righteousness. This is exactly what Felix does. 'Tis evening and Felix is hungry. We see him prowling about, trusting to his keen sense of smell to find something to appease his appetite. He comes in contact with a fish on a dinner table about to be offered as a sacrifice to the appeasement of a human's hunger. Our Felix displays an understandable weakness in succumbing to the lure of that tasty morsel. He steals the fish and travels here and there in dark and silent places where man is not and where he will be able to settle down to a delicious repast. But wherever he goes, in the deserted woods or by the shore of a lake, there is always some exterior influence to arouse in him the feeling of guilt. So Felix, beset by temptation to devour the fish instead of returning it, fights his battle and succeeds. Most satisfactory for the spectator, be he ever so particular concerning his screen fare.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Lots of Grief"
(Universal-Gump Comedy—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE title of this particular one of the series using the famous cartoon characters of Sydney Smith in the Chicago Tribune and other syndicate papers is really a generic description. Always in cartoon strips and their moving picture step-children there is or are lots of grief; that is what they thrive on. As in the others the chinless Joe Murphy as Andy, Fay Tincher as Min and Jackie Morgan as Chester, the brat offspring, are the three featured players under Francis Corby's direction.

Things start from the moment Min attempts to pick the somnolent husband's pocket and encounters a mousetrap he has placed there. Her revenge comes from placing that instrument of torture where he will slip his large toe into it. Then after a domestic scene in which Gump does the dishes the family embark on that great American institution, a picnic. On the top of a bus Andy's troubles multiply. A passenger who crowds him off his seat, a woman whose baby he is forced to hold and leaves hanging on a cross trolley wire, his being catapulted to a passing auto and then to the top of a telegraph pole are a few of them.

A small town paper's report of a local social affair covers it: "A good time was had by all."

To be released November 1, 1926.

"Pioneer Blood"
(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE moral of this western picture under the aegis of the Universal Company is "Don't Judge by Appearances." It applies not only to moving pictures of this type but to that slightly larger world outside the studio walls or off "location." Fred Gilman has gotten into a scrap in some eastern college. He returns to his little gray home in the west presumably for his health. The local "rough necks" misinterpret his clothes and think him correspondingly "soft." He disillusiones them in true movie-hero style by leaving his mother and the girl in the plot, Mabelle Perry, seated in the buckboard while he goes back and thrashes the quartet. That, however, is only the beginning of his troubles. From the east comes a girl trying to blackmail him. Her excuse is that he killed a man in college while boxing. Gilman knows this isn't true and that the man recovered even though he himself had left college before it was discovered that the boxing-bout outcome was not fatal.

Mabelle Perry does not know the truth so goes to the appointed rendezvous to pay the asked-for money and save the hero's mother's feelings. Gilman arrives in time to block the villains' game and save check and girl. Curtain or—rather—fade-out. It is an amusing and entertaining story and quite well told by actors and director George Hunter. It has the additional merit of being somewhat different and that is no inconsiderable asset, believe me, when you see picture after picture that resemble the mythical two peas in a pod.

The comedy is to be released November 6, 1926.

"Wise Guys Prefer Brunettes"
(Pathe-Hal Roach—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

IT was about time someone refuted the Anita Loos theory. Generalizations are dangerous at best and for the average man, who possesses any catholicity whatsoever in regard to the dear, unfair sex, there is no reason for setting up any such dogmatic assertion as Mrs. John Emerson has. With her blonde novel dramatized, to be screened and already used as a comic strip the next thing is a musical comedy of light opera on that Nordic theme. It suggests the many and successful variations played on Jesse Lynch Williams' "The Stolen Story," which started out as a short story and became almost every form of theatrical entertainment.

All this, however, has nothing to do with the farce-comedy screen offering. Helene Chadwick partly justifies the title in her role of co-ed. With the aid of Ted Healey, borrowed from vaudeville for this picture, she shows "Dean" Jimmy Finlayson the error of his ways and at the end is not expelled from college or deprived of her lingerie shop.

Stan Laurel directed.

"A Merry-Go-Round of Travel"
(Educational-Lyman H. Howe—One Reel)

AS the title implies, this is a hodge-podge of scenes and people from many lands and many climes combined for a few moments of mere entertainment. Starting with the western part of our own country the picture takes us to Siam, China, and other Oriental scenes, to Jerusalem and ends in Venezuela showing the beautiful waterfalls there and the amazing flocks of birds. They are just bits, but bits which are carefully and well selected and in their entirety make a diminutive travelogue of interest.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Tell 'Em Nothing"
(Pathe-Hal Roach Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

AS suggested in the review of "Smith's Visitors," Pathe is entitled to its Chanticleer trade-mark for the October 17th releases. Part of the credit goes to "Tell 'Em Nothing," the Hal Roach comedy starring infectious Charley Chase. A prophet is not without honor save in his own country; by the same token (if that aphorism be true, and we have no reason for doubting it) a divorce lawyer such as Chase plays is not without standing except at his own fireside. Possibly he has too many attractive female clients; leave that to Roach, but anyway his wife is jealous with or without cause. In this picture without.

But Oh, the danger of circumstantial evidence. Everything points to him as a philanderer. To complicate matters he is photographed holding one of his blonde clients in his arms, a subterfuge he had suggested as good divorce evidence, but with no idea of his playing the role himself. Then the invasion of his home by the blonde, while his wife is away, her jealous husband and the home-coming of his own wife supply the characters necessary for the most damaging situations. It is a decidedly amusing farce and well played. One of the amusing sequences is where Charley is compelled by his wife to drink an immoderate amount of water for a supposed attack of hiccoughs, an attack really visiting the unwelcome feminine caller, under the bed, which the much harassed young lawyer is trying to conceal.

Tribute not only to the amusing star but his support, which includes Vivien Oakland, Gertrude Astor, Harvey Clark and Albert Ricardi. Also a few sprays of laurel or bay wreaths to director Leo McCarey and supervisor F. Richard Jones.

Exhibitors and fans can't go wrong on this offering.

"For Cryin' Out Loud"
(Universal-Blue Bird—One Reel)

THE marital cynic would probably say "get a marriage license if you feel you must, but don't use it after you have gotten it." Women will say as Consuelo Dawn does in this picture: "Do not dare to get a license until you have found out whether or not I wish to be a co-partner in the marriage game with you." Well, anyway, Neely Edwards did get a license and then, knowing that his fiancée-to-be would get peeved if she discovered its existence before he proposed, goes through the tortures of the damned (with illustrations not by Gustav Dore) because it has been mislaid and he cannot find it. Before the happy and inevitable denouement of holding her in his arms with her coyly whispered "Yes" all the characters go through the adventures of a typical French bed-room farce except occupying the beds. A trick cop catching the hero sneaking out of the second story window complicates things, but Neely is not in love with his fiancée's "dearest girl friend" and they are last seen en route to using the license for the purpose for which Neely paid the two-dollar fee or whatever they charge in Hollywood studios for such licenses. E. L. Kennedy directed. It is released November 1, 1926.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"From Butterflies to Africa and Alcohol"
(Pathe Review—One Reel)

CATHOLICITY is the keynote of the Pathe Review for October 17th. "The Butterfly Congress" is a rarely beautiful picture of a gathering of butterflies on the shores of an Adirondack lake. The photographer and title writer do not attempt to explain why or how they gather or at the same instant separate, but do present some striking pictures of their subject. I have never seen them before in pictures and they are decidedly worthwhile.

"The Lost Empire of Africa" gives another chapter of Count de Prorok's investigations and explorations. This phase deals with the cliff dwellings, they might be called, of the Berbers ten thousand years ago. His escort of mounted Arabs makes one of the most effective and striking pictures in the film now released.

"The Workshop of Nature" is interesting as showing the reaction of certain flowers to a diversity of liquids, starting with water and including narcotics and bootleg whisky. If an object lesson for drinkers under the Volstead regime were wanted here it is. Plants cannot consume the synthetic drinks any more than humans can, while Messrs. Andrews, Volstead and company might use these pictures as "horrible examples."—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Squirrel Food"
(Educational—One Reel)

WITH this combination of an old man with the gout, his flighty and love-craving daughter, a sort of half-wit, moronish sort of bell hop who is attracted by the daughter's good looks, a director is certain to be able to extract laughs by manipulating the figures into doing all the necessary and silly steps so essential in many of our short comedies. This old fellow with the gout, as a subtitle reads, was a Southern gentleman who traveled North for hospitality. His swathed foot seems to be a magnet for wayward feet, trunks or anything of weight and quite often he has to jump up and hold his foot, with that agonizing expression which the Katzenjammer Kids have tried so hard all these years to bring to the face of their Captain. There is lots of scurrying about, all the flops, the ups and downs, the hide-and-seek. And it is funny—at times. Clem Beauchamp, as a goofy huntsman, is about the best in the picture, although he has an exceedingly small part. The others are Cliff Bowes, Jack Lloyd, Glen Cavender and Estelle Bradley.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"More Ways Than One"
(Pathe-Spotlight—One Reel)

WITH the Grantland Rice copyright sign on the picture you know that the title does not refer to making love, although I understand it would be equally applicable to that sport, too. No, it merely attempts to show and to prove that champions hold their titles or acquire them by playing the game in different ways. Their grip of a golf club may be different, as may their stance, and yet each theory leads to a championship. As in their stance, so also in their manner or method of putting or driving. But golf is only one of the sports where different ideas lead to the same goal. Baseball pitchers may use a fast or a slow ball and so on ad infinitum. The Rice-Hawkinson standard is maintained.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"The Lost Arrow"
(Castle Films—One-half Reel)

THIS is one of a series issued monthly and, if those to follow are made along the same lines, then the exhibitor should have no trouble in attracting business. This production combines both a story and the scenic wonders of the Yosemite Valley. It is an Indian legend telling of a squaw drawn to her death in the swirling rapids by a vision of a departed lover. The scenic investiture is a beautiful thing to behold. Music cue sheets are supplied with each of this series.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"So This Is America"
(Castle Films—One Reel)

THIS is a companion piece to another Castle Films picture, "So This Is Europe," and, in like manner, covers the outstanding wonders of this country. The picture opens with views of New York and then onward with shots of Niagara Falls, Yellowstone, the Colorado Rockies, Crater Lake, the Valley of the Yosemite, America's Riviera and the Monterey Peninsula. These scenic wonders of Nature are beautifully photographed and should inspire a longing in the spectator to "see America first."—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"The Pinnacle Rider"
(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

A SUB-TITLE for this should be "The Sinful City Versus the Pure Open Spaces," for it brings into conflict a ranch owner who has inherited his property and consequently fled the walled cities and his relatives who still continue to reside in Sodom, Gomorrah, Tyre, Nineveh, New York, or what city have you? His seclusion is invaded by an aunt, her son and the supposed fiancée of the latter, a charming girl. To get rid of them Fred Mower, who is featured, gets his side partner, the cook of the ranch, to tell them he is dead. That doesn't accomplish anything, for they proceed to take possession on the score that they are the next of kin and consequently the rightful heirs.

The heroine, fleeing the importunities of the aunt to marry Cyril, is rescued from a buckboard runaway by the hero, who tells her for some unexplained reason that he is the notorious bad man of the district. Ultimately the city trio escape in their auto from the menial tasks they have been performing around the ranch, but in so doing fall into the hands of the real bad man and his associates in crime. They are rescued by the hero and "all's well with the world," at least that part inhabited by hero and heroine. And there you are—to speak in the English vernacular.

Not an epoch-making picture but entertaining and well acted. It is directed by William Wyler. It will be released October 20.

"The Phoney Express"
(Pathe-Fable—One Reel)

NOTHING is sacred to the makers of the fables. This time it is the time-honored pony express that bobs up every now and then in the Westerns which is utilized for a plot to point an Aesopian moral. In the most approved wide-open space manner the mail is carried. The disintegration of the re-mount horses, the attack of a countless number of redskins, among them the villain of the piece intent on appropriating for his own use the heroine; none of these things stops the dauntless hard-riding hero from keeping faith with Uncle Sam and his trust with the post-office.

The setting for this thrilling drama and the logical characters employed make it one of the best of the recent releases by Pathe. Never a dull moment; something doing every minute; these might well be the slogan or exploitation for this picture.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Short Shots"
(Castle Films—One Reel)

"NOT a news reel," yet "not a magazine (educational) reel," but made simply for entertainment, is the Castle Company's description of this series, of which there are 26 released, twice monthly. While I agree that the first part of the description is true, as they are not "timely" topics in the sense of parades, etc., yet anyone seeing this number could not help but absorb some knowledge of the subjects dealt with. The scenes are culled from all over the world and offer great contrast and variety. Sheep, the "Black Bottom" (the latest dance step), salmon, to mention only a few of the shots making up this issue.

The reel should interest any and everybody.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"So This Is Europe"
(Castle Films—One Reel)

THE title of this number tells the story of the action, which might be termed a Cook's tour of Europe done in celluloid. The opening shot shows the giant Leviathan leaving its dock in Hoboken, crowded with tourists. Then in rapid succession we are treated to views of the Strand in London, Paris boulevards, and so on through Berlin, Rome, the Alps in Switzerland, etc., Mt. Vesuvius eternally belching forth its lava, then to Holland and back to Paris, where the tourists once more board ship.

The reel has been treated to a beautiful laboratory job, each scene exquisitely toned.

Twelve minutes of entertainment are in store for your patrons.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

You'd Be Surprised

Amusing and Satisfying

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE high-hat comedian, Raymond Griffith, has gone in for mystery-comedy—something quite novel for him. Tacking melodrama onto the tail of farce is apt to prove disastrous if there is fear that the combination will go wrong. The sponsors of such a contraption must deal with a murder and the element known as suspense. And murders and coroners are not jested about—so one can notice it.

Griffith, however, has seized a chance to burlesque a murder mystery. By handling it in satirical fashion he has gotten away from the unhealthy flavor of dark deeds. It doesn't pack much substance. Indeed, it is pretty frail stuff if you are paging a plot. But Griffith, in his high top, and wearing his debonair smile, sees to it that it dishes up the necessary amount of slapstick. He bobs up as Mr. Coroner to discover who murdered a poor victim on a houseboat. There are some laughs—plenty of chuckles—and an occasional guffaw to be found here. It is snappily put together, the titles are crisp—and it breezes through with the necessary sparkle. Not as good as some of the earlier Griffiths, but good enough to suit most anyone—still functioning in the soft-boiled class.

The Cast: Raymond Griffith, Dorothy Sebastian, Earle Williams, Edward Martindel. Director, Arthur Rosson.

THEME: Mystery comedy revolving around youth who holds job of coroner. He is all dressed up and his work is to solve a murder on houseboat.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The mysterious goings-on during the action on houseboat. The hectic scampering by guests. The unexpected and highly diverting incidents in solving crime. The good performance by star. The titles.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Go after crowds with campaign on Griffith—playing up his high hat. Tell that he has a new type of story—one with a mystery element. Tease the title and tie up with stores, restaurants, etc.

DRAWING POWER: O. K. for average houses everywhere. Suitable for cities and towns. Star's following will enjoy it.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players. Length, six reels. Released September, 1926.

Entertaining Melodrama of Railroad Life

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

WITH the railroad serving as a background for his latest stellar effort, Ralph Lewis comes through with a pleasing characterization of a railroad engineer doomed, through the designs of the villain, to spend his life as a flagman at an isolated grade crossing, but who, through enforced leisure hours, works on an automatic device for stopping trains, which prove successful. Though the story is a somewhat stereotyped affair, the performance contributed by the supporting cast, and the comedy of Sidney Franklin suffice to convince the spectator that the time spent in viewing the film has not been wasted.

There are several thrilling sequences incorporated—the wreck, the catastrophe prevented by the stop-device, and the scenes attendant on the eye test. The story, in brief, tells of the demotion to signalman of an engineer through the crooked work of a younger man who aspires to his job. However, this enforced leisure gives the former engineer time to perfect a device for stopping trains running past a block signal and, after much difficulty through obstructions placed in his way by the villain, secures a test for his invention which proves successful. There is a pleasing little romance between the inventor's daughter and a young construction engineer.

The Cast: Ralph Lewis, Jean Arthur, Sidney Franklin, Hugh Allen, George Chesebro. Directed by Frank O'Connor.

THEME: Railroad melodrama. Crooked work of fireman ambitious to become engineer almost causes wreck of elderly engineer's life.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The railroad wreck. The acting of Ralph Lewis, Sidney Franklin and others in the cast. The comedy element.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up Ralph Lewis, who is well-known to the fans. Bill as thrilling railroad melodrama.

DRAWING POWER: Good draw for middle class houses.

Fighting With Buffalo Bill

Universal Starts a Semi-biographical Serial

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THIS serial represents the difficulty that must have confronted a Roman in the old days who wanted ride two horses at the same time in the Circus Maximus. Universal is founding their continued story on striking episodes in the life of the famous "Buffalo Bill" (Col. William F. Cody) and at the same time trying to combine and blend these with an entirely different fictional story of a migration in 1859 to the West. William Lord Wright adapted and supervised George H. Plympton's scenario.

This is the story to be told: Wallace MacDonald is in love with Elsa Benham. She is the ward of Robert E. Homans, a lawyer and supposed friend of her father. He wants his son, villain number 2, Cuyler Supple (good name that for a villain), to marry Elsa to cover up the fact that he has been misappropriating money sent to her by her father, Howard Truesdell. The latter really is alive in Sacramento but believed dead by Elsa, Grace Cunard, in love with the son Cuyler.

The discovery of gold starts the wagon train with all these characters and an old forty-niner, Nelson McDowell, from the small Illinois town toward Goleonda. On their journey Edmund Cobb, alias William F. Cody, then in his youth, comes into the picture and the action. Indians constantly attack. Prairie fires devour, and all the time father and son plot Elsa's ruin. Cody or the heroic Wallace MacDonald are always playing the role of god from the machine and temporarily thwarting the villains.

The Cast: Wallace MacDonald (starred), Elsa Benham, Robert E. Homans, Grace Cunard, Nelson McDowell, Howard Truesdell, Edmund Cobb, Cuyler Supplee and Harry Blake. Director, Ray Taylor.

THEME: Western melo of 1859 with bits of "Buffalo Bill's" life.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Wagon train and Indian attack sequences.

Produced and distributed by Universal Pictures Corp. First chapter released August 30, 1926. Length, ten chapters, two reels each EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Capitalize "Buffalo Bill's" fame.

DRAWING POWER: Good, especially in houses catering to general family patronage.

The Mystery Club

Arthur Roche Keeps Us Guessing

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

MOST of us love detective stories between book covers or on the stage. They invariably mean mystery and somewhat as cross-word puzzles exercise your ingenuity in trying to solve them so the reader or theatregoer finds himself unconsciously trying to figure out just who the guilty person or persons are and just how it was done. With that premise and the additional one that this Universal picture is based on the original "Crimes of the Armchair Club" by an acknowledged master of this kind of fiction, Arthur Somers Roche, you can depend on a story that must hold you from start to finish. Its transference to the screen under the title, "The Mystery Club," has been cleverly effected by Helen Broderick and Herbert Blache.

Several millionaire corsairs of Wall Street and big business, as their forebears were of the high seas, make a bet that each man must commit a crime or forfeit twenty-five thousand dollars to a common pool. Then the crimes commence. They are most ingenious and baffling and you do not know whom to suspect but incline toward two club attendants, the steward and an East Indian attendant. The denouement shows the president of the club is responsible, having utilized ex-crooks whom he is trying to help reform, and his own wife and niece in the plot. Hence great relief, especially on the part of Matt Moore, who logically all the time thinks the girl, Edith Roberts, is really a crook.

The Cast: Matt Moore, Edith Roberts, Mildred Harris, Charles Lane, Warner Oland, Henry Herbert, Charles Puffy, Alphonse Martell, Finch Smiles, Earl Metcalfe, Natt Carr, Jed Prouty, Alfred Allen, Sidney Bracey and Monte Montague. Director, Herbert Blache.

THEME: Wager of club members of ability to commit felonies and escape detection.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Maintenance throughout of air of mystery and yet plausibility.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Universal's excellent cast and that same human love for mystery stories.

DRAWING POWER: Should be good.

Produced and distributed by Universal Pictures Corp. Length, 6,969 feet. Released March 3, 1927.

Sweet Rosie O'Grady

Heart Interest Film Should Satisfy

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

LIKE the well-known slogan of a certain cigarette, it satisfies. There is nothing pretentious about this little yarn whose strongest element is its romantic vein. It is an idea which has been exploited in celluloid many, many times. Still it always manages to function pretty well in spite of its long usage.

A song which flourished in the good, old horse-and-buggy era is the suggestion behind the picture. And since the song has something to do with the sidewalks of New York—what could be more apropos than investing it with a sidewalk atmosphere? So we have Rosie from the East Side tenements and the Young Man from a Fifth Avenue mansion. And to stir up some form of conflict she must be painted as an Irish waif who is reared by a benevolent Hebrew pawnbroker.

The action depicts heart interest scenes between the guardian and the orphan—and a touch of pathos when the girl misunderstands the youth. One cannot accept it as a bit real—the contrasts are too sharp. But it does invite sympathy for the heroine and extracts humor in those scenes of the Hebrew comedy relief. The characterization is splendid, particularly as furnished by Shirley Mason in the title role, Alyn Warren as the pawnbroker and William Conklin as a cop who becomes a lordly contractor.

The Cast: Shirley Mason, Cullen Landis, E. Alyn Warren, William Conklin, Lester Barnard, Otto Lederer. Director, Frank R. Strayer.

THEME: Heart interest drama revolving around orphan who develops romance with rich youth and who, after period of disillusionment, finds happiness.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The comedy scenes. The character study by Warren. The fancy dress ball. The sympathy and human appeal.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tie up with song. Tease the title. Play up star and bill as human interest drama. Stage prologue typical of atmosphere of song.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for all program houses. O.K. for neighborhoods.

Produced and distributed by Columbia Pictures Corp. Length, 6,108 feet. Released September, 1926.

Across the Pacific

Lots of Action and Heroics Here

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ONE of those up-and-at-'em melodramas which Charles E. Blaney dashed off so feverishly in the good old ten, twent' and thirt' days blossoms forth in celluloid—and all things considered, it succeeds in carrying out its promise of snappy entertainment. Oh, there are some flaws to be sure. One of them concerns an abundance of flag-waving—and another has to do with the lack of surprise in the action. It is easy to guess what is coming.

On the credit side, however, are a series of melodramatic scenes and some romantic ones which should stir a sluggish pulse—particularly when Monte Blue and Myrna Loy have the spotlight. The action goes back to the days of Philippine rebellion—when Aguinaldo was playing hide-and-seek with the Americans.

There is some satisfactory realism when it gets into the plot—and the director has overcome much of its old-fashioned flavor with some highly creditable atmosphere. All in all, "Across the Pacific" is good entertainment for the mass of picturegoers. It is competently acted—with the honors going to Mr. Blue and Miss Loy.

The Cast: Monte Blue, Jane Winton, Myrna Loy, Walter McGrail, Sojin. Director, Roy Del Ruth.

THEME: Melodrama of strife in the Philippines and the effort of American hero to capture rebel.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The action and suspense. Scenes between Monte Blue and Myrna Loy. The army episodes. The atmosphere and local color.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Title has drawing qualities. Play up stills of Myrna Loy. Feature as adaptation of highly successful play. Tie up with Legion, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for all downtown and neighborhood houses.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers. Length, six reels. Released September, 1926.

Gigolo

Edna Ferber's "Lounge Lizard" in Pictures

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

IF I had read Miss Ferber's popular and widely distributed novel, from which Garrett Fort fashioned his adaptation for this moving picture, I unquestionably would be in better and more strategic position to comment on the screen result. On the other hand it may be fortunate that I am not acquainted except through hearsay with the novel. Possibly the greater would have been my disappointment. It is a curiously unsatisfying thing. You find yourself very much interested for the early part. Then that interest lapses to be somewhat resuscitated toward the end. It is difficult to place your finger on just what the defect is.

For the benefit of "Those who came in late" or have not read the story, it is tabloidly told herewith. A middle-west family returns from France, where the mother has replaced her son's dead father with an Englishman who has married her for money. At the latter's insistence the home and ancestral foundry are sold and the trinity return to France. The boy, Rod, enlists in the Lafayette Escadrille and the husband squanders his wife's money. At the conclusion of the war the aviator returns to find his mother's fortune gone and her dead. He becomes a paid dancing partner or "gigolo" to earn a living. His renaissance comes, of course, and he returns to the mid-west to claim Jobyna Ralston and his heritage of self-respect through the purifying fires of the family foundry. As said above it curiously does not become convincing yet always has that elusive possibility.

The Cast: Rod La Rocque (starred), Jobyna Ralston, Louise Dresser, George Nichols, Cyril Chadwick, Ina Anson, Sally Rand. Director, William K. Howard.

THEME: Ruin of American small town family through dance madness and regeneration of hero who had become a "lounge lizard" in Paris. EXPLOITATION ANGLES: La Rocque's popularity. Edna Ferber's fame.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Facial metamorphosis of star; Parisian atmosphere. DRAWING POWER: Good in smaller cities and towns with suitable campaign.

The Great K & A Train Robbery

More Prodigious Feats of Valor by Tom Mix

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THIS time it behooves the redoubtable Tom and his co-starring partner, Tony, to thwart a train robbery. You do not need to see the last hundred feet of film or read to the end of this review to know that they succeed. To use a current slang phrase—"and how." To get down to our muttons; William Walling is the president of a western railroad which has been picked on for constant train robberies, largely because of the connivance with the band of robbers of his secretary, Carl Miller. The latter is incidentally in love with, or at least wants to marry Dorothy Dwan, the president's daughter. Tom Mix, a famous detective, has been hired to solve the robberies.

Mix, blackmasked, boards the president's train and is logically mistaken for a robber. Her belief that he is does not prevent Dorothy with her woman's moving-picture intuition detecting the man beneath the mask and falling in love with him. She doesn't even know the color of his eyes. The latter thing, I understand from hearsay, is usually most important.

There are some unusual situations in the unfolding of the plot. For example; Mix is discovered in the first appearance in the picture suspended miles above a gulch, hanging to a cable suspended from the top of the cliff on which the train robbers are carelessly spilling their plans. In the valley below, the faithful Tony is waiting. Mix's invasion of the railroad magnate's home riding Tony is another.

THEME: Capturing train robbers.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Combination effective train and horsemanship sequences.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Mix's unquestioned popularity; unusual shots of camera. Several striking lobby displays and ballhoos suggest them.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Regional News from Correspondents

FOLLOWING a recent announcement made by Stanley Sobelson and associates to the effect that a new theatre would be shortly under way in Elizabeth, N.J., comes a rumor this week that the Fabian-Stanley organization have taken over four theatres in that city, near the site of the proposed Sobelson project.

The Elizabeth theatres named in the deal are: The Strand, a 1700-seat house; the Royal, seating about 600; the Gaiety, 500 seats, and the Flora, also of a 500 seating capacity. These houses have been operated by Kokalis.

With the exception of the Strand, the other three mentioned are of small seating capacity and not the type which the Fabian-Stanley Company are generally in the habit of acquiring. Just what disposition would be made of the smaller houses, in case the report be authentic, was not mentioned with the foregoing information.

If this deal has gone through, the Fabian-Stanley Company will have almost a clean sweep in Elizabeth with the exception of the Capitol, which will continue first runs under the management of Harry Nelson, and the Fox Theatre, which adheres to a straight picture policy. The Sobelson project is barely under way.

For the first time in Metropolitan records the New York City Industrial baseball championship was won by a motion picture team when Fox Films gained the decision over Chase National Bank by the score of 3 to 0 at Dexter Park last Saturday.

The Fox Athletic Club nine had previously captured the motion picture league title with eleven consecutive victories, while the Chase outfit were undefeated winners of the bankers league pennant.

Louis L. Schwartz, former manager of the Harlem Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York City, has recently been promoted to the position of booker for the East Side Circuit of the Delancey-Clinton Realty Corp., with offices at 1560 Broadway. It is possible that the future headquarters of Mr. Schwartz may be at the Apollo Theatre, 126 Clinton Street, recently opened by Messrs. Blinderman, Steiner and their associates.

While on the subject of the Apollo, it might be said that this house is the latest addition to the Steiner and Blinderman Circuit. It is claimed that there are 2400 seats in the house, with a roof garden accommodating 1200. Two elevators have been installed for the convenience of the roof patrons. George Steiner, brother of Charles Steiner, one of the circuit executives, will manage the new theatre.

According to report, the Boulevard Theatre, a new house of the Grobe and Noble Circuit in Queens, opened to a flourishing business under the able direction of Bert Korbell. Following the policy of de luxe presentations made at the Jackson Theatre, another Grobe and Noble house, Korbell has instituted the same high class programs at the Boulevard and it is safe to state that they are being appreciated by the North Shore patrons. The Boulevard seats 2500 and has facilities for staging and lighting the most elaborate spectacles.

Keeney's old theatre in downtown Brooklyn, after being taken over by Loew, Inc., was renamed Loew's Livingston. The name has been changed again and the house will now go under the name of Loew's Hanover.

Another theatre in downtown Brooklyn, the Criterion, and better known as the Supreme, has recently changed its policy to burlesque and pictures. Pictures will change twice weekly.

Berthold Hills, lessee of the Globe Theatre, 149th Street and Eighth Avenue, has closed the doors of that house for keeps, it is said. The reason given is that a new apartment house will soon occupy the old theatre site.

The Gate Theatre, a 450-seat house near Sea Gate, Coney Island, will soon revert to its former owners, Benas and O'Neil. Mr. Benas also operates the Newkirk Theatre, Newkirk Avenue and East 16th Street.

The Consolidated Amusement Company, under the leadership of Lawrence Bologina, is again stepping out in the way of building new theatres. This concern has two under way at present, one on Featherbed Lane, near University Avenue, with plans calling for 2500 seats, and another on 167th Street, one block east of the Concourse. The 167th Street theatre will also seat around 2500. Incidentally, there's plenty of rock on the site of the latter house to insure a thoroughly sound foundation.

Sometimes it takes an event like a heavyweight championship bout to change the policy of a theatre. For the first time in its history the Stanley Theatre, the well known motion picture house at Seventh Avenue and 41st Street, New York City, has placed a serial, the Gene Tunney affair, on its program.

The Chatham Theatre, Chatham Square, a sort of stepchild of the local film trade until Lou Goldman, well known Bronx exhibitor, took it over, is making a few of the boys in the downtown New York neighborhood sit up and take notice, according to a recent report. Goldman, it is said, is packing them in at a fifteen-cent admission.

The Houston Theatre, Houston and Mott Streets, New York City, is closed at the present time to allow for extensive alterations. It is reported that on its completion, the house will be taken over by one of the big East Side circuits.

Another East Side theatre reported to be opened soon by one of the East Side exhibitors, is the Catherine Theatre, Catherine Street. This house is one of the smaller ones.

The Windsor Theatre, 412 Grand Street, is at present being remodeled to the tune of $20,000.

B. K. Bimberg will open his new Endicott Theatre, 127 West 89th Street, New York City, on Thursday of this week. Manager Goldsmith will be in charge. The house policy will be a daily change in program.

After being closed for one and one-half months the Happy Hour Theatre, 234 Columbia Street, Brooklyn, has reopened. The house has been extensively overhauled.

F. G. Wilson has recently taken over the lease on the Rose Theatre, West 102nd Street, New York City. The house is now closed for alterations. The former lessee was Herman Gordan. Mr. Gordan has an interest in the Roselle Theatre, Roselle, N.J.

Two local theatres are reported as being on the market and one exhibitor who recently disposed of his house is looking for another.

One of the former is the Hasbrouck Heights Theatre, a 400-seat house, and the other is the Apollo, recently operated by Senbano and Licati, at 747 East 180th Street.

Albert Mezey is the exhibitor who is looking for another house and the reason is that he recently sold his Windsor Terrace, 1224 Prospect Avenue, to M. Michaels.

The Heights Theatre, Washington Street, Brooklyn Heights, will open Thursday, according to report.

It is rumored that William Salkin, Middle East Side exhibitor, will build another large theatre in the neighborhood of 83rd Street and First Avenue, New York City.

Not going out of the same neighborhood in search of further rumors, it is said that Charles O'Reilly's Park Lane, a new house under construction at 89th Street and First Avenue, has been placed on the market.

The Victoria Theatre, Norfolk Street, Newark, after being closed for four years, has reopened with Polish vaudeville and pictures.

The many friends of John Dacey, assistant to William Raynor at the Pathe Exchange, will be glad to know that John's "dags" are fast getting in shape. In fact, the doctor tells Mr. Dacey that he will be able to jump off the Woolworth Building in a few weeks without breaking down an arch.

If some of the exhibitor-callers at the Pathe Exchange want to see some good comedy and enjoy a hearty laugh, they should drop in on the fifth floor at Number 1600 and watch Eddie Carroll swat the Tunney punching bag. They say Eddie swings a sharp pencil much better than his fists.

The American Theatre, Borough Park section of Brooklyn, will open October 8th under the management of Joe Finger, former owner. The National Theatre Supply Company re-equipped the house.

Joe Hornstein, vice-president and general manager of the Eastern Division of the National Theatre Supply Company, recently left for Chicago on a ten-day trip.

John Hertner, of Hertner Electrical Company, McAuley of McAuley Arcs and Bill Kunzman, of National Carbon, were recent New York City visitors.

New England

EDWIN G. BATES, in charge of employment for all Shubert orchestra members in Boston and a member of theatre orchestras for many years, died Sept. 24 at his home in Roxbury, Mass. He was 61 years old.

Word has been received from M. B. Leavitt, at one time of Boston, and nationally known as a pioneer theatre owner, that he and Mrs. Leavitt were unharmed by the Florida storm but lost their home and all its contents. They have been located in Miami for the past few years.

John Flinn, with H. L. Duke, reached Boston on the thirtieth day of his record breaking trip, visited the Boston exchange and departed the same night for New Haven, Conn. At New Haven, the last of the 31 Associated Exchanges to be visited, he spent the greater part of Friday and Friday night returned to New York.

The Boston Film Team played a team match against a team from Manchester, N.H., on the links of the York Harbor Country Club at York Harbor, Me., over the weekend, winning by a close margin. On the Film team were Henry Scully, Ed "Dok" and Harry Golden, Jake Laurie, George Jeffries, Henry Wolper, Bill Kelley, John Dervin, Herman Rifkin, Dave Marshall, Henry Eckman, Chester Grenier and Sam Torgan.

Mrs. Emma V. Corbett, of Associated Exhibitors, Boston, has resigned to become booker at Warner Brothers Boston Exchange, succeeding Harry Smith, who took a similar position at Producers.

L. H. Flinn, of the New York Film Board of Trade, as assistant to the general counsel, was a guest of the Boston Film Board of Trade during the week and spoke at the Film Board meeting.

Samuel M. Moscow, sales manager for Independent Films, Inc., Boston, underwent an operation at the Riverbank Hospital, Boston, Monday and is now on the road to complete recovery.

Phelp's Theatre at Southbridge, Mass., has been sold by Clarence Jackson to Morris Posner, well known in the film industry in Connecticut, who will be active manager of the house.

Milton Hill, accessory service manager at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for New England, underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Conant Hospital, Bay State Road, Boston. The operation is reported as successful and he is rapidly recovering.

Timothy O'Toole, office manager at Independent Films, Inc., has returned from a successful trip to Canada during which business was combined with a vacation tour.

Harry Decker, of Decker's Film Transfer, was so anxious to see the Tunney-Dempsey go in Philadelphia that he, with others, chartered an airplane for the trip but just before time for them to embark weather conditions caused the pilot to cancel the trip and they had to content themselves with getting the fight story by radio.

The staff of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Exchange in Boston will organize a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Club next week.

Henry Wolper, cashier for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in Boston, spent the week-end in New York for the World Series games.

Charles Moning of the Old Colony and Plymouth theatres at Plymouth, who has just completed the most successful summer season of these theatres in their history, spent several days in Film Row during the week, booking programs for the winter season.

Nathan Yamins, head of the M. P. T. O. A. of New England, and owner of several theatres in Massachusetts, has sold the Plaza Theatre, Fall River, Mass., to Dr. O'Connor. The new owner has been landlord of the Plaza Theatre for some years and now buys the business as well. He has appointed I. N. Hindle as manager.

The Casino Theatre at Quincy Point, Mass., has been sold by John McCue to a Mr. Ripley, who will operate same.

The Masonic Hall Theatre at North Conway, N.H., which has been operated by P. L. Randall, has been sold to A. S. Eastman, who has been manager of the theatre for several years. Mr. Eastman plans to operate the theatre throughout the year.

William Breen, of the Premier Theatre, Norwood, with others, is erecting a new theatre in that town which will be ready about March 1st. It will seat in the vicinity of 800.

Arthur Fallon, formerly assistant booker at the Fox Exchange, Boston, who resigned to go to Producers Distributing Corporation Exchange in a similar capacity, has returned to the Fox Exchange as cashier.

C. H. "Beau" Hartford, who looks after Pathe's interests in Rhode Island, is back on the job after a vacation spent in New York and Philadelphia during which he took in the Dempsey-Tunney party.

Mrs. E. R. Dessez, director of the educational department of Pathe with headquarters in New York, was a visitor to the Boston exchange of Pathe during the week.

C. W. Rackliffe, of the Majestic and Suffolk Theatres, Holyoke, Mass., paid his first visit to Boston's Film Row during the week this year.

Ed Connolly, Western Massachusetts representative for Pathe, is covering his territory in a new Chandler sedan.

Ralph Quive, of Associated Exhibitors' sales staff, is another who has bought a new Pontiac sedan.

Thomas Meehan has been appointed manager of the Palace Theatre at Worcester, which has recently been extensively remodeled. He is succeeded as manager at Poli's Theatre by George Curtis.

Fred Couture, who operates theatres in Rochester, N.H., and Maynard, Mass., was in Boston booking for the late fall and early winter during the week.

William Buckley, of the Colonial Theatre and Opera House at Laconia, N.H., paid his annual visit to Film Row this week.

Ernest Warren, salesman for Pathe, heretofore has been an ardent believer in the life of a country gentleman and has resided at Lake Winnesquam, a matter of 101 miles from his office. But with memories of last winter's deep snows, he has decided to make his home in Boston for the current winter and has removed his family to Boston.

Word has been received that the two trucks owned by Harry Decker, engaged in the film transfer service in Florida, which were not heard of for some time after the storm, are O.K. and the drivers, Julius Mintz and J. Long are unharmed. While chaos reigned, the operators volunteered their services and their trucks to aid the unfortunate, working night and day until some sort of order was restored. Both drivers are Boston boys.

Seattle

WITH the opening of the new Skinner Building in this city last week housing the magnificent new Fifth Avenue Theatre, the executive offices of this branch of the Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc., moved into their specially planned quarters. Located in the Skinner Building now are Harold Horne, managing director of the Fifth Avenue; Archie Ruggles, house manager; Floyd Maxwell, director of Public Relations; Mitchell Sutherland, publicity director; and a staff of office executives and employees. General members of the Pacific Northwest Theatres executive staffs retain their offices in the Liberty Theatre Building.

Dave Frazer, manager of the local Producers' Distributing Corporation exchange, last week announced the appointment of Eddie L. Walton to his sales staff. Mr. Walton was formerly associated with the Greater Features office in Denver and more recently was connected with P.D.C. in Salt Lake City.

Fred Mercy, who purchased the Legion Theatre in Walla Walla recently from Frank Talabere, spent a few days in this city last week arranging subjects to play his house for the coming months. He announced that the name of the Legion has been changed to the Capitol, effective immediately.

Pathe executives from Butte, Portland and Seattle gathered here last week at the call of District Manager Frank Harris for a brief sales conference. Messrs. Bill Hughart, L. M. Cobbs and L. A. Samuelson from the three above named cities, comprised the gathering.

C. C. Lee, owner of the Paramount Theatre in Okanogan, Washington, passed away recently after a brief illness at his home. Charles Irwin, who has been managing the Paramount for a number of months, is expected to maintain the operation of the house.

Mrs. Carrie Crowe (Miss Olness), formerly associated with the Elbe Theatres offices in this city, last week joined the office staff of the Western Film Corporation. She was originally associated with L. K. Brin's Kvality Exchange, when Mr. Brin held the Warner Brothers franchise in this territory.

Ed Dolan, theatre magnate of the Grays Harbor district, narrowly escaped serious injury recently when the automobile he was driving to this city from Aberdeen turned over on a bank on the road. Mrs. Dolan was slightly injured in the wreck, but the rest of the occupants of the car escaped with a few minor scratches.

John C. Flinn, president and general manager of the Producers' Distributing Corporation, made a brief visit at the local exchange last week on his swing around the nation's branches.

Reports that were current in this city last week indicated that the Tacoma Theatre in Tacoma, Wash., would soon be taken over by the Pacific Northwest Theatres circuit, to add to their Colonial and Rialto Theatre interests in that city now. It was said that a large amount of money would be expended in renovating and remodeling the interior and exterior, and that the house would be operated by H. T. Moore for the Pacific Northwest organization.

Harry Black, former Vitagraph executive in this city and more recently associated with Fox in Portland, returned to his old haunts last week as the sales manager of a new theatrical display board. He has opened offices on Film Row in conjunction with the Motion Picture Record office.

Among the out-of-town theatre men seen on Film Row recently were Ned Edris of Centralia and Chehalis, Roy Czerny of Kent, John McGill of Port Orchard, Messrs. Quimby and Walton of Bellingham, Oscar O. Ruth of Mt. Vernon, G. F. Rediske of Lake Crocker, Charles George of Port Angeles and W. W. Barney of Arlington. Quite a delegation for the film magnates to work on!

Albany

A CHANGE along Film Row last week has resulted in a woman now being named to handle the booking at the First National Exchange. Miss Renee Craven, who has been secretary to various managers of exchanges, and most recently to Alec Herman, has been named to the important post, succeeding "Al" Marchetti, who is now booking at the Producers Distributing Corporation Exchange, of which Mr. Herman is the manager.

Ed Hochstim, a well known salesman, now connected with the Associated Exhibitors Exchange here, is engaged to be married to a young lady in Hudson, the wedding being set for next June.

Governor Alfred E. Smith, as well as Mayor Thacher, have been invited to attend the opening of the Eagle Theatre in Albany, on Monday night, October 11. The theatre will be handled by George Roberts, and his son, Ormond, the latter doing the booking. A night and day force of workmen are busy hustling things along toward completion.

The film salesmen of Albany held a meeting last week and organized, at which time Fenton Lawlor was chosen as president; James Dermody, as vice-president; Ray Smith, secretary, and Edward Hochstim, as treasurer. They will meet every two weeks and are planning for a number of social events during the winter.

J. C. Flinn, general manager for Producers Distributing Corporation, was in Albany one day last week in connection with his coast to coast trip.

Ray Powers, booker in Buffalo for First National, was in town during the past week. M. Hogan, an auditor for First National, was also here.

Arthur Abeles, district manager for Warner Brothers, spent a couple of days in Albany last week in going over matters with Harry Seed, the local manager.

Bem Schwartz, of New York City, who is connected with Tiffany Productions, came to Albany last week for a conference with Sam Burns, in connection with the distribution of all Tiffany productions out of here.

Bert Gibbons, local manager for Bond, was in Northern New York all of last week, calling on various exhibitors.

A reward for the arrest and conviction of persons destroying his posters has brought relief to Jake Rosenthal of the Rose, in Troy, and his posters are no longer being torn from their boards.

Ray Smith, H. C. Bissell, Dick Melvin and others from along Film Row, were in New York City last Sunday, attending the World Series game at the Yankee Stadium.

With Pathe taking over the complete distribution of the Associated Exhibitors product, Joe Schleiger is no longer booking for the former. Mr. Hochstim will remain, however, as salesman.

W. E. Benton is putting up a stiff fight these days in connection with an effort on his part to reduce the assessment against the Capitol Theatre in Whitehall. The matter has been carried into the courts. The assessment was jumped from $18,000 to $35,000.

The Associated Film Clubs of Albany, which includes the managers as well as the salesmen, will hold a dance at the Knickerbocker Inn on the night of November 19. Jack Krause is chairman of the entertainment committee for the managers and Mr. Freiberg will serve in a like capacity for the salesmen.

Herman Vineberg, who left Albany a few months ago to handle the Glove Theatre in Gloversville, now has one of the most handsome theatres in Northern New York. The theatre was reopened only last week after a complete renovation and with new carpets and other features.

C. W. Morse, of Boston, who is connected with Phil Markell in handling the theatre in Adams, Mass., was on Film Row last week, doing considerable booking.

Visitors along Film Row last week included Clarence Dopp, of the Electric in Johnstown, and George Markell, of the Strand, in Pittsfield. Edward Windbiel, of the Orpheum, in Amsterdam, was also in town.

Julius Berinstein, of Albany, is in the field for at least two more motion picture theatres, according to his own announcement. He already has the Colonial and Hudson, in Albany, and the Palace, in Troy.

A cornhusking contest is slated for the Strand Theatre in Carthage. Charles M. Johnson, of Buffalo, has been engaged as the new conductor for the orchestra in that theatre.

The Weidman Brothers, operating the Central Theatre in Albany, are contemplating closing their house next spring and remodeling it throughout.

Joe Kallet, of Rome, has bought 50 per cent of the Orpheum in Utica, from A. W. Goodman. Mr. Kallet has also secured control of the theatre in Boonville. It is said that the two Kallet boys, who already have several theatres in Canastota, Oneida and Rome, are planning to build up a circuit of at least a dozen theatres.

Bob Wagner, one time manager of the Rialto in Little Falls, has just opened a road house between Utica and Rome, and is being liberally patronized by the film boys out of Albany.

Ray Candee, of Utica, is now booking film for the Masonic Home for the winter months.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Meigs are back from their honeymoon in Montreal and Mr. Meigs is at his Pathe desk.

Alec Weismann, local manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Alec Herman, the new manager for Producers Distributing Corporation, were in Utica, for two days last week, making the trip in the former's car.

Butte

THE Montana Film Board of Trade met in regular session September 27 in the offices of Harry Meyer, Counsel and Secretary-Treasurer of the Board. The usual routine business came before the meeting and the question of "bicycling" of films was of paramount importance. Resolutions were passed expressive of the determination of the film men to see that pirating of films be stopped. It is the aim of Attorney Harry Meyer to investigate all cases that come to his notice and to institute proceedings in the courts against any violations of the national copyright laws pertaining to films.

Manager Dave Farquhar, of the Warner Brothers Exchange in Salt Lake City, is expected in Butte this week to attend to the leasing of a building for the opening of an exchange on Galena Street for Warners. Every indication points to an early establishment of the Warner office in the mining city.

Manager Shaffer, of the Columbia local exchange, has left for Helena territory on a week's trip.

C. R. Wade has resigned his position with the Producers Distributing Corporation and accepted a post with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Company in their distributing office. He will have the same place Dave McElhinney held with M.-G.-M., who resigned some days ago, presumably to go South, but was persuaded to take charge of the Montana office of P.D.C.

The State Board of Arbitration of the film and theatre interests will meet the middle of October at the offices of Harry Meyer in the Pennsylvania block.

Branch manager W. M. Hug-hart has returned to Butte Pathe Exchange after an extended trip to Seattle.

The Butte Pathe office led the Great Scott Billings Roundup for eleven weeks and the entire organization is eagerly anticipating the announcement of the final results.

Tom Walsh and R. Warren, Pathe salesmen, are in Butte this week from their respective territories of eastern and western Montana to attend a sales conference.

It is rumored that there is to be a new theatre manager at the American Theatre at Butte. C. P. Skates, who hails from Bremerton, Washington, is scheduled to take the management of the American Theatre. At the present time W. J. Sullivan has charge of the American and the Rialto.

The following exhibitors were in Butte to attend the vaudeville meeting, and who took occasion to do a little film shopping: Albert Nadeau, Anaconda; William Steege, Great Falls; C. W. Eckhardt, Helena; Rolla Duncan, Lewistown; E. C. O'Keefe, Billings; G. A. Boedeker, Bozeman; J. A. Knutson, Miles City, and J. Griffith.

Cleveland

WILLIAM J. BANKS, secretary of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, was off duty last week on account of illness. Nothing serious. He's expected to be back at his desk again the beginning of the week.

Arrangements are now under way for the combination of the Theatre Supply Company and the Exhibitors Supply Company which will merge as the National Theatre Supply Company, with offices in the space now occupied by the Exhibitors Supply Company in the Film Exchange Building, Payne Avenue and East 21st Street. Leo Dwyer, former head of the Theatre Supply Company, will be manager of the National Supply Company, and Frank Masek, of Exhibitors Supply Company, will be in charge of the city sales department.

Robert Cotton, central division manager for P.D.C., absented himself from the office last week while he and his tonsils parted company. Reports indicate that he will be out and around again this coming week.

Harold Dunn has been appointed manager of the Warner Brother's Exchange in Pittsburgh by Nat Barach, district manager. Dunn, a former salesman in the Pittsburgh territory, succeeds James O. Kent.

Lou Edelman, assistant manager of the Famous Players-Lasky ad sales department, has been in Cleveland for the past week on business pertaining to the advertising department of the Cleveland exchange.

E. H. Brauer, Cleveland Famous Players-Lasky Exchange manager, took advantage of the wet weather last week to try out the rounds in the territory.

J. S. Jossey, of Progress Pictures, and his trusty Wills St. Claire, started out together on Friday morning for New York.

John C. Flinn, P.D.C. general sales manager, held a successful meeting in Cleveland last Monday, attended by the entire office and sales force. It was a "pep" meeting. Pittsburgh was the next stop.

A. Chapman, special representative for P.D.C. in this territory, made his first visit to Cleveland last week in that capacity.

J. A. Hanley, First National home office auditor, is spending the week in Cleveland.

The Film Building register was dusted and brought out last week when several out-of-town exhibitors made personal calls on the exchanges. Among them were Gus Lambrigger, Grand, Orville; Cleve Brawdy, Yorkville Theatre, Yorkville; and F. B. Bubin, Palace, Akron.

Lemotto Smith, President of the Smith Amusement Company, which operates a chain of picture houses in Alliance and Warren, has mapped out an extensive program which includes both the buying and the building of more theatres. Smith has approved plans for a new 1500-seat house to be built in Alliance. And he has just purchased a $400,000 theatre in Huntington, West Virginia. There are six houses now in the Smith chain.

Mrs. Frances Czajkowski, who had experience in the art of theatre operating while she had the Happy Hour, is now running the Heights Square Theatre at Harvard Avenue and East 42nd Street. The Heights Square has been closed for two years. Mrs. Czajkowski gave the house a thorough overhauling and cleaning before she opened it to the public last Sunday.

Southwest

SAM BRUNK, connected with the local Famous Players-Lasky Exchange for several years as booker, and later as salesman, joined the F.B.O. Exchange October 1st. Brunk takes the place of Horace Falls who is now booking pictures for the 38 theatres owned by the Griffith Amusement Company.

The Griffith Brothers have added a new theatre to their chain with the recent purchase of the Hamly Theatre of Pauls Valley, Okla., from Mrs. Art Hamly. The Hamly Theatre is now under lease to L. E. Brewer. Mr. Brewer plans upon erecting a third theatre in Pauls Valley when his lease on the Hamly expires in February. Mr. Brewer already owns the Victory Theatre at Pauls Valley.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Exchange here has recently hung up an electric sign over its front door down at the new exchange building. The sign, which is in the form of the company's trademark, is the only one on the building.

Roy Berry, former salesman for First National, who has been selling real estate at Amarillo, Texas, is back in the territory representing F. N. again.

Mrs. Woodson, assistant to the cashier at Universal's Exchange, left last week for Chicago where she will try out before the Victor Company. Some representatives of the Victor Company were in Oklahoma City this summer and upon hearing Mrs. Woodson's voice asked her to come to Chicago.

J. Mitchell, salesman for Pathe, has been transferred to the Kansas City office. Just before leaving Mr. Mitchell had his car stolen while making the Texas panhandle territory, and although he recovered it, the car was badly wrecked.

Walter Penn, salesman for Home State, got married over the weekend recently. The marriage was performed in the home of the bride, Miss Lucile Elkins, here in Oklahoma City. Charles Sassee, district manager of the Publix Theatres in Oklahoma, stood up with Mr. Penn.

W. H. Wood has sold his Wood Theatre at El Reno to Loomis and Enloe of that city. This makes three theatres for Loomis and Enloe in El Reno, as they already own the other two theatres of the town, the Criterion and the Empress.

Roy Heffner, manager of the local F.P.L. Exchange, won the national cup offered by the Hays office for the most efficient exchange in preventing fires. Roy tied with the Chicago office, so we understand the Hays office is giving two cups.

The Crystal Theatre at Jennings is being redecorated at this time and is installing new equipment.

Roy Creason is remodeling his Palace Theatre at Eufaula and putting in some new equipment.

C. T. Rook, who has the Liberty Theatre at Watonga, is building a new theatre for Watonga that will seat 500. The new theatre will replace the old Liberty.

R. S. Moore, who runs the Gem at Snyder, has a new theatre at Snyder, nearing completion. This new theatre makes the second house for that town.

C. A. Kelley is putting in new chairs in his Rex Theatre at Custer City.

The Community Theatre at Wright's City, operated by the Choctaw Lumber Company, is being remodeled and re-equipped.

Detroit

LESTER STURN, former manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been appointed manager of the Fox Film Exchange in Detroit, succeeding Will Clark, who returns to the Home Office as special representative.

Bill Lippincott, city salesman for Famous Players, has tendered his resignation, after being with that company for the past six years.

Leon Krim, of the Lyric Theatre at Mt. Clemens, has just stated that he is to take over the Macomb Theatre from Bob Peltier, on February 1. Peltier will, however, not stay away from the town, as he intends to remodel, redecorate, and possibly enlarge his Bijou Theatre.

W. C. Bachmeyer, division manager for Fox, has paid the local exchange a short visit this week.

The Fordson Theatre, in Fordson, Michigan, opened last Thursday night.

Frank Marshall, at one time connected with the local office of the Famous Players, is now general sales manager of the organ division for the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company, with headquarters in Chicago.

George Rowell, who has been away from the film business for a number of years, is back with us once more, as salesman with Warner Bros. George succeeds Bill Kent, who has resigned.

Sol Krim, son of Leon Krim, of the Lyric Theatre in Mt. Clemons, was seen around the Film Exchange Building with his Famous Taxi Cab.

Hank Simmons, exploitation representative for Producers Distributing Corporation, has arrived at the local office to assist with the premiere of the new Senate Theatre which opened Saturday, October 2.

George Davidson, formerly connected with the American Booking Corporation, is now associated with the Columbia Picture Exchange as city salesman.

Metropolitan Motion Picture Company has opened an exclusive career shop on the main floor of the Film Building. Arthur Caplan is in charge.

The Montclair Theatre on Mack Avenue, has been remodeled and the name changed to the Ideal.

Ben Washmansy, manager of the Blackstone Theatre, is at present minus his car, as some ambitious automobile thief has driven away with it.

Al Bowman, manager of Columbia Pictures, has just returned from a trip to Grand Rapids.

George Gambrell, recently assigned to this territory as exploitation representative for Fox, has just returned after making his initial trip to all the key point towns.

Ben Purple, accessories salesman for Warners, has just returned from a trip to Chicago.

Kansas City

SO noticeable has been the custom of Newman Theater employees, from Manager Bruce Fowler on down the line, to go about without hats, that it was worth a mention in the Kansas City Star this week. It was an unexpected bit of publicity for Mr. Fowler.

Mannie Shure, house manager of the Royal Theatre, Kansas City, tells this one:

A farmer and his wife were passing by the Royal the other night and noticed a long line extending from the ticket office.

"What be all them folks hanging around there for?" asked the farmer.

"You simpleton; can't ye see they're gettin' ready for a parade?" hotly retorted the wife. "Come along here."

"The joint board of arbitration is not looking for trouble, but it is the duty of exhibitors to file claims, whenever there is justification, just as much as exchanges," advised C. E. Cook, business manager of the M.P.T.O. Kansas-Missouri, in a bulletin to exhibitor members.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: L. M. Miller, L. M. Miller Theatre Enterprises, Wichita, Kans.; Ray Cook, Missouri Theatre, Maryville, Mo.; Fred Fees, Best Theatre, Parsons, Kans.; W. H. Hammond, Blake Theatre, Webb City, Mo.; Barney Dubinsky, Jefferson City, Mo.; Ben Levy, Hippodrome, Joplin, Mo.; Ensley Barbour, Orpheum, Joplin, Mo.; Walter Wallace, Orpheum, Leavenworth, Kans.

New theatres are under construction in Bonner Springs, Kans., and Clinton, Mo., Dr. H. Marseilles being the owner of the latter house.

The new Gillioz Theatre in Springfield, Mo., a Universal house, will be opened soon, elaborate opening plans having been arranged, according to Fred S. Meyer, in charge of Universal theatres in the Kansas City territory.

The Electric Theatre, Joplin, Mo., will be re-opened and remodeled soon by the Grubel interests of Kansas City, Kans., according to F. C. Grubel.

The Bonaventure Theatre of Kansas City has been purchased by T. B. Rowell from F. W. Hewes.

C. E. "Doc" Cook, business manager of the M.P.T.O. Kansas-Missouri, returned this week from an extended tour through the territory in behalf of several advertising deals which he has pending for the M.P.T.O. K.-M.

Bill Warner, First National manager, was out in the territory this week gathering in contracts, while Bill Flinn of P.D.C. conducted a beneficial sales meeting at the Kansas City Exchange.

Eddie Solog has been named as booker at the Warner Bros. branch, while Bob Gary, Fox exploitation man, is going back to his first love—Universal.

Charles Gregory, Metro-Goldwyn branch manager, has invented a new game of golf, whereby a "clean miss" is not counted as a stroke.

First National Exchange is installing a radio set in the office to keep the salesmen at home during the world's series.

F. W. Gebhardt, Pathe manager, was a territory visitor.

South East

THE Film Board of Trade held their first annual picnic recently, which was attended by about 250 managers, salesmen and employees of the different exchanges in Charlotte. This outing from every standpoint was unquestionably a wonderful success. It was a basket picnic and from the reports, everyone enjoyed it immensely.

Ken Finley, of the Opera House, Goldsboro, N.C., was a Charlotte visitor this week, arranging bookings for his theatre. He was accompanied by his son, Ken, Jr.

C. L. Welch, of the Victory Theatre, Salisbury, N.C., motored down to Charlotte the past week to take in the screening of several pictures.

Warners' Broadway Theatre opened last Monday with three days a week Keith vaudeville. They are also running pictures in conjunction with the vaudeville. Business is reported from this theatre as very good.

Douglass P. Rathbone, W. E. Calloway, and Fred M. Jack (special representative)—the "Three Musketeers"—who have been responsible for getting the Memphis First National office under way

G. W. Logan, colored, will open a theatre, The Logan, in Goldsboro, N.C., about the middle of October.

M. W. Davis, manager of Warner Brothers Exchange, had the misfortune to break several small bones in his foot at the Film Board picnic.

E. F. Dardine, of Universal Film Exchange, has just returned from Atlanta, where he attended a sales conference of the southern division. Lou Metzger, general sales director; R. B. Williams, assistant sales director, and Dan Michalove, division sales director, were in charge of the meeting.

Herbert Pollock, formerly with Fox Company in Mexico and Cuba, is the guest of his brother, Mr. Fred Pollock, Manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer office in Charlotte.

The Garrett Theatre, a new house which is to open in Greensboro, N.C., shortly will be managed by Archie Erps, formerly with Pryor Enterprises and also former film salesman.

Florida

THE hurricane did very little damage to the theatres on the West Coast of Florida, in fact signs were the only losses reported. Miami, on the East Coast, suffered the most, with Moore Haven, a little city in the central portion of the State on the south shore of Lake Okeechobee, a close second. C. C. Klutts had just completed a handsome new theatre there and it was badly damaged. Klutts has had more than his share of hard luck. About two years ago his other theatre was badly wrecked by high water, and just before moving into his new house he had a film fire, but Klutts takes it all with a smile and digs right in to keep the people of his town amused.

The Victory, Tampa, opened their vaudeville season Monday, the 20th. They play the Keith vaudeville the first three days and feature pictures the other four. Vaudeville actors will enjoy three great days at this house, for the manager, George B. Peck, is one of those old timers who know how to treat actors to get the best there is in them. George is the kind of manager I loved to work for when this writer was playing the two, and more, a day. His kind was always referred to as "A Prince."

J. G. Attanasio, owner of the Columbia at La Belle, was a Tampa visitor this week. Mr. Attanasio said that he had received an excellent offer, and thinking a vacation would do him good, had accepted the offer and leased the house for a term of years. He is making a tour of the State and, "I might buy a house if I find one that suits me," he said.

JOHN B. CARROLL, General Manager of the Consolidated Amusements, of Tampa, and James M. Wiest, manager of the new Tampa Theatre, are up to their eye-brows getting things ready for the grand opening of this wonderful new house on the 15th of October. The general offices of the company will be removed from the Strand building to the Tampa Theatre building.

A. G. Elchinger has been appointed manager of the Grand, Tampa, by General Manager John B. Carroll, the managers of the other five theatres owned and operated by Consolidated Amusements having moved up with the completion of the new Tampa.

The general offices of the S-B-T Properties, Inc., have been removed from the Central Theatre building, Tampa, to the Southern building, which gives them a location right in the heart of Tampa. President Sappal said they had added another house to their string this week, having bought the Gem in Jacksonville.

W. J. Dresser has leased the new theatre just completed in Safety Harbor, and expects to have it in operation by the 10th. The house was built by A. F. Washburn, of Clearwater, and is called the Alden.

Chicago

H. SCHOENSTADT & SONS opened their rebuilt Atlantic Theatre on the evening of October 2nd, with a large crowd in attendance. The house has been very handsomely decorated, a new organ and other equipment installed, and presents the appearance of a new theatre.

Oscar Florine was host to a party of Chicago exhibitors at the annual high jinx golf tournament at the Crystal Lake Country Club and secured some very fine action pictures of Jack Miller, Frank Schaefer and Clyde Elliott.

"Red" Grange made personal appearances at the premier presentation of "One Minute to Play," at the Rialto Theatre on Monday evening, October 4th, and helped draw large crowds to this house, which for the first time in nine years is given over exclusively to motion pictures.

Cecil Maberry, of Producers Distributing Corporation, is scheduled to leave for New York City, Saturday, where he will attend a meeting of this company's sales executives.

Blank's La Claire Theatre, at Moline, Ill., has been closed for renovation and it is understood that the Blank Interests will spend over $20,000 in redecorating and new furnishings for this house. The clean-up job is expected to be completed within a week or ten days.

Johnson Theatres, Inc., opened its new offices on the sixth floor of the Seiberger Building, 845 S. Wabash Avenue. President Earl Johnson has spent considerable time in the selection of furniture and equipment for the new quarters which present a very handsome appearance.

Simon Simansky, of Simansky & Miller, plans to leave for French Lick on October 10th, for his annual visit to the famous spa.

The National Theatre Supply Company has moved its executive offices into its handsome new quarters at 624 S. Michigan Avenue. The Chicago store of this organization remains at 825 S. Wabash Avenue, where extensive improvements are being made, which will give larger space for showing of equipment, and improved facilities for taking care of customers.

John Flinn and Arthur White were among the prominent motion picture men who came to Chicago for the opening of the New Palace-Orpheum Theatre.

Memorial services were held on Saturday at the burial place of Bill Hershberg in Waldheim Cemetery, and a tablet was placed on his grave. It is just one year since the death of Mr. Hershberg.

Tom Reed, of Universal's publicity staff, visited this company's local exchange this week and then went on to the coast where he makes his headquarters at Universal City. Mr. Reed had been on a European trip with President Carl Laemmle.

Jack Barry and Dave Hellman have returned from a trip through Central Illinois and report some terrific experiences bucking the flood water which covers the road in many places. At Milford, midway between Danville and Watseka, water reached the headlights of the car and the pair of film salesmen barely escaped being marooned in the midst of the flood.

Salesmen Ullrich, Florine, Meyers, Robinson, Woodward and Noy of the Pathe Exchange, received checks for $250, Monday, as a reward of being on the winning team in the great Scott Billings Round-up contest. Branch manager Gillick received $500, and the booker and cashier $200 each. District manager Aiken is proud of the record made by the Midwest division in this contest, having four winners out of a possible ten for the entire country.

Salt Lake City

THYS WINKLE, who operates the New Pace Theatre at Delta, Utah, was a Film Row visitor this week.

Bud Rodgers, vice-president of the Gotham Productions in New York, is in Salt Lake City paying the Columbia Exchange here a business visit.

Ike Swenson, owner of the Angelus Theatre at Spanish Fork, Utah, is lining up new business for his house this week along the Row.

Branch Manager Al O'Keefe, of the local P. D. C. Exchange, is leaving this week for a trip to Boise, Idaho.

Sales Director L. J. Schlaifer for Universal, was visiting the local exchange for a few days last week and has just left for New York.

New air cushion seats have just been ordered for the Victory Theatre according to Manager Carl A. Porter. These seats will be installed for the entire lower floor. The ventilating system has also been recently improved at the Victory.

George Mayne, owner of the Preferred Pictures Exchange here, is leaving soon for a trip into the Southern Utah territory.

L. C. Wingham, local manager for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer office, has left for about a week's trip to Butte, Mont. C. C. McDermond is making a trip into Idaho this week out of this exchange. "Buck" Wade is in the eastern part of Montana and C. John Predari is still in the Idaho country with his M. G. M. product. Salesman R. F. Egner is in the East where he was called to the bedside of his mother.

District Manager L. A. Davis just returned to the local Associated Exhibitors Exchange after a trip throughout the Western territory. E. M. Gibson is in the Boise territory.

Branch Manager J. A. Epperson of the Pathe office, here, is still out on the Boise route. George Jensen and C. J. Hamal are both in the office for a brief stay. Hamal is back from the Nevada country and Jensen returned after a trip into Wyoming.

W. F. Gordon, manager of the local Associated First National Exchange, is making a short trip into Idaho. Claude Hawkes and Vete Stewart are both working in the Idaho country this week.

C. MacKain, Special Representative from the Associated First National Home Office, is expected to arrive in this city soon from the Coast after having visited the new studios there. He will spend about one week or ten days.

Clyde H. Messenger will return to his managerial desk at the Educational Exchange here from the Idaho branch this week.

Branch Manager H. Bradley Fish returned a few days ago to the local Fox Exchange from a short trip into Idaho. Bob Wallner, Idaho representative, left this week for his territory and expects to be gone for a period of two weeks.

Manager Dave Farquhar of the Warner Brothers, and Ed. C. Mix, sales representative, are leaving within a few days for a short trip into Wyoming. Salesman M. F. Keller has been transferred to Portland, Ore. He is being succeeded here by H. A. Dunklee.

Fred Lind, manager of the F. B. O. Exchange of this city, and Salesman R. L. Harris, have just returned from a swing through Idaho and Wyoming.

Canada

ROBERT LUXTON is building a new 450-seat theatre on Mount Pleasant Road, Toronto, to be known as the Luxton Theatre. Two Motiograph de Luxe projectors, with appropriate equipment, have been purchased for the house. Mr. Luxton is also interested in another theatre which is being built at Danforth Avenue and Luttrell Street, Toronto, to serve the Northeast section of the city.

After two years of strife, the Palace Theatre, Calgary, Alberta, is once more on the "fair list" of organized labor, according to formal announcement. Manager J. B. Barron effected an agreement with the musicians and they have taken their posts in the pit, the union operators also returning to the projection room at the same time. Quite a few musicians from the Grand Theatre are now at the Palace.

A Canadian who suffered property damage in the Florida hurricane was Max Fischer, conductor of the special orchestra at the Capitol Theatre, Montreal. Mr. Fischer received word that his attractive bungalow near Coral Gables had been destroyed.

Several changes have been made in managerial posts for Warner

Bros. in Canada. B. L. Lyon, general manager for Canada, has announced the appointment of J. Allen, of Winnipeg, as Western Division manager and W. Cohen is now manager of the Winnipeg branch office. Joe Lieberman, well known in the Maritime Provinces, has been appointed Warner branch manager at St. John, N.B.

The annual autumn golf tournament of the moving picture business in Toronto, held at the Thornhill Golf and Country Club late in September, attracted 60 players, seven of the Toronto exchanges being represented, Regal Films, Famous-Lasky Film Service, Fox, Universal, United Artists, Warner Bros. and First National.

The Eddie Cantor trophy for the low net score was won by Jack Hunter of Famous-Lasky with a very commendable card. Other winners included William Bach, of First National; R. McClelland, manager of the Capitol Theatre, Toronto; A. C. Benson, Toronto manager of Famous-Lasky Film Service; Charles Dentelbeck, of Electrics, Limited, and Richard Sturtridge, of Sutton, Ont.

Milwaukee

THE Efficiency Club of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Milwaukee office was entertained at a banquet at the Milwaukee Elks Club on September 25th. Approximately 25 members and their wives attended the banquet. Bridge ended the evening's entertainment.

Raymond Pfeiffer, who is managing the Princess Theatre in Chilton, was in Milwaukee this week arranging fall bookings.

W. B. Lyman, assistant manager of Warner's New York, was in the Milwaukee office for a few hours on Wednesday.

Steve Bauer reopened the Avenue Theatre, Milwaukee, on October 2nd, after the house had been closed for complete redecorating and remodelling.

Al Robarge was a recent Milwaukee visitor. Mr. Robarge manages the Cosmo at Merrill.

George Levine, manager of Uni-

Fred G. Sliter, recently appointed manager of Fox Films exchange at Milwaukee versal branch, is out in the territory making several of the key towns.

Mr. Marloff, of the Cozy Theatre at Iron River, spent a few hours in the various exchanges here recently.

FRED G. SLITER, who was appointed manager of Fox Films Milwaukee Exchange by general sales manager James R. Grainger in New York, Monday, has arrived in Milwaukee and officially taken charge of the office. On his way to Milwaukee, Mr. Sliter stopped off at Chicago where he conferred with district manager Clyde Eckhardt. He was met in Milwaukee by Eddie Grainger from the home office, who has been in charge at the local branch for the past three weeks.

Mr. Sliter is one of the best known film men in the country, having been associated with the motion picture industry for many years. For the past three years he had been manager for the First National branch at Seattle.

Philadelphia

GROUND has already been broken for Green & Altman's new theatre at 33rd and Diamond streets. The contract calls for completion within 300 working days which will have the theatre available, probably, for a Labor Day opening. Walter Woodward, who is now managing Green & Altman's Park Theatre, will be resident manager.

Jack Greenberg, secretary of the Film Board of Trade, was awarded the Jules E. Mastbaum trophy in the recent film golf tournament held on the links of the Green Valley Country Club. Joseph Sneltenburg won the second leg of the Lew Berman trophy. It is a handicapped match and more than 60 film men took part. The tournament was followed by an informal dinner in the club house. During the evening Eli M. Orowitz presented the prizes, which numbered about fifteen.

Low Goldstein, proprietor of the Rialto Print Shop, who has been a familiar figure on Vine Street for the past ten years, and who has been absent for the past six months recovering from a severe illness, has resumed his activities and is receiving the congratulations of his many friends on his recovery.

are other dignitaries of the film world who have visited St. Louis in recent days.

Motion pictures of the first game of the World Series were shown in the Missouri, Ambassador and Grand Central theatres on Sunday, October 3, the day after the games were played in New York.

Abe Fischer, district manager for Warner Brothers, is spending several days in St. Louis. He was enthusiastic about the reception given the Vitaphone at its initial St. Louis showing on October 1.

Visitors of the week included: Bob Stempfle, St. Charles, Mo.; Green Luttrell, Jacksonville, Ill.; Joe Hewitt, Robinson, Ill.; Jimmy Clayton, West Frankfort, Ill.; Tom Reed, Duquoin, Ill.; Dominic Frizina, Taylorville, Ill.

POWER'S Governor Type Speed Control

With

Power's Speed Indicator

Give Absolute Control of Speed Regulation

Power's Governor Type Mechanical Speed Control

By setting the lever of Power's Governor Type Mechanical Speed Control and then simply throwing in the motor switch, the projector will at once reach the exact speed for which the control is adjusted. If Power's Speed Indicator is used in connection with Power's Governor Type Speed Control, all difficulty regarding the proper timing of the picture is eliminated. By referring to the dial of the indicator and making the necessary adjustment to the regulator of the control, the picture may be projected at so many feet per minute or to take a given number of minutes per thousand feet.

All moving parts revolve upon one common shaft which in turn is free to rotate in its bearings so that the least possible amount of friction is present in any part of the apparatus. Another important feature of this control will prove of great value to communities troubled with fluctuating voltage, as a drop of line voltage should not affect the speed of the mechanism even though the motor should slow down considerably.

Power's Speed Indicator

A scientifically designed and accurately constructed instrument which shows at a glance the speed at which the projector is operating and the exact film footage passing through the machine in a given time.

Indicators may be placed at any number of points desired, and the musical director and projectionist will have no trouble in closely following the program and time schedule.

Power's Speed Indicator Equipment consists of a high grade magneto generator, which is connected by suitable wiring with one or more exceedingly accurate indicating instruments having scales, calibrated, to show the speed of the film in feet per minute and minutes per thousand feet. Other types of scales will be supplied at a slight additional cost. The generator is driven by belt from the motor attachment pulley on the mechanism.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT EQUIPMENT CONSTRUCTION OPERATION

Former "Dance King" Head of Largest R. I. Circuit

"Ed" Fay Started Theatrical Career in Orchestra Pit at Keith's in Providence

BY his acquisition in August of the Emery group of 5 theatres in Providence, R. I., Edward M. Fay, of that city, or just plain "Ed" Fay, as he is known to thousands of persons, has become the largest theatre owner in Rhode Island. He has added new lustre to his name. The name, once a synonym for the best there was in music, is now indicative of a high standard of theatre entertainment, be it motion pictures, vaudeville or the drama.

The Fay stamp of approval now goes on the shows in six of the leading theatres in Providence, including three photoplay houses (Majestic, Rialto and Capitol), two combined vaudeville and picture houses (Fays and Emery), and one house for the spoken drama, the Modern Theatre.

Before he startled Providence with the announcement of the million dollar deal that brought the Emery group under his control, Mr. Fay operated but a single theatre in the city, Fays, which he acquired in 1916 when, as the Union Theatre, it was tottering toward ruin. Few persons outside the theatre world knew that he also operated theatres in Rochester, N. Y. and Philadelphia and that he had a new house under construction in Buffalo until the announcement of the recent deal.

Providence, therefore, suddenly became aware that it had in one of its native sons a man who is a power in the theatre business. The city felt an irresistible urge to offer its congratulations, and so, on September 8, its leading business and professional men paid him due tribute—not so much because of the magnitude of the business Mr. Fay has built but more because of the affection generally held toward him.

Leadership Recognized

Providence and a large portion of New England knew him first as the "boy wonder violinist." That was when he was only 10 years old and filling major concert engagements. As the years went on his ability improved and his reputation as an artist grew. Thus it was that he was selected at the early age of 20 to lead the orchestra in the B. F. Keith Theatre in Providence.

Music was his career and when for reasons of age he lost the application of the "boy wonder violinist" he acquired a new one. He became the "dance king" of the times—times when dance music was not so far removed from the traditions of the art as it is today. If there be those among the younger generation who are under the impression that Whiteman is the original "dance king" let them refer to their elders, who remember a "dance king's" court as a place for the music for the stately minuet and quadrille. That was when Fay was "king."

The famous orchestra which he maintained under his own name and personally conducted was in constant demand. No social function at which music was featured was considered completely successful without Fay's Orchestra, and calls for its services came from the fashion centres of Rhode Island and other states. Many times Mr. Fay took his orchestra to Newport, Narragansett Pier and Watch Hill to play at the smartest of society events.

Deserted Music for Theatre

Mr. Fay held his sceptre as the more lively mazurka and polka steps came along. And he still wore the crown when the two-step, the forerunner of the ultra-modern and fantastic steps of today, was ushered in. He cast off his kingly robes, abandoned his throne and forswore his violin, except for personal pleasure, when jazz appeared. Jazz did not appeal to him, and besides, the business side of the theatre was beckoning to him. Into it he plunged in 1916. How well he has succeeded is demonstrated by his recent acquisition in Providence and his operations in other cities.

It is a point of pride to Providence that he is a native son. The people of the city have always admired him for his musical and business ability, though until recently they did not know the full extent of the latter. But deeper, there is a regard for him in the hearts of his fellow citizens, many of them his playmates and schoolmates of boyhood days, that is inspired by his own feeling of brotherly affection toward all men. Even those who do not know him personally know of him as a leader and participator in affairs of public welfare and interest.

That is why so many men of Providence and vicinity assembled to pay him honor at the dinner sponsored by the Town Criers in recognition of his achievements. Among those who spoke at the dinner were men who had known him for years. They spoke frankly and with feeling while singing the praises of the man who had done more than just his bit to elevate the standards of the theatre.

Edward M. Fay

Mayor Joseph H. Gainer of Providence, a lifelong friend of Mr. Fay, traced the boyhood of the man the assembly was to honor, characterized him as a high type of citizen of whom the city is proud and sketched his rise from an orchestra position to the commanding place he now holds in the theatre world.

Mayor Gainer was followed by M. J. O'Toole, past president of the Theatre Owners of America, an organization of which Mr. Fay is a director. Mr. O'Toole pictured the part that the ideal theatre owner plays in the community life and pointed out that a theatre owner is, after all, a community leader. He congratulated Mr. Fay for having fulfilled his obligations in that respect.

Notable List of Speakers

Others who spoke were William L. Sweet, president of the Providence Chamber of Commerce; James S. Dancker, successor to Mr. Fay as Chief Crier of the Town Criers, and John E. Hurley, master of ceremonies. At the head table besides Mr. Fay and the speakers were M. F. Williams, Vincent Coleman and Bernard Steele, members of the stock company playing at Mr. Fay's Modern Theatre; Foster Lardner, manager of the E. F. Albee theatres in Rhode Island; Daniel S. Mahoney, of the Evening Tribune and Allison Stone, general manager of the Providence Journal and Evening Bulletin. The dinner was enjoyed to the accompaniment of music furnished by an amalgamated orchestra of all the theatre orchestras in the city and led by Bernard E. Fay, a brother of the guest of honor. This was a tribute to Mr. Fay's prowess as a musician.

"New Idea" Bands Cater to Local Tastes

Orchestras on Stage New Feature Offered at Publix Theatres

THE necessity of including entertainment of local appeal, mostly musical features designed to suit the popular taste of theatregoers in various cities over the circuit, is at the bottom of the "New Idea" which, after a vigorous publicity campaign in Kansas City and Dallas, finally was introduced in the Publix theatres in those cities. The "New Idea" turns out to be the presentation of the permanent orchestras of the houses on the stage as a featured unit of the program, and is based on the old idea of finding out what the patrons of a theatre want and giving it to them.

The plan has been introduced at the Newman in Kansas City and the Palace in Dallas, Tex. Lou Forbes has replaced Alexander Keese at the latter, while Keese has taken up his baton as conductor of the Newman orchestra, over which Forbes formerly presided. Both organizations appear on the stages of their theatres at deluxe performances and offer a program of classical and popular music, with specialists touring with the Publix unit shows interpolating songs and dances. The long overture has been abandoned in favor of this "new idea," which Publix is instituting in these houses to lend an added feeling of intimacy and a closer contact with the local public, an element found lacking in the unit shows produced in New York and circuited over the Publix chain. Musical programs will be designed to meet the local tastes, with opera or jazz featured, according as audience reactions are judged to indicate the preference for one or the other.

Alexander Keese and his "New Idea" orchestra, which became a feature at the Newman last week, is proving of such widespread interest that business has increased in leaps and bounds. It is the first time in the history of the theatre that an orchestra has been featured on the stage in addition to the regular Publix show.

Hines on Stage and Screen at Pittsburgh Grand

Johnny Hines in two personal appearances a day on the stage of the Grand in Pittsburgh, was the leading attraction presented last week at that house in conjunction with "The Brown Derby," the comedian's screen vehicle. Hines is a former resident of Pittsburgh and was a popular draw "in the flesh" as well as on the screen. The Grand's bill was further elaborated with the appearance of the Alex Jackson's Plantation Orchestra Jubilee Singers, composed of eleven musical artists.

Rialto Features Band Act

A musical band act, the Joe Thomas Saxette, was offered as the stage attraction at the Greater Rialto, Omaha, in conjunction with "Paradise," last week's screen feature on the second of the "greater programs" at that house.

PROLOGING "THE BLUE BOY"

"The Campers" in Prologue at Crandall's Met

"The Campers," composed of a male quartet augmented by one feminine voice, are featured in an atmospheric prologue staged during the current week with "3 Bad Men" at the Metropolitan Theatre, Washington, D. C. The singers appear in a western setting and wear costumes designed to duplicate those of characters in the screen play. Owing to the length of the picture, the customary concert overture of the Metropolitan Symphony under Daniel Breeskin's direction, is omitted in favor of a brief prelude featuring selections from Puccini's "Girl of the Golden West." Breeskin is using "Just a Song at Twilight" and "Westward Ho!" the latter composed by Hugo Riesenfeld, as the two main themes in his musical score for "3 Bad Men."

The popular hit scored last week at the Metropolitan by the Record Boys, radio and phonograph favorites, assures them of a re-engagement at that house in the near future, and their signing for a return date already has been announced as one of the coming attractions at the Metropolitan.

Stage Arabian Prologue for "The Sheik" at Lyric

A revival of "The Sheik" was staged on an elaborate scale last week at the Lyric Theatre, Hartford, Conn. A special prologue in a picturesque Arabian setting and produced by Guy Hedlund was an added feature of the program. The stage number featured Poetra Kinanda, former member of the Imperial Russian Ballet, in an Oriental interpretation, and a musical ensemble of five vocalists.

"Trudy" Stage Attraction at Brooklyn Strand

Gertrude (Trudy) Ederle, of Channel swimming fame, has been booked as the stage attraction to be offered by the Brooklyn Mark Strand for the week beginning October 9.

Managing Director Hyman is offering an operatic number as the stage feature during the current week, which provides "Sparrows" as the main screen entertainment. "Gems from Pagliacci" is the title of the number, in which Louis Dornal, Carlo Ferretti, Tom Williams, Edna Burphans and an augmented Ballet Corps participate.

May Organize Circuit for Amateur Performers

Joe Saperstein, local manager for Harmanus-Bleecker Hall, Albany, is finding it rather difficult these days in securing talent for his amateur shows staged one night a week. He said last week that the local field had been well drained of amateurs and that he might organize a circuit for amateurs and bring talent on from New York City who could work over a circuit of at least a dozen or fifteen theatres and take their chances at winning first prize money, which runs from $10 to $15.

Des Moines Capitol Starts Series of Sunday Concerts

The Capitol Theatre in Des Moines has launched the first of a series of Sunday noon concerts. The concerts start at 12:30 and the admission price of 50 cents entitles patrons to remain for a complete stage and screen show, regularly beginning at one o'clock. In announcing this innovation at the Capitol, the management of the Publix house in Des Moines stated that the idea will be continued if the public evinces sufficient interest in it.

Stanley Co. Circuiting Strand Frolics

Numbers Staged by Plunkett Will be Traveled as Units

THE New Mark Strand Frolics, produced by Joseph Plunkett and offered at the Mark Strand in New York City, are to be circuiting as unit shows over the Stanley chain of houses. These presentations will be traveled intact to a number of theatres under a plan similar to that employed by the Publix Company. As the Strand frequently offers presentations employing the prologue idea and therefore designed for presentation with a particular photoplay, it is probable that the circuiting plan will make it possible to travel the program, picture and presentation, to the houses on the route.

A number of Plunkett's stage productions have been booked into other Stanley theatres as presentation features during the past few weeks. The Brooklyn Mark Strand has presented one, and last week the Mosque Theatre in Newark offered a Plunkett presentation featuring Estelle Carey, Betty Rees, Kitty McLaughlin and others. The Mosque Theatre's own quartette and ballet corps were introduced in place of similar organizations maintained at the Mark Strand. Settings and effects for the presentation were arranged by Cecil Coping.

At the present time full details of the circuiting plan have not been worked out. The route over which the productions will be circuiting has not been designated up to the present and the applications of the plan up to the present have been more or less experimental efforts directed toward the development of an elaborate system. The adoption of such a plan will make it practical to stage more expensive productions, since the production costs will be prorated to the theatres booking them.

Davis' Olympic Features Elaborate Program

Harry Davis' Olympic Theatre, Pittsburgh, offered one of the most elaborate bills seen at a Pittsburgh cinema last week, when three "extra" features were programmed to surround the leading screen attraction, "The Belle of Broadway." The stage numbers included the Royal Welsh Choir and personal appearances of Miss Thelma Williams, "Miss Pittsburgh of 1926." Theda Bara in her first two-reel comedy, "Madame Mystery," was also featured. The bill also included a Pathe News reel and Harry Hochle's Orchestra.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

GUS GREENING, former manager of the Stratford in Detroit, has been appointed general manager of Joseph Cosco's five theatres in that city. These houses are the Stratford, Harper, Gratiot, Tivoli, and the Jefferson.

RAYMOND J. DEUSERN, formerly manager of the Fox Terminal Theatre, Newark, N.J., is now resident manager of the Baker Theatre in Dover, which recently was purchased from Raymond F. Woodhull by the Stanley-Fabian Corporation of Newark and New York.

CHARLES L. EPLER is now manager of the New Allen Theatre in Allentown, Pa. Epler formerly managed the old Lyric Theatre in that city.

SILAS CARPENTER is now manager of the Madison Theatre, Detroit. He succeeds Russell Chapman who has been transferred over to the Capitol. Rex Minkley is at the State, J. McGinnis at the Adams, and Mr. Immerman at the new Michigan.

SIDNEY GATES formerly assistant manager under Harry Greenman, manager of Loew's State Theatre, St. Louis, has gone to Norfolk, Va., to take over the management of Loew's State Theatre there.

LIVINGSTON LANNING one-time resident manager for Loew's State Theatre and prior to that chief assistant of William Goldman in the management of the Missouri and Kings theatres in St. Louis, is now manager of Loew's Colonial Theatre in Reading, Pa.

MARSHALL TAYLOR, former manager of the Kinema in Salt Lake City, has been promoted by Universal to the position as director of the company's houses in Milwaukee.

Russian Cossack Chorus Is Presented at Madrid

One of the most notable stage presentations offered in conjunction with motion pictures in Kansas City, was featured last week at the Madrid Theatre in that city, when the Russian Cossack Chorus, under the direction of Sergei Socoloff appeared at the de luxe performances as a leading number of a program, which offered "Mare Nostrum" as the screen attraction.

Stanley Offers Atmosphere Number

An atmospheric prologue featuring twenty male voices and produced by the Stanley Technical Staff was the stage feature offered last week in conjunction with "Men of Steel," at the Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia.

Cleveland Exhibitor Makes Cut to Benefit Labor-Class Patrons

MAX MARCUS, owner-manager of the United States Theatre in Cleveland, and affectionately called "Daddy" Marcus by everybody in the film business in that city, has reverted to his old and original five-and-ten-cent admission policy. For some time past Marcus has been playing to ten and fifteen cents admission. But he says he'd rather give pleasure to more people with reduced admission prices, than play to just as much money with fewer admissions, at increased admission prices.

The United States Theatre has 1,500 seats. It is one of the largest subsequent run houses in the city. It draws its patronage from the laboring classes. Many of these people have been seriously affected by the strikes which have been a veritable epidemic in Cleveland during the past year.

The fifteen cent admission was an added burden to these people. Marcus said that he thought they needed recreation now, with business poor, more than they did when they were all working, so by reducing his prices to five and ten cents, he is making it possible for more people to get that recreation. It's because Max Marcus has the interest of his patrons at heart that he was one of the first exhibitors in Cleveland, is still one of the leading exhibitors of the city. He has always been successful and enjoys the sincere good-will of his patrons, of his competitors and of the exchanges.

Smalley Circuit Managers in Prize Competition

William Smalley, operator of a chain of theatres in upper New York State, has offered a prize to the manager in his organization who shows the best exploitation in connection with a picture. Smalley has a dozen or more theatres and the idea is working out very well and bringing plenty of competition as well as some excellent prologues and other features that attract patronage.

Fashion Revue with "Fig Leaves"

A style revue staged in conjunction with Odum, Bowers & White, Birmingham merchants, was the added attraction offered with "Fig Leaves" at the Ritz Theatre in that city, last week. Twenty Birmingham beauties displayed the latest creations being featured by Odum, Bowers & White. Donahue and La Salle opened the show with a novelty stage number.

Jack Marks Plans 1,400 Seat Theatre for Clarksburg, West Va.

CLARKSBURG, West Virginia, is soon to have a new up-to-date, modern theatre of steel skeleton type, brick and tile walls, fireproof floors and roof, it became known recently when announcement was made by Jack Marks that he had secured a twenty-five year lease on the property at 404 West Pike Street. The present Rialto Theatre and Apollo confectiory will be remodeled, he stated, and the entire space will be used in connection with the building of the playhouse.

Mr. Marks, who is one of the city's best known theatrical men, stated the name and policy of the theatre will be announced later. Mr. Marks has been intimately identified with the development of the theatrical business here, having located in Clarksburg eighteen years ago. He first operated the old Star Theatre on Fourth Street, where part of Stone Brothers store is now located, this being the first exclusive picture house in the city. Later, for a number of years, he operated the Orpheum on Fourth Street, and The Opera House. At present he is the proprietor of Marks' Orpheum on West Main Street.

Plans for the building were made by E. J. Wood and Son, architects, who will start construction September 1, and it is expected to have the new theatre ready for a grand opening on New Year's Day. There will be a seating capacity of 1,400 with a stage forty feet deep and sixty feet wide. Modern equipment will be installed to make the theatre comfortable, it was stated, while the decorative scheme will be one of architectural beauty.

Starting from the front the theatre will be modern in every particular. There will be a lobby forty-five feet long with white tile floor, and at the left of the foyer will be the women's parlor and cloak room.

From the foyer at right and left will be wide stairways leading to the balcony and mezzanine floor. These stairways will be seven feet wide with white marble treads. The men's smoking room and parlor will be on the mezzanine floor.

The auditorium will be fifty by eighty-two feet and will provide seating arrangements for 800 persons. The balcony will seat 500 and will have down and cross aisles. The seats will be of the box spring type, heavily upholstered and built for comfort. The floor will be built at a pitch of about four and one-half feet with seating arranged so as to give a clear and unobstructed view from any point. Indirect lighting will be used.

The organ will be a Moller two-manual type with pipe lofts at right and left of the auditorium. The console will be located at the left of the orchestra pit and will have an electrically operated blower. The proscenium will be another feature.

An efficient heating and ventilating system will be installed.

The lobby, foyer and auditorium will be illuminated with chandeliers of the newest type, operated in a two-circuit system. Five large dome lights, each three feet in diameter, will be set into the underpart of the balcony.

Cleveland House Entirely Rebuilt; Seats 1800

Paul Gusdanovic's renewed Regent Theatre, Buckeye Road and East 116th Street, Cleveland, opened last Friday night to a large, enthusiastic and appreciative audience of invited friends. The house, originally having 800 seats, now has 1,800 seats all on one floor, with never a pillar nor post to obstruct the view. Although the Regent is not a new theatre, there's nothing left to remind one of its original appearance. The interior of the old part of the theatre has been entirely rebuilt to coincide with the new part which Gusdanovic has added. Tan walls, with amber side lights, panels with hand decorated designs in which blue, gold and maroon are artfully mingled, these panels being separated by simulated Corinthian columns with gold leaf tops. Maroon velvet drapes greet the eye upon entering the auditorium. The large stage with vari-colored terra cotta proscenium arch, has a full maroon velvet curtain. All of the exits are likewise draped in maroon velvet. The concrete floor is covered with a highly colored carpet of the newest design. The seats of wood are grey, each aisle seat decorated with an ornate "R," standing for the name of the theatre. New projection equipment has also been installed, as well as the latest lighting, heating and ventilating systems.

The invitational opening program last Friday was auspiciously carried out with Ernest Schwartz, attorney, exhibitor and friend, as introducer of the speakers of the evening.

The house policy will be confined to straight pictures during the week, with vaudeville as an added attraction for Sundays. Jack Sliney has been made house manager.

Two Keith-Albee Theatres Well Under Way

The two new theatres being erected in White Plains and New Rochelle, N.Y., are progressing at a rapid pace. The New Rochelle Theatre, underwritten by the S. W. Strauss Company and on completion to be leased to the Keith-Albee interests, will house twenty-two shops in addition to the theatre proper. The building has a frontage of 227 feet on Main Street.

The White Plains Theatre is expected to be ready for occupancy about January 1. The orchestra of this theatre will seat approximately 1,440, the mezzanine 200, balcony 1,080, and the orchestra and boxes together 1,660, making a total of 2,830. It is said that the stage of this house will be the largest in Westchester County, measuring 111 feet across the footlights, while the gridiron will be 61 feet above the floor. This theatre will also go under lease to Keith-Albee.

Automatic Devices Expand Stabilarc Division

The Stabilarc division of the Automatic Devices Company, Allentown, Penna., announces the completion of a two-story addition to its plant facilities for manufacturing Stabilarc motor-generator sets.

This increase in space makes available a total area of three times the size of the original building and assures the customers of this machine a continuance of the quality and efficient service which has been mainly responsible for its adoption as booth equipment.

The Stabilarc motor-generator set was offered to the trade only after the most thorough factory and theatres tests had demonstrated its qualities to the satisfaction of some of the foremost authorities in the industry.

The Automatic Devices Co., of which the Stabilarc organization is a part, is headed by Irving Samuels, well known throughout the industry as chiefly responsible for the distribution of A.D.C. Automatic Curtain Controls.

Druggist Plans New House for Hermosa Beach

Dan Casey has recently purchased the southwest corner of Fifth Street and Camino Real, Hermosa Beach, Cal., where he proposes to erect a new theatre building. The estimated cost of the structure is $100,000. Mr. Casey is a Hermosa druggist.

Elaborate Premiere of Seattle House. Planned by Harry Arthur

THE Fifth Avenue Theatre in Seattle, the newest and one of the most complete and beautiful picture houses in the Northwest, has chosen the P. D. C. picture, "Young April," as its first attraction. This picture from the Cecil De Mille studios was recently selected for the opening week of the great New York Hippodrome, which is the New York first run house for P. D. C. pictures.

Harry Arthur, president of the Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc., made elaborate plans for the opening of his new and magnificent Seattle house. These plans included a street festival, reminiscent of the old Golden Potlatch days. Arrangements were made with the street car system to convey all passengers downtown between the hours of 6:30 and 7:30 in the evening. The city authorities agreed to close Fifth Avenue to traffic and to have a cordon of police on hand.

Great spotlights were placed to throw their beams over the crowds and across the skies to let everyone know that the new theatre was opening. Four bands were engaged to provide music for the crowds in the street and this music was to be picked up by amplifiers and redistributed all over the section. Huge screens were hung on which the words of the songs played could be thrown so that the people could sing. Take it by and large, these plans were probably the most elaborate ever formulated for the opening of a theatre.

Break Ground on Alhambra, Sacramento, Cal.

Ground was broken during the latter part of September for the new Alhambra Theatre on the site at Thirty-first and K streets, Sacramento, Cal. A syndicate headed by Geo. W. Pelletier is in charge of operations and the organization plans to make this house one of the finest motion-picture theatres on the Pacific Coast.

Plans call for a seating capacity of 1,750 and the architecture will be of Moorish design. The entrance will be twenty-five feet wide with stores on either side. The walls will enclose what will be known as the Garden of Alhambra, modeled after the Alhambra of Granada, Spain. Entrance from this garden to the foyer will be achieved by paths leading past fountains, under pergolas and around artistic benches. Massive stairways will lead to the auditorium and loge section.

New Theatre for Union City, Tenn.

The Crescent Amusement of Nashville, Tenn., has awarded the contract for the new house to be erected on First street, Union City, Tenn. The contract calls for an expenditure of $70,000 and completion within ninety days.

Apparent on the screen

THE IMPROVEMENT in the rendering of color values in black and white tones, when the picture is printed from Eastman Panchromatic Negative on Eastman Positive, is readily apparent on the screen.

PATRONS will notice the difference—and that's what really counts at the box office.

EASTMAN PANCHROMATIC NEGATIVE is now the same price as ordinary negative. It keeps as well as ordinary negative and, except for the lighting in the darkroom, is developed in the same manner as ordinary negative. Yet it's an extraordinary product.

Inquiries and Comments

Resurfacing Screens

EO GILLES, Wahpeton, N. D., addresses the Projection Department as follows:

"Dear Sir:

"We have a roll picture screen that needs recoating and would like your advice concerning the best thing to use for this purpose. Does a pure white coating give the best results, or is a white coating, with a touch of blue or gray, better?

"I am referring to kalsomine for the above.

"Another thing. I believe there is a so-called Dalite screen coating on the market and I would like to know if this is just a pure white.

"The conditions at the theatre I have in mind are as follows: projection distance 96 ft.; width of picture 13 ft., a direct current arc light using 50 amperes."

In Doubt

We are in some doubt, from your letter, Friend Gilles, as to whether you have in mind the use of kalsomine alone or whether you desire a comparison of this finish with oil paints.

White kalsomine, such as alabaster, obtainable from any paint dealer, provides a good reflecting surface and requires but little experience in applying it to surfaces. The principal thing to remember when finishing a surface with this paint is to work quickly so that any section will not dry before the area around has been painted.

Temporary

A kalsomined screen at best, is but a temporary job. Such a surface depreciates quite rapidly, so that it will be necessary to recoat the screen every four or five months in order to keep its reflecting properties up to grade.

If frequent applications of kalsomine are used, no better recommendation could be made for recoating the screen since it provides an excellent diffusing surface and this in turn means good picture registration and definition. The low cost involved is certainly an argument for frequent recoating of the screen.

We do not recommend the so-called "tinting" of screens in an effort to obtain some imaginary improvement in the color quality of the projector light. Such tinting is always accompanied by a loss of light and in order to obtain any noticeable change in the color quality the sacrifice in light is too great for the results obtained.

As far as we know, no satisfactory method of changing the color quality of the light provided by the ordinary arc, the high intensity arc, or the incandescent lamp, has as yet been evolved. The simplest method, of course, would be to introduce color screens in the path of the beam, but even this has not worked out for the simple reason that such devices operate by subtracting certain colors from the beam in order to obtain a residual color of the desired quality.

This not only results in a large loss of light but it is also unsatisfactory since the remaining colors are too weak to provide the desired results. The logical method would be to add light of desired color, or colors, until the proper proportions of color were obtained. No practical method for accomplishing this has as yet been found.

Tinting Has No Chance

If the use of color screens in the path of the projected beam cannot do a satisfactory job of color alteration (without too great a light loss), then what chance has screen tinting to do the same thing?

There can be no doubt that the most successful job of tinting can be done by using a diffusing surface and even here the results are nothing to brag about. With metallic surfaces the chance for success is even more limited since all polished surfaces when seen by a reflected beam of light look alike as regards color. When seen by diffused light, the characteristic color of the metal will be apparent.

With a dull-polished surface, of course, of the type employed in the making of reflecting screens, the tint artists have more leeway to do their stuff, but it is sufficient to say that their efforts are strictly limited and must be guided by a balance between the extent of the tinting and the loss of light involved.

As regards the Dalite coating you mention, we do not know the details about this finish but the manufacturer will undoubtedly be glad to inform you all about his product.

A More Permanent Surface

Returning to the matter of paint, we would like to say that if the job of refinishing your screen surface every four or five months is too much for your stomach to savor, then the only thing to do is to use a more permanent, more expensive paint.

Even oil paints depreciate with age (and degree of service) and this depreciation is greater than most people imagine. Until a relatively short while ago this matter of depreciation was largely a matter of guesswork and no two people apparently could guess alike because of the many variable factors involved.

Fortunately, an exhaustive series of tests on the light reflecting properties of all commonly used paints under different conditions of use, was conducted by the Edison Lamp Works, and the results of these tests are now available.

Starting next week, it is proposed to run two or three articles giving information on the light reflecting characteristics of different classes of paints as determined by the tests mentioned above. They should prove interesting reading for persons addicted to re-surfacing their own screens and will undoubtedly help in the selection of a satisfactory paint.

In general, it can be said that both zinc and magnesium bearing paints have a high initial co-efficient of reflection, which does not depreciate too rapidly in comparison with other basic pigments.

Avoid Black

Somewhere in your letter, Friend Gilles, you inquire as to the desirability of a gray color. If the gray is obtained by adding black then by all means avoid it since the addition of black simply means that the gray is being obtained by the black absorbing part of the light.

It is far better, we believe, to paint the screen a flat white, and so obtain the advantage of a high—initial, at least—reflection factor. Also, it is far better to apply the paint in thin coats, well brushed out, using say, three coats, than to make a botch job of it by applying only one thick coat.

Let Contracts on Saginaw Shrine Theatre

The contracts for the new Shrine Theatre, Saginaw, Mich., have been let and contractors have started work on the cleared site on the northwest corner of Washington Avenue and Tuscola Street. On completion, the new playhouse will be leased to Balaban and Katz of Chicago. The estimated cost of the combined theatre and club building is about $1,000,000.

Cheyenne Theatre Ready Nov. 1

The walls of the new theatre building at Cheyenne, Wyo., are rapidly taking form and completion of this part and placing of the roof is looked for before winter weather arrives to slow up the work. The new playhouse is expected to open soon after November 1.

Fox Brooklyn Theatre Project in Heart of Downtown District

BROOKLYN, which has for many years strongly supported the progress of the motion picture, is to be rewarded by the Fox Theatres Corporation with one of the largest and finest picture houses in the country. It will cost more than eight million dollars and will occupy practically all of the valuable triangular block at the convergence of Flatbush Avenue, Fulton and Nevins Streets, in the heart of the amusement and business district. The seating capacity will be about 4,500.

The theatre will be one of the largest and most thoroughly equipped in the Fox national chain of twenty-five moving picture houses. The decorations and fixtures will cost close to half a million dollars. The chairs, curtains and rugs are to be of special design and numerous works of art have already been purchased for the interior decoration, which will surpass anything which has been done in the existing motion picture houses in the East.

The grand lobby will be fifty-five feet high and magnificently furnished. One of the features of the seating arrangement will be an intermediate balcony of reserved loges, with a capacity of 800 persons. There will be a specially designed pipe organ and the house will be artificially cooled in summer by a refrigerating plant having a capacity of 500 tons.

The mechanical equipment also includes an electrically operated orchestra pit, by which the musicians can be elevated during symphony numbers to the level of the stage. It will also be possible to elevate only a small portion of the orchestra pit for piano or vocal numbers.

The main, or 12-story portion of the office building, will occupy the corner of Flatbush Avenue and Nevins Street, with a lower section extending along Nevins to Livingston Street and another east along Flatbush Avenue.

As a theatre site it is by far the choicest location in the theatrical district. It is situated in the midst of such theatres as the E. F. Albee, Strand, Majestic, Orpheum, Werbas Brooklyn, Loew's Metropolitan and the Casino.

The property is within two blocks of the Flatbush Avenue Terminal of the Long Island Railroad and directly at the entrance of the Flatbush Avenue Extension leading to the Manhattan Bridge.

Independent Supp'y House Announced in N. Y. C.

Following the recent merger of practically all of the larger motion picture supply houses throughout the country, comes a communication from I. H. Moscovitz, formerly a salesman with Sam Haplan, an independent dealer in New York City, disclosing the information that he will shortly establish another local independent equipment company. Mr. Moscovitz states that everything pertaining to theatre equipment will be stocked and that the address of the new firm will be announced in the near future.

Equipment Merger Affects Boston Addresses

CONSOLIDATION of theatre equipment houses in the new National Theatre Supply Co. has brought about several additional changes of address in Boston's Film Row, in keeping with the general upheaval caused by the removal of several of the exchanges to new locations. The consolidated company has opened salesrooms at 7 Isabella Street and the former salesrooms of the United Theatre Equipment Co. at 28 Piedmont Street, the Exhibitors Supply Co., 67 Church Street, and the Eastern Theatre Equipment Co. at 65 Broadway, have all vacated these premises and moved into the Isabella Street rooms. George Fecke is manager.

"Fig Leaves"—Fox Films, Colonial, Indianapolis

Star: "The sheer beauty of the scenes in color is sufficient recommendation for the picture, but it has in addition an interesting story and delightful comedy. The work of the cast is of outstanding merit, especially that by Miss Borden."

News: "A wealth of good-natured satire runs a delectable course through 'Fig Leaves.' . . . It is keenly humorous throughout and is as diverting a piece of unalloyed entertainment as has been seen in some time. . . . Miss Borden is more lovely than before and George O'Brien gives the most convincing performance he has thus far achieved."

Times: "They are surely going to talk about 'Fig Leaves.' . . . At times it will make you gasp; then you will be smothered with beauty, and afterwards you will howl with laughter at the comedy scenes. 'Fig Leaves' is the smartest kind of travesty. . . . It is our opinion that 'Fig Leaves' is mighty interesting entertainment . . . full of laughs and a great deal of beauty."

"The Family Upstairs"—Fox Films, Rialto, Chicago

Rob Reel in Chicago American: "Virginia Valli in fine performance. . . . The picture seemed to please the audience and no wonder. I became so engrossed in 'The Family Upstairs' that I stayed to see it clear through a second time. . . . It is really a marvelously human little picture—a true depiction of folks like you and I. . . . Virginia Valli is really splendid. . . . She has charm, appeal and most of all, feeling; she should go far."

"The Bells"—Chadwick, Rialto, Washington

Herald: "Much credit should be given to James Young, the director of this production, for his ability to transfer to the screen a drama which is purely subjective to tone, without loss of interest."

Star: "Excellent photography combined with an adequate cast in a strong play give Barrymore a vehicle worthy of his tremendous powers as a tragedian. In 'The Bells' he is immense."

News: "A solo triumph for Lionel Barrymore, as well as a very absorbing tale."

Post: "It ranks well above the general run of the screen in interest and attractiveness."

"The Vision"—Educational Strand, New Orleans

Item: "A bill that glorified drama, music and color, is now showing at the Strand Theatre. Constance Talmadge in 'The Duchess of Buffalo,' the farce comedy of the season, heads the procession; with the famous Technicolor subject, 'The Vision,' suggested by Millais' painting 'Speak! Speak!' and Earl Askam, the distinguished New York tenor, in a prologue to the color picture, as added attractions so important as to merit co-featuring with the main production. To explain 'The Vision' would be to destroy for thousands the pleasure of seeing one of the most picturesque and distinctive color novelties ever made. And the parts are not played by unknowns—Joch Roche and Julianne Johnston star."

"Kosher Kitty Kelly"—Film Booking Offices, Colony, New York City

Herald-Tribune: "The Colony was crowded and the spectators were delighted. It is extremely well done and is filled with stars."

Telegram: "'Kosher Kitty Kelly' is the best example of the 'Abie's Irish Rose' motif we have yet seen upon the screen."

American: "Thanks to James Horne's direction, it is much the best of the lot, so far. I liked it."

"G'golo"—Producers Distributing Corp., Million Dollar Theatre, Los Angeles

Examiner: "Rod La Rocque shows an ability which promises to lift his already high reputation by a considerable notch. He has a role of such widely divergent angles that his work will strike an appreciative note in the heart of every man and woman. William K. Howard has directed many scenes of decided dramatic power and has handled his intimate moments with admirable delicacy."

Times: "When the honors are duly apportioned for acting performances on the screen during the present season, no small share will without doubt, go to Rod La Rocque. There is good and sufficient reason, namely his work in 'Gigolo.' 'Gigolo' may be remarked as something enough out of the ordinary to merit a special mention. La Rocque's make-up, indicative of a seared face, is extraordinary."

"Beau Geste"—Paramount, Aldine, Philadelphia

Bulletin: "Herbert Brenon could not have secured a better cast."

Record: "Beau Geste enthralled its audience."

Inquirer: "Beau Geste must stand as one of the great things of cinematography."

Sun: "Beau Geste has action galore, romance, mystery and superlative acting."

Daily News: "A polished melodramatic exhibition of courage and pathos with a delightful and intriguing mystery as the basis."

Kilgen Music Helps You

Good music is necessary for the box office welfare of your theatre. . . . Movie goers are educated to good music and respond to it. . . . More than that, they demand it.

Operators of motion picture theatres find the same great need for REPEAT BUSINESS that is so necessary in every other line. . . . All successful merchants and manufacturers agree that their biggest job is to keep customers satisfied. The man who pays to get new business and then can't hold it is losing money.

Pipe organ music is now widely used to develop audience singing. It supplies features for your programs. It translates the emotions of the picture-plays . . . joy, sorrow, action, fear, love and the entire gamut. It is used by orchestra leaders to add power to their music. All in all, the pipe organ does more to round out the program than anything else at your command.

In scores of theatres, where pipe organ music plays an important part in keeping audiences pleased, the Kilgen is chosen. This fine instrument, made in the world's largest exclusive pipe organ plant by a company that has been building them for three centuries, is accepted as "The Voice of the Silent Drama." . . . Let our Organ architects tell you what they have learned from their study of theatre organ requirements. Write Dept. J.

Three Bad Men opened to unusual business at our Metropolitan Theatre. Appealed universally and is one of the greatest western epics ever filmed. Cast is perfect. Direction is such as to take rank with the best ever achieved and the photography registers perfectly. It is a masterpiece and cannot miss.

J. J. Parker of the MAJESTIC THEATRE, Portland, Ore., wires:

I am of opinion that Three Bad Men is equal if not greater than the Iron Horse. Stood them in line all day yesterday and all day again today. Predict longer run and bigger business on Three Bad Men than we did on Iron Horse.

Fred A. Miller, Pres. of FAR WEST THEATRES, INC., wires:

Proclaimed the biggest, most astounding picture of the year. Positively greatest opening in history of California premieres. You are to be congratulated for this most triumphant production.

A. Ritzler of the SIGMA THEATRE, Lima, Ohio, wires:

Three Bad Men opened to one of the biggest day's receipts in history of theatre. Patrons well satisfied. Many thanks for square dealings. Best wishes for Fox success.

I. Libson of the CAPITOL THEATRE, Cincinnati, Ohio, wires:

every SOCK means another swelling of the box-office till!

Sills and Beery's sockfest is surely a lulu! Lawd, 'tis worth the price of admission. The Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey encounter rates amateurish compared to the battle-royal offered in "Paradise."

The end, however, zips forth a fight 'twixt Sills and Noah Beery that is the greatest we've seen. —N. Y. Daily Mirror

WE KNEW —
When we said it would make Dempsey —
Tunney look like a semifinal.

It is the finest screen fight we ever saw, and we cannot understand now how it was that some one did not get killed. Neither Milton Sills nor Noah Beery spared himself nor his adversary in the least, and unless we are mistaken we did hear that both the participants were down and out for a few days. Those who paid $500 for seats to "the fight" might have felt that they got their money's worth if Tunney and Dempsey had behaved like that. —N. Y. Herald-Tribune

Milton Sills is appearing at the Mark Strand this week in "Paradise" a drama of the South Seas, crammed full of heroics, dusky native girls, thwarted villainy, palm trees and other such familiar embroideries. It is obviously a film designed with at least one eye on the box-office, and it would not take a prophet to foretell that as such it will meet with unqualified success, for in addition to the above mentioned ingredients, it boasts of dainty Betty Bronson, Charlie Murray and Noah Beery in addition to some glittering ballroom scenes and some enchanting South Sea scenery.

It should be said that "Paradise" provides one of the best fights that has been seen in a long, long time. It certainly looked as if Sills and Beery meant every blow that they exchanged. —N. Y. Telegraph

Why travel to Philadelphia to see Tunney wrest the championship from Dempsey when there is a fight at the Mark Strand on Broadway with even more thrills? I admit my knowledge of prizefighting technique is limited, but this looks to me like a fight that has all the earmarks of realty.

It is so evenly fought that if it were not the custom in the movies to always let the hero knock out the villain one could not have foretold the finish. —N. Y. American

When these brown eyes do their stuff -- no box-office could ever be blue!

Miss Moore attacks her role in a clever fashion, using her big, brown eyes to advantage and making the most of some stretches of comedy by her knowledge of pantomimics. Jean Hersholt, an emphatically accomplished actor who will be remembered from his excellent portrayals in "Greed" and "Stella Dallas," is impressive as the German father in this current film. Malcolm McGregor is sympathetic as Jack Dugan.

This production is a sort of transcript of life that comes closer to giving Miss Moore an opportunity to display her talent as an actress than any screen effort in which she has appeared since her performance in "So Big." —N. Y. Times.

Miss Moore is delightful. There is a humorous twinkle to her expressive eyes that seems to say, "I am really enjoying myself and I hope you are." As the little delicatessen clerk she has brought one of her most pleasing characterizations to the screen. —N. Y. Telegraph.

Most audiences will find "It Must Be Love" to be a delightful bit of entertainment, and the admirers of Miss Moore will not be disappointed in her latest screen appearance. She does her stuff in the usual Mooreish manner, and this is highly satisfactory to those who "just love to see that girl in pictures."

Volume XXXIV

NEW YORK CITY, OCTOBER 23, 1926

No. 17

"Movie Mad"

A RECENT issue of The Saturday Evening Post carries an article called "Movie Mad," which seems to me a striking example of misinformation and bad taste.

I refer only to the first half of the article; the latter part is a fact statement about the new casting bureau inaugurated by Fred Beetson of the Hays Association and about the deplorable conditions which previously existed. Although it comes along very late in the day the article will, we hope, do some good in presenting the true facts about studio employment to some of the movie struck youth of the land.

The fore part of the article seems to be a determined and reckless effort to prove that pictures are made by morons for morons. Los Angeles is presented as a public sunk in imbecility over its adoration of movie personages; ridicule is heaped upon a war picture prologue used in a Los Angeles picture theatre. This latter criticism is pretty far fetched; and the actual fact about Los Angeles people is that they are blase to a degree over the studio folks. So much so as to be an exception to the rule. A large portion of the Los Angeles public do go to the movie theatres, but that is true of every large city in the land. In Albany, for instance, the weekly attendance equals the city's population, and in other cities the ratio runs all the way from 75% to almost 100%.

A good many millions of Americans are considerably interested in the movies and movie personages. The Saturday Evening Post seems to recognize that fact by giving movie fiction and articles a very prominent place in its pages. With so large a circulation the magazine must be read very largely if not entirely, by the movie public. If the latter consists of morons one wonders just how the magazine solves the problem of meeting its readers' mental level. Whatever that answer may be, certainly the policy—obviously pronounced—of continually villifying the movies seems a strange one.

Our contention here is in behalf of the millions of American "morons" who dote upon the movies. If these people are given over to hero worship of the people of the screen, and if therefore a lot of joy and often inspiration enters their lives what earthly good will be accomplished by the reckless and ridiculously untrue assertions that the well known characters of the screen came from the ranks of dish washers! One wonders, indeed, who is looney on the general subject.

Of course, the fact is that the people who go to the movies are for the most part, good, sound, sensible folk. If not, we may tremble for the country's welfare, since they constitute a majority of the nation's population. They seem to like pictures pretty well. At least, they are their own judges and censors, and they need no help. Upon their likes and dislikes a large industry has been built which, like the magazines, can only prosper and progress by giving the American public what the public wants. A good deal of trash is turned out: but The Saturday Evening Post is by no means guiltless in this respect. Let us hope the magazine will never make movies and pad them out as often as its fiction is padded. But let us also decide that both the big magazine and the movie makers are doing a pretty large job in a pretty good way.

Speaking Editorially

AN instance of the increasing attention being given to short subjects by newspapers, is a story published in the October 2 issue of The Fourth Estate, the weekly publication for newspaper editors. William E. MacKee, writing under the heading, "Something for Newspapers to Think About," discusses "The Vision," Eugene Roth's Romance picture in Technicolor for Educational, when he visited a large East Side theatre in New York. Mr. MacKee makes the point that the audience was more attentive to this short feature than to the longer picture.

* * *

AS the colors unfolded on the screen, an amazing thing happened," writes Mr. MacKee. "A strange quiet settled over the audience. No running up and down the aisles, nor chasing after the family. The lure of bright colors and the unusual telling of the story caught the crowd and held their interest to the end. The story, of course, is old, but it was new to those seeing it now, and the most attentive were the kids.

The owner of the theatre said that only under persuasion did he permit the picture to run; he thought it was nice, but not for his people. It is hoped he knows better now.

"This reviewer has been told that the same force has to be used to make other theatre owners see the beauty of a good picture as this was, and it seems that the newspapers could do a lot to urge the local exhibitor to improve their quality. The quality is there, ready to be tapped, and if the exhibitor is helped by the only other molder of public opinion in the community, THE NEWSPAPER, a good picture need not go begging for a showing.

* * *

STRIKING, first-hand testimony to the influence of American pictures abroad was given the other day by Dr. Herbert Adams Gibbons, of Princeton University in an address to the state convention of Kiwanis clubs in New Jersey. Dr. Gibbons, as quoted in an Associated Press dispatch from Trenton, declared that the movies are creating a liking for America, and that they have improved living conditions all over Europe.

* * *

IN the most remote regions of Europe," said Dr. Gibbons, "one finds Hollywood setting the fashion in clothes and in the way people live in their homes. To the upheaval of the World War has been attributed much of the astounding changes in the way people think and act. But have not our motion pictures much to do with the transformation?

"This new world of ours is revealed daily to the millions who go to see the pictures. They are a silent agency for good understanding, making America known and liked and they are more powerfully working in our favor than the demagogic utterances of Statesmen and the anti-campaigns of newspapers working against us. Considerably more than half of the films shown in England and on the Continent come from this country; and most of them give the impression that we are a kindly and fun-loving people, astonishingly like Europeans in our feelings and thoughts."

"The pictures on the screen break down barriers of language and illiteracy. No longer do we have to depend on the written word and the spoken word for the progress of internationalism in the world. We hear much of the hostility of Europe toward us, but I am confident that the attitude of the people is not what is brought back by tourists and what one would infer from the news."

The Week in Review By William A. Johnston

Carl Laemmle

THE industry-wide welcome tendered to Carl Laemmle on his return from Europe was a fitting tribute to the affection in which he is held by the whole film world. It was enthusiastic and sincere; and, showed, among many other interesting things, that the industry is really one big family, solicitous for its own and genuinely happy to do honor to so fine a personality as Mr. Laemmle.

IN a talk the other day, John Flinn of I.P.D.C. gave some pertinent observations gathered on his recent trip. In discussing pictures with newspaper men in various sections, he found that the main interest was this: what kinds of stories is the screen going to give us next year? Not stars; but stories. And newspaper offices are prime clearing-houses for public opinion—the best, in fact.

He also found that the palatial picture theatres now being built almost everywhere have established themselves as definite community institutions. In other words, they are now a matter of civic pride; often the best structures in the city.

* * *

THE new presentation vogue, Mr. Flinn found, has taken definite hold in the large cities, and this goes for all sections. As an example, individual personalities in this end of the business—presentation managers, as he termed them—are registering with the public for their ideas and acts.

HAL ROACH wires us an important development in his policy of putting box-office names in short length comedies. Within the past few days, he has signed Priscilla Dean, Matt Moore, Mae Busch and Agnes Ayres.

These four distinct box-office names will, of course, mean added pulling power for theatres of all grades—from the largest to the smallest. The Roach idea of big names in comedies is one of the most interesting ever brought forward, and shows a fine sense of showmanship on his part.

GRIFFITH'S "Sorrows of Satan" was put on view the other night before a distinguished audience at the George M. Cohan Theatre. Here is a picture which, technically, is one of the finest ever made. The lighting is superb. The composition and pictorial values of the great mass of scenes are wonderful, unsurpassed.

The cast, too, first-rate with Carol Dempster easily winning a new place as an emotional actress, with a finished technique, just as effective as, but quite different from that of Lillian Gish. Ricardo Cortez, for the first half of the film, gives a great performance; in the second half, he rather seemed to let down, but this may have been due to the story material, which just keeps this side of the unreal and unconvincing. Lya de Putti had little to do while Adolphe Menjou's conception of Mephistopheles was, to say the least, novel. His villainy was tempered by a sort of good fellowship and man-about-town attitude that did not permit the conventional hatred for villains to operate in the spectator's mind.

The whole picture is a brilliant piece of direction. Considering the story, it is highly meritorious, and shows that D. W. has not lost his mastery. We shall follow the box-office career of this picture with more than ordinary attention.

THE Warners have an uproarious comedy in "The Better 'Ole." Put on with the Vitaphone at the Colony, it kept the audience in gales of laughter most of the way. If we know anything about picture values, this comedy is "in," without question.

Syd Chaplin, to us at least, was the Ole Bill of Bairnsfeather to the life. There is no pretense about finely-etched characterizations; the picture is horse-play and slapstick in nearly all particulars and it registers most emphatically. One could wish at times for a little less footage, but not in the real comedy sequences.

The accompanying Vitaphone program is discussed elsewhere in this issue, but we may add here that it is fully up to the standard of the first, though in lighter vein as befits the picture.

AIDED by Columbus Day and favorable conditions, Broadway houses were doing phenomenal business this week. The Capitol will go close to $75,000 on "The Temptress," and "Kit Boots" at the Riato looks like $33,000 or $34,000 on the week. The Rivoli is finding "The Quarterback" the best of the Dix pictures, topping last week's business on Colleen Moore.

"The Better 'Ole" is going big at the Colony, Roadshow attractions stand about the same as previously, with "Sorrows of Satan" added and a heavy advance sale reported.

RECENTLY we quoted from an interesting article, "The Director's Alibi," in the National Board of Review Magazine. Here are further extracts:

"That much restriction, then, the American director must face. He has to make pictures that will not be unconditionally barred from the screen in the six censorship states and his pictures must be in general harmony with the cultural standards of society. If he wants to call this a form of censorship which paralyzes his artistic development let him make the most of it. But the majority of people will continue to consider it a very inadequate excuse.

"For every one of the foreign pictures in question have had to meet these same conditions, have been accepted under the same rules, and have survived the rarely drastic cutting of the state censors. In the last few years the restrictions upon American pictures have been well known in European studios. "The Last Laugh" and "Variety" were not made in the dark.

"The answer is simple. The men who made these pictures proceeded on the principle that the proper concern of the artist is his art, not the policeman at the corner. He went to work like an artist determined to make the best picture he knew how. He had a proper respect for the intelligence of his audience in choosing his plot (the current notion that plots must hit the ten-year-old level is only another side of this censorship phobia), and then worked it out within the limits of his medium while constantly experimenting to enlarge the scope of that medium.

"In other words with him the problem of censorship came last, not first. And fortunately it holds true that the real artist rarely comes into conflict with the more obvious regulations against immoral conduct. He may challenge society, his new and disturbing interpretation of life may upset our conservative equilibrium, but he is rarely locked up for indecent exposure. Crudity is the antithesis of the aesthetic and the entire striving of the artist is to present the actuality and ugliness of life in beautiful forms. He has nothing in common with the director who complains that censorship cramps his bathroom style or whose feelings are hurt when the tabu of good taste descends upon his cheesecloth bacchanalia."

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

JIM'S TENTH YEAR

JAMES BEECROFT, New York manager for Exhibitor's Herald, is this week completing ten years of active and highly successful service in the motion picture industry. He numbers his friends by the scores and has won, by hard work and genuine ability, a much respected and useful position in the trade publication field. Our sincere good wishes to Jim on his tenth anniversary.

Nina Romano who has a prominent part in Gotham's "Money to Burn," and is Mrs. Lou Tellegen in private life but prefers her own screen name

His ability to keep things moving with precision and harmony has won for William Koenig a continuation of his contract as Warner Bros. general production manager

PLENTY OF STARS

EIGHT releases were favored by the National Board of Review this week with asterisks denoting particular interest, four of them being of feature length. Three of these are Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer releases—"Bardelys the Magnificent," "The Temptress," produced by Cosmopolitan, and "War Paint," first of the Tim McCoy Westerns for M.-G.-M. The fourth feature to be commended was "The Quarterback," the football story in which Yost had a hand, as described recently in THE NEWS. The remaining four asterisks went to Pathe Review, issues numbered 43, 44, 45 and 46.

G. B. S.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW again crashed into the public prints this past week with some decided opinions on the subject of motion pictures. In an interview with H. K. Reynolds, copyright by Universal Service, Mr. Shaw said, in part:

"It's quite certain that the American producers haven't yet realized the enormous difference between acting on the film and acting on the stage—the technique is completely different. The chief complaint I have to make against the American film is that the

Irving Cummings, Fox Films director, who has been in New York filming exteriors for "Bertha, the Beautiful Sewing Machine Girl," his next production

M. H. Hoffman, the vice-president of Tiffany Productions, who is on the West Coast at the present time devoting his efforts to the Tiffany Gems

Samuel Goldwyn, Jr., son of the motion picture producer makes his first public appearance in the arms of his mother. At the left, Constance Howard, sister of Mrs. Goldwyn

An unusually striking and vigorous pose of Rod La Rocque as he appears in his new starring picture, "The Cruise of the Jasper B," for C. B. De Mille

Moments of suspense, humor and romance from "Summer Bachelors," the first Allan Dwan production for Fox Films, based upon the story by Warner Fabian with Madge Bellamy and a brilliant cast producers think that as long as it costs money it must be good. . . . Griffith is an excellent example of the American producer of today. Unless he spends thousands and thousands of dollars he doesn't think his picture is any good. When he was over here I told him I could produce far better films than he could for about five cents each. . . . Chaplin seems to be the best producer. He wastes very little, and when he gets his effect he snaps off at once. . . . One of Barrie's plays bore no resemblance whatever to the film, although I must admit that I recognized the names of one or two of the characters."

D. W. Griffith responded to the Irish dramatist by relating that in 1917 he had refused the playwright's offer to do a scenario for him, fearing that he might find the medium more difficult than he imagined.

A TIP FROM THE STUDIO

FROM Fox Films Eastern studios, over on Tenth Avenue, in New York, comes a lot of talk about the picture "Summer Bachelors," which Allan Dwan has just finished directing and which marked his bow as a Foxite. Most of the talk will make good advertising copy for it is all laudatory of the Dwan production, which is based on the new novel by Warner Fabian, who, incidentally, is the author of "Flaming Youth."

But as the reaper reaps this gleaner gleaned two things about which he thinks exhibitors should be tipped off. First of these is that Madge Bellamy, who has the leading role in this Dwan production, is even better, in the opinion of Fox reviewers' board, than she was in "Sandy," and by better they seem to mean she is peppier, droller and more appealing. We hardly think this possible, for we are among those who think Madge's performance in "Sandy" the apex of the attainable.

The other salient fact that stands out among the superlatives heaped on the production is that a new laughter luminary has been discovered by Dwan and that W. C. Fields and Eddie Cantor had better look to their laurels as musical comedy motion picture kings. The Fox folks claim that Walter Catlett, Ziegfeld star caperer, who is one of the "summer bachelors" in the production, is just about the funniest "shady thirty" comedian to make his bow on the screen in years.

JANNINGS HONORED

EMIL JANNINGS, the German motion picture actor, who is coming to America to star in Paramount pictures, was received by Foreign Minister Stresemann and assembled members of the Reichstag on the eve of his departure, according to a cablegram sent to S. R. Kent, general manager of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Jannings was to arrive in New York on October 18th aboard the Albert Ballin. The honor accorded him last week was the culmination of a week of extraordinary tribute rendered by the Berlin populace, during which all of the motion picture theatres observed "Jannings Week" and exhibited his films.

"You are the greatest German artist," the Foreign Minister told Jannings. "We have none better to send. You go to America as the ambassador of German art. I do not like to see you go but when men like you leave our shores they do not forget their fatherland."

"More than all else, art creates permanent unions among peoples and it is given to you through your great art to work for the brotherhood of all peoples on earth."

Although plans for Jannings' first American film have not yet been announced it is known that he will remain in New York City for two weeks before leaving for Hollywood. Preparations are being made by the numerous foreign actors and directors now working in Hollywood to give Jannings a big reception on his arrival there.

SUMMONED east by the illness of his wife, Laura Reinock D'Arcy, Roy D'Arcy, M.-G.-M. featured player, left the Coast on Thursday of last week for New York City. Mrs. D'Arcy, who was married last year to the actor following a courtship of two weeks, is said to be suffering a nervous breakdown following the sudden death recently of her father, John L. Reinock, former Kentucky congressman and prominent official of Loew's, Inc., and of the Shubert Theatrical organization.

"BEAU GESTE" BENEFIT

SOMEWHERE in a quiet little home in England a war-worn major, exhausted by service in His Majesty's colonial possessions, writes a novel. After leisurely browsing in his thesaurus he chooses an archaic French phrase as the title for his novel—a foolish thing to do if he were writing for the movies.

Reginald Denny in "Take It From Me," his latest Universal starring vehicle, finds that a floorwalker's life is not an easy one, as an army of feminine shoppers engulfs him

Comes the dawn of that novel in America, whence many English authors look for seventy-five per cent of their royalties. Ergo, and the novel becomes a best seller and a motion picture produced by Herbert Brenon for Paramount.

By a whim of advertising, "Beau Geste" blazes forth from the Criterion Theatre in the largest and brightest sign that ever lighted the White Way. A million people (revise figure to suit) read the archaic French phrase, wonder what it means and how to pronounce it. Thanks to the cognoscente, the information filters through a sluggish public mind that the name is pronounced "Bo jest" and that it means "a graceful gesture."

Gradually conversationalists and individuals with a flare for words and phrases substitute "beau geste" for "a graceful gesture." And now the gallants of Broadway are doing their "beau gestes."

A "beau geste" is certainly the phrase to characterize the benefit performance to be given at the Criterion Theatre at 11.30 P.M. Saturday, October 16th, for an unnamed advertising man who is near death from tuberculosis at Saranac Lake. His plight came to the attention of the Broadway Cheese Club, of which Harry Hershfield, the cartoonist, is president, and to the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., headed by Walter Eberhardt of First National Pictures. Others representing the Theatrical Press Representatives of America and the Friars and Lambs Clubs inquired of the management of the Criterion Theatre as to whether the home of "Beau Geste" might not be the home of a "beau geste."

Through the courtesy of Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and S. R. Kent, general manager, the theatre and the attraction was placed at the disposal of the committee seeking to lend a hand to the unfortunate whose physique could not measure up to the pace of Broadway.

A committee headed by Jacques Kopfsstein of 723 Seventh Avenue is disposing of tickets for this midnight benefit performance of "Beau Geste." Some of the biggest names on Broadway are lending a hand financially and devoting their time toward making the benefit a tremendous financial success. Only the actual expenses required by union regulations for musicians and theatre attaches will be deducted from the amount taken in at the box office. The Internal Revenue Service of the Treasury Department has issued a Certificate of Exemption from a collection of federal tax on admissions. For this performance only no tax will be charged and the entire receipts minus expenses will be turned over to the Benevolent Fund of the

Lloyd Hamilton, star of Educational-Lloyd Hamilton comedies, falls for the photographer, demonstrating how a comedian registers mild surprise

Broadway Cheese Club, which will in turn place the full amount at the disposal of the ailing advertising man who is not and never has been a member of either the Cheese Club, the A.M.P.A., the Friars, the Lambs, or the T.P.R.O.A.

Musical comedies and other stage attractions have issued seats for their theatre which will be auctioned off by Eddie Cantor and Julius Tannen from the stage of the Criterion Theatre during intermission of the showing of "Beau Geste."

Other Broadway celebrities will take advantage of this opportunity to see the picture that has brought a new phrase and a new conception of charity to Broadway.

SAM L. WARNER PROUD FATHER

LITA BASQUETTE WARNER, weighing exactly seven pounds, is the newest star signed up by Warner Bros. Lita is a star of special significance who has come to bless the marriage of Sam L. Warner and Lina Basquette, former Folies danseuse.

Promptly at 11.53 Sunday night, Lita made her arrival at the Nassau Hospital, Mineola, L.I., where Mrs. S. L. Warner is resting. The reception Lita received from her proud father broke all records and promises a close understanding and sympathy between the new star and her daddy.

THE L-M-G-M BALL

THE Fourth Annual Ball of the Loew-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Club will be held in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Astor, Saturday evening (not to mention a slice of Sunday morning), October 30.

Nils Grandlund (N. T. G.) will be master of ceremonies as usual, and is now getting the co-operation of the principals and choruses of Broadway musical hits as part of the professional entertainment. In addition to this entertainment, which will be had about midnight, Grandlund also is whipping into shape an elaborate Breakfast Show in which entertainers of the leading night clubs will do their acts.

Leading players and figures of both the silent and spoken drama will be among the invited guests.

This ball, which has established itself as an opening gun in the Broadway social season, will be even bigger and better this year than ever before.

GREEN RETURNS WEST

ALFRED E. GREEN, who has been directing New York exterior scenes for the Fox screen version of David Belasco's stage success, "The Auctioneer," and L. G. Rigby, scenarist, left on October 12 aboard the Broadway Limited for Hollywood, where the interiors will be filmed.

Pat Sullivan, who draws the Felix the Cat cartoons for Educational release, with Mrs. Sullivan, looks over some of the 15,000 entries in the Draw Felix contest conducted in connection with Motion Picture Magazine

IT'S UNCLE PAUL NOW

PAUL GULICK, genial director of publicity for Universal, has taken on a new dignity. They're calling him Uncle Paul now.

Karl Gulick, brother of the publicity chief, became the proud father of an eight-pound girl Sunday night. She is to be called Jane. Karl is the executive assistant to the head of the big Wallach laundry chain of New York City. His wife, who was his school-day sweetheart back in Charlotte, Vt., is well known as a Chautauqua singer and as a choir singer in New York. This is their first child.

Emil Jannings breakfasts with his wife, formerly Gussy Holl; an exclusive photo taken shortly before they sailed for this country, where Jannings will begin work under the Paramount banner

MEETS McLAGLEN, PERE

PRECEDING Edmund Lowe by only a few days, a letter written by him from England, tells of his meeting Bishop McLaglen, father of Victor McLaglen, who plays Captain Flagg opposite to Lowe's Sergeant Quirt in the forthcoming screen version of "What Price Glory."

"The good Bishop McLaglen," writes Lowe, "lives in Chiswick, where Vic was born. An afternoon spent with him was one of the most delightful of my stay in England. The elder McLaglen hears regularly from Vic but, of course, was glad to get personally conducted news about him. A short description of Vic's part in 'What Price Glory' rather took his breath away. 'I always knew that boy would come to no good end,' he said. 'But tell him to come home and all will be forgiven.'

"For a moment I thought I had stirred up trouble for Vic and the Bishop let me feel uncomfortable. Then he showed he was merely enjoying his little joke. The McLaglen's run tall. Vic is six feet three, but his father tops this by another two inches. And, by the way, they don't pronounce it McLaglen over here. They spell it that way, but pronounce it 'M'Lelan'."

BACK TO L. A.

HAVING finished the doings of "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl," in outdoor New York, Madge Bellamy left Sunday afternoon with Irving Cummings, the director, Paul Nicholson, the villain, and her mother, Mrs. William B. Philpott, for Hollywood where other sequences will be filmed.

A fortnight was spent on the New York scenes, during which "Bertha" was in the sweat shop district, in a Bronx tenement section, Central Park, Fifth Avenue, Wall Street, Times Square and Fifth Avenue. These locales were employed in the progress of the modernized "Bertha." Instead of the sad little figure in the heavy-footed A. H. Woods' melodrama of years ago, Madge makes Bertha a girl with a sense of humor who makes her way from the sewing machine to a Fifth Avenue lingerie shop in a wide-awake manner.

Mayer and May McAvoy, heroine of the picture; right, Miss McAvoy christens the cross-country car

PEP CLUB STARTS YEAR

ON Tuesday evening, in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Astor, New York City, some 750 members of the Paramount Pep Club gathered for the inauguration of officers which marks the official opening of the new year. The proud individuals over whom the mantle of office was draped included Joseph P. McLoughlin, president, Joseph A. Walsh, vice-president, Axel R. Swenson, treasurer, Helen Strauss, secretary; Eugene J. Zukor, chairman board of governors, and Joseph R. Wood, Harry Nadel, P. H. Stilson, Edward A. Brown, Irene Scott, Belle Goldstein, Glendon Allvine, Fred Metzler, Sadie Spitzer and Mrs. Chalmers Shumate Traw, board of governors.

HENIUS JOINS VEIDT

WOLFF M. HENIUS, American manager of Conrad Veidt, the German star who is playing Louis XI in John Barrymore's Francois Villon picture, "The Beloved Rogue," is en route to Hollywood to join Veidt.

Mr. Henius, Veidt's friend for many years, was summoned by Barrymore and the German player to act as interpreter. Veidt speaks French and German but virtually no English, and in order to expedite direction his presence was requested.

Henius was formerly New York correspondent of the Lichtbild-bühne, German film paper. He left for Hollywood last Saturday.

WANTED: A MCKINLEY

WHO is the man who can portray William McKinley on the screen? For weeks Famous Players-Lasky has been looking for a living likeness of the former President. The search has been conducted quietly throughout the ranks of thousands of Hollywood extras, but without success.

Paramount is now appealing to the public in its search for the prototype of McKinley. If you know of any man who is a striking likeness of the former President, communicate with Fred Datig, casting director of Famous Players-Lasky, Hollywood studio.

The faithfulness to detail with which Paramount is making "The Rough Riders" must be carried out in the role of McKinley. Company officials found an uncanny likeness of Theodore Roosevelt in the person of Frank Hopper. Now they want an exact likeness of the martyred McKinley.

One of the Philippine villages constructed at the Warner Bros. studio for their elaborate production of "Across the Pacific," a story of the insurrections, just released. This photo will give some idea of the elaborate preparations necessary for the filming of such sequences.

BRITISH VISITORS

FRANK WELLS, son of the famous English novelist, H. G. Wells, is now working as an extra with the Herbert Brenon production, "God Gave Me Twenty Cents," at the Paramount Long Island studio. Dressed in masquerade costume, young Wells and his friend and traveling companion, Hugh Brooke, are doing their bits with the crowd of three hundred gaily clad extras engaged for the New Orleans Mardi Gras scenes of the picture. Brooke, who is the son of Clifford Brooke, the English theatrical producer, is driving a victoria in the scene, while Wells acts as footman.

"We thought this would be a good way of seeing how American films are made and how your famous directors work," said Mr. Wells. "Mr. Brooke and myself are now producing two-reelers in England, at Beaconsfield, under the name of Equator Films. We've been going only about six months but we thought there might be a market for our material over here. Lighting problems are especially interesting to us at present. Mr. Brooke directs our pictures and I do most of the designing and art work. We are now making a series of my father's short stories called 'Stories of Life and Adventure.' We expect to stay about a week."

Chief Standing Bear (centre) of the Ogallala tribe, who is to play in Col. Tim McCoy's pictures for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, addressing members of the National Editorial Association in convention in L. A. Col. McCoy is at the right

Another British visitor is Frederick Lonsdale, dramatist, who arrived in New York Tuesday to confer with Ernst Lubitsch, who will direct Lonsdale's play, "The Last of Mrs. Cheney," for Paramount with Adolphe Menjou in the role created by Roland Young on the New York stage.

"Some time ago," said Mr. Lonsdale, "I signed a contract to write original stories for Paramount pictures but up until now my affairs did not permit me to take up the duties of that contract. Needless to say, I am happy indeed that my first experiences with motion pictures will be with Mr. Lubitsch, who I think is the foremost director. With Mr. Menjou playing the male lead and Mr. Lubitsch directing, I am sure that the play will receive the very best of treatment in its translation to the screen. In the preparation of the story for the screen I am going to work in close co-operation with Mr. Lubitsch and from that association I expect to learn a great deal about screen construction which will prove of inestimable value to me when I start writing original stories for Paramount."

"Although nothing definitely has been decided, I hope that my first original Paramount picture will be made in Great Britain."

MEIGHAN'S BENEFITS

THOMAS MEIGHAN and members of the Paramount company on location in Canada making "The Canadian" endeared themselves to the people of Calgary by staging a huge benefit show at which more than $3,000 was raised for several orphanages. All the local civic organization co-operated and the proceeds were amazing in view of the fact that three heavy snow storms in two weeks caused heavy crop damage and made roads impassable.

A FOX FILMS FIND

VIRTUALLY unknown two years ago, Janet Gaynor, Fox Films favorite and a former resident of Philadelphia, has won two of the highest honors at the disposal of Fox executives.

Miss Gaynor, who has just finished a featured role in "The Return of Peter Grimm" under direction of Victor Schertzinger, was selected by F. W. Murnau, eminent German director, to play the feminine lead in "Sunrise." Then, almost immediately, Frank Borzage, casting about for the best artist available anywhere, decided upon the little Pennsylvanian for the great role of Diane in "Seventh Heaven."

"Miss Gaynor has proved," said General Superintendent Sol M. Wurtzel, "that she is an artist of exceptional ability and her selection for these highly important portrayals is additional proof of our faith in her inherent capacities."

Miss Gaynor is a diminutive brunette, popularly characterized as winsome, and, since coming to Fox Films Coast studio, has played featured roles in some of the best photoplays released this year.

HOMEWARD BOUND

LILA LEE, who returned recently from England, where she played in the exterior scenes of "One Increasing Purpose," and Allan Simpson, who has finished his New York sequence as the male lead in "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl," are Hollywood bound. They left on the Broadway Limited Friday afternoon.

Vitaphone Again Proves Hit on Broadway

Musical Selections, Most of Them in Lighter Vein, Register With First Night Audience

By PAUL THOMPSON

"CONSISTENCY is a jewel," some epigram-maker has said, and no better illustration of the truth of this saying is afforded than in the second program of Warner Brothers' second Vitaphone offering at the Colony Theatre, October 7th. In contrast to the first made at the Warner Theatre in conjunction with John Barrymore in "Don Juan," which logically and appropriately was made up for the most part of grand opera stars, the entertainment which preceded Syd Chaplin in "The Better 'Ole" was lighter fare. Inasmuch as the screen play was an out-and-out slap-stick comedy of rough-house situations and actions rather than one of manners, it was eminently consistent that the Vitaphone part of the evening's entertainment should depend on recruits from the music halls and revues. The sole exception was Reinald Werrenrath and curiously his offerings in many respects were the least successful of all.

One had the same feeling with him as with Marion Talley, of unreality, of a picture with a voice not remotely connected with the figure on the screen but rather far removed from the latter. The singer's reputation through his Metropolitan Opera Company appearances, his justified popularity on the concert stage, and the fame which his Victor records enjoy; all of these things make his Vitaphone debut doubly disappointing. Werrenrath has a splendid voice—but in the Vitaphone it is throaty and unsatisfying.

Willie and Eugene Howard, ex-Winter Garden stars now with "The Scandals," were most successful of all. Theirs is the kind of voice that lends itself most successfully to Vitaphone exposition. Then their songs being but incidental to their quite amusing patter in their skit, "Between the Acts at the Opera," instead of the whole act that helped a lot.

Al Jolson came next, his three offerings scoring deservedly. He screens quite well and with a cabin background his songs, which have made him famous on the stage, were convincingly delivered by the machine to an appreciative audience.

Elsie Janis also has the sort of voice that lends itself most successfully to the machine that synchronizes picture and sound. It has a certain raucous quality that is much more appealing and less mechanical than a Marion Talley or Werrenrath type of voice. The employment of ex-A.E.F. men and a stage setting back of the lines in France with the talented diseuse and chanteuse singing, talking and dancing on a motor truck helped a lot to create the impression of doing what she actually did in the war.

George Jessel, who is only waiting, it is said, for success to attend his first moving picture, "Private Izzy Murphy," to abandon "The Jazz Singer" and any other stage play to devote himself wholly to the movies, has an amusing blend of monologue and songs. His again is the kind of voice best adapted to this sort of mechanical reproduction and his success was unquestioned even allowing for his friends in the audience.

Best of all, however, even if less famous than their associates on the bill were the men who made up the "Four Aristocrats," four musicians with piano, saxophone, guitar, banjo, etc. As with the Vitaphone Symphony Orchestra they proved that instrumental music always will be most successful in reproduction on the Vitaphone. The plausibility or probability of these men actually creating the sounds attains its maximum. This goes for the quartet and the symphony, both the smaller and larger body of men being the outstanding hits of the program.

An unusually brilliant first night audience witnessed the second Vitaphone opening and the premiere of the Sidney Chaplin picture. The attendance included representatives of the arts, financial and theatrical world.

F. B. I. Report Urges British Quota

Federation Recommends That 12½ per cent of British Films Be Required First Year to Re-establish Industry

IN a lengthy report sent to the president of the Board of Trade for submission to the Imperial Economic Conferences this month, the Federation of British Industries declares that a compulsory quota on films is the only means by which the British motion picture industry may again be placed upon a productive basis, according to a copyright dispatch to the "New York Times." A quota of 12½ per cent of British films the first year is specified. The F.B.I., it will be recalled, has figured in the British situation since the beginning of the present agitation, but failed to come to any understanding with various factions in the trade.

Should the quota be made compulsory, production will quickly reach the required level, studio facilities being available for 115 pictures yearly, the F.B.I. maintains, according to the "Times" correspondent.

"The completeness of American control of the foreign film market is shown by the impressive figures quoted in today's report of the Federation," continues the dispatch. "Against Great Britain's yearly output of fifteen films the United States produces between 600 and 800. It is estimated that Americans supply 90 per cent of the pictures shown in Great Britain and the overseas British Dominions.

"The report declares that not only are the British studios capable of supplying all the money needed to meet the suggested British Empire quota, but that there is enough available personnel in the British studios if the Government takes the action requested.

"There are about 25 British directors here now and it is asserted that some of them are equal to the best anywhere. Several other British directors have migrated to America recently, owing to the lack of opportunity at home, and have been successful.

"There also are plenty of British cameramen and dark-room hands, it is added, and that when it comes to the dramatic and literary field, British literature and drama can provide inexhaustible treasures.

"In fact, the success of Hollywood has been, to a large extent, founded on British stories and players," says the report.

"The fact that there have been few recent British films is also urged as an argument in favor of inducing compulsory quota rather than against it.

"The fact that few good pictures have been made and sold does not prove that the requisite capital will be forthcoming to build up the industry. So long as American control exists, British production will, of necessity, be confined to the making from time to time of a few good isolated pictures. If a real industry is to be built up, and the requisite finance assured, the producing companies must be in a position to maintain a regular output."

Securities of Loew's London on Toronto Stock Exchange

The securities of Loew's London Theatre, Limited, London, Ontario, are now on the regular trading list of the Toronto Stock Exchange, this being the fourth Canadian theatrical company to have its shares placed on the board. The other companies comprise Famous Players Canadian Corp., Eastern Theatres, Limited, and Marcus Loew's Toronto Theatres, Limited. Listing of the securities has done much to stabilize the market for the various issues as, previously, they were traded in over-the-counter and, at times, this trading was difficult.

"Merry Maniacs" Rodemich Grand Central Offering

Dancing of the "Black Bottom" by Coster and Rich was the feature of the presentation offered by Gene Rodemich and his "Merry Maniacs" at the Grand Central, St. Louis, last week. Gene also offered Raines and Cady, songsters who scored the previous week with Grand Central patrons, as a hold-over feature. The screen attraction for the week was "The Splendid Road."

Examiner's Report On Famous Given

Evidence Concerning Block Booking and Theatre Ownership Now Part of Accepted Record in Trade Commission Case

WITH the case more than five years old, the Federal Trade Commission's proceedings against Famous Players-Lasky Corp., et al., have entered upon a new stage with the submission of the trial examiner's report upon the facts, covering supplemental evidence introduced covering block booking and theatre ownership by other companies.

It will be recalled that all during the original hearing the first trial examiner rigidly excluded all evidence relating to any company other than Famous Players, and that the Famous defense was built around the contention that the company was not receiving a fair hearing, in that block booking and distributor ownership of theatres were contended to be common practice in the industry, which point could not be established without the introduction of suitable evidence and testimony regarding other firms.

In January of this year the commission ruled that this evidence might be introduced in the form of a stipulation and certain testimony, and this was done. The present "report upon the facts" is based upon this. The next step is the filing of a brief by the government, which will be answered in turn by attorneys for Famous Players, when the case will presumably be ready for final action by the commission.

Some of the outstanding points in the report upon the facts by William C. Reeves, second trial examiner in the case, are as follows:

"On January 1, 1926, there were 20,115 motion picture theatres in the United States. (Resp. Ex. 334) and on said date there were 222 cities in the United States having a population of 25,000 or over, and 62 cities having a population of 100,000 or over. On said date there were 1,341 first-run motion picture theatres in said cities having a population of 25,000 or over and in cities having a population of 100,000 or over, 604 such theatres. (Resp. Ex. 335, 336). . . . The respondent on June 30, 1926, had interests in 167 first-run motion picture theatres in 71 of said 222 cities having a population of 25,000 or over, and 75 such theatres in 25 of said 62 cities having a population of 100,000 or over, and it

Anti-Bicycling Drive in St. Louis Territory

WITH two Southern Illinois exhibitors assessed "fines" of $250 each and in addition directed to pay twice the rental price of all films involved, the St. Louis Film Board of Trade in co-operation with the Hays organization has opened a new drive against bicycling in this territory.

Several other exhibitors who have been accused of the same offense will have hearings before the arbitration board appointed to pass on such cases. Two cases are scheduled to come to trial the coming week.

had no interests in theatres in 151 cities of the United States having a population of 25,000 or over nor in 37 cities having a population of 100,000 or over. (Resp. Ex. 324, 325, Com. Ex. 385, 389.)

Famous Has 368 Houses

"The respondent on September 1, 1924, had interests in 181 theatres in the United States, in 159 of which feature pictures were shown. Between September 1, 1924, and June 30, 1926, respondent acquired interests in 200 additional theatres, and feature pictures were shown in 185 of such theatres. Between said dates respondent disposed of its interests in 13 theatres, in 12 of which feature pictures were shown. On June 30, 1926, respondent had interests in 368 theatres in the United States, in 332 of which feature pictures were shown. The interests of respondent in said 368 theatres on said date were: In 128, 100%; in 13, more than 50%, but less than 100%; in 128, exactly 50%; in 99, less than 50%. (Com. Ex. 385, 387, 388, 389; Resp. Ex. 321, 324, 325.) Interests in 69 of said theatres were acquired by a contract dated May 20, 1926, with the representatives of the holders of the voting trust certificates of the common stock of the Balaban & Katz Corporation. . . . This contract provides that respondent shall purchase on October 15, 1926, a minimum of 51% and not to exceed 66 2/3% of the outstanding capital stock of said Balaban & Katz Corporation, which owned interests in said 69 theatres, 42 of which are located in Chicago and 27 in other cities of Illinois. (Com. Ex. 389). . . .

"A number of large producers and distributors of motion pictures in competition with respondent have interests in theatres in which motion pictures produced and/or distributed by them are exhibited; among such competitors are: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer-Cosmopolitan, with 161 theatres, 64 of which are first-run theatres in key cities; the Universal Company with 265 theatres, 28 of which are first-run theatres in key cities; the Keith-Orpheum North American Producers Distributing Corporation and affiliations with 290 theatres, 56 of which are first-run theatres in key cities; the Fox Film Corporation with 93 theatres, 17 of which are first-run theatres in key cities; important First National Stockholders and Affiliations with 746 theatres, 114 of which are first-run theatres in key cities. Of the theatres operated by said First National Stockholders and Affiliations, the Fox Film Corporation owns a 50% interest in 78 of them. These are in addition to the 93 theatres noted above as being operated by said Fox Film Corporation, and 5 of these 78 theatres are first-run theatres in key cities. (Resp. Ex. 337.)"

The following paragraph deals with the 14 theatres formerly operated by Warner Bros., most of which were sold in connection with the purchase of Vitagraph, and also outlines the plans of United Artists for 20 long run houses. The next succeeding paragraph outlines the First National franchise plan.

Paragraph 6 describes the Balaban & Katz plan of theatre operation in detail, and covers the formation and aims of Publix. Paragraph 7 covers changes in the Broadway theatre situation, including the Paramount, the Roxy, the Colony, the Warner and the Embassy. In this paragraph it is stated:

"The demand for good motion pictures exceeds the supply, and upon the completion of the two Broadway houses now under construction, it will be still more difficult for the theatres to get pictures and producers have been reissuing old pictures to supply the demand of pictures by Broadway theatres. . . ."

Block Booking

Paragraphs 8 to 12, inclusive, describe the various selling methods in vogue since the beginning of the industry, including the

Philly Board Elects New Slate of Officers

PRACTICALLY an entire new slate of officers in the Philadelphia Film Board of Trade is the result of the recent upheaval, said to be due to a feeling on the part of members of the organization that the duties of the offices could not be best discharged by men who held large exhibitor interests, such as Mr. Neufeld, who in addition to being an independent exchangeman, is president of the East Coast Theatres Company, while Ben Amsterdam, who held the office of treasurer for many years, was head of the Franklin Theatre Co., operating a chain of nine theatres in Reading and vicinity. In the recent election, which followed close upon the annual election, William J. Heenan, of First National, was elected president over Oscar Neufeld, of De Luxe, who has held the office for five consecutive years, by a vote of 12 to 3. Percy A. Bloch of Paramount, was elected vice-president by a count of 9 to 6 over Jerome Safran, of F. B. O., while Bob Lynch, of Metro, was elected treasurer by a 9 to 6 vote over Miles Gibbons, of Pathe.

A. M. P. A. Announces Most Helpful Women

THE vote of more than 100 members of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers on the twelve women who have done the most for the motion picture industry was announced at the association's meeting at the Hofbrau Haus last Thursday as follows:—Mary Pickford, Norma Talmadge, June Mathis, Gloria Swanson, Anita Loos, Frances Marion, Colleen Moore, Constance Talmadge, Beulah Livingston, Jeanie McPherson, Lillian Gish, Corinne Griffith.

The association plans to invite each of these twelve to be a guest of honor at tribute luncheons during the coming year.

program system, lock booking, star series and finally block booking, adopted in 1920 or 1921, which is maintained to be the practice of all companies except United Artists. The report then goes on to say:

"The respondent and other producers of moving pictures always attempt to induce exhibitors to purchase an entire group or block of pictures sufficient for their requirements over a considerable period, usually an entire season or a year. (R. 17401) and frequently advise the exhibitors that unless they buy the entire block offered that they cannot have any of them (R. 17395, 17406, 17419), but when these means fail to induce the exhibitors to buy the entire block, the producers frequently permit the exhibitors to purchase selections from the block without taking the entire block (R. 17396, 17420). The degree of salesmanship exercised and the amount of sales effort exerted by the different producers in their negotiations with exhibitors to bring about a sale of the largest percentage of the block offered, vary without limit; (R. 17419) with some of the distributors prices are quoted only for the block, and blocks will not be broken or strong resistance will be made to their being broken, but no fixed policy in this regard has been followed (R. 17395, 17406) and the policy of requiring exhibitors to buy 'all or none' of a group of pictures offered by a distributor, if rigidly adhered to, would be unprofitable to the distributor (R. 17397).

"In 1924 there were released in the United States by all producers and distributors, 580 feature motion pictures, 59 of which were released by respondent; in 1925, 606 such features were released by all producers and distributors, 75 of which were released by respondent (Res. Ex. 332, 333). In 1925 the rentals from feature pictures received by all American producers and distributors from both domestic and foreign exhibitors aggregated $185,000,000, $35,525,000 of which amount was received by respondent. The rentals received in this same year by all such producers and distributors from domestic exhibitors only, aggregated $142,000,000 of which amount the respondent received $27,350,000 (Res. Ex. 339)."

Paragraph 15 advances the respondent's contention that block booking is the only possible economical plan of selling, assuring the exhibitor of suitable product and making economical operation possible for the producer and distributor. Paragraph 16 outlines testimony given by executives of other companies on the subject of block booking.

Statistical data in Paragraph 17 makes it appear that in 7,500 theatres, located in the New York City, Boston, Cleveland, Chicago, St. Louis, Dallas, Charlotte, Atlanta, Denver, San Francisco and Los Angeles exchange territories, Famous Players consumed the following percentages of the total available exhibition time: in 1920-21, 14.9% of the total; in 1921-22, 13.4%, and in 1922-23, 16%.

Bankers Get Facts From Mayer

M-G-M Production Head Stresses Industry's Highlights at Meet

LOUIS B. MAYER, vice-president in charge of production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, delivered a speech in behalf of the film industry to an audience representing financial leaders of the world who are in convention at present in Los Angeles. In his talk Mr. Mayer stressed the increasing valuation of motion picture securities, the recent correlation of producing, distributing, and exhibiting branches of the business, and the outlook for an international market.

Mr. Mayer first pointed out the fact that pictures, unlike the majority of other commodities, appeal to everyone, thus creating an unusual market. He next drove home the knowledge that there can be no monopolization in this industry explaining the impossibility of cornering the world's supply of brains and talent. Though people may stop buying clothes during times of financial stress the theatres are the last to feel the effects of the stringent economy practised during strikes, etc., said Mr. Mayer, in stating that moving pictures are a good investment; he declared that at the present time 11 million shares of motion picture stock are held by the public.

Mr. Mayer then gave a brief resumé of the business since its inception starting with the store picture show with its piano supplying musical accompaniment and then pointed to the Capitol Theatre, New York City, with its 80-piece orchestra. He dwelt for a while on the early difficulties of the producer trying to get a loan from his banker who knew not the meaning of the word "negative" and then mentioned "The Big Parade" as an example of one "negative" which any banker to-day would have been glad to finance.

Touching on the stability of the industry to-day, the M-G-M production head mentioned the haphazard methods of making pictures in the old days when filming could be carried on only during part of the year with resultant unemployment for many people during the bad weather sea-

Fraser Denies Change in Selling Personnel

ARRIVING in New York for conferences with Paramount executives, William R. Fraser, general manager of the Harold Lloyd corporation, emphatically denied rumors to the effect that the Lloyd organization contemplated changes in its present sales and production activities. Mr. Fraser declared that "there is no foundation for such stories. Our relations with Paramount are even stronger and pleasanter than ever before."

son; and then brought out that now pictures are produced the year round thus giving steady work to over an hundred thousand people.

Mr. Mayer also spoke of the Summer bug-bear when theatres languished for lack of patronage during the hot spell and when only the poorest of the season's output was exhibited. Now, thanks to Greater Movie Season, said Mr. Mayer, some of the year's finest pictures are shown and box-office receipts are healthy throughout the summer.

The next topic was the labor conditions in the studios and it was explained that the best expert on industrial welfare is to be secured to take care of living conditions and the education of child actors. The systems of fire prevention in studios, film exchanges and theatres, which Mayer declared have the approval of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, were also touched on. He praised the city government of Los Angeles for its co-operation.

The latter part of Mr. Mayer's talk was devoted to an analysis of the foreign market. He spoke of the increasing volume of business done in the Old World markets stating that the industry's revenue from overseas has increased from ten per cent to twenty-five to forty per cent during the past few years.

Bandy New First National Foreign Sales Manager

H. A. Bandy, former European manager for First National, has been named foreign general sales manager by E. Bruce Johnson, manager of First National's foreign department. Joseph Skirboll, until recently western district manager, has been named to succeed Mr. Bandy as European manager.

Louis Brock, former foreign general sales manager, is now head of the Metro-First National Exchange in Rio De Janeiro.

Bebe Daniels Signs New Paramount Contract

THROUGH the terms of a new contract signed this week by Bebe Daniels with B. P. Schulberg in behalf of Paramount the star comedienne will remain with that company until 1931. An existing contract with two years to run was torn up when the new compact was entered into.

Great Celebration in Laemmle's Honor

Most Unusual Reception Accorded Home-coming of Universal Chief; Hays, Fox, Murdock, Hammons Make Welcome Speeches

LED by Will H. Hays, a welcoming committee of two hundred people comprising leading executives of the motion picture industry and the financial world and including representatives of the Universal home office greeted Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, on his arrival in New York City from Europe, on Friday of last week.

Flower bedecked boats, busses and private conveyances lined the streets leading to the dock at which the Berengaria, the ship which bore Mr. Laemmle and his party from overseas, anchored. This most enthusiastic reception was tendered the film magnate in recognition of the game fight which he made for life when stricken with appendicitis on board ship while making his annual tour last June to his hometown in Germany, and the Universal Continental exchanges. The celebration, arranged by Paul Gulick, director of publicity, and Joe Weil, director of exploitation for Universal, rivalled any event of this nature ever staged by the Universal forces.

At dawn of Friday morning, the welcoming party boarded the Riverside, Mayor James J. Walker's official boat, and steamed down New York Bay to meet the Berengaria, which was sighted at Quarantine. When the Universal chief was spotted at the rail of the liner a shout of welcome echoed from many throats, bands played and whistles were tooted. The Riverside then escorted the Cunard ship up the North River to the Battery, where the Mayor's boat discharged the home-coming committee.

The entire party then boarded the waiting cars and, headed by Mr. Laemmle's limousine, the party proceeded up Broadway to the Universal headquarters. At the Fifth Avenue offices a bevy of Universal beauties, their arms full of flowers, welcomed the film pioneer with kisses and shouts of welcome. Ascending to the offices, which too were decorated with flowers and confetti, the assemblage listened to the welcome-home speeches of Mr. Hays, Earl Hammons, J. J. Murdock and William Fox. Following the addresses of welcome the party made merry for the balance of the afternoon.

The members of the official welcoming committee on hand to assure Laemmle that his home-coming meant more than mere words to the motion picture industry were Will H. Hays, Hugo Riesenfeld, Col. G. McL. Baynes, of Kinograms; Henry M. Hobart, of Distinctive; William Fox, Earl V. Hammons, Elmer Pearson, J. J. Murdock, R. F. Woodhull, J. A. Jacobs, of Bray; Arthur James, Epes W. Sargent, John Spargo, William A. Johnston, Maurice Kann, Fred J. McConnell, James Milligan, Miss Louella Parsons, Jules Brulatour, Ex-Gov. Milliken, Cortland Smith, Vernon Garrick, Jack Cosman, Siegfried Hartman, Dr. Jesse Heiman, Paul Shields, of Shields & Co.; Karl Behr, of Dillon, Read & Co.; Dean Mathey, of the same organization; Al Mayer, of Photo Repro; I. N. Landauer, and Miss Marian Nixon, Universal star. Miss Nixon conveyed to Mr. Laemmle the welcome sentiments of the studio force, the stars and players at Universal City, and those of his many other well-wishers on the West Coast.

Mr. Laemmle's party returning from Europe included his children, Miss Rosabelle and Carl Laemmle, Jr.; Mr. and Mrs. Abe Stern and Julius Stern, of the Stern Film Corporation, and Jack Ross, his private secretary, and several servants. E. H. Goldstein, treasurer of Universal, joined the Universal chief on the boat at Quarantine as the first bearer of welcome.

Universal Common Stock Earnings for 1926 About $8 a Share, Predicts Wall St. News

IN view of the increased earnings shown by Universal in its balance sheet for the third quarter ended August seventh, the Wall Street News anticipates that the company's earnings on its 250,000 shares of common stock for the fiscal year will be about eight dollars a share. The fiscal year ends November six.

According to this authority the anticipated earnings will establish a new high record and is comparable with $6.18 a common share reported for the year ending November 7, 1925, and with $5.62 a share in the twelve months ended November 8, 1924.

"Universal Pictures' foreign business is one of the largest of any of the corporations engaged in the industry," says the Wall Street News. "This branch contributes about 35 per cent of the total gross and has shown considerable expansion in recent years. A substantial gain in volume has been experienced in this field this year over 1925.

"On May 8, 1926, the date of the latest available balance sheet, Universal Pictures was in strong financial position. It had total current assets of $9,615,204, with total current liabilities $2,198,273, leaving net working capital of $7,416,931. Cash amounted to $977,412.

"Outstanding capitalization consists of $2,768,600 (par value $100) 8 per cent preferred; $2,000,000 7 per cent second preferred (par $100), and 250,000 no par value common shares."

Colonel Joy Addresses Clubs

Summarizes Industry's Growth and Forecasts New Uses of Pictures

IN two addresses delivered this week, one to the South Dakota Federation of Women's Clubs, at Yankton, S.D., the other to the Rotary Club of Billings, Mont., Colonel Jason S. Joy, director of the Department of Public Relations for the M. P. P. D. A., told of the importance of motion pictures in molding the character of the country's future citizens; also of the important place women are taking in all branches of the industry.

In his talk at Yankton, Colonel Joy spoke of the Central Casting Bureau which has been established in Hollywood under the auspices of practically all producing companies. He pointed out that this new idea will do away with questionable schools of acting and will also save "extras" hundreds of thousands of dollars annually which formerly went to employment agencies.

Tracing the development of the industry, Colonel Joy declared that the time would come when films would be found in every classroom as a supplement to the oral instruction of the teacher and mentioned that the Eastman Kodak Company had already started production of films closely correlated with geography, health and hygiene, civics, fine and practical arts and general science.

Addressing the Rotary Club at Billings, Colonel Joy dwelt on the international peace which should come about through the medium of the screen, which, he said, will make it possible for all the world to be neighbors and to know each other. In this connection, Colonel Joy pointed out that while the great majority of pictures shown throughout the world are American-made, in reality all nations help make the pictures. "A great number of those in key creative positions are direct from achievement in other countries," he declared.

Chicago Man Wins Arbitration

Association and Abe Gumbiner Victors in Compulsory Orchestra Dispute

THE Exhibitors Association of Chicago and Abe Gumbiner won a clean-cut victory in the arbitration between the Bryn Mawr Theatre and the Chicago Federation of Musicians, covering the question as to whether or not this theatre should be compelled to continue the employment of an orchestra.

At the request of the owners of the Bryn Mawr Theatre the meeting was called on October 4th, at which the income account of the theatre for the eight months period ending August 29, 1926, was presented to the Board of Arbitration, presided over by Chairman Dr. Karl A. Meyer, who submitted the following ruling:

"After carefully weighing and studying the testimony submitted by both sides, the arbitrator feels that immediate relief should be accorded the owners of the Bryn Mawr Theatre. The usual two weeks' notice should be given to the Chicago Federation of Musicians terminating the contract that has been entered into by the aforesaid parties."

The Exhibitors Association of Chicago, headed by Jack Miller, has been able to force the question of theatres retaining orchestras, as a result of the recent settlement of the musicians' strike, which was regarded as favorable to the exhibitors. Previous to this time the musicians union had been forcing all houses employing orchestras to keep them, whether or not business justified it, but at the time the strike was settled, the union agreed to live up to the terms of the contract of September 4, 1925, and submit these matters to arbitration.

J. P. Kennedy at F. B. O. Studios

To Confer With Edwin C. King on Production; Praises Coast Force's Work

JOSEPH P. KENNEDY, president of Film Booking Offices, arrived at the Hollywood studios of the company this week to have a series of conferences with Edwin C. King, vice-president in charge of production, and also with F. B. O. directors and leading players.

The reason for his visit at this time is partly to express his gratification for the work accomplished by the studio forces in producing this season's program and also to lay plans for the future.

Mr. Kennedy, realizing the importance of good stories, states that he will have the best material for picturization in coming productions. John Brownell, scenario editor, is now on his way to Hollywood, and will take an important part in the conferences.

New England Firms Granted Incorporation Charters

Park Theatre Co. of Waterbury has been incorporated at Boston, Mass., with its principal place of business outside Boston being at Waterbury, Conn. It is capitalized at $50,000. Incorporators are B. A. Curzon, Boston, president; Benjamin Rosenthal, East Boston, treasurer and M. K. O'Connor, Somerville, Mass., clerk.

Rosen's Film Delivery System has been incorporated at New Haven with capital at $10,000. Abraham Rosen and others of New London, Conn., are incorporators.

Arrange Details for Ohio Theatre Owners Meet

AT a meeting of the board of trustees of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio, held October 5th at the Neil House, Columbus, O., W. M. James president and P. J. Wood business manager, of Columbus, and Sam E. Lind treasurer, of Zanesville, were appointed a committee to arrange all details in connection with the sixth annual convention of the organization which will be held in Columbus, November 9th and 10th. To insure a maximum attendance, President James appointed the following as a committee at large: J. J. Harwood, Cleveland; J. A. Ackerman, Cincinnati; John L. Damm, Akron; C. W. Miller, Youngstown; F. A. Kelly, Massillon; P. J. Zehnder, Dayton; John A. Schwalm, Hamilton; Gus Sun, Springfield; Martin G. Smith, Toledo; Fred Tynes, Portsmouth; L. F. Eick, Martins Ferry; J. A. Tallman, East Liverpool; Arthur Himmelein, Sandusky; Robert Harmon, Columbus.

After hearing a report from Dr. H. H. McClellan, superintendent of the Dayton State Hospital, in connection with the aims and purposes of the Ohio Association for the Welfare of the Mentally Sick, the board agreed unanimously to urge all members of the organization to show slides and films to aid the program of the association.

M.P.T.O. Urges Exhib. Cooperation with Educators

To promote the cause of education generally and give timely aid to the efforts of the National Education Association and the Americanism Commission of the American Legion along that line, the national office of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America urges all theatre owners to give screen co-operation and such other elements of assistance as may be available to make American Education Week (November 7th to 13th) a success.

Both of these organizations have effected special arrangements with the Departments of Education in the different states and as far as practicable with the heads of the Educational Divisions in different cities and towns. The special purpose is to impress as much as possible on the people generally the value and necessity of education, so that the standard of citizenship and civic and economic usefulness will be elevated and the character of the same strengthened.

Band Replaces Vaudeville at Karzas Theatre

Andrew Karzas has inaugurated a new entertainment policy at the North Center Theatre, Chicago. Armin Hand has returned to this house with his fifteen-piece band and will present overture acts which will replace vaudeville as a supplement to the theatre's picture program.

Screen Advertisers to Meet in Kansas City

The annual convention of the National Association of Motion Picture Screen Advertisers, to be held in Kansas City, October 14, 15 and 16, is attracting more than ordinary interest in Kansas City film circles.

Pathe Control Bought by Blair & Co.

Affiliation With Another Film Concern Said to be in Prospect—No Changes in Personnel

IT was learned this week that control of Pathe has been purchased by Blair & Co., Wall Street banking firm, and it appears that this deal will be followed by a second, which will affiliate Pathe with another large producing and distributing organization.

Persistent but unconfirmed reports name P.D.C. as the other concern in the deal, but it would not be surprising if a company, as yet unnamed, would turn out to be the real choice.

The controlling interest in Pathe was bought by Blair & Co. from Merrill, Lynch & Co., and embraced all the Class B stock, which elects six directors of the company. The banking firm of Blair has issued notice to Pathe home office employees that there will be no changes in the Pathe personnel.

Not previously active in the picture business, Blair & Co. are understood to be an important unit in a financial group, with great resources and said to be allied with J. P. Morgan & Co.

The reports concerning the reported deal between Pathe and P.D.C. are interesting, it was pointed out by observers this week, in view of the fact that Keith-Albee owns fifty per cent. of P.D.C. and also holds a block of Class A stock in Pathe.

It was further reported that, if the Pathe-P.D.C. deal went through, it would result in the reorganization of the financial structure of these companies under a new unit to be capitalized at $100,000,000.

There was no indication whatever that the merger would result in disbanding the personnel of either organization. It was also persistently reported that Elmer R. Pearson, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, would become president of the combined companies, with J. J. Murdock, of Keith-Albee, as chairman of the Board of Directors.

If the deal materializes, the theatre situation would, no doubt, come in for a big share of attention. The plan would be, so it is understood, to annex picture houses on a large scale, probably through North American Theatres, Inc., which would not be directly included in the pool, but to which funds would be advanced for expansion purposes. In addition, report has it that $10,000,000 would be provided for expansion in production and in theatre acquisitions.

Pathe's net income for the year ended December 26, 1925, was $1,431,757, after interest, depreciation and taxes. After deducting preferred dividends, the balance was equivalent to $7.67 per share on the 177,561 shares combined Class A and Class B common outstanding Dec. 26, 1925.

In 1924, net earnings were reported as $1,312,609 and a balance of $7 a share computed on the same amount of common.

Gross business done in 1925 was $18,151,827 against $16,459,385 the previous year.

In his report to stockholders last April, Paul Fuller, Jr., president, said in part:

"The current assets are shown at over $6,500,000 as against current liabilities of less than $1,000,000. The company has enough cash on hand to pay all the current liabilities and does not owe any money to banks.

"Gross business has grown steadily from $4,200,000 in 1916 to over $18,000,000 in 1925.

"Company has paid the regular quarterly two per cent dividend upon its preferred stock, and your board of directors at their last meeting declared a quarterly cash dividend on the present Class 'A' and 'B' common stock of 75 cents a share; also a stock dividend of five per cent in Class 'A' stock, both payable May 1, 1926, to holders of record April 20."

A comparison of the gross for the past three years follows:

1923 .....	$14,851,372.62
1924 .....	16,459,385.63
1925 .....	18,151,827.12

A comparison of net earnings, after interest, depreciation and taxes, follow:

1923 .....	$1,161,888.65
1924 .....	1,312,609.54
1925 .....	1,431,757.93

United Artists Plan Milwaukee House

Theatre to Seat 4,000; Universal Considering Construction of Playhouse at Marquette and Escanaba, Mich.; Buys Two More

CURRENT news of the week as regards theatre construction and acquisition has it that United Artists plans the erection of a 4,000-seat house at Sixth and Grand Avenue, Milwaukee, as a link in its proposed chain of presentation houses. Other information concerns the plans of Universal to invade the Northern section of Michigan.

This new U. A. house marks the entrance of the fourth factor in the city's first-run field, the other three being Saxe Enterprises, which has the Wisconsin, Strand, Merrill, Alhambra and Rialto downtown; Universal, operating the Alhambra and the Uihlein interests operating the Garden. Both Saxe and Universal also are powers in the suburban field.

Fox, it is reported, also is planning to build a Milwaukee first-run house.

Milwaukee Theatre Circuit, Inc., is the new name under which the Universal chain in Milwaukee will operate. Universal recently purchased the Silliman Theatre Circuit.

The new program of the Milwaukee Theatre Circuit, Inc., includes a number of new houses, negotiations for which are now well under way, according to N. J. Blumberg, general manager. Two new houses in the peninsula are planned, one at Marquette to seat 2,000, and one at Escanaba, with a capacity of 1,800.

Kenosha and Racine are to have new Universal houses, each with a capacity of 2,000 to 2,500. Beaver Dam and Watertown are also to be sites of Universal theatres. The program policy calls for vaudeville acts as well as screen presentations. The entire extension program calls for forty houses in the State.

The new Venetian Theatre in Milwaukee now under construction, is one of the largest on the northwest side, and will be opened about April 1st. Five additional houses will be erected soon on the outskirts.

Universal has completed negotiations for the purchase of the Virginian and Rialto both in Charleston, W. Va., from D. C. Schiarella. Both houses seat around 1,000.

Reports from Seattle said to have emanated from authoritative sources last week have it that Harry C. Arthur, general manager of the new Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc., has bought a half interest in the three suburban houses operated in this city by John Hamrick. This includes the Egyptian, the Uptown and the Montlake, the latter being in the course of construction, but has no effect upon the three Blue Mouse Theatres operated in Seattle, Tacoma and Portland by Mr. Hamrick. Official announcement of the deal has not yet been made by either of the interested parties. The Egyptian was the house opened by Warner Brothers last season, and bought by Mr. Hamrick a few months ago.

Glendale, Ariz., is to have one of the most modern motion picture theatres in the state, according to a recent announcement made by David L. Fink, Phoenix realtor and representative of West Coast Theatres of Arizona.

Present plans, it is said, call for an Egyptian type of theatre with an auditorium seating 1,000, including the loge. Construction is expected to be under way before the first of the year.

It is further reported that West Coast Theatres have a considerable leasing and building program under way in Arizona, including Prescott and Flagstaff in the northern part, and Tucson, Yuma and Nogales in the south.

Princess, Montreal, Reverts to Original Owners

A reorganization of the Princess Theatre, Montreal, has been announced, whereby the control of the theatre has again been acquired by the original owners, including D. W. Ogilvie and W. C. Finley, the company being known as the Canadian Theatres, Limited. New financing has been arranged in the form of a first mortgage bond issue. The appraised value of the Princess Theatre property is $811,000.

New Fox Academy of Music, New York City, Opened; Seating Capacity 3,873

ON Monday evening of this week the new Fox Academy of Music, located on Fourteenth Street, New York City, had an auspicious opening with a number of well-known film people present. Erno Rappe was guest conductor of the orchestra; the picture shown was "The Family Upstairs," with an elaborate surrounding program.

The attendance included John C. Eisele, Joseph Plunkett, A. C. Blumenthal, Thomas W. Lamb, Jules E. Mastbaum, John McKeon, Joseph Pincus, E. H. Goldstein, Allan Dwan and Harry Sofferman.

The house, located directly across from the old Academy of Music, is of the French Renaissance type of architecture and cost approximately $1,200,000. It has a seating capacity of 3,873, of which 1,704 are orchestra seats and 450 are in the smoking mezzanine. The house has a 350-ton refrigerating plant. The entrance lobby is in marble and decorated with tapestries.

Elevation of the stage is possible, in three sections and the orchestra pit and conductor's stand may also be raised and lowered. The stage is 40 feet in depth. Thomas W. Lamb designed the house.

Industry Celebrates Navy Day

"Don't Give up the Ship" is Title of One-reel Film Offered Exhibitors Free Through Co-operative Drive

UNDER the leadership of the Hays organization, the motion picture industry is actively co-operating with the U. S. Navy to advance the cause of "Navy Day," to be celebrated the 27th of this month. Active participation in this significant event in the affairs of the nation will be afforded theatres throughout the country through the agency of a single reel film entitled "Don't Give Up the Ship," available to exhibitors everywhere without charge. Prominent producers and distributors have made this co-operation possible through donations of materials and services necessary to the production and distribution of 200 prints of the reel devoted to the work and accomplishments of the Navy, in war and in peace.

"Don't Give Up the Ship" renders a stirring pictorial account of the most heroic chapters written of the Navy's ships and men during the late war, while its peacetime activities in advancing the interests of the United States in commerce and industry are set forth in a series of pictures of exceptional topical and pictorial value. Indeed, were the Navy called upon to give an account of its stewardship in safeguarding and promoting the interests of the United States on the seas and in foreign lands, no more entertaining and convincing answer than this interesting reel could be made to so large an audience in so brief a space of time. It is, as well, the answer to the question, "Why a Navy and a Merchant Marine?"

As a work of pure entertainment, "Don't Give Up the Ship" rates high in the class of single-reel offerings. Its appeal—in the United States—should be as broad as that land itself. The rapid change of scene which characterizes the news reel, the pictorial quality of the views it affords the spectator and the importance of the subject treated, combine to give "Don't Give Up the Ship" the qualities of entertainment and interest which assures it of a hearty reception from the picturegoers of this country.

Briefly the reel visualizes on the screen the important part played by the Navy and the Merchant Marine in time of peace.

Scenes of wheat harvesting and of the cotton fields, with facts and figures covering the necessity of finding foreign markets for the surplus produce of these agricultural pursuits, forcibly indicate the necessity of maintaining a modern and efficient Navy and Merchant Marine. We are reminded that the shipment of United States goods and materials to foreign markets last year totaled $9,000,000,000, and that of this amount two-thirds of the shipping was carried on foreign bottoms. The guarding of American interests abroad, particularly in countries where unsettled political conditions threaten them; the relief work—as in the case of the Japanese earthquake and the burning of Smyrna—the promotion of good will and friendships in foreign countries, all these are graphically portrayed in the pictures which compose the reel, "Don't Give Up the Ship," which is dedicated, according to a foreword, "to the continued peace and prosperity of the United States."

The Navy's celebration in ports throughout the United States will be tied up directly with showings of the picture. A poster and newspaper campaign of national scope will also feature the event and carry it to the homes of people throughout the country. In addition to the reel, which is being handled by one exchange in each key city, the organization co-operating with the Navy has arranged for the Film Boards in these cities to work in consonance with the exchanges and the theatres. A one-sheet advertising the reel will be issued free of charge, as will the picture itself, to exhibitors.

Colorado Exhib's Husband G. O. P. Senate Candidate

Frank Kelly has again been designated by the Republican party of the Salida district of Colorado to run as candidate for the Colorado State Senate. He has served several terms as one of the state's lawmakers, and is recognized as one of the leaders of the senate. His wife manages the Empress Theatre of Salida, Colo.

North Carolina M.P.T.O. Making Progress

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North Carolina have made rapid progress since their midsummer convention held in Wrightsville Beach last June. At that time the state of North Carolina was divided into nine zones with a manager and his assistant for each zone. The managers were held responsible for the collection of dues for the zones, the dues being levied according to the population of towns instead of the seating capacity as heretofore. A special drive is on to increase the membership of the organization, with the result that more than sixty new members have been added to the organization within the past ninety days. Charles W. Picquet, president, and N. L. Royster, secretary and treasurer, have been working zealously with the individual zone managers to inculcate more interest in the organization than in previous years. The exhibitors of the state are united in the coming fight against the proposed 10% tax law.

The zone managers and officers of the North Carolina M. P. T. O. held a meeting last Thursday, September 30th, in Greensburg. Among the matters brought before the board was the formation of the organization's first constitution and by-law which is being placed in proper form for presentation at the next annual meeting which will be held in Charlotte on December 13th. More than 100 exhibitors have pledged themselves to attend this meeting.

New Companies Incorporate in New York State

Newly incorporated motion picture companies chartered by the Secretary of State and engaging in the business in New York State during the past week, included the following: Amusement Supply Co., Inc., $20,000; Harry E. Pear, Joseph J. Pear, Brooklyn; Irving H. Moskowitz, New York City. Little Fortunes, Inc., Mount Vernon, $10,000; Charles Fox Rich, Mount Vernon; Fred M. Feiker, George W. Hallett, New York City. Al Rogers, Inc., $2,000; Herman Liebman, Brooklyn; Roselle and Al Rogers, New York City. Schuyler Productions, Inc., $10,000; Jonas H. Platt, Philadelphia, Pa.; Schuyler E. Grey, F. Walter Streng, New York City.

Turf and Field Film, Inc., $50,000; Edwin F. and Mae Morgan, Bronx; Anna T. Trainer, New York City; Hobert Productions, Inc., $5,000; Benjamin Herdes, Gladys Rosenberg, Rose Orkin, New York City. Girard, West Seneca; Alfred R. Sherry, John Muldoon, Buffalo. Rotonde Amusement Corporation, Batavia, capitalization not specified; Nikitas D. Dipson, John R. Osborne, Edward A. Washburn, Batavia. Lakeland Place Theatre Corp., $10,000; Minna Witkoff, Sarah Blank, Brooklyn; William Friedman, Bronx.

Title of "Men of the Dawn" Changed to "Silent Lover"

The title of "The Silent Lover" has definitely supplanted "Men of the Dawn," the First National adaptation of "Lajos Biro's" "The Legionaire." "The Silent Lover" is a Carey Wilson production starring Milton Sills. George Archainbaud directed and Viola Dana appears opposite Sills. Shooting has been completed and the picture is set for release late in November.

There will be no change of title on the Sam E. Rork production, "The Blonde Saint." The producer brought the first print of the production with him to New York and the title was made definite following conferences with the First National production and sales departments. Lewis Stone, Doris Kenyon and Ann Rork are among the featured players. It will be released early in January.

"King of the Pack" to Be Released During October

Prints of "King of the Pack," the third Lumas release of the season, were shipped to all distribution points last week, together with advertising accessories ready for release during October. This production stars Peter the Great, the dog star which was unfortunately killed in an accidental shooting some months ago. The release date was held back to avoid conflict with "The Sign of the Claw," a previous release also starring the dog actor. In the cast are Vera Lewis, Charlotte Stevens, Robert Gordon, Mary Cornwallis, W. H. Davis and Frank Norcross. Frank Richardson conducted from an original by James Bell Smith.

Later in the season Sam Sax will release "The Silent Avenger," the last of the Peter the Great vehicles.

Liberty Magazine Story to Be Produced by M-G-M

"War Birds," a story by Elliott White Springs and Merlin Taylor, based on an anonymous diary of an American aviator in France, and a current serial in Liberty, will be converted into film form by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Announcement of the purchase of the story was received this week. The story will be published as a novel by the George H. Doran Company. It will join the list of war films produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the others being "The Big Parade," "Tell It to the Marines," and "Tin Hats."

Famous Exercises Option On Betty Bronson

B. P. Schulberg, associate Paramount producer at the West Coast studio, made public this week the fact that his organization had exercised the first of four yearly options on the services of Betty Bronson under the terms of the five year contract entered into a year ago. Plans for her next vehicle have not been decided upon.

Borzage Signs Long Term Contract with Fox

Prior to his departure for Europe, where he will film exteriors for "Seventh Heaven," a Fox production, Frank Borzage, director of this picture, was placed under a new long-term contract. He will be supplied with the finest stories available, says Winfield R. Sheehan.

Fox Building Plans Enlarged

Total Expense of New Structures and Equipment Now Placed at $750,000

OWING to the addition of new buildings and equipment at the Fox West Coast Studios the original program of reconstruction, slated to cost $550,000, has now been increased by $200,000, making the contemplated expenditure $750,000.

The new stages, each 300 by 150 feet and a new wardrobe and costume building, 200 by 70 feet, are receiving finishing touches. The stages cost $50,000 each and the wardrobe $45,000.

There are yet to be constructed a wall along the Serrano Street frontage of the Hollywood studio, a garage in which thirty trucks can be repaired at one time, new buildings for the plastering, carpentering, tinsmithing and blacksmithing departments, additional dressing rooms for actors, and an armory on the east lot. On the west lot, a $50,000 structure to house four new projecting rooms, twenty-four cutting rooms and sixteen rooms for story readers is being completed. This structure is of steel and concrete. This will eliminate all film cutting operations in the laboratories. New equipment for the projecting rooms and others in this structure cost $10,000.

In spite of the enlarging of the Hollywood plant, so much work has been diverted to Fox Hills that $50,000 will be expended there to expedite film production, and a $25,000 contract has just been let for landscaping Fox Hills, in accordance with plans drawn by Mr. Jackson and William Darling, studio art director.

Stage seven, on the west lot in Hollywood, is being reconstructed to house the furniture department, to which $150,000 worth of equipment has just been added. The purchasing departments and store rooms will be housed adjacent to this building.

The two new stages give Fox Films a total of ten stages.

The outstanding features of equipment are a new system of remote control, overhead lights, and a new system of thermostatic heating and ventilation.

The three systems combined were devised by Calvin Hoffner, chief of Fox Films Electrical staff, and are intended to eliminate Kleig eyes, the disease which threatens every worker on a motion picture stage.

F. B. O. Lists Six for November

Schedule Includes Three Short Subjects; Viola Dana's First for Firm

FILM BOOKING OFFICES announces the release of six feature length vehicles and three short subjects for release during November. "Bred in Old Kentucky" is Viola Dana's first starring vehicle for F.B.O.; Miss Dana will make five more under her current contract.

Heading the list is the Gold Bond special, "Breed of the Sea," a marine melodrama made from the story by Peter B. Kyne. This features Ralph Ince, Margaret Livingston and Dorothy Dunbar. Ince not only directed the picture but played two parts in it—the characters of twin brothers, one a mild-mannered clergyman and the other a swaggering pirate.

"Tom and His Pals" brings back Tom Tyler with little Frankie Darro, the kid star, and his pony and funny-looking dog "Beans."

An entirely new angle of the West is shown in "The Dude Cowboy," Bob Custer's latest, it is claimed. Instead of a cattle ranch, a "dude ranch," where tourists are entertained, is the scene of this one.

"The Adorable Deceiver" is the first of the full-length comedies to be made by Alberta Vaughn, the F.B.O. comedienne.

Another new star who has come from the two-reel ranks, George O'Hara, makes his first appearance in a full-length comedy, "Going The Limit."

The three short subjects to be released by F.B.O. in November are "Bruisers and Losers," of the Bill Grimm's Progress series, "A Wild Roamer," one of the trick mechanical comedies acted and made by Charley Bowers, and "The Vulgar Yachtsmen," a Standard Comedy featuring the three fat men.

"Return of Peter Grimm" Released Oct. 31

"The Return of Peter Grimm," the second Belasco stage play picturized by Fox Films, will be released to exhibitors on October 31. Victor Schertzinger directed and Alee B. Francis appears in the name role.

Warners to Start Work on "Noah's Ark"

AFTER a month's absence in New York, where he conferred with Warner Bros. department heads over production and distribution plans still to be completed for the present season, Jack L. Warner, director general of production, is back again at the West Coast studio, where his main objective, he announced, would be the production of "Noah's Ark," the most ambitious production on the Warner Bros. program.

Mr. Warner asserted that "Noah's Ark" will be the greatest spectacle ever seen on the screen. The sets will be among the most gigantic ever constructed for a picture. You can appreciate the opportunity for spectacular and for great mob scenes.

The screen story of "Noah's Ark" is now being composed after months of research work. The European director, Michael Curtiz, will direct the spectacle. He is at present working on his first American assignment, "The Third Degree," featuring Dolores Costello.

Pathe's "Round-Up" Results

Contest in Honor of Sales Manager
Scott Terminates; Close Scores

Harry Scott, general sales manager of Pathe, in whose honor the Great Scott Billings Round-up was conducted

A BRANCH contest for new business inaugurated by Pathe exchanges in honor of Harry Scott, general sales manager, has just been closed with the winners in each district closely bunched at the top.

Pathe's thirty-four exchanges were divided into five Ranges, with the salesmen the cowboy range riders out to corral contracts. The Branch headquarters were decorated with the colorful trappings and in many instances during the drive the salesmen wore the equipment of the hard-riding, quick-shooting buckaroos.

Substantial monetary prizes were awarded in each winning range to the manager, booker, cashier and salesman.

In Range No. 1, composed of Chicago, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Boston, Pittsburgh and New York, Chicago won first place, with Philadelphia second. The branch manager of Chicago was J. S. Gillick, and M. F. Gibbons, Philadelphia manager.

In Range No. 2, composed of Atlanta, Detroit, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Dallas, New Jersey and Washington, Atlanta won first place and Detroit second. W. W. Anderson is the Atlanta branch manager, and O. W. Hanson, the Detroit branch manager.

In Range No. 3, composed of Milwaukee, Double "I," Buffalo, Kansas City, Indianapolis, Minneapolis and St. Louis, Milwaukee was in first position and Double "I" in second. The Milwaukee branch manager is R. V. Nolan, and H. D. Graham is in charge of Double "I."

In Range No. 4, composed of New Orleans, Seattle, New Haven, Charlotte, Oklahoma City, Albany and Des Moines, New Orleans, with branch manager H. L. Knappen, was in first position, and Seattle, with branch manager L. A. Samuelson was second.

In Range No. 5, composed of Butte, Denver, Memphis, Portland, Salt Lake City and Omaha, Butte, with branch manager W. M. Hughart, was first, and Denver, with branch manager S. B. Rahn, second.

M-G-M Starts Three More Films

Five Others in Final Stage of Preparation; Cameras Grinding on Six

IN order to get its fall program in full swing, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer this week started three feature pictures in work and five others are now in an advanced stage of preparation; six others are in actual production at the present time.

"Valencia," starring Mae Murray, under direction of Dmitri Buchowetzki, "The Great Galeoto," directed by John M. Stahl, with Ramon Novarro and Aliee Terry, and "The Mysterious Island," Harvey Gates' adaptation of Jules Verne's fantasy are the three productions on which camera work was started this week. "The Mysterious Island" is being filmed entirely in Technicolor. Benjamin Christianson, director, will probably take the company to the South Seas for exteriors. J. E. Williamson is directing the underwater sequences in the Bahamas.

The five pictures being prepared for camera work include "The Taxi Dancer," which will be directed by Harry Millarde; "The Day of Souls," with John Gilbert and Renee Adoree in the principal roles, under direction of Tod Browning; "The Wind," Lillian Gish's latest starring vehicle, which Clarence Brown will handle; "Exit Smiling," Sam Taylor's initial directorial effort for M-G-M, and "Friseo Sal," which Christy Cabanne is preparing to make.

Al Lewin is completing the script of "Ordeal," the Dale Collins story which is to be directed soon by Marcel De Sano, with Lon Chaney and Greta Garbo in the featured roles. Robert Z. Leonard, who just completed the direction of "A Little Journey," from the pen of Rachel Crothers, will next direct "The Gray Hat," a French farce. John S. Robertson is completing the Lillian Gish starring vehicle, "Annie Laurie," and W. S. Van Dyke has just completed the filming of Tim McCoy's first western, "War Paint."

Owen Davis to Write for Famous Players

OWEN DAVIS, one of the foremost of American dramatists, this week signed a contract with Jesse L. Lasky to write original stories for Paramount pictures. He will not alone write, but will follow his stories through the course of production. Though most of his time will be devoted to his new connection, Mr. Davis expects to write at least one stage play every year. Several of his plays have already been picturized.

Definite Title of Douglas MacLean's Next Announced

The title of Douglas MacLean's next feature comedy for Paramount will be "Let It Rain." The story will be an original developed by the comedian's staff of writers and the production will get under way in a month's time. MacLean has refused to comment on his choice of director and cast or the details of the story. As confusion resulted when the title of MacLean's previous picture, "Hold That Lion," was changed twice, all obstacles to the use of "Let It Rain" have been removed and it is promised that there will be no further changes in the title.

William Boyd to Play "Jim the Conqueror"

George B. Seitz, director of "The Last Frontier," has chosen William Boyd to play the leading male role in "Jim the Conqueror," his next production for Metropolitan. Elinor Faire has been named for the feminine lead. Will M. Ritehey will supervise production. The story is adapted from the novel by Peter B. Kyne. Seitz announces that he will probably take his company to Tuba City, Ariz. for location. This is within a short distance from The Gap where exteriors of "The Last Frontier" were taken.

Deeping Story Forthcoming Paramount Special

Warwick Deeping's tale, "Sorrell and Son," has been decided upon by Famous Players-Lasky executives as worthy of being converted into one of the Paramount specials of the year. Herbert Brenon will begin work on it immediately upon completing his present assignment, "God Gave Me Twenty Cents." Elizabeth Meehan is at present engaged on the screen treatment of the book. The Deeping story deals with the theme of self-sacrificing fatherhood.

Madeline Hurlock Signed for Hal Roach Comedy

Madeline Hurlock, comedienne, who has been seen in Mack Sennett comedies for some time past, has been signed by Hal Roach for a leading role in one of his star comedies. Special gowns are being designed for Miss Hurlock by Will Lambert, who creates the interesting costumes worn by the leading ladies in the Roach-Pathe comedies. Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy are two players included in the supporting cast. Fred Guiol will direct.

Release Dates Set for Castle Films

CASTLE FILMS announced this week that in addition to its short subjects, "So This Is Europe," which has already been exhibited, it will release this month "So This Is America," a companion piece of the European single reel.

In addition, "Short Shots," No. 2, is now available and on October 29 the third number of this series will be placed on the market. "The Lost Arrow," a split reel music legend, has also been released.

"After All," Norma Shearer's Next M-G-M Film

Norma Shearer, who has appeared as a stenographer, vaudeville performer and woman attorney, attempts a different characterization—that of a mischievous Parisian miss, in "After All," her new starring picture written especially for her by F. Hugh Herbert and Florence Ryerson of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer story department. The actress recently completed her role in "Upstage," a story of a traveling vaudeville troupe, to be released soon. "Upstage" was directed by Monta Bell, with a cast including Oscar Shaw, Tenen Holtz, Gwen Lee, Ward Crane and Dorothy Phillips. The story was written by Walter DeLeon, the scenario by Lorna Moon.

James Pierce Plays Lead in F.B.O. Special

James Pierce, selected by F.B.O. to play the lead in "Tarzan and the Golden Lion," one of the most elaborate productions on its schedule, has never played an important role before, but the company believes it has uncovered a screen "find."

As a football player Jim Pierce has been famous. Walter Camp named him as All-American centre one year, and twice he was named for the snap-back position on All-Western teams. He is a native of Freedom, Ind., and played on the Indiana University team. But as an actor few have ever heard of him.

Pathe Acquires Unique Film, "World Struggle for Oil"

A unique film, quite out of the ordinary run of pictures, has been acquired by Pathe Exchange, Inc., from Captain Hank Butler, and is announced for release on October 31st. The picture, which is five reels in length, bears the title of "The World Struggle for Oil." It is the result of exhaustive research and brings home the dependence of modern life on what has been termed the "modern magic of civilization."

Stuart Holmes Has Role in "The Day of Souls"

A prominent role in "The Day of Souls," John Gilbert's next starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been given Stuart Holmes. Production started early this week under Tod Browning's direction. Renee Adoree supports Gilbert in the leading role. "The Day of Souls" has been definitely decided upon as the title of the picture, which was temporarily called "Cock o' the Walk."

First Nat'l Has Ten in Work

Reaches Half-Way Mark in Production; Five Others in Preparation

JOHAN McCORMICK, manager of West Coast productions for First National, this week announced that his company had reached the half-way mark in production on this season's program with nine productions ready for shipment, ten others in actual work and five more in preparation for filming.

The Colleen Moore unit has departed for the Coast after filming exteriors for the star's latest production, "Orchids and Ermine." "Twinkletoes," a recently completed Colleen Moore stellar production, will be released during Thanksgiving week. Both Norma and Constance Talmadge are preparing to begin work on new pictures, although as yet no title has been announced for either vehicle.

Corinne Griffith has started screening of her new release, "Purple And Fine Linen," Paul Bern's adaptation of the story by May Edginton. James Flood is directing. "Synecopating Sue" and "The Lady In Ermine" have just been completed by Miss Griffith and are set for release in November and January respectively.

Milton Sills' present vehicle is "The Runaway Enchantress," adapted from the story by Mary Heaton Vorse, in which Mary Astor will appear opposite the star. This is a Carey Wilson production, as was "The Silent Lover," just completed, in which Sills also stars. Viola Dana appears opposite the star in this production. It is listed for release in December.

"The Black White Sheep," Richard Barthelmess' current release through First National, is ready to leave the cutting room and is scheduled to reach the first-run houses about the middle of December. After a vacation, Barthelmess will start shooting on a new picture for First National.

"Long Pants," Harry Langdon's third feature-length comedy for First National, is nearing completion. The cast includes Gladys Brockwell, Al Roscoe and Frankie Darro.

The C. C. Burr outfit, producers of the Johnny Hines comedies for First National, is shooting on the comedian's next, tentatively titled "Mortimer's Millions." Hines has just completed "Stepping Along," which will be released next month.

Ken Maynard's next Western for First National is well on the way to completion, although as yet it has only a working title. "The Unknown Cavalier," his current picture, is due to reach the general market the end of next month.

"Here Y'Are Brother" is the unusual title of the story by Dixie Willson, which June Mathis now has in production at Burbank under the direction of Balboni. The cast to date includes Lewis Stone, Billie Dove and Lloyd Hughes.

"McFadden's Flats" is now shooting by Asher, Small & Rogers for First National with Richard Wallace directing. The cast includes Charlie Murray, Chester Conklin, Larry Kent, Aggie Herring, Edna Marion and Otis Harlan.

B. P. Fineman's production, "Ladies At Play," was previewed in the East recently. The story is by Sam Janney. It is an Alfred E. Green production with Doris Kenyon, Lloyd Hughes and Louise Fazenda. "Midnight Lovers," another John McCormick production, has just been completed. Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson head the cast.

A. L. Rockett has completed "Just Another Blonde" (tentative), and after a short vacation will begin on a new picture starring Richard Barthelmess. In the East Ray Rockett is completing "Not Herbert," under the direction of Howard Higgin. Ben Lyon and Pauline Starke are featured. Other productions to be handled by the Ray Rockett unit are "September Love," adaptation of the novel by Frances Hodson Burnett entitled "The Head of the House of Coombe," and "The Crystal Cup," Gertrude Atherton's celebrated novel.

Lasky Sees Production Change

"Day of Spectacular Pictures Here"; Tells of Coming Paramount Films

BASING his contention on the fact that prior to 1926, Paramount had produced but two pictures which showed at $2 top prices, and to the present season's line-up of product which includes three pictures now complete with three others in an advanced stage of filming, all of which are expected to attain to legitimate prices at the box office, Jesse L. Lasky this week stated that a revolutionary change in picture production has occurred in the past year and a half.

Mr. Lasky's statement pointed to "Beau Geste," now playing at the Criterion Theatre, New York City, "Sorrows of Satan," the latest D. W. Griffith production which opened at the George M. Cohan Theatre in New York this week, and "Old Ironsides," scheduled to be shown this fall, as three films which Paramount expects to road show this year.

The three now being filmed include "The Wedding March," which Erich Von Stroheim is producing; "Wings," the celluloid record of American airmen during the World War, and "The Rough Rider," a story of the regiment led by Colonel Theodore Roosevelt in the war with Spain.

A number of other road show productions are in the formative process, Mr. Lasky continued, among them D. W. Griffith's next film, "The White Slave"; the P. T. Barnum film which Monta Bell will direct; the filming of H. G. Wells' "The War of the Worlds"; Theodore Dreiser's "An American Tragedy" and "Metropolis," a German picture which has been close to two years in the making.

Additions to Casts of Warner Pictures Now in Work

Many changes and additions were made in casts of Warner Bros. productions during the past week. To "The Third Degree" cast under the direction of Michael Curtiz were added Mary Louise Miller, two and one-half years of age, Michael Vavitch and David Torrence. The cast of "Fingerprints," the Arthur Somers Roche story co-featuring Louise Fazenda and John T. Murray, was augmented by the addition of Martha Mattox, Franklin Pangborn, William Demarest and Robert Perry to the list of players. Holmes Herbert, originally announced, will not be included. Three new additions have been made to the supporting cast of Syd Chaplin's "The Missing Link." They are Crauford Kent and Sam Baker.

The Warner Bros. have also recently signed Harry Dittmar, scenario writer, previously with Universal. He will be given an early assignment.

First National Foreign Force Gets Trip Chance

Through competitive sales contests among the foreign sales branches of First National a branch manager or managers showing billings above a stipulated quota set for December 31, 1926, will have the opportunity of visiting the Spring convention of the company which will be held at the new studios at Burbank, Cal.

The trip also includes a week's stay in New York. Reports from abroad say that the majority of branches involved are already near this quota, says First National.

"Love's Greatest Mistake" Edward Sutherland's Next

"Love's Greatest Mistake," a story by Frederick Arnold Kummer, playwright and author, will serve as Edward Sutherland's next production for Paramount. The story will start soon in serial form in Liberty Magazine. Beeky Gardner is writing the screen adaptation.

Goulding to Direct His Own Story, 'Diamond Handcuffs'

Edmund Goulding, author of many of Mae Murray's screen successes, has written another story for that star and will direct her as soon as Miss Murray completes her work in "Valencia." The new story is titled "Diamond Handcuffs."

Pathe to Release "Atta Boy" on October 24th

ATTA BOY," the first of a series of feature length comedies starring Monty Banks, will be issued to exhibitors on October 24th by Pathe Exchange, Inc. Among the players supporting the comedian are Virginia Bradford, Mary Carr, Virginia Pearson, George Periolat, Earl Metcalfe and Kewpie Morgan. Edward H. Griffith directed. The story and continuity were written by Charles Horan and Alf Goulding.

"Prince of Tempters" Premiere in N. Y. C.

"THE PRINCE OF TEMPTERS," produced by Robert T. Kane and released through First National, had its world premiere at the Strand Theatre, New York City, on October 17. It is the initial American directorial effort of Lothar Mendes, former Ufa director. Ben Lyon and Lya De Putti are co-featured.

Zasu Pitts Female Lead in "Casey at the Bat"

Zasu Pitts has been chosen by B. P. Schulberg to play the feminine lead in "Casey at the Bat," the next Paramount comedy feature, featuring Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton. Production is scheduled to start within three weeks under supervision of Hector Turnbull.

Frank Shepard Will Manage Gotham Washington Branch

The personnel of the Gotham organization was augmented last week by the addition of Frank J. Shepard, who was engaged by Sam Sax to manage the Washington office of Gotham Exchanges, Inc. Mr. Shepard is familiar with the Washington territory, as he was at one time manager of the Pioneer exchange in that city. He is acquainted with exhibitors throughout the country, having been associated in the past with Robertson-Cole, Warner Bros., and more recently with Associated Exhibitors as special representative for that concern and manager of the Salt Lake, Milwaukee and New Haven branches.

Ralph Ince Signed to Long Term Contract by F. B. O.

Because of his work in directing and acting in two of the Gold Bond productions of F. B. O., Ralph Ince has been signed to a long term contract by that company. The two pictures that won for the director his new engagement are "Bigger Than Barnum's" and "Breed of the Sea." In announcing the acquisition of Ince, Edwin C. King, vice-president in charge of production, said that his next picture would be "Hello Bill," the tentative title of the Gold Bond dealing with the beneficial activities of the Elks.

R. Colman—Vilma Banky in "The Night of Love"

Samuel Goldwyn gave out at the Pacific Coast last week that his newest production for United Artists would be "The Night of Love," co-featuring Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky with George Fitzmaurice directing. The two players have just completed roles in "The Winning of Barbara Worth," Henry King's production for Mr. Goldwyn. The picture is now in the easting stage. Production will begin in a few days. Miss Coffee was loaned to Mr. Goldwyn by Cecil B. De Mille for the adaptation of the story.

Warners "Mama Kiss Papa" Now "Millionaires"

"Mama Kiss Papa," the E. Phillips Oppenheim story recently filmed on the West Coast by Warner Bros., has had a change of title. "Millionaires" is the new name given the Oppenheim story, which was one of the most widely read of that author. The picture was suggested from the book and adapted to the screen by Raymond L. Schrock. Graham Baker and Edward Clark prepared the scenario. Herman Raymaker directed. Heading the cast of "Millionaires" are Louise Fazenda and George Sidney. The other important roles are portrayed by Vera Gordon, Helene Costello, Nat Carr, Jane Winton, Otto Hoffman and William Strauss. The production was completed on September 20th and is scheduled for early release.

Stein's Next for Warner's Will Be "Matinee Ladies"

Paul L. Stein's next picture for Warner Bros. will be "Matinee Ladies," an original story by Albert S. Howson and Sidney R. Buchman. Though it has not been decided upon who will have the leading roles, the announcement from the Warner West Coast studio intimates that it will be an all-star cast. Harry Dittmar, a recent addition to the company's scenario staff, is now working on the scenario, and the production will be put into work in the near future. Mr. Stein completed his first picture for Warners last month. It is titled "My Official Wife," and will be released on October 16th. Irene Rich and Conway Tearle have the leading roles.

Famous Signs Rupert Hughes to Title "Old Ironsides"

Rupert Hughes, prominent American author, has been engaged by Famous Players-Lasky to write the titles for the James Cruze production, "Old Ironsides." Paramount officials believe that Hughes will produce titles quite in keeping with the photographed action of the film which Paramount officials believe to be a super production. "Old Ironsides" was directed by James Cruze. The featured cast includes Wallace Beery, George Baneroff, Esther Ralston and Charles Farrell.

Columbia Selecting Cast for "Wandering Girls"

Included in the list of players who will appear in the coming Columbia production, "Wandering Girls," are Mildred Harris, Dorothy Revier and Armand Kaliz. Harry Cohn, vice-president and general manager of productions for Columbia, is now choosing additional names for the cast.

John Brownell Goes to F.B.O. West Coast Studios

John Brownell, scenario editor for Film Booking Offices, departed this week for the company's West Coast Studios, where he will take part in the conferences being held concerning the company's new product.

Airplane Wedding For "Young April"

Miss Frances Wilson and Wade Plummer, Canton, Ohio, couple married in airplane flying over Cleveland, furnished excellent newspaper copy and exploitation material for the showing of "Young April" (P.D.C.) at B. E. Keith's Palace Theatre. Bride and groom are shown above with Justice Donald Smyth, who performed the ceremony, just before start of the "flyer" which Miss Wilson and Mr. Plummer took

Stunt Is Staged for Showing of Picture at Cleveland House

WITH the roar of an airplane motor substituting for the usual wedding march, Wade Plummer and Miss Frances Wilson were married in an airplane, three thousand feet above the public square of Canton, Ohio, as an exploitation stunt in connection with the showing in that city of "Young April."

The idea was Miss Wilson's. On a visit to Cleveland she saw "Young April" at Keith's Palace Theatre there. This picture features an escape of a bride and groom in an airplane, and Miss Wilson decided that she wanted to be the first airplane bride from her State.

W. H. Simmons of the Cleveland branch of Producers Distributing Corp. agreed to make the necessary arrangements.

The plane hopped off from Sherick Field in Canton, and after a brief flight to give the crowds who went to the field a chance to get back to town, Pilot Lloyd circled over the Square while the ceremony was performed.

Both Cleveland and Canton merchants sent many presents to the bride and groom, including a large number of articles which will be of service when the young couple begin their housekeeping.

Rex, Trained Horse, Now One of Screen's Widely Exploited "Players"

"THE DEVIL HORSE" has proved its possibilities for furnishing a diversification of program and exploitation in many theatres.

Reports reaching Pathe show that Rex is one of the widely advertised and exploited screen "players" of the day.

Through his special appeal to children, numerous teachers and superintendents have been enlisted by theatre managers to encourage drawing and essay contests. Parades, essay contests in which ponies were awarded as prizes, ballyhoos featuring horses, special stage settings and striking theatre-front displays, are a few of the exploitation ideas used by showmen to feature Rex.

When Rex in "Black Cyclone," played the Sun Theatre, Omaha, the services of a riding academy were enlisted. A parade of riders, headed by the Mayor of Omaha, and with numerous special stunts, attracted wide attention.

Exploitation Methods

The management of the National Theatre, Madera, Calif., with the aid of his house drops, together with poster entents made a striking stage picture, which was used as a presentation set.

D. C. Shiralla, manager of the Virginian Theatre, Charleston, W. Va., used a balky donkey as a ballyhoo, the animal bearing the sign, "This is the 'pest' in 'Black Cyclone.'"

A mother popularity contest was staged by the Victory Theatre, Denver, in co-operation with the "Denver Post" and two shetland ponies were awarded to the two most popular mothers in that city. The ponies were used for ballyhoo purposes previous to the award. When "The Devil Horse" was screened at the Warner Theatre, New York, a tie-up was made with the New York "Evening Graphic" whereby prizes were awarded for the best essays.

Boston Theatre Provides Free Parking

Arrangements have been made by the Bowdoin Square Theatre, Boston, Mass., with a large public garage in the rear of the theatre whereby free parking in the garage is provided patrons. Parking checks are issued at the box office to those applying when purchasing tickets.

Two features of the exploitation for "Mare Nostrum" (Metro-Goldwyn) at the American Theatre, Colorado Springs, are shown above.

3 BAD MEN

Into a land of terror—a land of gold-maddened men and frenzied women rode a ship of a girl—and 3 BAD MEN. They were border terrorists—killers, who sealed disputes with the shaving iron, but they formed a proceeding trio for this transplanted desert story and they rode into eternity with a smile that she might realize the secret of her dreams. It's the mightiest of all great dramas of the Early West.

Newspaper campaigns for the showing of "3 Bad Men" at first run houses has been done on an extensive scale, with a wide variety of layouts playing up the feature as a play of romance and action. Teaser campaigns, also, have been popular with exhibitors exploiting this offering. The group above shows ads used by the following houses: Majestic, Dallas; Sun, Omaha; Astor, St. Paul; Capitol, Chicago; Majestic, Grand Rapids; and Capitol, Cincinnati.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of a "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

Short Subjects and Serials

Roach Planning Short Subject House

THE short subject theatre will soon have another acid test. Hal Roach, it is said, is now seeking a site in Los Angeles, on Seventh Street and Broadway or the immediate vicinity, where he will construct and sponsor a house for short subjects. The house will offer variety programs with the producer's own comedies providing the foundation upon which the bill will be built. The programs will consist of a couple of two reel comedies, one newsreel and one educational subject. Music will be furnished by a high-class orchestra. The program will run for ninety minutes. Admission will be 25 cents.

Al Joy, English Comedian, Starts Fourth Comedy

* Al Joy, the English comedian now being starred in a series of twelve two-reel comedies for Ricardo Films, Inc., has begun work on "Nothing to Live For," the fourth picture of the series, the others being "Spooky Money," "Over There" and "The Orphan." The pictures are being filmed at the Pyramid studio, Astoria, Long Island, with Joseph A. Richmond directing. Supporting the comedian are Rose Massm as leading lady and Eugene Redding, stage and screen heavy. Anthony Trigile is cameraman while S. B. Moss acts as assistant director.

Seven Players Cast for Universal's "Collegians"

Seven new players were added to the cast of "The Collegians," a series of two-reel Universal Junior Jewel comedies based on stories written by Carl Laemmle, Jr., and adapted to the screen by Randall Faye and George Plympton. The second of the series, "Fighting Spirit," is now in production under direction of Wesley Ruggles, who will direct the group.

The new additions are Betty Jane Young, Jean Stuart, Eleanor Fredericks, Maurine Loomis, Miss Colette, Shirley Dormond and Howard Stevenson.

Nine More "Varieties" on Fox Schedule

Fox announces the completion of nine more of twenty-six Fox Varieties scheduled for release this season. A total of 15 are now complete.

The new releases follow: "The Great Lakes," Oct. 17; "Maryland, My Maryland," 31st; "A Spanish Holiday," Nov. 14; "Travels in Toyland," 28th; "Overnight from Paris," Dec. 12; "Cliff Dwellers of America," 26th; "My Lady's Stockings," Jan. 9; "Constantinople," 23rd; "A Frontier Post," Feb. 6.

H. L. Knappen Distribution Manager for Castle Films

Relinquishing his managership of the Pathe New Orleans branch, H. L. Knappen has been made distribution manager for Castle Films, and has been placed in charge of the exchanges in New York, Detroit and Pittsburgh, as well as distributors handling the Castle productions throughout the country. Mr. Knappen first associated himself with the motion picture industry in 1914 and has been in the selling end of the industry in the Eastern, Southern and Western districts of the United States. Prior to his Pathe managership in New Orleans Mr. Knappen represented the same company in San Francisco, Denver and Atlanta. He also served with Pathe as national sales manager of the "Chronicles of America" series. Louis Deutseh and David Werth will assist him as distribution manager.

Stern Bros. Budget $1,500,000

Practically Doubles Outlay for 1925;
Expend it on Better Stories, Costumes

STERN BROS. have decided on a production budget of $1,500,000 for the coming year. This amount will be expended on better stories, better directors, costumes, props, etc. This is practically double that spent last year at the studio. Julius and Abe Stern have just returned from Europe where they spent considerable time in the purchase of materials for the new comedy series.

The new Stern Bros. Studios will be equipped with the finest materials available, regardless of expense; no effort will be spared in making it one of the model comedy producing plants of the West Coast, says the company.

"Following the completion of the current series of 'The Newlyweds and Their Baby,' the new Buster Brown comedies, 'The Excuse Maker' series, the 'Let George Do It' series and the 'What Happened to Jane' series, we will begin follow-up series of most, if not all, of these series," said Mr. Stern. "We also will put several new series into production. These will be even bigger than our present series, to be made from material purchased from big authors, details of which will be forthcoming soon."

Mabel Normand Finishes New Pathecomedy

Mabel Normand has completed another Hal Roach comedy, "The Nickle Hopper," to be released soon by Pathe. Theodore Von Eltz has the leading role. Miss Normand's second comedy of the Roach series, "One Hour Married," is also set for early release. In it Creighton Hale is the masculine lead.

Charley Chase is about to begin work on a new Hal Roach comedy, as yet untitled. In the supporting cast are Eugenia Gilbert, Eugene Pallette, Anita Garvin, Bull Montana, Amber Normand and Valentina Zimina. James Parrot will direct.

Marjorie Daw Featured in Roach-Pathecomedy

In the latest Hal Roach star comedy, just put into production at the Roach studio under Leo McCarey's direction, the principal roles are played by Marjorie Daw and Creighton Hale. Oliver Hardy has been added to the supporting cast, which includes Max Davidson, among others. Fred Guiol was originally scheduled to direct, but as he developed a severe case of sunburn poisoning he was forced to relinquish the megaphone to Leo McCarey.

Matt Moore Signed by Roach for Starring Role

Matt Moore will appear in a star comedy to be made by Hal Roach for Pathe release. He will contribute a characterization of the woman-shy bashful male. Elaborate preparation for sets and costuming are now being made. It is still undecided who will appear in the picture or what director will be assigned.

G. Davis' First Mermaid Titled "Midnight Follies"

The title of "Midnight Follies" has been given the recently completed Educational-Mermaid comedy featuring George Davis.

"The Show Cow Puncher"
(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THINGS are not always what they seem in the movies or in life. That is the moral, if moral there be, in this latest Mustang comedy featuring Edmund Cobb. He is the owner and star of a small traveling wild west show. He meets Constance Darling, the owner of a ranch of which she is being despoiled by Larry Richardson, her foreman. Their meeting is through Cobb's rescuing her from a runaway. At her ranch, he discovers that the villain is the actual rustler of her cattle, although he credits neighborhood thieves with the work. His object is the acquisition of heroine and her ranch. Cobb blocks this, rescues the cattle, which are being driven off, and as a reward gets the girl. What becomes of his traveling show, Leigh Jacobson, the author, does not say. To be slangy, if one may, "we should worry." We see the end with the satisfaction that once more virtue with chivalry and hard-riding playing first aid to the injured has triumphed once more. Incidentally Cobb does some spectacular riding busting a broncho. He falls because the villain has weakened the saddle-girth, but remounts to use the same horse to round up the cattle which are being driven away from his beloved's ranch.

Then he captures the escaping villain who is kidnapping the heroine. There is a sort of dramatic justice in this. The horse which is supposed to be the cause of Cobb's demise is really the means of beating the rascally foreman's machinations.

"Velocity"

(Bray-Novelty Magazine—One Reel)

THIS picture or series of pictures edited by Don Carlos Ellis might have been prepared in collaboration with the Scientific American. It is technical, yet interesting to the lay spectator. The point which the picture seeks to make is that velocity is always relative. Thus the glacier moves one inch in ten years; a snail five and one-half inches an hour, by comparison with a glacier being quite speedy. Fast as a thoroughbred horse can go, it is slow when compared with a whippet or even an ostrich. Man using only his own legs and attaining a maximum of fourteen miles an hour increases his possibilities once he climbs into a motor car, on a toboggan, uses a railway train or an ice-boat.

The earth is a mere snail when compared with other planets. But for reel speed command electricity or light.

All these things are illustrated with ingenious photographs and drawings, the climax being reached with pictures showing how Mars and this Earth ultimately will be in communication with each other through the utilization of electricity. It is an unusual and interesting reel.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Too Much Sleep"

(Universal-Bhebird—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THOMAS EDISON, that young struggling electrician of Menlo Park, New Jersey, would subscribe to the implied idea in this Universal picture featuring that likable personality, Arthur Lake. Arthur is still courting a girl about his own age and still meeting parental opposition. This time it is all very plausible and human and consequently amusing and at least mildly entertaining. The girl's father thinks he has gotten rid of his daughter's young man. But he has not, because they have taken refuge on the divan and fallen asleep in each other's arms when father comes down thinking burglars are in the house. Before this, the younger brother and his chum in the neighborhood have placed in Arthur's pockets all the family silver. That is not enough for the chum, who has been sent home by the girl's father, when he goes to bed has tied a rope from the front door to a lamp-post in front of the house. Thus when Arthur attempts to get out of the house and escape the night-shirt wearing father, he finds his egress blocked until he pulls down the lamp-post. Then the chase by the police. An arrest. The youngster's confession of guilt in placing the silver in Arthur's overcoat pockets results in the hero's being freed by the police and all's well again. Just where the "Too Much Sleep" title fits I frankly do not see.

W. Scott Darling is the author; George Summerville the director.

"Teacher, Teacher"

(Educational-Hamilton—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

CERTAINLY, there's everything in this latest Hamilton two-reeler that will go over well with the fans; just the kind of gags which never fail to keep up the laughs—once they get under way—and that's early in the first reel.

From the time Hamilton is awakened by an offensive parrot to the hour he begins his duties as schoolmaster, it's a rollicking show. True, a few of the gags wear a number of gray whiskers; however, there's enough new ones to make up for that, and those of the whiskered variety are good enough to bear repetition.

After a spirited and laughable attempt to do away with the parrot, Hamilton finally gets his bird. Another good bit of comedy is injected at this point when his trick typewriter knocks off the hats of two strangers outside. Of course, they end up a la Dempsey-Tunney. The schoolroom stuff is well done; every trick that a schoolboy ever pulled is put on the new teacher by his aged pupils. Norman Taurog is credited with the story and direction.

Summary—Just the kind to get the laughs.

"The Housing Problem"

(Bray-Novelty Magazine—One Reel)

RECOMMENDED to the tenement house department of New York and other cities. Unfortunately, it concerns itself mostly with how animals and birds solve the problem rather than humans. The picture starts out with some youngsters building bird-houses and then shows how the tenants take possession of these non-rent paying habitations. The cuckoo throws the legal tenant out of his own home when he wants shelter. The hermit crab has the good grace to wait until the other fellow has left his abode before he walks in. No such good taste for the gopher rat who only waits until the lawful owner is asleep before he enters. Then in succession we see how the prairie dog, tent caterpillar, trapdoor spider and duck provide themselves with entirely different types of shelter.

For the so-called human race the cliff dwellings of the Hopi Indians are put into opposition or contrast to buildings in a city such as New York. After all, with a slight change in the architecture and size the objective is the same for all animals, birds or humans; a covering where sleep can be won and won and a place to eat.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Punches and Perfumes"
(Bray-Fistical Culture Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

IT is inevitable in a Sabbatical year such as 1926 when the heavyweight championship of the world should be fought for by the seven-year holder, Jack Dempsey, and the ex-marine contender, Gene Tunney, that prize fighting pictures should have their day and night on the screen. I have seen many, some good, some excellent and some quite impossible. This one from the Bray laboratory is quite worth while. Partly because of its direction and partly because of its acting. It seems real, although I still marvel at the number of blows which can be exchanged and the punishment that the actor-pugilists can assimilate and still continue on their feet for the requisite number of film footage.

Training on a rich man's estate for a prize fight the villain insults first the horse belonging to the heroine and then the lady herself. These two things are enough. The opponent of the villain in the feature bout is bound and tied in his room, so the hero, Lew Wagner, his sparring partner, can take his place in the ring. This he does before the society gathering with a penchant for pugilism. Despite his handicap of weight, size, etc., he thrashes the bully and wins the purse and the hand of the fair lady, who just incidentally happens to be the daughter of a rich man. His pugilistic success naturally removes all obstacles to their wedding and promises a roseate future.

But seriously; it is a good picture which Bray has put out and Wagner is a convincing pugilist-hero. The press department of the producer not having supplied a list of players, the praise for the featured player and his associates will have to be allotted to the stage names, Lew Wagner, Dynamite Richards, Betty Arnold and "Bad News" Kelly. It also has good melodrama and a real plot.

"Please Excuse Me"

(Universal-Stern Bros.—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

PERMIT me to present—with the co-operation of Universal—Charles King, whom you have all met before. This time he is trying to hold onto a job for a collection agency. He has arrived at his office late and is fired. Drawing on a very fertile imagination he tells the boss a thrilling story, which we see on the screen, of how he had saved the boss' daughter from a band of Indians. That is why he was late. Great; the story goes over until the girl comes in to disclaim any knowledge of the whole episode. One more opportunity to hold the job is given Charley. He must collect a payment on a diamond ring or retrieve the ring. A strong man holds the bauble. Accompanied by the girl, this modern David goes forth to meet the 1926 Goliath. The first three rounds go to the title-holder but Kid David stages a comeback with the help of the girl. When Charley pretends to kidnap the girl, the giant shows undreamed-of chivalry and pursues the kidnapper. The chase leads to the office, where the ring which is in dispute is regained, to be used for an engagement ring. The Indian episode is the most amusing bit in the two reels. The rest is rather conventional slapstick comedy that may and may not delight the comedian's followers.

William Anthony wrote the story and Samuel Newfield directed. It is one of the "The Excuse Maker" series.

"Pete's Haunted House"

(Bray-Hot Dog Cartoon—One Reel)

THIS is one of the cleverest animated cartoons I have seen for some time. More honor to actor-artist-director Walter Lantz. It is an ingenious combination of drawings with photographs. For example, we see the artist (photographed) putting cardboard skeletons, which he has fashioned into the diminutive house occupied by the dog and then drawings of the terror which these inspire in the pup. The artist continues to make life miserable for his canine creation by picking up the cardboard house where Pete lives and moving it about until the dog gets the idea that another San Francisco earthquake or Miami hurricane has struck his home. Puzzled and unhappy, he leaves the house to discover the cause of all his troubles. His revenge is in placing a lighted firecracker under Artist Lantz and blowing the latter skyward. It is genuinely amusing and unusual. The latter in these days of so many futile, pointless animated cartoons is rough of a laudatory adjective in itself to influence an exhibitor to book it or an audience to wish to see it on the screen. It certainly got to me.—PAUL THOMPSON.

The Road House

(Pathe-Fables—One Reel)

POOR old Farmer Al is in trouble again, but to paraphrase the old Sun quotation, "If a man bites a dog, that's news"; if Al were not in trouble that would be news and not an Aesop fable. In this episode he runs a roadhouse but has difficulty luring passing motorists in to spend money until he hits on the age-old device of tacks and consequent punctures. True to the tradition of modern motorists and roadhouses, these lodgers for the night dance. All is well until the theft of the music-roll in the pianola necessitates Al displaying his ingenuity by substituting a Swiss cheese. But in doing this he does not take into consideration the cheese-weakness or penchant of his mice helpers. Logically, it appeals to them more as food than music material, so they steal it. As though these troubles were not enough, another gang of thieving mice steals the cash register. Thinking the cat is responsible, Al naturally accuses that feline. Discovering his error, both start in pursuit of the real second-story men. Finis: a cash register which is thrown at the pursuers breaks but is put together again with the surprising ingenuity native to animated cartoon artists. Another fable has been told for the amusement if not edification of many theatregoers.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"From Horses to Dancing"

(Pathe Review—No. 43—One Reel)

FIRST on the review is a series of pictures showing how the horses for the cavalry of the United States are trained at one of the re-mount stations, that at Front Royal, Virginia, in the Blue Ridge Mountains. Until they are three years old when they begin training they live the "life of Riley" grazing and sleeping. It is an interesting set, among other things showing how the recalcitrant horses are brought to book and made tractable.

"Alaska a la Mode" is a travelogue of Alaska, picturing two girls after their arrival in that country. Canoeing on the lakes there they investigate Indian villages with their totem poles and end up in their bathing suits, using an ice-berg as a swimming raft. It is enough in these cold October days to send a shiver down the backs of moving picture attendants even if the latter be comfortably housed in a warm theatre.

"Priests of the Orient," as may be deduced, deals with Far East ministers of religion. They are depicted in their modest, unpretentious robes and then on ceremonial occasions when they yield to the vanity of the rest of the world and put on the most spectacular and ornate garments.

"Steps from the Steppes" show the Borkoffs dancing before Alvin Knechtel's review camera at Hollywood. It is a combination of double and triple exposures and other camera tricks where the dancers seem to have not merely one but several astral bodies. Photographed in a most seductive shade of blue the pictures are very beautiful and effective. Any movie house should be proud to have the picture as part of its program.—PAUL THOMPSON.

Gene Tunney Continues Fighting (Pathe-The Fighting Marine Serial)

HE beat Jack Dempsey at Philadelphia, but the new champion continues fighting despite his manager, Billy Gibson's, assertion that he will do no more until next June. That is what comes of the foresight of Pathe in casting the Greenwich Village boy in their thrilling serial even before he had captured the pugilistic crown. He is still doing his valiant best to keep Lady Chatfield in the mining camp six months so she may fulfill the conditions of her grandfather's will and inherit the property. One of the villains in this chapter, the fifth of the series, does what Estelle Taylor's husband could not do; that is, he succeeds in knocking Tunney off his feet, not once but several times. Tunney agreeably does not stay there, but gets up to worst the villain.

In this episode the conspirators, stopping at nothing, blow up the mine and leave the heroine, Marjorie Gay, and some of the other characters at the bottom of a mine pit with all egress blocked. I have a sneaking feeling they will get out somehow or other, for there are five more thrilling, blood-curdling chapters yet to be unreced and the story naturally must go on.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Felix the Cat Scrambled Yeggs"

(Educational-Sullivan Cartoon—One Reel)

PARTLY to get the advice of a juvenile critic and partly to prepare her for the task of reviewing for THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS screen classics in France for which country she was sailing the following day I took my seven-year-old daughter, Inez, to see this Felix release. Judging by her laughter and appreciation this one belongs most properly in the series. Her "critique of pure reason" (with genuflections to Kant) I am afraid was somewhat influenced by the present of a flexible Felix toy by a hospitable but canny press-agent who properly realized that was the best way to influence the youthful critic's judgment.

As for my possibly more mature point of view; I share my daughter's. Felix catching and convicting two bank-robbing crooks is decidedly worth while. His cutting out their shadows, carefully rolling these up and then, with the help of the not always clever police, matching them with the safe-blowers and thus proving incontestably their identity is decidedly ingenious and mirth-provoking. Credit the Thompson family with two "aye" votes for this Educational issue.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"The Alligator's Paradise"

(Educational—One Reel)

DON'T conclude that alligators make an uninteresting subject for screen entertainment and educational purposes. Of course you may at first think he is decidedly unfit for screen fare but this ugly reptile with the fishy eyes and voracious mouth catches and holds your attention because of his repellent appearance and reputed hypocrisy. You see him in his native haunts down in tropical Florida in a region of scenic splendor, and he undergoes a close scrutiny of the camera which invades a stream swarming with his numerous kind. Here we see an old fellow (he is only a mere 150 years) basking in the sun; youngsters a little over a foot in length and battle-scarred veterans adepts in the gladiatorial combats of the crocodile world. These interesting creatures maintain a surprising agility despite their many score years and the Florida Indian who would capture him for his valuable skin must exert skill and craft because of the experience gained by a crocodile through a century or so of fighting. After a while we leave the crocodiles behind us and visit Greenland, Java and Turkey in which last named country we see the sincerity of the Moslem who devoutly rinses his mouth and washes his feet before entering a place of worship. The animation and ornamentation which adorn the titles are as usual cleverly designed and executed. There's nothing wrong with this one.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Should Husbands Marry?"

(Pathe—Mack Sennett—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

ALICE DAY is deservedly featured in this paradoxically named comedy. The answer is loudly and sweepingly—"In many instances No No and then No." If the tendency is to philander especially if you have a lion-tamer for a wife and she is apt to discover a clandestine supper tete-a-tete with a younger woman by all means NO. There you have the plot of this latest Mack Sennett opus. Eddie Quillan is chief support for Miss Day under Eddie Cline's direction.

If you want the events leading up to the tragedy here they are: Eddie is a bus boy in a restaurant run by a flirtatious proprietor. The latter gets out of one scrape by pretending the head waitress he is holding in his lap on the arrival of friend wife has fainted. He shifts his affections to Eddie's girl-friend, Alice Day, who gets a position in his food shop. At a supper party at a road house the wife and the bus boy stumble onto the private dining room. Then the fireworks. Attempting to escape in an automobile the wife supposedly mortally wounds the husband. Eddie and Alice hot-foot it away but the fade-out shows the wife and husband in shadows on the wall doing a boxing and wrestling match.

It is banal but amusing.

"Mount Sinai"

(Pathe—Pilgrimage to Sinai—One Reel)

THE course of the Israelites after their expulsion from Egypt followed by a cameraman and his assistants is the subject of this series, in case the reader has forgotten. In this chapter the travelers attain their objective. We are shown the top of the mountain where Moses was supposedly in communication with God and secured the two tablets of the laws. Prior to that, scenes on the journey to the mountain and the ascent. On the way a Mohammedan mosque sharing its quarters with a Christian monastery is shown, and priests whose whole lives have been spent in the shadow of the mountain which plays so important a part in biblical history. I know of no more effective method of bringing vividly before a spectator the scenes of the Old Testament than that provided by this travelogue. The pictures are interesting, judgment being shown always in the selection of places to be photographed and one can easily visualize the children of Israel on their forty year wanderings through the wilderness at last to emerge and find the end of the journey. It is a subject of interest not only to the Christian but to all faiths and all creeds or those lacking a faith or creed.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Hy Mayer's Scrapbook"

(Pathe-Mayer Cartoons—One Reel)

HY MAYER, one of the best and most widely known artists in this country, whom I have known back to Mark Sullivan's "The Turn of the Century" is the sponsor for these releases. They are characteristically clever and amusing. There is a blend of photograph and drawing that is so ingenious and unusual that the spectator is continually trying to figure out how it is done. This particular issue is called "A Dog's Tale" and is concerned almost entirely with dogs. The artist, for example, draws some characteristic racial type face on the screen and then blending into this will be a dog that is absolutely true in line and characteristics with those of the man shown. This and the other Mayer releases are of the high character of drawing and idea that I have always associated with the man ever since the days when he had his own "The Passing Show" of cartoons in the New York Times.—PAUL THOMPSON.

The Temptress

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE is no doubt about this picture being a superior type of entertainment in every respect. It may be defined as a tragic melodrama—one which is treated intelligently and with considerable imagination. In other words the motivation is sound—and the characters thus appear convincing. Fred Niblo demonstrates again that he can be trusted to breathe life in this type of story—one which is somewhat similar in outline to Ibanez' other creation, "Blood and Sand."

It keeps to its temper, too—not once giving any indication of applying false heroics. As its title suggests it has to do with a woman of casual morals whose mission in life is to destroy men—and who reaps as she sows until she meets the inevitable reward of her sirenlike sins. The locale is Paris—and later, the Argentine—and it then turns back to the city on the Seine. It builds around the temptress following a susceptible youth to the South American country—where all the elements of tragic melodrama are visualized—such as jealousy, death, murder, disaster and ruination. And in building to its climax it reveals scenes of excellent composition as well as drastic movement. Moreover it is splendidly cast with Greta Garbo as the sinuous siren and Antonio Moreno as her Spanish lover.

The Cast: Greta Garbo, Antonio Moreno, Marc MacDermott, Roy D'Arcy, Lionel Barrymore, Virginia Brown Faire, Armand Kaliz, Francis McDonald, Hector Sarno, Inez Gomez, Roy Coulson. Directed by Fred Niblo.

THEME: Drama of tragic love in which youth encounters disaster through charms of siren before he finds happiness.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The atmosphere and settings. The Paris banquet. The whip duel. The fine acting by principals. The ending.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Bill as another excellent film version of an Ibanez story. Play up Greta Garbo and Antonio Moreno and mention others of fine cast. Emphasize the title.

DRAWING POWER: For high-class houses or wherever good pictures are shown.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Length, seven reels. Released October, 1926.

The Nervous Wreck

Fairly Amusing—But Needs More Humor

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ALL things considered, the film adaptation of that highly successful play, "The Nervous Wreck," shapes up as adequate entertainment. If it fails to come up to expectations it is because rumors have reached us that it would be a wow. The trouble is it strains too hard after its humor. Had the director refrained from showing the why and wherefore of every scene—had he kept away from trespassing in the fields of hokum the piece would have hit on all eight cylinders. There is not enough incident from the play—and far too much from the director's bag of tricks. To show how it fails in some of its scenes we have only to remind you that a comedian of the talent of Chester Conklin seldom is allowed to be funny.

Still as comedies go it should satisfy the average picturegoer. Everyone hasn't seen the play—and those in ignorance of it will respond to the screen version. They will see Harrison Ford demonstrate that he is one of the best light comedians of the day. He is a hypochondriac who has a pill complex. The action has him cutting up all kinds of didos and he turns into a fighting demon when he gets on his feet. Phyllis Haver is natural and charming as the heroine and the others are competent.

The Cast: Harrison Ford, Phyllis Haver, Chester Conklin, Mack Swain, Hobart Bosworth, Vera Steadman, Paul Nicholson, Charles Gerard. Director, Scott Sydney.

THEME: Light comedy based upon hypochondriac who becomes a nervous wreck—but who recovers and becomes a rip-roaring man of action.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The clever acting by Harrison Ford. The mix-ups featuring the elopement, a hold-up, etc. Romance.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Feature Ford in his trick attire. Play up the support which has all the marks of an all-star cast.

DRAWING POWER: The title should interest them. Playing up the cast should draw them. Suitable for all types of houses.

Produced by Al and Charles Christie. Released by Producers Distributing Corp.

Length, six reels. Released October, 1926.

Kid Boots

Mr. Cantor Appears On and Off the Screen

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

ANOTHER musical comedy success has been transferred to the screen. This time it is the Ziegfeld production of "Kid Boots," with the original star occupying the same lofty position in the silent drama, rather an unusual precedent. Adolph Zukor and Jesse Lasky are the sponsors for the movie version and the Cantor debut, naturally under the Paramount banner. Opening on Saturday night, October 9th, at the Rialto, it is with the expectation that picture, star in person and the Olsen band will linger there many weeks and outdistance some of its immediate predecessors such as "Variety," "Take it From Me," "Aloma," etc. Whether it will or not only an extremely sound and shrewd prophet can tell.

For one thing, Cantor is fortunate in his two leading women, Billie Dove and Clara Bow. Each is a decided asset to the picture, even though little demand be made on any histrionism which the first named so unmistakably displayed in "The Marriage Clause." She is "easy to look at" and makes a most seductive heroine. Miss Bow in a tomboy part scores unmistakably.

Lacking the accessories of the player in person and the jazz band, I would regard it as a program picture and not big enough for a special.

The Cast: Eddie Cantor (starred), Clara Bow, Billie Dove, Lawrence Gray, Natalie Kingston, Malcolm Waite, William J. Worthington, Harry Von Meter, Fred Esmelton. Director, Frank Tuttle. Screen play by Tom Gibson from musical comedy by Otto Harbach and William Anthony McGuire.

THEME: Ex-tailor's apprenticeship becomes caddy at smart country club; makes possible the marriage of his sponsor to heroine.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Tailor shop sequences at opening; country club and precipice scenes. EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Cantor's musical comedy fame. Emphasize fact of humor throughout.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players-Lasky. Length, 5,650 feet. Released October 4th (for New York October 9, 1926).

My Official Wife

Love and Romance in Imperial Russia

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

IN a new dress—rich with the ornamentation of gilt and geegaws which decorated the military brie-a-brac of Imperial Russia under the last Romanoff—"My Official Wife" comes back to the screen as a vehicle for Irene Rich and Conway Tearle. The work is modernized by the introduction of the World War, paving the way for the reconciliation of the prince and the countess when the former is found as a taxi driver in Vienna and the latter the most famous cabaret performer in that gay city.

The story of the Russian prince who falls in love with the woman he outraged during the course of a wild and drunken evening at an inn is essentially theatric and it is presented here in that mood, no effort having been made to make it anything but a glamorous, strikingly produced sex melodrama. The situation, which shows a woman in love with the man she has sworn to kill "to avenge her honor," is an effective one for purposes of the sumptuous, sensuous type of romantic fiction offered by "My Official Wife." Miss Rich makes the best of her opportunities and registers a sincere and at moments a very moving, impersonation. The supporting cast provides adequate assistance.

The Cast: Irene Rich, Conway Tearle, Jane Winton, Gustav Von Seyffertitz, Stuart Holmes, John Miljan, Emile Chautard, Sidney Bracey, M. Vavitch, Tom Ford, Russell Ritchie, Tom Costello, Igor Presnikoff. Director, Paul Stein. Author, A. C. Gunter. Scenario by Graham Baker.

THEME: Love melodrama laid in Imperial Russia involving the romance of a prince and a countess.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The staging, which has a spectacular quality, and the atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The co-starring team of Irene

Rich and Conway Tearle. Stress as adaptation of stage success and romance with glittering setting of Imperial Russia—strong title to feature with big-card and poster campaign.

DRAWING POWER: For adult audiences, not suitable where large youthful patronage is catered to—this is only restriction on it.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers. Length, 7,846 feet. Released October 16, 1926.

The Sorrows of Satan

Beautiful, With Great Moments, But Disappointing

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

PROBABLY feminine patrons throughout the country will weep over Griffith's sentimentalization of Marie Corelli, and we hope, for the sake of the purse-strings so generously unloosed in its making, that the names of Cortez and Menjou will pull them in—but if "The Sorrows of Satan" had been made by an unknown director it would have created little reputation for him. It is a cameraman's triumph—and one for Carol Dempster as well. Ricardo Cortez, too, is superb in the opening reels. Menjou is disappointing as Prince Rimenez, making Satan a carefree man about town and playing the role without shading or conviction.

The opening reels are magnificent. Fred Waller's Paradise sequence is unmatched. The story opens with all of the old Griffith charm and beauty, but once the hero is placed in a position of wealth by Rimenez the character becomes unconvincing and the story unreal and monotonous. The picture has its moments of Griffith's greatness—the departure of the hero and the unmasking of Satan, for instance—but our only feeling as the evening wore on was one of growing disappointment. We wanted to like it, and tried—we hope we are wrong—but "The Sorrows of Satan" seems to have everything but entertainment. Perhaps the women will feel otherwise.

The Cast: Carol Dempster, Ricardo Cortez, Adolphe Menjou, Lya de Putti. Director, D. W. Griffith. Photographed by Harry Fischbeck.

THEME: Temptation of youth by Satan, and ultimate salvation through love.

PRODUCTION H I G H - L I G H T S: Photography and lighting. Magnificent sets. Beautiful performance by Dempster and Cortez.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Popularity of Menjou and Cortez. Griffith. Make a strong play for the feminine trade.

DRAWING POWER: Should draw heavily with feminine patrons.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players-Lasky. To be roadshowed.

Bardelys The Magnificent

New Laurels for Gilbert in Costume Drama

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is one of Sabatini's earlier stories—which hasn't the dramatic sweep and movement of a couple of his other works which have reached the celluloid state. Yet there is incorporated a fine suggestion of conflict which has to do with romance and intrigue at the court of Louis XIII. It takes quite some time for the plot to unwind—and it's difficult keeping track of the characters because of their flowery names.

What John Gilbert doesn't do to this role! He simply eats it—in the parlance of the curb. Attired in colorful raiment he makes a capital figure of a French Merriwell as he might have flourished in the period represented. There is the usual conflict—the usual bravado which distinguishes the hero. He must needs make an unconventional entrance into milady's chamber—and win her heart. He must flirt with death for the sheer glory of it. He must hide his identity to lend suspense to his conquest—and above all he must "go Mix and Fairbanks" in the way he escapes the gallows. What a climax—one which shows King Vidor poking fun with a deal of satire and irony at the heavy costume hokum. The finale offers a big laugh—as well as plenty of suspense.

The Cast: John Gilbert, Eleanor Boardman, Roy D'Arcy, Lionel Belmore, Emily Fitzroy, George K. Arthur, Arthur Lubin, Theodore Von Eltz, Fred Malatesta, John T. Murray. Director, King Vidor.

THEME: Costume drama of court intrigue in reign of Louis XIII—with dashing swordsman frustrating his enemies and winning a wife through sheer love of combat and conquest.

PRODUCTION H I G H - L I G H T S: The fine mounting. The scene where hero surprises girl. The duels. The humor. The exciting and humorous climax. The exploits of John Gilbert. The acting by Miss Boardman.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up as another King Vidor triumph—and one for star. Bill as a Sabatini story. Play up as exciting and dramatic—mentioning it as different from most costume stories.

DRAWING POWER: For all houses—but particularly high-class ones.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Length, nine reels. Released October, 1926.

Scenes from the Warner Bros. comedy featuring Syd Chaplin, titled "The Better 'Ole"

The Country Beyond

Broadway and Northwest of the Water Tower

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

ANOTHER of James Oliver Curwood's novels has been transferred to the screen and has made the transition quite successfully under the sponsorship of the Fox company. It is good melodrama that starts in the Canadian northwest, shifts to New York and for its finale returns to the country where the mounted always get their man, at least on the stage.

For good measure the author and the scenarist-director, Irving Cummings, have provided the piece with two villains instead of the conventional one. For diversity one is a half-breed who is selling the heroine, Olive Borden, to another trapper and the second rascal is a producer of musical shows on Broadway. The hero, Ralph Graves, has committed the unforgivable crime of looting a trader's store to feed some starving Indians, hence he is the man Sergeant J. Farrell MacDonald is seeking, finds and sends to prison. That is one reason; a second is the suspicion that the hero also murdered the white-slaver. We know better because we have seen his wife commit the crime. Well, anyway, Graves goes to prison and ultimately is released, and Olive makes a sensational hit on Broadway.

The lake and forest backgrounds are extremely beautiful. The acting is good, the story really holds you and the players and director co-operate most successfully.

The Cast: Olive Borden, Ralph Graves, Fred Kohler, Lawford Davidson, Evelyn Selbie, J. Farrell MacDonald, Alfred Fisher, Gertrude Astor. Director, Irving Cummings. Scenarists, Cummings and Ernest Maas.

THEME: Love story of girl of the wilds who makes stage-success and imprisoned hero.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Rarely beautiful settings Canadian northwest, stage episodes, uniformly good performances of cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Curwood's tremendous vogue as popular novelist. Human interest love story.

DRAWING POWER: Should and unquestionably will be excellent.

Produced and distributed by Fox Film Corp. Length, 5,363 feet. Released October 17, 1926.

The Better 'Ole

Uproariously Funny Comedy of the Late War

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

AMERRY old time is had by Syd Chaplin here—and an equally merry old time will be enjoyed by every spectator who sits in on this celluloid version of Old Bill and his antics in and out of the trenches. To paraphrase the famous gag of the author—who has the droll character say "If you knows of a better 'ole, go to it," we would suggest if you know of a better comedy go to it.

It offers a compact series of uproariously funny gags and incidents—some of which are culled from the play—and others which have come from the imaginations of Chaplin and Chuck Reisner, the director. What Syd doesn't do in a barnyard isn't worth mentioning! His gags with the egg which he has a tough time in stealing from an angry hen—his merry moments with a rubber glove which he turns into a milk container—his scenes in doubling with little Alf as a horse and again their high jinks in the stable with a group of drunken Germans—all of these are executed with snap and dash and rare, rich humor. The only fault is they are occasionally stressed too much. Trimmed of some repetitious detail and speeded up the piece wouldn't have a weakness. There is good burlesque all the way. It has thrills, too—and the romance isn't missed. It shows Syd as a real character comedian. He is truly Bairnsfather's Old Bill. Book it and just try and keep 'em away.

The Cast: Syd Chaplin, Jack Ackroyd, Charles Gerard, Ed Kennedy, Harold Goodwin, Doris Hill. Director, Chuck Reisner.

THEME: Comedy of old-timer—a professional soldier who has his troubles in the war—a film version of play founded upon cartoonists' caricatures.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The gags with the sergeant. The moments at the play. The exploits in the cellar and in the stable. The exciting dash. The humor and dash of action. The excellent characterization by star. The comic slapstick.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Bill as funnier than play. Feature Syd Chaplin in his funniest role.

DRAWING POWER: Will turn 'em away. For all houses.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers. Length, nine reels. Released October, 1926.

Regional News from Correspondents

KANSAS CITY'S field of suburban motion picture theatres was expanded this week with the formal opening of the Tivoli Theatre, 2420 Indiana Avenue, operated by the Columbian Amusement Company and managed by Guy Shrimmer. The new house has a seating capacity of 1,000 and is equipped to present vaudeville and prologues. It also has that welcome convenience for suburban theatres—a sound-proof "cry room" for youngsters. Joe Black's orchestra, a radio feature in Kansas City of late, occupied the pit. Motor cars lined the street for more than three blocks in each direction of the theatre on the opening night, serving as ample proof that there had been no shortage of "free invitations" sent through the mails.

A crew of robbers in Kansas City Monday night apparently had as their motto: "Keep to the straight path." They did that, at least, taking safes as they went straight down Wyandotte Street without a turn. The last "job" was the safe of the Metro-Goldwyn exchange at 1708 Wyandotte Street, from which $100 in cash and $30 in stamps was taken after the combination had been hammered off.

When a theatre manager becomes pressed for exploitation ideas he might do as Earl T. Cook, manager of the Pantages Theatre, Kansas City, did this week. Louis Charnisky, director of the Pantages orchestra, completed building a bungalow the other day. Armed with photographs of the bungalow, Cook besought the editorial rooms of daily newspapers and, sure enough, the issues of the next day brought four two-column cuts of "the beautiful and unique bungalow" which Mr. Charnisky has just completed.

For the first time in his life C. E. "Doc" Cook, business manager of the M.P.T.O. Kansas-Missouri, is qualified to sit as a bona fide member of the Kansas City Joint Board of Arbitration. For five years "Doc" has been the very core of activity along Film Row, but not until he became an exhibitor, through partnership with his brother in Maryville, Mo., was he qualified to "thrash it out" on the joint board, to which he promptly was appointed.

The first week of October was a trying one for Adolph Eisner, former president of the M.P.T.O., Kansas City, and now in charge of the booking for Universal Theatres in the Kansas City territory. Between minute details of the World's Series and booking pictures he had little time for the trivial necessities of sleeping and eating.

Word was received in Kansas

City this week by friends of Al and Mike Kahn, who are in Florida, that the veteran film brothers and former owners of Film Classics Exchange in Kansas City were safe from the onslaughts of the hurricane and flood.

George Koch has purchased the Gem Theatre of Lydon, Kan., from W. F. Duncan, while S. Parker has sold the Gem Theatre at Portageville, Mo., to W. A. Collier.

A hectic struggle it was, hut the exhibitors' baseball team put a crimp in the distributors last week, winning 13 to 11. Capoulis, Langan and Johnson were the battery selections for the exhibitors, while Byerle, Woods and Burke must shoulder the burden of defeat for the distributors. "Bill" Warner called 'em behind the plate. The game was played at old Association Park.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: T. D. Block, Dixie Theatre, Odessa, Mo.; Hugh Gardner, Orpheum Theatre, Neosho, Mo.; Frank Weary, Farris Theatre, Richmond, Mo.; J. Edlbrok, Royal, Eudora, Kan.; Walter Wallace, Orpheum, Leavenworth, Kan.

Art Schmidt, formerly of New York, who has been assigned to handle the exploitation for First National in the Kansas City territory, has arrived and is on the job.

H. Manheim of the home office and L. Bloomfield of Cincinnati have been made exploitation director and assistant exchange manager, respectively, of the Kansas City Fox branch.

Due to ill health, F. W. Gebhardt has resigned as Pathe branch manager, R. S. Ballentyne, district manager, assuming charge of the office until a successor is named.

With pride, J. A. Masters, F.B.O. office manager, points to the new sedan which stands in front of the office, but he has nothing on R. H. Fairchild, who is equally as proud of the car which stands in front of the Independent Film Corporation's office.

Cleve Adams, F.B.O. division manager, was a business visitor in Kansas City this week, as was Max Stahl, home office representative of Educational.

Eddie O'Neil, Educational salesman, and Miss Anna Summerson, formerly of Capitol Enterprises, "consolidated" their names last week.

Miss Gladys Libby, formerly one of the "bright spots" about the Associated Exhibitors' branch, has accepted an office position at Warner Bros.

Southwest

THE first of the semi-annual film golf tournaments of northern Ohio, is to take place Friday, October 15th, at the Ridgewood Country Club. Anyone connected with the film business, either in the exhibition or distribution end is eligible to enter in the contest. Although fathered by W. N. Skirboll, Ohio distributor for Columbia and Gold Seat Productions, and Gradwell Sears, Cleveland First National exchange manager, invitations have been sent to film folks all over the state, and many film men from the southern part of Ohio have signified their intention to be present at the festivities. These are scheduled to start in the morning. The program includes 18 holes in the morning, with luncheon at the Ridgewood Country Club; 18 holes in the afternoon, followed by dinner at Broadview, a roadhouse famous for its cuisine. All exchanges have contributed prizes, which Skirboll says mount up to more than $400. A ten-dollar entrance fee is charged all present who play golf, and a five-dollar fee for those who constitute the audience. Following the games, those present will hold a business meeting to elect officers whose job it will be to make arrangements for the tournaments every spring and fall.

Lou Thompson, who has been central division manager for Associated Exhibitors, received word the other day to report in Los Angeles immediately as west coast exchange manager.

Robert Cotton, central division manager for P.D.C., who has just recovered from a tonsil operation, has gone east to the P.D.C. convention, with stop-overs in Atlantic City, and the Sesquicentennial.

William J. Banks, secretary of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association is still ill. What started out last week to be a cold has turned into something more serious. He may have to undergo an operation.

Bert "Shorty" Stern is back in town. He's with Gotham Pictures, as sales manager. M. C. Howard is exchange manager.

It is reported that B. C. Steele and his associates are building a 1,600-seat motion picture theatre in Kent, O. They now own and operate the Terminal, Penn Square and Monarch theatres of Cleveland.

The Glenside Theatre, Cleveland is being operated under new ownership. Morris Herman and Aaron Arnold bought the house last week from Messrs. Cohen and Friedman.

The Turon Theatre, Huron, has changed hands. John Stoll has sold it to Robert Knapp. Stoll has the Rialto and Lion theatres at Bellevue. He sold the Huron because he was tired of commuting between Bellevue and Huron.

Harry Williams has sold the Rex Theatre, Akron, to John Baker.

MORRIS POUZZNER, who recently purchased the Phelps Theatre at Southbridge, has now taken over the Blanchard, Lyric and Strand theatres, giving him full control of the playhouses in that town. Mr. Pouzzner was formerly active in exhibitors' circles in Connecticut. He has opened offices in the Metropolitan Theatre Building, Boston, and it is understood that he is negotiating for several other playhouses. Outside Massachusetts he has taken over the Royal at Olneyville, R.I.

J. H. Moore, who has been booker for Famous Players at Boston for some years, has been promoted to salesman and is covering the Western Massachusetts territory.

Thomas Duane, formerly booker for Famous Players at the Portland, Me., office, has been promoted to advertising sales manager at Boston, with the same company.

The Casino Theatre at Quincy, Mass., recently taken over by William J. Bigley, who operates the Olympia at Hampton Beach, N.H., will be extensively remodeled and modernized by the new owner. It will hereafter be known as the Lincoln and has been leased for a term of years to the Lincoln Theatre Co., recently organized.

Miss Celia Shapiro, formerly with Film Booking Office, Boston, has been appointed secretary to R. W. Cobe at the Tiffany Exchange, Boston.

Joseph Blot has been named salesman for Western Massachusetts and Rhode Island for Tiffany.

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, which for some years has occupied an exchange at 8 Shawmut Street, Boston, has moved into its newly erected building at 58 Berkeley Street, corner Lawrence Street, about two blocks removed from its former location and in a section not heretofore within the bounds of Boston's Film Row.

W. H. Erb is branch manager, George Shaeffer is district manager, and J. Frank Shea is sales manager.

New Haven, Conn., theatres all held benefit performances Sunday for the Florida Relief Fund and contributed approximately half of the Red Cross quota of $15,000 as-

The pleasant smile belongs to William J. Clark, booker of the Stanley Company of America, Philadelphia. Pat Dowling, on his Christie Comedy Drive, was the photographer signed New Haven. All of those in any way participating in the benefit performances gave their services.

Manager Joseph Cone of the Plaza Theatre, Worcester, sent a check for $350 to the Worcester Red Cross fund for Florida relief, representing the receipts from the Friday matinee benefit.

Red Cross workers have established headquarters in three of Springfield's theatre lobbies, at the Capitol, Poli's and the Broadway, for Florida funds.

R. C. Cropper, branch manager of Pathe exchange, Boston, has closed his summer home at Hull and with his family has taken up his residence in Brookline, Mass.

William DeWolf, former exhibitor and salesman, who has been seriously ill for the past 18 weeks, has so far recovered as to pay a visit to Film Row the past week, his first visit in four years. He received a royal welcome from his host of friends.

Samuel Goldstein of the Goldstein Brothers circuit of Western Massachusetts was welcomed about the Row during the week.

Culmination of a romance of Film Row came Sunday when

James A. Curran, assistant manager of the Pathe exchange, Boston, and Miss Louise M. Lynch, a stenographer at the Pathe exchange, whose home is at 4 Ogden Street, Dorchester, were married at St. Gregory's Church, Dorchester. Charles Curran of Melrose, brother of the groom, was best man and the maid of honor was Miss Helen Lynch of Dorchester, sister of the bride.

The wedding trip will be by auto to Washington, Niagara Falls and Canada and they will make their home at 44 Rugby Road, Mattapan. They were the recipients of many beautiful gifts, particularly from their legion of friends in Film Row.

Sam Moscow, sales manager for Independent Films, Inc., who recently underwent an operation at the Bay State Hospital, Boston, has sufficiently recovered to return to his home and expects to be back at his desk inside two weeks.

Sam Davidson, Western Massachusetts representative of Consolidated Films, Inc., has been transferred to the New Haven exchange of the same company, succeeding Harold Eskin, resigned.

The staff at the Metro-Goldwyn-

Mayer exchange, Boston, has organized an M.-G.-M. Club and has elected these officers: president, M. N. Wolf, branch manager; vice-president, Henry Eckman, office manager; treasurer, Henry Wolper, cashier; secretary, Miss Josephine Kahn. The club's social activities will commence with a dance next Monday night, Oct. 18.

M. N. Wolf, branch manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Boston exchange, spent several days in New York on business and took in the World Series games there.

Joseph Cohan, shipper at First National's Boston exchange, is breaking in as assistant booker for the same company. He has been with the exchange for the past nine years.

Metro exchange was the gathering place for the Row during the World Series games, returns being received there via radio during the entire series.

The new theatre acquired by Universal in Lowell, Mass., will probably be named the Capitol, and it is now expected that it will be ready for its opening about Nov. 1st. It will seat about 1,200.

A. Bizerofsky, who acquired the Allen & Charet circuit in New Bedford, Mass., following the death of the latter partner, was in Boston arranging for his winter programs at his several houses.

L. C. Hacking, division manager of Producers' Distributing Corp., has returned from a business trip to Albany, Buffalo and New Haven and incidentally made a trip to New York to take in the World Series opener.

Benjamin Bebsick has been made poster clerk at Producers exchange, Boston.

After a six weeks' business trip in Europe, E. M. Loew returned Saturday, October 9, on the Berengaria to New York. During his absence affairs of the Boston offices were looked after by Phil Berler and Max Finn, booker and general manager respectively.

A Casino to contain motion picture theatre, and a clubhouse are to be built at Hull in time for opening next July 1, by the Colonial Casino Corp. Martin Towle in charge. O. J. Gette, of New York City, is architect.

Philadelphia

JULES E. MASTBAUM, president of the Stanley Company of America, has just returned from a trip to Chicago and New York. While in Chicago he attended the national convention for Jewish welfare as district delegate.

Charles Segal, who recently purchased the Amber Theatre from A. Schwartz, has reopened the house under the name of Segal's Castle. Mr. Segal spent approximately $30,000 on the theatre in repairs and improvements.

The Stanley Company has already started work on its Wynnefield Theatre. The house will have a seating capacity of 1,500 and will house 4 stores and apartments in addition to the auditorium, representing an investment of close to one half million dollars.

Frank N. Seltzer, who has been publicity director and manager of the Fox Theatre in Philadelphia, has been appointed managing director of Warner Bros. Metropolitan Theatre in Baltimore and was recently installed in his new position by Joseph Hebrew, district manager for Warner's.

The Cameo Theatre, 52nd and Midway, which has been closed for several months, while $35,000 was being spent on improvements, has reopened under the Stanley-Benn management. John J. Brennan, formerly manager of the Darby Theatre, has been appointed resident manager.

Paramount Exchange will move on or about January 15th from its present quarters at 1212-18 Vine Street to the S. W. corner of Twelfth and Vine Streets. The latter building is being entirely remodelled and renovated and will give Paramount a far more desirable location than it has at present. It is reported that the old Paramount quarters will be occupied by P. D. C.

The Stanley Company and Marcus E. Benn have purchased a lot in Norwood and will erect there a 1,800-seat theatre, which, it is expected, will be ready for business by the latter part of April.

Albany

MONDAY night of this week was an important event in the life of George Roberts of this city, marking as it did the opening of the Eagle Theatre, owned and to be operated by Mr. Roberts and his son. There was a big turnout for the opening and father and son were complimented on all sides. The theatre will be a second-run house and Mr. Roberts will make a feature of his projection.

The Shine Brothers have a most attractive theatre in the Palace in Auburn, just re-opened, after having been closed the greater part of the summer for general improvements. The house is ably handled by J. Edward Wise, who makes a big appeal for patronage through projection that is unequalled. Mr. Wise reports business as being excellent.

Stage hands and musicians in Troy are asking for an increase in wages and negotiations are now pending.

Alex Herman, local manager for Producers Distributing Co., spent the week end in New York City.

Slotnick and Pearlman are building a new theatre in Utica that will be known as the James. It will be a neighborhood house, with a seating capacity of about 900 and will be ready on January 1st.

A. H. Weismantel will reopen the theatre in Oriskany on October 22, according to a report on Film Row. The house is known as Baer's hall.

Walter Roberts, manager of the Troy Theatre, is already at work among various organizations in that city toward again running the junior movies on Saturday mornings. The shows have the hearty approval of the parents and authorities and will probably be featured during the months to come. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts, who have been living in a camp the past summer at Burden Lake, have now moved into the city.

M. J. Hogan, an auditor for First National, was in town during the week and will probably be here for several days yet.

Rae Candee, of Utica, is reported as having been ill for the past two or three weeks from rheumatism.

The theatre at Chadwicks, which was a sort of community house and which was badly damaged by fire some months ago, is now being repaired and will be in shape to open within a few weeks.

There is one thing certain, and that is, that the theatre in Fulton does not worry Mike Bloom of Syracuse to any extent. Mr. Bloom comes to Fulton about twice a month and remains for less than an hour. He explains things, however, by saying that he has a good manager and that the daily reports by mail tell the story.

Mike Kallet of Oneida was the center of attraction in that city last week when he appeared with a new car and with a special body that instantly became the envy of every automobilist in all Oneida. Aside from talking about his car, Mr. Kallet did mention that good progress was being made on his new theatre.

William Benton of Saratoga

Springs is taking a great deal of interest these days in the work of the Chamber of Commerce in his city. Mr. Benton believes that the growth and an activity of a city or village is reflected first of all in the motion picture theatre.

The local Universal exchange is being repainted at the present time and will be the first of the many exchanges that moved into the new building to be completely settled. A projection machine was installed last week.

There was a lively party at the Metro-Goldwyn exchange one day this week in connection with the announcement of the engagement of one of the young ladies employed there.

The Empire Movie Supply Company is moving this week into new quarters in the Film Exchange building. Elmer Crowingshield is supervising the moving.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Regan, running the theatre in Greenwich, have just installed a very attractive illuminated sign giving coming attractions.

For a lengthy name, the Strand in Auburn will carry off first honors in Central New York. The house is handled by Joseph Schwartzwalder. The other night the lobby of the theatre was a mass of flowers, with two or three comfortable chairs about, giving the house a most distinctive appearance. The house is a first-run, three changes to the week.

D. J. Harrington, one of the owners of the Palace in Saratoga Springs, does the booking and practises law as well, yet is never too busy to see the film boys when they call. The month of August is always the biggest of the year at the well-known resort and this past August beat out all other years at the theatre. A recent offer for the theatre, made by a five-and-ten-cent chain, was refused.

Between serving as the village detective and running a theatre, Frank Wurm, owner of the Star in Salem, is a busy individual these days. Mr. Wurm was a state trooper at one time.

Jack Krauss attended Monday's meeting of the film salesmen in Albany and asked that every man work hard to distribute as many tickets as possible for the ball that will be given by the combined organizations in Albany on November 19th.

Charles Henschel, assistant division sales manager for Pathe, was in town during the week.

Jake Rosenthal, owner of the Rose, in Troy, will have a harvest week soon, when his lobby will be piled high with pumpkins and similar farm produce. He will give a special program during the week.

Jake Golden, back at his duties at the Griswold in Troy, remarked that after being ill for nine months, he returned to Film Row and knew but one or two of the present managers, so many changes had taken place.

A bowling league has been formed among the employes in the theatres in Troy.

Des Moines

MISS BELLE MILLER, who used to be with Pathe and who, since June, has been in New York City, has returned to Des Moines. She is doing some special work with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The Fox Film Corporation formally opened up their offices in Des Moines on September 27 at 1022 High Street, the new office building especially constructed for the new exchange headquarters. B. B. Reingold came from the Fox office at Omaha to take the managership of the Des Moines office. He has as his office and sales force as follows: Ray Brown, booker, who also came from the Omaha office; John Dixon, salesman, who comes from Omaha; Harry Gottlieb, who for a good many years was with Universal in Des Moines, but has been most recently in Omaha; P. H. McClintock, who was with the booking staff of Famous Players in Des Moines; Grace Gannon, stenographer, who used to be with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Venus Thornton, another member of the stenographic staff; Grace Reckseen, cashier; Alice Weaver, biller; Rosella McDevitt, contract clerk; Hermann Steinkemp, shipper; Joe Brindley, postal clerk; James Moore, porter, and on the inspecting staff Alice Miller, Lela Whitlock and Mrs. Gladys Goodwin. The Fox Film offices are the latest thing in efficient and convenient arrangement and equipment.

Johnny Clark, western division sales manager, from the New York office, has been in Des Moines. The salesmen were called in to confer with Mr. Clark. District Manager A. W. Nichols, from Minneapolis, was also in Des Moines.

Promotions were won all along the line at the Universal office when L. J. Allison, booker, was transferred to the St. Louis office and Al Yarowsky, who was short-subjects booker, became booker. Mr. Allison went to St. Louis at the request of Manny Gottlieb, who was recently transferred from the managership of the Des Moines office to take charge of the St. Louis branch. With the promotion of Mr. Yarowsky came the transfer of Mr. M. Lee, cashier, to short-subjects booker, while Miss Dorothy Gonterman, contract clerk, was promoted to the cashier's department. Alice Gannon, who was formerly with F.B.O., now has charge of the billing for Universal, and Ruby Miller, who used to be biller, was promoted to the stenographic staff. An addition to the staff is Miss Reynolds, who is now in the contract department.

A. G. Stolte, booking manager and theatre supervisor for the largest part of the A. H. Blank string of theatres, has been out of town visiting the tri-city theatres and in Iowa City for the inspection of the new theatre being constructed there by Mr. Blank. Blank recently bought the LeClare Theatre at Moline, which is one of the theatres of which Mr. Stolte has supervision. The theatre is now closed for remodeling and redecorating, but will be opened the middle of this month. It has not yet been announced whether Mr.

Shrimps will remain as manager of the LeClare under the new ownership or not. The theatre at Iowa City which is being constructed on the site of the Englert Theatre, which burned down completely last winter, will not be open for another month yet. The new theatre will far outclass any theatre hitherto constructed at Iowa City and will probably be one of the leading theatre points.

Clifford Niles of the Eastern Iowa Theatres Corporation, with headquarters at Anamosa, was in Des Moines last week and announced that he is on the lookout for several good theatres to add to the company's chain.

Ollie Reese, who used to be with the A. H. Blank offices in Des Moines, has resigned her position.

Visitors in Movie Row last week included Manager Curtis of the Redfield house, Stanley Cecil of Bedford and Corning, and W. P. Grossman of Nevada.

THE softball team of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, has won many honors during the 1926 season just closed. First of all, the team captured the championship of the Toronto Industrial League and then won the city open and district honors in play-offs. The film club has now captured the Ontario Provincial title in a series of games with Peterborough. The members of the team are employees of the corporation, either at head office or with Toronto theatres operated by Famous Players.

The Grand Theatre, Calgary, Alberta, re-opened for the fall and winter season on October 11 under the continued management of Maynard S. Joiner. The Grand was formerly operated by the late Sir James Loughheed, who was a Canadian Senator. It is now under the lease of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto.

James Lynch, former manager of the Dominion Theatre, Vancouver, B.C., has made a big jump to Windsor, Ontario, where he has been appointed manager of the Palace Theatre by Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, the Windsor Palace being one of the latest Canadian houses to be acquired by Famous Players. After being closed for several months, the Palace was recently re-opened. The theatre had been remodeled inside and out by William Dineen, Toronto, the decoration expert of Famous Players in the Dominion.

Jack Laver has become manager of the York Theatre, Toronto, in succession to G. K. McCrae. This is a well-known suburban house operated by Famous Players for some years. It was once owned by the late Harry Brouse of Ottawa, when the manager was Frank Robson, now manager of the Orpheum and the Royal theatres at Port William, Ontario.

George Roetskey, well-known managing-director of the Palace Theatre, Montreal, was a recent visitor at the Hotel Astor, New York City. Mr. Roetskey spent the better part of the week in New York's film markets in the interest of his Montreal house.

F. G. Spencer, of St. John, N.B., owner of a chain of theatres in the three Maritime Provinces of Canada, has regained his health after a long period of illness and is once more actively engaged in the direction of his many houses. He is building a new theatre at Grafton and Great George streets, Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island.

Mr. Spencer has about 20 modern theatres in the three Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. In addition to the house now being built, he has two in Charlottetown, the Prince Edward and the People's theatres.

H. W. Burton, popular member of the staff of Regal Films, Limited, Toronto, has been presented with a purse containing $20 in gold by the members of the Regal organization, the money to be placed to the credit of Joyce Clara Burton, the first arrival at the Burton household. The present was from H. B. O'Connor, Toronto branch manager and 11 other members of the staff.

Ted Gould, manager of the Winnipeg branch of Regal Films, Limited, has recovered from an operation on his throat and has resumed his activities at the branch.

John T. Fiddes, formerly an exhibitor of Montreal, is now with Harold G. Hutchings as lessee of the Playhouse Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Mr. Fiddes being the manager of the house. The Playhouse was recently decorated and improved, while new projection and electrical equipment has been installed.

The Globe Theatre, Duluth and St. Lawrence streets, Montreal, Quebec, has been acquired by E. Savatoni, a veteran exhibitor of the Canadian metropolis.

Chicago

MAX BALABAN, of Balaban & Katz, and Dave Dubin, of Educational Film Company, have returned from Minocqua, Wis., where they enjoyed a fortnight's fishing.

Lewis Thompson, district manager of Associated Exhibitors, left Chicago for Los Angeles this week, and while on the coast will visit the various exchange managers in that territory.

A very successful party was given by the Paramount Pep Club, the organization of local Famous Players-Lasky employees, on Friday night at the exchange. The general salesroom was cleared of desks and dancing was enjoyed there to the music of a six-piece orchestra. Art Friemel, of the Paramount organization, proved that he can direct orchestras as well as sell film.

Will Baker of Universal, is the latest recruit to the ranks of the married men. Manager Roy Alexander acted as best man at the ceremony, which united Mr. Baker with Ruth Chesler, of Chicago.

Lee Woodyatt, popular Warner Brothers' salesman, who has been ill in the Murphy Hospital for some weeks, is improving and was able to return to his home. It, however, may be some time before able to return to his home. It may, however, be some time before he is back on the job.

Manager Agnew and Assistant Manager Washburn of Famous Players-Lasky's Chicago exchange, are planning to attend the convention of mid-west managers which will be held at French Lick Springs, the latter part of this month. Sidney R. Kent is expected to preside at the meeting.

Jan Sofer, former director of the concert orchestra at Grauman's Egyptian Theatre in Hollywood, Cal., arrived here last week to assume the directorship of the Coliseum Theatre Concert Orchestra. He replaces Sam K. Wineland, who resigned last week after an association of practically eight years with the Jensen-Von Herberg circuit. Al C. Raleigh, manager of the Coliseum, plans to make the thirty-piece Coliseum ensemble the foremost theatre orchestra in the Pacific Northwest and will feature his musical offerings each week.

Will Hudson, Pathe News cameraman in the Northwest territory, returned from the Ellensburg Rodeo last week, relating a miraculous tale of personal escape from injury. While shooting scenes at the Rodeo Mr. Hudson unknowingly became the target for a charge of a wild horse, and only exceptional speed prevented his being seriously injured. The only damage suffered was a shattered camera tripod, which Mr. Hudson believes far less serious than a shattered career.

Actual work on the construction of the new $1,250,000 Orpheum Theatre in this city began last week when Manager Carl Reiter and Mayoress Betha B. Landes took turns shoveling the first spadeful of earth at informal groundbreaking ceremonies. It is planned to have this new 3,000-seat house ready for opening in August, 1927, at which time the Orpheum will assume a combined vaudeville and feature picture policy.

Mrs. Jack Bower, wife of the manager of the local First National exchange, recently fell on the stairs at her home and is now confined to the hospital with a fractured vertebra, where it is expected that she will have to remain for several weeks.

E. H. Haubrook's new Manhattan Theatre in this territory, located eight miles north of the Seattle City Limits on the Pacific Highway, opened to capacity business last week, and is now operating on a regular evening schedule. The house is declared to be architecturally and theatrically perfect in practically every detail.

Milwaukee

THE theatre situation in Kenosha is the cause of a great deal of gossip among film men. At various times within the past few months it has been rumored that three different theatres would be built. Saxe is reported as being prepared to remodel the old Rhode opera house. Universal has quieted rumor by their announcement that they will shortly begin construction on the site on which they have held an option for some time.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT EQUIPMENT CONSTRUCTION OPERATION

Is Service Running Away with Showmanship?

Some Critics See Tendency to Over-Shoot the Mark in Theatre "Courtesy Codes"

IS "service" running away with "showmanship," causing theatre men to go to extremes in their efforts to heighten the entente cordiale between the playhouse and the public by means of "politeness and courtesy codes" which prescribe an overdose of smiles and "thank yous" addressed to the ticket buyers by members of the house staff?

In certain quarters of this world we know as "show business" there may be found many who believe that there is at present a tendency to over-stress the "service" idea. "We read and we hear," these particular dissenters declare "many dissertations on the virtues of 'service' in which enthusiasm for the subject leads the writer or the lecturer to give the impression that 'service' is even more important than the show itself." They add that it is perfectly true that "the public appreciates courteous treatment, but there is such a thing as carrying politeness to an extreme which makes the object of it uncomfortable and therefore defeats its own purpose."

Tendency to Over-do Good Thing

The rather common human tendency to overdo a good thing makes it ever worthwhile to listen to the protests which inevitably find voice against anything and everything to which there attaches the slightest trace of newness or departure from the customary line of procedure. And a good purpose is served thereby if the "voices" induce a man courageous and progressive enough to step out in a new direction to consider the course he has taken and check up on the experiment before he travels too far along his newly plotted path. Concentration on an idea often puts men in the position of the one "who could not see the trees because of the forest he was in," and a voice from the outside may well save one on the inside from such an extremity.

Among the voices from the "outside" in this connection, are those of the professional critics. One of the motion picture critics who is in agreement with the opinion that there can be such a thing as too much "efficiency and courtesy" is Morris Watson of the Omaha, Neb., "World-Herald," whose column "Projections" in the issue dated Sunday, September 26, dealt with the subject, and which we quote below as an expression of opinion and the reactions of one visitor to a theatre where the new idea of "service" is in vogue.

"Since the movies have decided they are a big industry," he writes, "the efficiency spirit has been spreading until now it is invading the bleak steppes and blowing a chilling breath into the furthest corners of theatredom." Then recalling the nickelodeon of bygone days, he continues:

"But efficiency has replaced all this with gaudy emporiums of politeness, with broader smiles for broader coins. It's bigger and better. Ah, me! one now enters a temple of cinema with the feeling that his shoes are conspicuously unshined.

"Efficient" Politeness

"An expert accountant has replaced the gum chewer in the box office—the one who used to mildly ballyhoo the show and tell one that it sure is a great film that's on to-day. Now it's a quick 'thank you, sir,' as a machine spits out the tickets according to which button the automatic young lady presses and a 'next please' before one has time to ease out of the way.

"'Thank you, sir,' echoes the doorman who is all dressed up in a grasshopper uniform, his head high and shoulders competing in a backward swing with his elbows somewhat after the fashion of the cartooned British butler. A bow and a smile are thrown in and one visualizes that semi-weekly lecture in which is outlined principles of Service and Psychology of Politeness, with emphasis on 'the voice with a smile wins.'

The Prescribed Smile

"But hold everything! One has not yet met 'the staff,' of which the cashier and doorman are but house units Nos. 1, and 2, respectively. There are other doors to pass through, a generalissimo usher yet to give his prescribed smile and a whole school of usher captains yet to wave polite hands toward the aisle in which one is supposed to confer quickly with a mere private among the ushers as to the possibility of getting a seat when the next 'show unit' comes to an end.

"No more may one squint his eyes in the dark, bark his shins on resting feet and finally sit in the lap of an outraged president of the town's League for Reading Questionable Novels. Mr. Usher flashes a light and says in his politest manner 'excuse the gentleman please' as if one were

A Common Cause

—By P. M. ABBOTT—

AT the meeting of the S. M. P. E. which we attended last week, the full difference between technical and engineering organizations and associations formed for the purpose of commercial promotion was demonstrated. Often have we been present at meetings of groups of individuals from this industry gathered supposedly to work for a common cause of mutual financial and business betterment. And in nearly every one of these meetings have we seen internal friction mar the unity of purpose of these groups. Always this dissension was the result of an effort on the part of one or more individuals to place his personal gain first.

Unquestionably, many of our readers are members of some such organization, and know only too well the circumstances to which we refer. But strictly technical societies are different—so very different—that to attend their meetings is refreshing.

That the S. M. P. E. is a worthy example was demonstrated during the meeting at Briarcliff Manor. Here one of the sessions was used for the discussion of the future policies of the Society. The subject proved a live one. Many of the members vigorously advanced their ideas and rebuttals were equally positive. But note this—the whole membership attending that session was interested in the future policies from one standpoint only—how the S. M. P. E. could be of greater service to the motion picture industry. There was not a word spoken that might be interpreted as advancing a selfish motive.

This industry has reason to be proud of the S. M. P. E. It had a hard struggle, due primarily to the lack of appreciation of the value that an engineering organization could be in this field to build itself into the place it now holds.

And in the process of building to its present stage, the S. M. P. E. has shown the other branches of this business what wholehearted and unselfish cooperation can accomplish.

Overdoing Courtesy Some Critics Declare

acting strangely and really should be excused for some overt act.

"Comfortably rushed into a seat, one is just in time for, say, 'show unit' No. 17. The organist makes a bow in the spotlight and dips artistic fingers into a bushel of shining ivory keys. There flashes upon the screen, which has your gaze because you are waiting for a movie to be shown, the words of a song. 'Come now, everybody join in the chorus. Let's go!' Shades of ripe tomatoes long past soup! They want a fellow to be his own show!

"It's prettier, it's grander, it's gaudier and a bit more like church. But this being herded through marble halls doesn't have the appeal nor the romance that was to be found behind the less pretentious wooden fronts bespeckled with bloody western posters.

"The show doesn't count any more. It's ceremony now—and Service!"

Pank Booking Talent for "Discovery Nights"

Bob Pank, who has been putting on the discovery nights at the various Loew houses in Cleveland, with unprecedented success, has organized his own department for this branch of work, which is being called the Ohio Booking Offices. The offices are located apart from the general offices of Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., in the State Theatre Bldg., with Pank as general manager. The stunt started last season at the State Theatre, a downtown house. This season it has spread to the suburban Loew houses and is now a regular weekly feature at the Park, Doan and Liberty.

Bothner Quits Smalley for Post With Schines

Al Bothner, who has been a sort of right hand man for Bill Smalley of Cooperstown, has resigned and gone with the Schine circuit. Bothner was originally from Troy and has had a great deal of experience both on the stage and in handling theatres. It is understood that in his new position Mr. Bothner will continue to dig up amateur talent for shows at various Schine houses.

Staff Holds "Go-Getter" Dinner

The employees of the Strand Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, enjoyed a "Go-Getter" dinner and dance which was held under the direction of Manager H. E. Wilton. The price of admission for each was one good suggestion for securing more business at the theatre and many ideas were exchanged.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

LESTER J. FOUNTAIN is now managing director of the West Coast-Bernstein circuit of houses in Southern California. He has under his direction 18 of the company's theatres, including houses in Pasadena, Glendale, Los Angeles, Huntington Park and Taft.

J. C. WODETSKY is managing the Majestic houses in the Butterfield circuit in the mid-west, and Poli theatres in New England.

C. P. SCATES has been placed in charge of the American Theatre in Butte, Mont. The house is one of the North American Theatres' chain.

Illusion Prologue Popular With Costume Dramas

By Morris Rosenthal
(Majestic Theatre, Bridgeport)

A novelty illusion prologue suitable for presentation with almost any type of picture but particularly effective with costume dramas, recently scored a popular success at the Majestic. The simplicity of the presentation, which requires little expenditure, recommends it for consideration by other theatres and for that reason is described in detail.

The title under which we offered it was "The Birth of a Dancer." The stage is set with a 12-foot candle made from beaver board and cut to shape, painted white. The interior is hollow and shows two large sprays of flowers. Gradually before the eyes of the audience the flowers begin to vanish and the form of a girl dancer is seen to fade in slowly. This continues until the flowers have vanished and the dancer appears in plain view. She steps out of the candle, does her specialty and steps back again when the process is reversed, girl vanishes and flowers appear again. It is very puzzling and caused considerable comment when shown here.

Records Fall as Paul Ash Continues Performances

Paul Ash and his orchestra gave their two thousandth Chicago performance on October 4th, breaking all records for Chicago, and it is believed for any other American city, for a series of continuous performances. Ash has been appearing in Chicago for the past seventeen months, starting at the McVickers Theatre and moving over to the Oriental when the latter house opened, and during this period, approximately four million people have attended his performances.

Wilton Staging Novel Acts As "Surprise" Features

"Surprise Nights" are proving quite a hit at the Strand Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, under the direction of Manager H. E. Wilton. On these nights, which are held every Monday, Manager Wilton contrives to put over a stunt that is different to the usual run of presentations. On one occasion recently, Mr. Wilton engaged a male vocal trio, but they did not appear on the stage at all. The three singers were seated in the audience and, when the time came, they each lighted a cigarette and started to smoke. Ushers went down the aisles and the offenders finally promised to be good if they were allowed to sing. They then went to the orchestra pit and did their stuff there.

Another "Surprise Night" stunt was the appearance of a bagpipe band of 10 pieces, which marched in from the front of the theatre and around the aisles to the stage. On another occasion, Mr. Wilton had a boy singer, dressed in the uniform of an usher, sing in the body of the house—only to be stopped by a policeman through being supposedly under age. The argument is finally settled when the policeman agrees that there is nothing to prevent the boy singing in the theatre but not on the stage. Mr. Wilton finds that these stunts get people talking and they come to see what is going to happen next.

Festive Program Celebrates Murray Anniversary

This was a festive week at the Murray Theatre, suburban house of Kansas City managed by Jay Means. The theatre opened six years ago last Sunday and the event was observed with suitable celebration. All week vaudeville acts were added to the programs of feature pictures, while Sunday night the Kansas City Juvenile Entertainers staged a revue which packed the theatre.

Paul Witte Celebrates 20th Year as Bijou Manager

Paul Witte celebrated his 20th year as manager of the Bijou Theatre in Decatur, Ill., on October 6th. The event was celebrated with a special program during the week and an affair given the employees of the theatre by Mr. Witte on the date of his 20th anniversary as manager of the Bijou.

Fox Academy Opens With Elaborate Bill

New York's New Mid-Town House Features De Luxe Type Bills

THE New Academy of Music, occupying a site opposite that on which stood the old Academy on Fourteenth Street, near Irving Place, New York City, was opened to the public last Monday night by William Fox. The new theatre, which becomes the "flag-ship" of the Fox chain in New York, began its career as the home of first-run features and elaborate stage offerings with a lavish program which brought to the mid-town section the de luxe type of presentation provided by the big Broadway cinema palaces.

The New Academy, which has a seating capacity of about 4,000, presents four shows daily of programs comprising photoplays supported by stage attractions and music by a symphony orchestra under the direction of Erno Rapee and a pipe organ operated by Alexander Richardson and Frank Adams.

The opening screen production was the Fox adaptation of Harry Delf's stage comedy, "The Family Upstairs." The stage portion of the bill offered the Kouns Sisters, sopranos; Emil Boreo, late of the Chauve-Souris; Borrah Minevitch and his harmonic symphony orchestra; Allan K. Foster's Academy girls and a ballet staged by Anatole Bourman with Mile. Klemova and M. Daks in the principal roles.

S. J. Stebbins is the managing director of the new theatre and Edward Renton is house manager.

Peggy English Featured in State Presentation

The stage presentation offered by the "State Bunch" in conjunction with the showing of "Upstage" at the State Theatre, Detroit, last week, featured Peggy English, and had Fred Stritt and Russ Morgan appearing in their customary roles of leaders of the entertainment. Others in the act were Rich and Snyder, singing team; and John and Mary Jennings, dancers.

Remodeled Granby Opens Paramount Home in Norfolk

The Granby Theatre, remodeled and refurnished, was reopened as the home of Paramount pictures in Norfolk, Monday, October 3. The attraction offered on a special bill signaling the occasion was "Tin Gods." The first performance was presented to an invited audience, the guests of Wilmer and Vincent and presided over by a "Miss Paramount" as hostess.

Bigger Stage Shows Offered at Isis, Kansas City

The first invasion of larger type stage novelties into suburban theatres of Kansas City has been announced with the change of policy at the Isis Theatre. The change to vaudeville and feature pictures at the Isis was announced this week, following the acquisition of that theatre by Universal.

Colin O'Moore Returns to Capitol Stage

Colin O'Moore, concert tenor who recently made his debut as a featured soloist in a picture theatre at the Capitol, New York, returns to that house this week as one of the attractions Major Bowes is presenting in connection with Greta Garbo's new screen vehicle, "The Temptress." O'Moore sings "Ship of Dreams" as his leading number. The musical bill also provides Celia Turrill's rendition of "Song of the Soul." The ballet feature is entitled "The Legend of the Amethyst" with Joyce Coles in the principal role.

Royal Welch Choir Stage Feature at Rivoli

The Royal Welch Choir is offered as the stage feature instead of the usual Publix unit show at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, this week. The screen attraction for the week is "The Quarterback," Richard Dix's new Paramount vehicle. The program also offers Irmanette, violinist dancer; a James A. Fitzpatrick, Music Master feature, "Giuseppe Verdi"; the Rivoli Orchestra in an overture featuring selections from "Sari"; Murtagh at the Rivoli organ, and Rivoli Moviements.

Frolic Staged by Plunkett Featured at Stanley

The second of the Joseph Plunkett stage presentations being circuit to certain houses in the Stanley group, was the feature of the bill surrounding the screen attraction, "The Amateur Gentleman" at the Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia, last week. The production was offered as the second edition of the Stanley Frolic. Kitty McLaughlin, the Stanley-Mark Strand Male Quartet, Estelle Carey and Betsy Rees were among the featured performers.

Two Musical Features With Photoplay at Eastman

The Eastman Theatre, Rochester, presented two musical stage features last week on an elaborate program surrounding the photoplay attraction, "Battling Butler." These were titled "Back Through Melody Land," in which recent song hits and dances were featured, and "The Blue Room," an ingeniously staged offering introducing excerpts from Richard Roger's musical comedy "The Girl Friend." The scene for the latter first showed a huge blue print and then the interior of the room that was designed from it—the setting in which Martha Atwell and Howard Laramy sang numbers from "The Girl Friend."

Charles Previn to Direct Orchestra at Roxy

Charles Previn, until recently musical director for the Skouras Brothers at the Missouri and later the Ambassador theatres in St. Louis, has been engaged to direct the orchestra at the new Roxy Theatre, New York, scheduled to open in February. Previous to his entry last February in the motion picture field as musical director, Previn had charge of the Municipal Opera Company at St. Louis, which he joined in 1921 after eight years as general musical director of the Klaw and Erlanger Enterprises.

30 in Cast of Revue Staged at Minneapolis State

A colorful stage revue titled "In Old Madrid" was the supplementary attraction at the State Theatre, Minneapolis, last week, when "3 Bad Men" was offered as the screen feature. The revue featured Jack Russell, Josephine Davis, Don McKinnon, Bernice Fetch, Mirth Mack, the Triggs and Bob Brose and the Spanish Serenaders.

Proctor's Reduce Prices to Meet Strand in Troy

The fact that Proctor's Fourth Street house in Troy, reopened this fall with a 50 cent admission price, probably means a stiff fight for patronage during the months to come with the Strand interests. The Proctor house will show vaudeville and pictures in competition with the Troy, also a fifty cent house, with pictures alone.

Preview Program Opens Woonsocket Stadium

Rhode Island's Governor Formally Dedicates Latest Publix Link the Following Night

THE new Stadium Theatre which is the latest link in the Publix chain, was officially opened with a preview performance Sept. 26, at which the Mayor and prominent state officials spoke. Governor Pothier will formally open the last public performance the following evening.

This new theatre situated in the heart of the city is part of the million dollar realty development of the Stadium Realty Corporation. The building includes four stories of offices and a two-story arcade for stores. The theatre has been leased to Famous Players-Lasky Corp., and will be operated for Publix by William P. Gray, of the Maine and New Hampshire Theatres, Corp. It was announced at this opening that the Stadium was the one hundred and thirty-fifth theatre now operated by William G. Gray.

The policy of the Stadium, which seats 1,283, will be pictures and presentations, with changes twice weekly. The house is equipped with the most modern stage effects and can play the largest road shows. The night scale will be thirty-five and fifty with all seats thirty cents at the matinees.

The orchestra was conducted by N. W. Finston, of the Publix music department, at the preview showing. Harry Mark, of the Publix home office, received the key from the builders in behalf of his corporation. G. E. Guise, formerly of the Miles circuit in Detroit, is the resident house manager.

The arcade and lobby entrance, 65 by 47 feet, is arranged with a broad centre aisle fourteen feet wide leading directly from the street to the foyer doors of the theatre. At both sides of the entrance to the lobby are arched, recessed panels and bronze frames displaying attractive hand-done art work on current attractions.

Along both sides of the arcade lobby are large leaded plate glass windows of colonial design and over the central portion is a decorative sky-light which adds to the architectural beauty and floods a large area with light.

The entire lobby is quietly but richly decorated with caenstone walls, verde antique polished marble wainscote, terrazzo floor, fluted columns dividing the panels, and ornamented ceiling.

Separating the outer and inner lobby is a set of metal and plate glass doors, over which are panels carrying hand-done art work descriptive of attractions and like panels are on the opposite side in the inner lobby. The manager's office is located at the right of the inner lobby.

Another set of metal and plate glass doors separate the inner lobby from the foyer, and adorning the ceiling of this lobby is a beautiful painting of a reclining figure done by the distinguished artist, Maurice Compris.

The spacious foyer of the theatre, eighty feet long and twenty feet wide, is a veritable work of art, and the arched and vaulted ceiling is handsomely decorated in turquoise blue, Italian red, ivory and gold.

Luxuriously Furnished

The period furniture, chairs, divans, lounges and tables adorning this foyer, also the ladies' reception and dressing room and the men's smoking room, was all specially designed and built for this theatre.

In the central portion at left of the foyer is a finely proportioned ornamental fireplace and mantel, which are reflected in the plate glass mirror which graces the broad double stairway leading from the foyer to the upper portion of the stadium.

The staircases have ornamental metal railings and posts surmounted with gold bronze finials of beautiful design.

Large inviting Italian settles and arm chairs, some covered with crimson damask, some in soft green brocade and other harmonizing colors, and massive hand-made Italian floor candelabra are but a part of the altogether charming furnishings.

At the end of the foyer is a decorative tile drinking fountain conforming in style with the fountains flanking the mantel in the centre and provided with an ice chamber for cooling the water.

Opening from the foyer at each end are the ladies' reception and dressing rooms and the men's smoking room. Both these rooms are paved with the rarest of tile in decorative figured designs in colors permanently set with glazed enamel. All this tile was imported from Holland originally for use in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York City, but the design was not thought exactly suitable for a church and Mr. Darman secured them at great expense for the Stadium Theatre. Both ladies' and men's rooms are Dutch in design.

Adjoining both these rooms are toilet rooms lined throughout with white vitrolite glass and with ornamental Grecian border done in black and gold.

Leading from the foyer are also the coat room, ushers' room, matron's room and janitor's room, the check room being at the right extreme end, where there is also a wide exit door.

Entrance to the theatre auditorium is through spacious open corridors leading from the foyer to the orchestra and loges and by stairways leading to the stadium balcony.

Unobstructed View

The auditorium is of the stadium design and is 120 feet long by 90 feet wide, having a seating capacity of about 1,500. The balcony is practically a continuation of the orchestra or main portion of the auditorium, but with a greater pitch. There is absolutely unobstructed view of the entire screen and stage from every seat in any part of the auditorium.

The Adam period ornamentation is retained throughout. The pilasters in the auditorium are notable in that each one has embodied in its design the portrait of some famous musician or stage celebrity. In two of them Mr. Compris has painted the portraits of the children of Arthur I. Darman, owner of the theatre.

The auditorium ceiling and walls are decorated with beautiful designs done in turquoise blue, ivory, salmon and gold.

The proscenium arch with cartouche bearing the Stadium insignia in the centre has ornamented mouldings and on either side over the boxes are the organ grilles.

The boxes, two at either side of the proscenium arch, are handsomely draped with silk velvet in turquoise blue with gold fringe and embroidered with complimentary colors.

The main stage curtain and valance is of silver metal cloth with fringes and tassels of turquoise blue, and the asbestos curtain is painted to simulate turquoise blue velvet with deep fringe at bottom.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company has installed its latest type of double unit concert organ, which is said to be the largest and finest possible in a theatre of this size. There are also two Steinway grand pianos.

Apparent on the screen

THE IMPROVEMENT in the rendering of color values in black and white tones, when the picture is printed from Eastman Panchromatic Negative on Eastman Positive, is readily apparent on the screen.

PATRONS will notice the difference—and that's what really counts at the box office.

EASTMAN PANCHROMATIC NEGATIVE is now the same price as ordinary negative. It keeps as well as ordinary negative and, except for the lighting in the darkroom, is developed in the same manner as ordinary negative. Yet it's an extraordinary product.

Sanford, Irvington, Latest Addition to Fabian-Stanley Circuit

THE Sanford Theatre, newest addition to the chain of Fabian theatres in New Jersey, was auspiciously opened by a group of film executives at Irvington, Monday night, September 13. The playhouse, which is situated at Springfield and Sanford avenues, is only twenty minutes away from the heart of Newark.

Jules Mastbaum, president of the Stanley Corporation of America, with which the Fabian interests are aligned, was chief speaker. He complimented the Fabians on the magnificence of the new $500,000 theatre and stressed the point that Irvington patrons could look forward to the same type of high type entertainment as offered in Newark.

Jacob Fabian, vice-president of the Stanley Company, was also a speaker. Osear L. Weingarden was master of ceremonies. Others who made addresses were Mayor D. H. Green of Irvington, William Ford of the Kiwanis Club and Louis Golding, who with Mr. Weingarden built the playhouse. This theatre is under the direction of the Fabian Circuit.

The Sanford is declared to be a suburban theatre with such elements of decoration, coziness and excellence that it compares to and ranks with the best playhouses of its type in America. The Sanford is Spanish in design and the same idea has been carried out in the interior. The plans were drawn by William Lehman, of Newark, while the decoration was done by Signor Margelotti, of New York, who did the interior painting of the Theatre Guild.

The theatre has a seating capacity of 2,000. Velour plush chairs have been spaciouly installed for the comfort of patrons. Music is supplied by the latest model Wuritzer organ.

Memphis Suburban Theatres Rapidly Progressing

Construction work has started on two suburban motion-picture theatres to be erected in Memphis, Tenn., one to cost in the neighborhood of $75,000, and the other about $50,000.

The Rialto, the larger of the two, is being built by the Dixie Amusement Company on Jackson Avenue. Plans call for a seating capacity of 1,000 and strictly up-to-date equipment.

The other house, the Lamar Theatre, at Lamar Boulevard and Kyle Street, is being erected by Joe Mocerì and Paul Zerilla.

The Lamar will also seat 1,000 and be modern in every respect.

Both theatres are expected to be ready for business during the early part of December.

Two New Theatre Projects for Westminster, B.C.

According to a recent report, New Westminster, B.C., will soon have two new motion-picture theatres.

One of these is to be located uptown and the other on Columbia Street. The backer of the former project is E. J. Timms of Langley Prairie. Mr. Timms has already had plans drawn for the erection of a modern theatre at Sixth Street and Fourth Avenue.

The other theatre, it is said, will be built on a vacant lot across from the city hall. A Vancouver firm of architects have been commissioned to draw the plans for the building which will have a seating capacity of approximately 1,000. The estimated cost of the proposed house is $100,000.

Fine and Kramer Plan New Cleveland Playhouse

Meyer Fine and Abe Kramer of Cleveland, who recently withdrew from the Ohio Amusement Company and are now forming a new circuit of their own, announce that they are having plans prepared for a 1,800-seat theatre to be built at Union Avenue and East 114th Street to cost $150,000. Nicola Petti, who has done most of the recent suburban houses, is the architect. Work is expected to be started on the two-story structure within two weeks with hopes of its completion in February. In addition to the theatre the building will have nine stores and office space.

Award Contract on Wm. Fox St. Louis Theatre

Contracts have been awarded for the wrecking of the existing building and the clearing of the site of the $5,000,000 William Fox theatre, hotel and office building project to be erected at Grand and Washington Boulevards, St. Louis, Mo.

The new theatre designed by C. Howard Crane of Detroit will seat 5,000 persons on the main floor and balcony and will be the largest theatre in the Middle West.

May Build at Canon City, Colo.

Following the sale of his Sarah Theatre, Canon City, Colo., to P. B. McCormick, who operates the Jones Theatre in Canon City, J. J. Sarah recently announced that he planned to build another motion-picture house in the near future.

one for stage use and the other in the orchestra. The orchestra platform is of the most approved design and arrangement and large enough to accommodate easily twenty musicians.

So far as stage equipment and scenery is concerned this theatre has as fine equipment for showing pictures and vaudeville attractions as any of its size to be found anywhere.

Portable Stage Towers

Aside from the auxiliary lighting, which will be done by the spotlight and effect machine from the projection booth, the stage itself is equipped with two immense towers twelve feet in height, which are portable and which carry twelve powerful electric lamps, by means of which extraordinary lighting effects can be produced. There are also six flood lights, six standard spotlights, bunch lights, etc., besides the full complement of borders and footlights.

A notable feature is a battery of twelve spotlights fixed in the grille of the ceiling above the orchestra pit, and so arranged as to throw thin beams of light on the orchestra performers and which may be used singly or in numbers.

The projection room and generator room are located at the top of the theatre in the extreme rear. The equipment is the exact duplicate of that recently installed in the Metropolitan Theatre, Boston, and is sufficient for any de luxe theatre anywhere in the world.

There are three of the latest model Simplex projectors with high intensity arcs, and pulling 120 amperes of current and Mestrum spotlight.

Florida Bond Issue Gets Strong Support

Citizens of Gainesville, Fla., have given their whole-hearted support to the issuance of a bond which is to provide for them a modern Motion Picture theatre, practically every one seeing the need of such an institution, according to report.

Disposition of the bonds which, it is claimed, will pay interest at the rate of 24 per cent in the monthly allotment of tickets, is progressing satisfactorily according to those in charge.

Plans of the agents are said to provide for the redemption of the bonds at the rate of $5,000 a year.

Schine Buys Theatre Site at Cortland, N.Y.

The Schine Theatrical Corporation of Gloversville, N.Y., owners of some sixty-odd theatres in upper New York State, are about to erect a new house at Cortland, N.Y.

The corporation recently closed a deal whereby it purchased a site 150 feet by 250 feet on the main street of Cortland, where a 1,700-seat playhouse is planned. The theatre will be equipped for motion pictures, vaudeville and stage attractions.

Final Plans Prepared on Coffeyville House

Final plans have been prepared by C. A. Henderson, 118½ West 9th Street, Coffeyville, Kas., for the new theatre J. B. Tackett will erect on West 8th Street, Coffeyville, Kas. The new building will be one and two stories, 50 by 120 feet and cost about $50,000. Brick, concrete and terra cotta will be the principal construction materials.

Inquiries and Comments

The Reflecting Properties of White Paints

MUCH has been said concerning the light reflecting properties of paints in general, and yet little has been said when the concrete information available on the subject is considered.

In view of this "Yes and No" aspect of the situation, we cannot help but feel that some real tangible data, based on tests over a very extended period of time, will go far toward throwing some light on a subject, which, figuratively speaking, has been shrouded in darkness.

Time and again we have received requests for information on the proper method of resurfacing motion picture screens and the best paints to use in connection therewith.

A search for the necessary information in current lighting literature has, for the most part, brought to us some very general statements, with only a consequent need, on our part, for passing the buck along to the inquirer.

Tests Results Are Available

Now, fortunately, some rather definite figures are available concerning the reflection factor and depreciation under various conditions of usage of all commonly used white paints, so that there is no further need for handing out guesswork recommendations on screen surfaces.

While the test figures in question relate specifically to the use of such paints on surfaces other than those used for motion picture screens, we can see no reason why they should not apply as well to the latter.

The entire range of white paints is covered from Glass White to Flat White. Obviously, from a picture projection standpoint, we are interested only in paints of last named type, since the thing desired is the selection of a paint for use in connection with a diffusing type of screen.

The results revealed by the tests on the entire series of paints are so pertinent, however, that they are all being given, since it is not inconceivable that this information will be of service for purposes other than that of resurfacing motion picture screens.

Improvements in Paints

A considerable number of tests and investigations have proven that a pure white is generally most suitable for reflecting as much of the light flux as possible.

View of the stage, organ grille and one of the boxes in the new Stadium Theatre, Woonsocket, R.I.

All things considered, white paint is probably of the greatest interest in connection with illumination and two years ago a series of tests were undertaken by the engineering department of the Edison Lamp Works to determine first, the kind of white paint having the highest initial reflecting power when applied to various surfaces and second, to determine the rate of depreciation of the various paints under different conditions.

Within the last decade there has been a marked improvement in the reflecting properties of commercial white paints. This is due to a realization of the importance of the matter on the part of paint manufacturers, and the application of research to the problem. Ten years ago the average reflection factor of industrial white paints, when new, was less than 70 per cent; now (as will be shown later), the average is well over 80 per cent.

Two Varieties of Paints

In general, paints may be divided into two varieties—oil paints and water paints—depending upon the liquid which is used as a vehicle for the pigment. Oil paints, although more expensive, are much more durable than water paints, and can be cleaned. They act as preserving coats for the surfaces to which they are applied. Many previous tests have shown the rapid depreciation of water paints and it can be said without further comment, that they should be used only as a temporary measure.

In this tests mentioned above, 26 samples of various compositions were applied to wood, concrete, and metal surfaces. Two specimens were prepared with each sample on each of the surfaces. One set of these specimens was sealed in a dust-proof cabinet having a glass front and the cabinet was then placed in such a position as to receive direct north sky light.

The test on this set of specimens would show what might be called the inherent depreciation of the paint, or that due to the action of light alone.

The second set of samples was placed close to the ceiling in a factory building where there was a certain amount of very small metallic and graphite particles in suspension, and a fairly high percentage of products of combustion. This test would show the acquired depreciation which a paint would have under conditions which would be considered more severe than those encountered in normal service.

Average Reflection Factor

The initial measurement of reflection factor of the 26 different samples of white paint tested, showed an average value of 81.1 per cent. The highest value observed was 87.6 per cent, which is for a flat white paint having titanox lead and free zinc as pigment material.

The lowest value was 75.5 per cent for a flat white paint with lithopone as the pigment material.

The tests showed that the character of the material to which the paint is applied has practically no effect on the rate of depreciation, and, further, that the type of finish (gloss, eggshell, or flat, had, on the average, little effect on the rate of depreciation.

(To be concluded)

Waller of Ward-Leonard, Talks On Projection

Alfred E. Waller, of the Ward Leonard Electric Company, delivered a talk before the American Projectionists Society on Ward Leonard Ribbohm Resistors in regard to their application in projection apparatus and other fields.

This talk was most interesting, inasmuch as it brought out in detail all the various characteristics of this type of resistors and proved very enlightening to the projectionists who heard the address.

Mr. Waller showed that the Ward Leonard Electric Company have been developing dimmers for projection work for years and that this latest type was most efficient for the application to which it was put.

Saxe Announces 3,000-Seat Milwaukee House

Saxe Amusement Enterprises announces that it will erect a new theatre in Milwaukee on the north side, with a capacity of 3,000, at a cost of approximately $1,000,000. Construction is to begin at once. Castilian motif will be used in the design. The house will have both mezzanine and balcony floor; a stage large enough to accommodate a stage presentation; and two large organs. Rapp and Rapp of Chicago are designers. Erection of this house completes the building program as announced by Saxe four years ago. At the present time, the Saxe group controls 45 theatres in Wisconsin.

Steel Work Completed on Grauman's Chinese

Much interest in Los Angeles these days is being centered on the huge steel framework of the $1,000,000 Chinese theatre being erected by Sid Grauman. It is said that eight hundred tons of steel have been so far used in the building. When completed for its opening, which is scheduled for February 1, this new house will undoubtedly be one of the outstanding show places on the Pacific Coast.

Will Spend $100,000 on Danville Theatre

THE Home Theatre Company, operating the Terrace, Fischer and Palace theatres, Danville, Ill., are at present planning to remodel the Terrace Theatre to the tune of $100,000.

Additional seats will be installed, which will increase the seating capacity from 1,550 to approximately 2,500. The owners will also equip the Terrace with an efficient cooling and ventilating system. When the Terrace remodeling is completed, the house will rank with those having the most up-to-the-minute equipment.

several weeks undergoing a remodeling process. A marquee has been added, the lobby has been entirely rearranged, the interior has been remodeled and redecorated and a Wurlitzer-Hope Jones orchestral organ installed.

Includes 2,000-Seat House in Bronx Project

One of the largest building operations in the Bronx, New York City, is being carried on in the Kingsbridge section at West Two Hundred and Thirty-first Street and Broadway by the Naples Holding Corporation, Dominick Napoli, president. Nine apartment houses, accommodating 578 families, fifty-nine stores, a bank, and a 2,000-seat motion picture theatre will be included in the project. The land area is 600 square feet.

Award General Contract on Missouri Theatre

The general contract for the construction of the $500,000 Missouri Theatre, store and office building on Edmond Street, St. Joseph, Mo., has been awarded to the W. J. Assenmacher Construction Company, Lincoln, Nebr., and construction will get under way immediately. The C. H. & S. Amusement Co., headed by J. H. Cooper, 390 Riverside Drive, New York, is the owner.

The building will have two stories, balcony and basement and cover a site 75 by 140 feet.

Progress to Second Story at Grand Island

Workmen are now busily engaged on the second story of the $200,000 Capitol Theatre, Second Street, Grand Island, Neb., being erected by the Universal Chain. The house was designed by John Ebersohn 212 East Superior Street, Chicago, Ill., while the Goehring-Sothman Company are the general contractors. It will cover a site 66 by 132 feet.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Blue Boy"—Educational, Ritz, Tulsa, Oklahoma

World: "A second feature of the Ritz program is Eugene Roth's 'The Blue Boy.' This production is only two reels in length, however, from standpoint of cast, scenic investiture, artistic treatment and cost of film rental, it is considered a feature picture. It was photographed entirely in natural colors and it is rarely that a more beautiful or effective picture is thrown on the screen."

"The Better 'Ole' and Vitaphone—Warner Bros., Colony, New York City

American: "The magic of the Vitaphone . . . The half of it simply cannot be told. You must go to the Colony Theatre and listen in yourself . . . I am leaving the Colony Theatre conscious I shall have to see 'The Better 'Ole' again."

Herald-Tribune: "'The Better 'Ole' . . . as we remember Bruce Bairnsfather's play, could not compare with the screen version presented last night by Warner Bros. . . . It seems now that we never have seen anything as funny. . . . Don't fail to see 'The Better 'Ole.'"

Times: ". . . 'The Better 'Ole' provoked many an outburst of hilarity. . . . Not since the initial offering of the wonderful Vitaphone has such spontaneous applause been heard in a cinema theatre."

World: ". . . 'Vitaphone—in which persons pictured also are given voice, seemed again last night to recreate the sensation which followed their first showing across the street at the Warner Theatre some two months ago. . . . 'The Better 'Ole'—no doubt constitutes the funniest, most uproarious stuff which has been brought out of the trenches . . . it fairly bubbles over. . . . It is a good show at the Colony—a more robustly amusing show than is likely to be found playing either on the boards or on the canvas of the old town."

Daily News: ". . . 'The film is funny, uproariously, almost hysterically so. . . . The Vitaphone program carries more popular appeal than the original one at the Warner Theatre. . . . A first rate evening of entertainment. Don't miss it."

Mirror: ". . . 'The Better 'Ole' is merry fun. . . . Don't miss it if you want an hour and a half of hilarious fun . . . you'll relish seeing this bill any day at your leisure."

New York Journal: ". . . 'The raves that followed the first showing of the Vitaphone program several months ago were duplicated last night. . . . Vitaphone—the synchronization of sound and sight . . . still remains the cinematic wonder of the decade. . . . I want to say that Vitaphone is wonderful. What is more, I will say it. It is wonderful. . . . And as if all that wasn't enough, the feature picture presented Syd Chaplin in the screen version of Captain Bruce Bairnsfather's 'The Better 'Ole.' . . . the entire film carries out the spirit of Captain Bairnsfather's war caricatures."

Graphic: ". . . 'The first half of the program was devoted to the Vitaphone, that wonder instrument. . . . After intermission came 'The Better 'Ole.' . . . Old Bill must be seen to be appreciated. If you have laughed at some of Mr. Chaplin's comic characterizations, you'll simply shriek at some of the antics of the old cockney who 'elped win the war. . . . Indeed we don't hesitate to recommend 'The Better 'Ole.' It's a gloom chaser that sent the audience into gales of laughter and Mr. Chaplin's performance is priceless."

Telegram: ". . . 'A delighted audience bent before a tornado of such excellent and sustained entertainment as all too rarely swept into the Broadway maelstrom. . . . The Vitaphone features which comprised the first half of the bill were received with perhaps even more enthusiasm than that which greeted this extraordinary synchronization of picture and sound on its initial presentation some months ago at Warner's Theatre. . . . Syd Chaplin will exalt the sternest cynic from gloom to glory with his latest film. And if you know of 'A Better 'Ole' than the Colony, go there. We don't."

The New Simplex Pedestal—one of many improvements made in Simplex Projectors

Better and Better

—but no extra cost

We have always made good projectors. But we are always making them better. Our engineers are experimenting with new ideas every day—ideas and new principles that they develop themselves or that they obtain from other great engineers in America and in foreign countries. No matter how trivial or how important a new principle appears, or who discovers it, its value is thoroughly tested by actual application in Simplex laboratories.

Thus the accumulated ability of practically all the engineering world is constantly applied to make Simplex representative of the latest and greatest achievement in Motion Picture Projectors.

Many improvements have been incorporated in Simplex Projectors during the past year or two. One recent improvement, however, that can be readily appreciated is the new type of pedestal with which Simplex Projectors are equipped.

This new pedestal is solid and rugged. It is furnished at no extra cost.

May 18, 1926.

Robert Morton Organ Co.,
1560 Broadway,
New York City.

Gentlemen:-

It is indeed a pleasure for us to be able to take this opportunity to thank you and your concern for the wonderful instrument you have installed in our Congress Theatre.

There is no unit in our program which gives our patrons more pleasure than the musical accompaniment to our pictures. It has been very satisfying to us to know that our music has been such an overwhelming success.

An organ as complete and successful in every detail as your style #49 can only be surpassed by the wonderful service you have rendered in installing and maintaining the instrument. Although we have needed comparatively little attention it has been pleasing to know that skilled mechanics are ready at a moments notice to give us every service
possible.

The success of this organ has prompted us to enclose an order for the next Robert Morton Organ
to be installed in our Grove Theatre, Irvington N.J.
in place of our present instrument.

With best wishes for your continued success
we beg to remain,

Very truly yours,

Kridel Realty Co., Inc.

The inevitable hennens, of course, follow.

Rod La Rocque Is Cast as Gigolo in State-Lake Film

By ARTHUR SHEEKMAN

There was a time when movie players of prominence would not permit the camera to see them at less than their loveliest. But as the industry grew up its products ceased to be merely pretty, well photographed pictures, and now we find Colleen Moore happiest when she can wear rags on the screen. Lon Chaney taking delight in making each new film portrait uglier than the last, and Louise Dresser liking

It is seldom that I publicly praise a picture. However, here is a screen play so fine, so wondrously produced, and so forceful, that I cannot refrain from recommending it to the utmost to those who seek the best and the unusual in photoplay production.

"Bardelys the Magnificent"

It has everything required by a really great picture; action, thrills, appealing romance; all so magnificently presented that adequate description is impossible.

This picture was originally purchased for a long run at the Adams. But, due to the congestion of bookings for that theatre, I have placed it in as one of the super pictures that will establish that theatre as a "long run" house of the same type as the Adams.

The best directors in the industry have been assembled to produce Fox Pictures.

You exhibitors only need to look at the names and faces on this page to be convinced of that. You know what these men have produced.

You have made money on their pictures in the past—and you know what to expect when they are given the plays and stories on the Fox schedule and a brilliant array of actors from which to select their casts.

The first of this season's product has proved the box-office quality of Fox Pictures. As the season advances, each new production will prove that this box-office quality is absolutely dependable.

Now~the Carrier System of Air Conditioning is available for the Smaller Theatres

THE first class small theatres and neighborhood houses having 900 or more seats will now find the Carrier System of Air Conditioning within reach and a highly profitable investment.

We have instituted a special department devoted to the design and installation of complete Carrier Cooling and Air Conditioning systems in the smaller theatres. The same outstanding features which have made Carrier Conditioned Theatres famous from Los Angeles to Broadway are retained in a new design and adapted to the small houses.

The system includes the safe, simple, automatic Carrier Centrifugal Refrigeration machine. The same automatic instruments are used to create and control ideal conditions of temperature and humidity every day in the year. The system is equipped to warm and humidify the air in Winter as well as to cool and dehumidify the air in Summer.

Finally, the system is backed by the guarantee of results which Carrier has attached to every contract during 25 years of experience in the specialized field of air conditioning.

Operators of Theatre Chains, Owners of Individual Theatres and Theatre Architects are invited to investigate this new adaptation of the Carrier Patented System. Write for the Book, "Theatre Cooling," and ask for a visit from one of our Engineers.

That Amazing Universal Complete Service Plan

(No. 504—Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corporation)

I UNDERSTAND THE SALES DEPARTMENTS OF VARIOUS PICTURE companies are at their wits ends trying to devise some sort of a sales scheme to offset the terrific success of Universal's Complete Service Plan.

IT CAN'T BE DONE.

SCHEMES—ALL THE SALES SCHEMES IN THE WORLD—CAN'T PUT UP a successful opposition to the actual goods.

UNIVERSAL'S COMPLETE SERVICE PLAN IS NOT A PROMISE—IT IS A delivery.

A DELIVERY CANNOT BE MADE WITHOUT THE GOODS—AND THE Universal is the only one that has the goods to deliver.

NEARLY 7,000 UNIVERSAL COMPLETE SERVICE CONTRACTS HAVE been sold! Just think of that! It is a tremendous business in itself and it is saving the business lives of more theatre owners than any other single element in the history of the trade.

GIVE A MAN SOMETHING WHICH ACTUALLY ENABLES HIM TO STAY in business at a profit, and no cooked-up scheme is going to lure him away from it. Give 7,000 such life-savers, and you've got a backbone for a great big business.

UNIVERSAL COMPLETE SERVICE IS THE EASIEST THING TO SELL that any film salesman ever sold in his life. Even in the very beginning, when it was new and untried, it was so obviously fair and square that no argument was necessary to sell it. Once it was explained to the exhibitor, it was sold!

AGAINST A THING SO SOLID, SO GOOD, SO FAIR AND SO ABSOLUTELY revolutionary no scheme can possibly be devised with any degree of success at all.

NEVER IN ALL MY BUSINESS CAREER HAVE I RECEIVED SO MANY letters of praise—of actual thanksgiving—for the benefits derived by exhibitors who signed up for this wonderful plan. Never were the expressions of gratitude so enthusiastic and heartfelt.

WHEN YOU CONSIDER THAT MANY A THEATRE WHICH WAS ABOUT to close was enabled to stay open at a profit; and that innumerable houses which were operating at a profit were enabled to make a greater profit, it is no wonder that the exhibitors have been generous with their praise and thanks.

IF YOU DO NOT KNOW THE WHOLE STORY OF THE UNIVERSAL Complete Service Plan—the plan which is worrying every other sales force in the business—then you are a very foolish exhibitor!

IF YOU DO KNOW ALL ABOUT IT, YOU'VE GOT IT!

Mergers

OUR candid opinion on mergers in the film business is that they won't happen—not at least with any rapidity, nor upon any great scale.

We refer, of course, to mergers of producer-distributors; theatre mergers are quite another matter.

This doesn't mean that producer-distributor mergers are not logical. But, as any shrewd and practiced operator well knows, logic doesn't necessarily control business deals. In fact, generally it doesn't. Businesses are run by men and men are humanly proud, and self-seeking.

In the picture business, as we well know, personalities count heavily. In fact, a business is often a man's personality. It is pretty difficult to merge men, ambitious men.

Wall Street seems to be regarded as a heavy factor in the film merger schemes that fill the air. We are not so sure about this.

Granted, these are merger days, in the whole business world. And Wall Street is already in the picture business to a degree, as is evidenced by those firms who have financed operations of varying sizes: Kuhn, Loeb; Hayden, Stone; Blair; Merrill Lynch; Dillon, Read; Goldman, Sachs; McClure, Jones; W. R. Compton; Shields; Motion Picture Capital Corporation; Chase Securities and others with their related banks and trust companies.

But Wall Street, as we have pointed out before, is in the business of manufacturing, wholesaling and retailing securities and not at all in the business of producing, distributing and exhibiting films. Wall Street doesn't want to get into the film business, however much Wall Street may want to get into the business of film securities. It is conceivable that some of the moves Wall Street makes is to get out of the film business.

At any rate, Wall Street's idea of a merger is one that is designed to sell securities, which means one that will induce the public to buy securities. Wall Street dresses its shop window with this idea in mind.

Now that idea may not be a logical one from the viewpoint of the motion picture economist. In the latter's opinion, a good and needed merger is one that gives better service at less cost; not merely one that stirs the public's imagination and induces the buying of securities.

So the merger situation which is on the tongue of the trade today resolves itself into these elements:

- (1) A general activity in mergers.
- (2) Wall Street's desire, for one reason or another, for more and new film securities.
- (3) A leaning toward mergers among film companies—to reduce costs and stabilize generally, to eliminate ruthless competition, or just to cash in.

We simply say that whatever may happen won't happen quickly or on any large scale, unless a very unusual sort of a man comes along who can put what seems easy on paper into actuality; who can reason away pride, vanity, ambition; who can do things by the economist's rule and not by mere stock selling objectives.

Speaking Editorially

THE late Film Congress at Paris continues to be the subject of comment, particularly in the British trade press. The Film Renter calls the results "absurdly small," and goes on:

"The first International Motion Picture Congress is over and done with. Several hundreds of delegates have assembled at the Institute of Intellectual Co-operation, under the solemn auspices of the League of Nations. Several thousands of speeches have been made. Several millions of assorted words have been uttered. A lavish banquet has been consumed. Compliments on every possible subject have been paid to every possible person. Innumerable resolutions have been framed on innumerable subjects, connected however remotely, with the kinema. In a word, this congress has passed off in exactly the same manner as most congresses do.

"There has been some discussion as to the reasons why the congress was ever held. And now that it is at an end, there still remains considerable difficulty in finding any very satisfactory excuse for its existence."

* * *

WE learn that the Congress "discussed grandiose schemes for protecting the delicate constitutions of film artistes. One commission discussed with extreme seriousness and at immense length whether it would not be desirable to eliminate draughts in studios, as these were frequently the cause of artistes catching cold."

* * *

BUT, according to the British paper, the Congress did have at least one practical result: "It has enormously stimulated the international sale of films. This has been arrived at not by the official discussions of the commissions, but by the unofficial conversations of the various delegates."

This reminds us of some exhibitor conventions in this country, where nothing much happened on the floor of the convention, but a lot of real business was transacted in hotel lobbies between exhibitor delegates and film salesmen.

Summing up the results of the Congress, the British writer finds these achievements: 1. It has provided an opportunity for the transaction of a great deal of business. 2. It has provided an opportunity of working off steam for the innumerable faddists and enthusiasts who make it their business—and their pleasure—to "reform" the kinema. 3. Most important of all, it has provided a large number of ladies and gentlemen with a convenient excuse for spending a week's agreeable holiday in Paris.

PHOTOPLAY and book relationship has again been receiving the attention of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, in the preparation of its annual Selected Book-Films list. This list is issued each year in connection with the observance of Motion Picture Book Week, which this season comes upon the dates November 7th-13th. The 1926 list is more complete than any of its predecessors, for it contains not only the selected pictures adapted from published sources for the current year through September, but also all book-films still available for circulation which have been reviewed within the past four or five years.

Here is brought together for the convenience of exhibitors, better films committees, libraries, schools and bookstores a compilation of over four hundred book-films giving title, book source and author, featured players, reels and distributor. Compiled for use during Motion Picture Book Week and for year-around book-film tie-ups.

AN EDITOR ON BROADWAY

The Week in Review By William A. Johnston

Emil Jannings

BROADWAY took on an international film impetus this week with the arrival of Emil Jannings.

He was given a luncheon at the Ritz by Adolph Zukor and Jesse L. Lasky. Mr. Lasky in his opening remarks as toast-master stated that just previous to the luncheon Mr. Jannings had signed a three years' contract with Famous Players-Lasky. His obligation, in coming here, was for a period of only six months. So it is evident that the important star was so well pleased with all the production arrangements made for him, not the least of which would be the stories provided, that he has determined upon a definite and long connection with American pictures. Eric Pommer, former production head of Ufa, will supervise, and Mauritz Stiller will direct, the first picture. * * *

THE international film was the keynote of the speeches—by Will Hays, Jesse Lasky, Eric Pommer, Adolph Zukor.

I could not help but contrast the spirit and personnel of the gathering with many previous ones, especially those of the earlier days of the American industry, when the speeches never traveled beyond our shores and rarely beyond New York City. It is significant indeed to be addressed, as frequently we are these days, in a foreign tongue.

Will Hays called attention to the cosmopolitanism of the Hollywood producing colony, which is, as he says, the greatest group of creative folk ever gathered together in all history.

Brief addresses were made by Secretary of Labor Davis, Mauritz Stiller, Thomas Marcus Loew, Sidney R. Kent, Felix Kahn, nings. Others at the speakers' table were: Marcus Loew, Sidney R. Kent, Felix Kahn, E. J. Ludvigh, Emil Shauer, Sam Katz, Richard Dix, Herbert Brenon, William Fraser and Malcolm St. Clair. Among those present were: Lya de Putti, Lothar Mendes, William Le Baron, John C. Flinn, Lois Wilson, George Palmer Putnam, Horace Liveright, Ernest Freedman of The Film Renter, London, Bruce Barton, Karl Kitchen, Albert Kaufman, W. R. Rothacker, Walter Wanger, Eugene Zukor.

AT the Capitol Theatre, New York City, "The Temptress" more than lived up to our predictions for it last week, going to $74,342—slightly over the "Kiki" record for the house. It continued strong this week, setting a new record for the second Sunday of a picture and holding up well. The probability is that the week will reach at least $45,000.

The combination of an Ibanez story, a corking title and the popularity and appeal of Greta Garbo seems to be responsible in a large measure for this record-breaking business. * * *

TWO Vitaphone attractions now hold forth on Broadway—"Don Juan," at Warners, and "The Better 'Ole" at the Colony. Both are doing absolute capacity, and the weekly takings for the two houses combined will reach around $60,000 a week. * * *

NOTHING seems able to stop "Beau Geste" at the Criterion, and the gross varies only with the amount of standing-room sold. Last week was one of the best to date, and this week continues heavy. * * *

NOT much is being heard of "The Sorrows of Satan," at the Cohan, and some of those connected with it seem reluctant to discuss the business being done. While the picture is undoubtedly doing business, there is considerable disappointment over it, and it is doubtful if it will make the impression that some of the other road-show specials have along Broadway. A large and very effective electric sign on the Paramount building has helped, but this must come down this week as the building nears completion. * * *

MENJOU in another, "The Ace of Cads," is proving a heavy draw at the Rivoli, business at some performances being even better than on "The Quarterback," which came very near the figure we set for it last week. * * *

DOWN at Times Square, the Rialto continues to do very satisfactory business on "Kid Boots," the only cloud in the offing being the poor health of Cantor, who may be forced to withdraw next week from his personal appearances. What effect this will have on business remains to-be seen, although Publix will undoubtedly seek an unusually strong attraction to rush in to replace him.

GOOD business is being done, as this is written, by "The Prince of Temp-ters," at the Mark Strand. Sunday opened big, Monday slipped off a little as usual, and Tuesday came back with a smash. This will probably top last week's business on "The Nervous Wreck" by a good margin. * * *

NOT much that is new can be said concerning "Big Parade," "Ben-Hur" and "Scarlet Letter." They are still strongly in the money class, business fluctuating only a little from week to week. "Scarlet Letter" will probably be first to come off, but this one has fooled a lot of the wise dopesters through its heavy appeal to the women trade. * * *

AT the opening last week of "Beau Geste," in San Francisco, at the St. Francis Theatre, it gave every indication of duplicating its remarkable success in New York. Not only was the opening night sold out, but more than $5,000 in advance seat sales had been chalked up. The signs all point to a strong run. Taken as a whole, "Beau Geste" looks like the best bet of the season, so far, as a road-show proposition. * * *

IN the current issue of The American Cinematographer, is a short editorial by Foster Goss which well deserves reprinting. It has been said before, but it needs to be said again, many, many times—until at last the truth of it begins to be fully appreciated. He says:

"Whatever may be the excellencies or the crudities of the German-made motion pictures, they at least are centering attention on one long-neglected fact—that the cinema is an art distinct and complete in itself. However inanely simple such a statement may seem to be, it is still true that pictures are largely literature, paintings, etc., as expressed in cinematography. It's been a case of 'the play's the thing' rather than 'the picture's the thing.'"

"As is well pointed out by John F. Seitz, A.S.C., it is a truism that when a subject finds perfect expression in one art, it does not necessarily follow that such perfection can be duplicated in another. Hence the great themes of literature often 'miss' in films.

"The German idea, 'The Big Parade' treatment, has pointed the way. Simple stories, deliberately told, attain a forcefulness which indicates what is still to come in the cinema art."

John C. Brownell, scenario editor of Film Booking Offices, who has gone to the Coast to take part in important production conferences for next year

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

TEMPUS FIDGETS

TIME, if you believe Mr. Einstein (or, better yet, if you are one of the eight living men who understand him), is purely relative. Clocks and calendars are a delusion and a snare. Father Time is the world's greatest practical joker. If you were standing on a star a few trillion miles away, and if you had a suitable telescope, you could watch Caesar dividing all Gaul into three parts at the present moment.

Since, however, you cannot stand on that distant star, and have not the required telescope, you can see time turned backward in just as astonishing fashion by an invention so astonishing that we have ceased to marvel at it—the motion picture—and if you don't believe it, just drop off at San Antonio, Texas, any day this week.

According to McGuffey's Third Reader and Wells' Outline of History, the Spanish-American War saw its famous charge up San Juan Hill in 1898, and the A. E. F. went through St. Mihiel in 1918—but any citizen of San Antonio may see both of these epochal events happening at one and the same time in this year of grace, 1926.

On the outskirts of the Texan city, almost within a stone's throw of each other, two Paramount units are filming "The Rough Riders" and "Wings," reenacting the days of '98 and '18.

Again they stand side by side, these gallant fighting units of the United States, bound by the same tie and separated by only years. The old and the new. Frank Hopper, playing the role of "Teddy," leads the charge. Waves of blue and khaki surge up the hill. Charles Farrell, George Bancroft and Noah Beery engage in hand-to-hand conflict with machete-armed Cubans.

Lya de Putti, who makes her second American film appearance this week in Robert Kane's "The Prince of Tempters," a First National release

Somehow, even though we didn't caption it, you couldn't help recognizing this solemn infant as Colleen Moore, First National star, not so long ago

Janet Gaynor, a Fox Films find who has been given leading feminine roles in "Sunrise," "Seventh Heaven" and "The Return of Peter Grimm"

Rehearsal for what will ultimately be the most famous haircut in history—Jackie Coogan's trim for "Johnny Get Your Hair Cut," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film

Estelle Clark, one of the stock players being developed on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot, wears a blonde wig for her role in "Exit Smiling," Sam Taylor's first directorial effort for M-G-M

An unusual camera silhouette of Billie Dove and Raymond Bloomer as they appear in the leading roles of Universal's "The Sensation Seekers"

Another remarkable Columbia cast has been assembled for "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," featured by both ability and fidelity to type. Left to right, the players shown here are E. Alyn Warren, Lester Bernard, Cullen Landis, Shirley Mason, Otto Lederer and William Conklin

Just over the hill the bugles of another generation are blowing. Seconds later another hell breaks loose. Five square miles of torn, mutilated earth, streaked with trenches and pock-marked with shell holes, break into action. Mortars crash; batteries of heavy artillery fairly rock the world; machine guns whine; airplanes dart to and fro, discharging tons of death. This is the St. Mihiel of "Wings."

War again, but a different day.

And both without a single casualty.

FROM the venerable typewriter of Frank Pope comes the following official communique, which conveys the impression that things are rather busy these days with the P. D. C. units on the West Coast. He says:

Cecil B. De Mille is in the midst of filming the spectacular Temple of Jehovah—one of the largest sets ever built—for "The King of Kings." Leatrice Joy is preparing to star in "Nobody's Widow," with Charles Ray playing opposite. Vera Reynolds is enjoying her first vacation in two years in Europe. Marie Prevost has returned to Hollywood from the Sesquicentennial in Philadelphia, where three of her Cairn terriers won ribbons at the International Dog Show there. Jetta Goudal is starring in "Fighting Love," with Victor Varconi as leading man. William Boyd and Elinor Fair have finished their roles in "The Yankee Clipper" and are now being featured by Metropolitan in "Jim the Conqueror," a Peter B. Kyne story. Alan Hale is filming "Rubber Tires," an epic of the auto camps, on location at Santa Cruz. Bessie Love, Harrison Ford, May Robson, Junior Coghlan, John Patrick, Clarence Burton and Erwin Connelly are "tin-can tourists" for the occasion. Phyllis Haver is preparing for her role in "No Control," which Metropolitan will produce. Seena Owen is visiting her sister in Texas prior to returning to the Metropolitan Studio. Joseph and Rudolph Schildkraut are appearing together again in "The King of Kings." Edmund Burns has completed his role in "Whispering Wires" for Fox and is now back at the De Mille Studio. Sally Rand is enjoying a brief vacation. Rod La Rocque is at Catalina Island filming scenes for "The Cruise of the Jasper B." Priscilla Dean and her company are making "Jewels of Desire" in and around the mammoth caves of the Santa Cruz Islands.

BARTHELMESS' HAIL AND FAREWELL

ON the eve of his departure for a European vacation following many strenuous weeks and months of acting, Richard Barthelmess was presented "in person" at a going-away buffet luncheon at the Algonquin Friday, October 15, by First National. On the receiving line in addition to Coeur de Lion's namesake were Mrs. Florence Strauss, at once the salvation and despair of ambitious scenarists, S. Charles Einfeld, Walter Eberhardt and Lynde Denig, who endeavor to keep quite dark as far as newspapers and magazines are concerned any activities of the First National group.

In addition to Mine Host Frank Case's food and the satisfaction of meeting the mentally and physically attractive guest or host of honor, there were several added attractions to justify attendance. Karl Kitchen, the cosmopolite columnist of The Evening World, discussing the comparative merits of the Lido at Venice and Palm Beach as a refuge from the arduous New York winters; Phil Payne, managing editor of Mr. Hearst's tabloid, The Daily Mirror, with a formidable-looking legal book titled "The Law and Its Enforcement," showing that even on social affairs he carries with him the Hall-Mills case, which he unearthed (for circulation purposes); Wallace Ham, not a "Nervous Wreck" after his second cup of coffee, representing the Strand Theatre, for which he seeks and gets publicity, Harriett Underhill of the Herald Tribune, Katherine Zimmerman of the Telegram, Palmer Smith of The Evening World and the chivalry and beauty of other dailies and trade publications whose business it is to review and comment on happenings in the cinema world.

The bromidic—possibly—small-town newspaper comment will serve truthfully, as far as this magazine's emissary could discover: "A good time was had by all."

NO SENTIMENT?

OCASIONALLY something happens which gives the lie to the claim that there is no sentiment in modern business. One of the iron girders for the Roxy Theatre came in the other day with this message painted on it by the ironworkers: "Hello, Roxy! Good luck with the new theatre. The boys in the fabricating shop are betting on you. God bless you!"

BOWLING 'EM OVER

ATHLETIC competition in the film industry is not to be limited to the male contingent, if the feminine employees of the New York Pathe Exchange offices have their way about it. They are organizing a bowling team which will shortly challenge the lady pin topplers of other companies. Mrs. Anna Carroll is chairman.

"C. B."

ONE man in Hollywood who is never too busy to lend a hand to a charitable enterprise is C. B. De Mille—which fact was recognized last week by his election as chairman of the Motion Picture Relief Fund.

Dorothy Gulliver, Universal player, takes a snow slide in her winter sports costume. This is much to be preferred to the icy shower as a means of waking up on a cold morning—but we'll take her word for it

The new Fox Exchange at 2019-21 South Vernon Avenue, Los Angeles, which is built on one floor so as to be lighted from overhead by a special skylight system. The three views here show, respectively, the front of the building, the projection room and a view of the sales offices from the reception room

A SUNNY EXCHANGE

ON October 11 Fox Films opened its new Los Angeles exchange at 2019-20 South Vermont Avenue. J. J. Sullivan, branch manager, entertained the Fox stars and directors at a luncheon in honor of the opening. Exhibitors in that territory were invited and they found many things deserving favorable comment.

The building is only one story high, which permits natural daylight to pour into the various offices through ceiling prism reflectors. The floors are concrete, shelves are all-steel and floor coverings are of heavy inlaid linoleum with mosaic design. The walls are treated with a paint that reflects light, adding to the brightness of the interiors.

Ready accessibility between departments is another feature. The attractive, cleanly appearance of such offices is of itself an invitation to exhibitors to call early and remain all day. A sunlit office cannot help but make for friendly relations between exhibitors and exchange folks.

STORIES

IN the constant search for motion picture material something like 6,000 outpourings from the brains of writers are each year brought to the attention of the story departments of producing concerns. Needless to state, the majority of these are dismissed after a hasty perusal, but there are hundreds of efforts, including plays, novels, short stories and even newspaper serials, that receive serious consideration.

Mrs. Florence L. Strauss is head of the story department of First National Pictures, Inc., and years of experience, an alert mind and a keen sense of humor help her in what she pleases to call a "treasure hunt." She explained the other day, according to an interview published in the New York Times, that the competition between film concerns brings to the fore the upper crust of the literary efforts, but she emphasized the fact that a story or a play that costs the producers $100,000 may be a financial flop, while a huge success may have meant an outlay of only $2,500. As an illustration of this Mrs. Strauss said that two of the big financial hits had cost only the time of studio writers. They are "Behind the Front" and "The Cohens and the Kellys." She said that competition in the story market often forces the producers into a hasty purchase.

Mrs. Strauss has no illusions concerning the film game. She said that it frequently happens that a play or a novel may only inspire an idea on which the picture is constructed, and consequently the screen result may bear but little resemblance to the original. She added that it should be remembered that the object of picture producers is, after all, to make pictures.

When considering the purchase of a literary work Mrs. Strauss prefers, if it is possible, to await the reaction of the studio people to the story. She pointed out that it never pays to force a star into an uncongenial role, and therefore, even in her own analysis of a story, she considers which star it will suit, what other players are available for the supporting roles and who might direct the production.

"It is much easier to impress studio people with a play than with a novel, the reason being that the dressed-up characters are seen and heard on the stage, and the directors and stars, not being trained readers, do not visualize the characters from a book so easily. Therefore a play is apt to beguile some persons into a false conception of its pictorial value."

A WORTHY CAUSE

THE following letter, received this week, requires no comment or addition on our part:

"Will you allow me, through your columns, to appeal to your readers once more on behalf of the wives and little children of the men in our prisons.

"The Volunteer Prison League has for nearly thirty years been helping such families at Christmas time and extending the help as far as possible during the man's imprisonment.

"Christmas is so pre-eminently the children's holiday—the day of joy and gladness, of gifts and good things—that it is especially tragic to think of the little ones who must be cold and hungry, poorly clothed and utterly joyless on that day.

"My close touch with the prisoners of this country brings me more and more into contact with these many needy families. We try to make our Christmas gift most practical. Something that will last through the winter, not only for the brightening of one day. Therefore, in addition to Christmas cheer and toys, we send warm new clothing and hundreds of pairs of shoes for the little feet that must tramp to school through mud and snow and which, but for our help, would be poorly shod.

"Will the readers of this message help me? We try to make every dollar go as far as possible. Checks, clothing or toys should be addressed to Mrs. Ballington Booth, 34 West Twenty-eighth Street, New York City.

"I might add that The Volunteers of America is a duly incorporated organization; that our accounts are carefully kept and audited and receipts sent out for every gift.

"Believe me, very truly yours for our country's prisoners.—MAUD BALLINGTON BOOTH."

Stephen Roberts, director at Educational studios, and Patsy, 200-pound lion cub who attacked him last week at the Selig zoo. He directed her recently in a Mermaid comedy, "Pink Elephants." The heroism of Douglas McKinnon, film editor, probably saved Roberts' life

FILMING THE WORLD

AN arrival of the past week in New York was O. F. Maurer, Ufa director, who came in on the "Resolute," accompanied by his cameraman, Otto Baecker, to prepare for a filming expedition covering a considerable portion of the globe. They were to be joined on Friday by Graf Luckner, who was to arrive with his 250-foot yacht. The working title of the film which they will make is "Interesting Items of the Whole World." Only unknown actors will be used. In this way, years ago, Maurer discovered two well-known German players—Maly Delschaft (the wife in "Variety") and Charlotte Ander.

The expedition will cover the United States thoroughly, taking in the Hudson, Niagara Falls, Chicago, Yellowstone Park, Florida, and so on. In the Gulf of Mexico many of the odd fish and the catching of them will be photographed, both in slow motion and normal speed. Then will come to Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Capetown, the South Seas, Australia, India and China. Returning to San Francisco, the party will proceed down the coast to Panama, finishing there. This expedition, which will end some time in 1928, is the 16th to be sent out by Ufa. Maurer's most recent film, just opening in Germany, is "King Football."

Cecil B. De Mille, F. W. Vincent, Pacific Coast manager for the Orpheum circuit, and William Siström, general manager of the De Mille and Metropolitan studios, snapped together during Mr. Vincent's recent visit to the De Mille plant

"BILL" HEENAN FETED

FOLLOWING his election as president of the Philadelphia Film Board of Trade, William "Bill" Heenan, manager of the First National exchange in the Quaker City, was the guest of honor at a testimonial dinner tendered him Monday evening, October 11, by his fellow exchangemen of Philadelphia.

Thirty-seven members of the local film fraternity, the largest gathering that ever attended a dinner of this kind, came to pay their respects to the affable motion-picture executive.

From New York came George Dembow, general manager for Robert Kane productions and Jules Levy, First National branch manager in that city, to add their share of good wishes. In attendance also was A. W. Smith, Jr., First National sales manager in the Eastern division, who paid a glowing tribute to Mr. Heenan and predicted a highly constructive and efficient administration for the new president of the Film Board of Trade the coming year.

BRITISH VISITORS

HERBERT WILCOX and Cecil A. Harrison, of British National Pictures, arrive in New York the end of the week from Hollywood, reaching here in time for the opening of "London" at the Rivoli Theatre. They were much impressed by Hollywood and are optimistic over the prospects for good pictures, whether made in Hollywood or the British Isles.

Two cartoons by Bruce Bairnsfather, creator of Old Bill, the central figure in "The Better 'Ole," which Warner Bros. have brought to the screen with Vitaphone accompaniment

VERA GETS HER WISHES

WHEN Vera Reynolds sailed for Europe on the Belgenland about a month ago, she went under another name, not wanting publicity or attention. Her plans included four things which she was determined to do: to ride on a London bus, in a Paris taxi, in a Venetian gondola, and to see St. Peter's in Rome.

Her wishes, by this time, have probably all been fulfilled, but in addition she found a welcome awaiting her in England and Scotland which fairly took her off her feet. She was feted and dined and entertained from the moment she arrived on the British Isles until her departure for the Continent, and left with a keen, if crowded, impression of British hospitality.

FILM WEDDINGS

TWO weddings occurred the past week in New York film circles. Miss Ida Briskin, sister of Samuel J. Briskin, was married on Sunday evening, October 17, to Abe Schneider, auditor of Columbia Pictures Corporation. Mr. Schneider has been with Columbia for five years, and is a valued and popular member of the organization. The couple left for Washington after the wedding.

On Wednesday, Sidney Davidson of the Universal home office exploitation staff and Miss Helen Mann were married, and have taken up their residence at Bayside, L.I.

A gripping, tense, thrilling, suspenseful, dramatic moment from the super-epic, "The Yellow Pirate," an Educational-Life Cartoon comedy, filmed in two colors (black and white) with a large cast of ink-bottle thespians

Beginning Next Week: A Remarkable Series of Articles by John Grierson

BEGINNING with next week's issue, "Motion Picture News" will start publication of a series of articles by John Grierson, the English critic, who has been engaged for several months in a study of the American motion picture industry, under the authorization of the British Government.

Mr. Grierson has already attracted attention by his earlier observations on pictures published in some of the New York dailies. In the series which he has written for The News, he continues the same impersonal point-of-view, and summarizes his conclusions in a striking way.

What Mr. Grierson says is distinctly critical, but it is constructive. He does not hesitate to point out faults in picture-making, and comes down to cases in discussing individual films. He is an outsider, of course; but he has a remarkable sense of picture values. All of his comment is interesting, whether you agree with it or not.

The views which Mr. Grierson expresses in this series are naturally his own. They are not to be construed as necessarily reflecting the opinion of The News. But we think everybody will agree that the industry has passed the stage where it cannot bear honest, constructive criticism, designed to help at the source—namely, the all-important place where pictures are made—the studio.

Unless we miss our guess, the Grierson articles will be among the most widely-discussed articles ever printed in this field.

Film "Bicycling" Practically Ended

Result of Country-Wide Campaign Waged by Hays Organization; Estimate $1,000,000 Distributor Loss Last Year

THE practice of bicycling films, long a menace to the film industry and the distributors in particular, has practically been checked throughout the country except in a few unimportant cases, due to the efforts of the Hays organization which for the past year has been waging war on this illegal practice.

Gabriel L. Hess, who is handling the campaign for the M. P. P. D. A., puts the total loss to distributing organizations at approximately $1,000,000 for the past year. The evil was not confined to any one section of the country but from complaints registered it would seem that the practice had spread from Coast to Coast.

The New England Film Board of Trade is congratulating itself upon the scarcity of bicycling cases that have been brought before it for the past few months. Concentrated effort seems to have almost entirely exterminated the practice throughout that section.

The sections of New York State taken care of by the boards located in Albany and Buffalo have an occasional case but they report that the menace has subsided tremendously.

The St. Louis Film Board has had considerable trouble with violators recently, but with the weeding out of certain salesmen seems now to have the situation well in hand.

Going further west, we find that the Film Board of Trade of Arizona has had only two cases of bicycling in the past several months which speaks well of the special investigation that was made. Montana, which seems to have taken the lead in the nation-wide campaign against bicyclers, is in the battle to go the limit on any offenders. Judges out there are firm in their decision to punish exhibitors severely.

The Phonofilm Invades Politics

FOR the first time, as far as known, moving pictures with synchronized music are being used in a political campaign. The DeForest Phonofilm Company have released to the Massachusetts State Republican party for use from now until the end of the campaign Coolidge's speech on "Economy and Government," at the same time showing the President delivering the speech. With this are several numbers making up a one-reel program including "The Radio Franks" in popular and topical songs, a violin solo and a monologue. A truck equipped with loud speakers and a trans-lux daylight screen are used in the presentation of the program.

The Northwest Film Board, located in Seattle, is congratulating itself on the sudden decrease in these cases. Its members seem to think that the rule originated by the Hays organization that no branch managers are to act on bicycling cases before consulting the general managers at the home office has had a lot to do with reducing the number.

During the many meetings held by the San Francisco board during the past year but a single bicycling case has come up for decision. This speaks very well for the officials there in their constant campaigning.

Of the larger cities in the United States, Philadelphia, Washington and Pittsburgh seem to have a fairly large percentage of exhibitors bicycling, but the last reports show that the evil is beginning to be cut down. Film boards of trade located in Charlotte, Atlanta and other sections of the South report that cases are growing fewer and fewer.

The Cincinnati board, at a recent meeting, found that bicycling cases were at their lowest ebb at the present time. In Cleveland they expect that within the next few months their campaign will reach the point where that section will be entirely free from this illegal distribution of films.

Bicycling has been entirely wiped out by the Arizona board, which worked along with the federal authorities and the Hays organization in making drastic decisions against the offenders.

One of the most successful of all the campaigns is being waged in the section governed by the Kansas City board. The past few meetings have not had more than two cases to decide upon. Within a short time it will be up with the clean slate boards.

With the Hays organization putting forth every effort possible to combat the menace and the federal authorities also hot-footing after these offending exhibitors, there is no doubt that before many months the menace of bicycling will be entirely stamped out.

Bicycling in the Middle West has been stamped out almost entirely. Exchange managers in Minneapolis, Chicago, Omaha, Milwaukee and Des Moines all report that they are able to detect very few cases of bicycling by exhibitors.

Very few cases have been found in Dallas, New Orleans, Memphis and Oklahoma City, and only one or two in Jacksonville. Such cases as have occurred in Detroit, Salt Lake City, Denver, Los Angeles and Indianapolis have been as much the fault of the salesmen of exchanges as of the exhibitors themselves it is said.

Kennedy Gives Views on Film Mergers

Disclaims Any Knowledge of Reported Deal Between F. B. O., Universal, But Regards Mergers in General as Inevitable

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT

(Special Telegram to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Copyright, 1926)

LOS ANGELES, October 21.—Joseph P. Kennedy, President and Chairman of the directorate of F.B.O., to-day disclaimed any knowledge of a reported merger between F.B.O. and Universal.

"I do not know of such a merger," said Mr. Kennedy. "I have not even talked to Carl Laemmle for eight months. Needless to say, no such deal could be consummated without my being aware of it."

Mr. Kennedy's statement did not, however, completely preclude the possibility of negotiations between F.B.O. and Universal or some other concern. But he declined to enter into a discussion of a situation so indefinite.

Regarding the reported statements attributed to him lately and widely circulated about the alleged deal, he was much more emphatic. "I can only say that I was very much surprised at the construction placed upon what I said," he continued. "The fact that I stated that there would be mergers in the film industry was associated with the idea of a deal between F.B.O. and Universal."

"I believe simply that there will be mergers, indeed, that they are inevitable, but I am not speaking of who may enter such mergers, or when or where. I am simply expressing the

F. P. B. Net Profits $1,649,689.69

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in its consolidated statement (which includes the earnings of subsidiary companies) reports net profits of $1,649,689.69 for the three months ending March 27, 1926, after deducting all charges and reserves for Federal income and other taxes.

After allowing for payments of dividends on the preferred stock, the above earnings amount to $4.02 per share for the three months on the common stock outstanding.

sound economic necessity for such mergers.

"My viewpoint, perhaps, differs from others, because it is the viewpoint of one engaged heretofore in other lines. I do not profess any great knowledge or experience in the making of pictures, since my acquaintance with them is too limited. But I know that the present situation economically is unsound, and that mergers only will solve many of the industry's problems. In motion pictures, such consolidations of interests are not a matter of saving a few pennies of a few dollars. They are a matter of saving thousands of dollars.

"General Motors Corporation has not lost anything by merging with other concerns. Instead, it is undoubtedly a greater institution, capable of giving greater service because of such consolidations. The same is true of the Steel Corporation or any other big industrial corporation; and in motion pictures there is an industrial side quite as important.

"F.B.O. has nothing to worry about as regards its future. A merger with some other organization might be of advantage, but it is hardly to be termed a necessity since our position is quite sufficiently flourishing. I need not point to the circumstance that we are undertaking production in a more active way all the time as proof of this."

No merger with any organization is being considered by Universal, according to a statement this week by Robert H. Cochrane, vice-president of the company. Nor is Universal for sale, Mr. Cochrane added.

A similar statement was made by Carl Laemmle, President of Universal, in a wire to a Los Angeles newspaper.

Coast Circuits Not Discussing Merger

Head of North American Denies Report His Company and West Coast Are Negotiating to Consolidate Interests

FRANK WILSON, president of North American Theatres, controlling a large chain of houses in the West, denied published reports that negotiations were under way between his company and West Coast Theatres, Inc., to merge their interests. Mr. Wilson, who was interviewed at his New York office by a representative of this publication, characterized as "mere conversation" the report that a consolidation was being discussed by officials of these two companies.

Purely speculative reasoning and not facts, he said, were the foundation upon which the rumor was erected. Mr. Wilson pointed out that before such a merger could be affected a tremendous amount of preliminary work, including detailed audits and appraisals of property values, would be necessary, and that no such steps have been taken by his company. No deal looking toward the merging of the two companies has been broached or discussed between these two organizations, he said, in denying the report.

Revival of the rumor of a consolidation between North American and West Coast Theatres, Inc., at this time appears natural enough. As a matter of fact, this of all theatre mergers, seems a "natural," for North American's chain of 110 theatres, stretching west from the Mississippi, meets the West Coast company's chain in California. In the latter state the balance of theatre power, except in San Francisco, where Fox, Famous Players and others have their own first run houses, is about evenly divided between the two organizations. This and the fact that the backers of North American, a powerful Wall Street group, and Hayden, Stone & Co., the controlling interests in West Coast Theatres, are known to be very friendly in their business relations, make these two companies the most logical choice for headline honors when the "rumor committee" meets to discuss "impending mergers."

North American activities in the Pacific Northwest, where new theatres have been built and the Jensen and Von Herberg houses, acquired some time ago by this company, are doing a flourishing business, have given increasing prominence to North American recently. The West Coast Theatres, Inc., are now reported to have a total of 176 houses under operation.

Based on recent developments in the theatre field and in an age of mergers it is natural that there should be a strong belief that the interests behind the consolidation of the Stanley-Crandall-Rowland and Clark-Fabian-Mark Strand chains are looking toward a national circuit stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The merging of the two most powerful circuits in the West, therefore, would provide the material for a western base, which readily might be joined to the eastern end of the coast-to-coast chain, which many profess to foresee as the ultimate goal of the Stanley and affiliated theatre interests. However, the West Coast Theatres-North American phase of this theoretical development actually is no nearer realization now than for some time past, and according to Mr. Wilson no move which contemplates a consolidation of the two western circuits has been suggested or considered between the two companies.

Transfer of B & K Holdings to Famous Consummated; Deal Involves $14,000,000

FINAL details of the deal entered into between Famous Players and Balaban and Katz, whereby Famous, for a consideration of a stock purchase of $14,000,000, acquired a two-thirds interest and control of the theatre company and its subsidiaries were completed October 15. Famous called in two-thirds of the common stock of the B. & K. Corporation, which it is purchasing at $80 a share, with payment this week to stockholders who deposited their stock with a designated depository.

Under the arrangement, stockholders received full payment in cash with the alternatives: accepting $40 in cash and the balance in three equal yearly installments bearing seven percent interest; or $40 in cash and the balance in stockholders' option on ten days notice bearing six percent interest or the full amount in interest-bearing certificates.

It is reported that Famous intends to make an offer for the remaining one-third of the stock on the basis of the equivalent of $80 a share in exchange for Famous stock.

The properties embraced in the deal include around 65 theatres. These include: Midwest Theatres, Great States Theatre Corp., and the B. & K. holdings in the Lynch and Lubliner & Trinz circuits, Chicago; and in the Kunsky Enterprises, Detroit.

The B. & K. holdings represent assets of about $17,000,600 based on the 246,206 shares of outstanding stock $25 par. The $80 a share evaluation increases the total to in excess of $21,000,000.

Photography Patents Dispute

Number of Processes Involved in Hearing Before Washington Office

IN order to ascertain priority in photography patents possibly six photographic processes will be involved in hearings before the Commissioner of Patents in Washington. In all probability the settlement will take several years to determine.

The processes embraced are those developed by Frank Williams, who created special photographic effects for "The Big Parade"; Roy Pomeroy, who was responsible for the parting of the Red Sea effect in "The Ten Commandments"; a third, devised by Max Handsehegl, which is said to superimpose dramatic action against backgrounds of any nature; a fourth, credited to William Crispinel, a cameraman; the while the fifth is that of George Mitchell of the Mitchell Camera Co. of Los Angeles.

In matters of this nature it is customary for affidavits to be filed and then hearings and arguments to be heard hinging around the last patent to be granted. The process of elimination is then carried down the line until a decision is approached. Lawyers for each contestant are privileged to attend such hearings.

It is understood that the business activity of those involved cannot suffer interference while the hearings are on. However, the process which finally gets the decision will probably be enabled to file suits against all of the others and ask for an accounting of profits.

It has been policy for years in the Patent Office not to discuss any controversy involving priorities in patents. The Commissioner with whom the dispute over establishment of rights in various photographic processes was taken up, would not even admit that he knew of the case.

Italian Merger Discounted

Single Control of 2,200 Houses
Unreasonable, Says Arthur Kelly

SPONSORED by the Italian Commercial Bank, the Stefano Pittaluga Company has taken over several smaller film companies and has acquired ownership of 200 theatres with control of 2,000 others, its capital being raised to 100,000,000 lire. This merger is with the idea of combating American film competition in Italy. Only pictures made in Italy with casts composed exclusively of Italian players will be shown in the theatres of the new combine.

Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president, treasurer and head of United Artists foreign department, who returned from Europe this week, said he believed it unreasonable that 2,200 theatres are embraced in the new combine as, he declared, there are only about 2,500 houses in the entire country.

Little apprehension concerning the report was expressed by Mr. Kelly. Not only is Premier Mussolini friendly to American films, he said, but the excluding of pictures made in foreign lands is practically impossible owing to the fact that Italian houses are using double-feature policies and their country is not producing sufficient pictures to fill their program.

Production in Italy has been practically at a standstill, it is said, owing to the influx of foreign pictures. Another reason given has been the difficulty of financing production.

Three Theatre Corporations Organized at Boston

Three new theatre corporations with the same officers and directors have been organized at Boston. They are the Stoughton-Canton Theatre Operating Co., the Southbridge Theatre Operating Co., and the Olneyville Theatre Operating Co., the latter corporation also having offices at Olneyville, R.I. Each of three corporations is capitalized at $100,000 and the officers and directors are: president and treasurer, Benjamin M. Siegel, 13 Longfellow Road, Cambridge, Mass.; Kathryn A. MacDonald, Framingham, Mass., and Marion E. Steeves, Somerville, Mass.

Asks Ontario Government to Appoint 2 Women Censors

With the chairmanship of the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors still vacant, the Women's Christian Temperance Union, in annual session at Hamilton, Ontario, passed a resolution calling on the Ontario Government to appoint two women on the censor board. Ontario is one of the few Provinces in the Dominion which does not have at least one woman on its Provincial board of censorship. The resolution by the Union was passed October 15.

Solomon Special Fox Agent To Work in Eastern Area

Gus Solomon, formerly assistant general sales manager of Red Seal Pictures, has been made special Fox Films representative to work out of the New York exchange and in the Eastern district.

Lasky Heads M. P. Red Cross Group

JESSE L. LASKY, of Famous Players-Lasky, acting as volunteer Roll Call Chairman, is head of the motion picture group enlisting the maximum response throughout the picture industry of New York for funds to maintain the relief work and public health program of the Red Cross.

The motion picture group is one of hundreds formed in accordance with the campaign plan of the city into various industrial, banking, mercantile and professional groups which carry the Red Cross appeal into every branch of industry. It is expected that by the opening of the Roll Call about two hundred such groups will be in evidence through New York City, representing a total of some 4,500 volunteer chairmen, committeemen and captains. Mr. Lasky has already put into operation plans for comprehensive activity through the group. He has set as a goal a 100 per cent. enrollment with a Red Cross button on every person in the motion picture industry.

Union Demands Closed Shop at Studios

I.A.T.S.E. Ultimatum to Los Angeles Producers Threatens Walk Out Unless Complete Unionization is Adopted by December 1

COMPLETE unionization of Los Angeles motion picture studios is demanded in an ultimatum served this week on several producers by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Motion Picture Machine Operators, the notification declaring that unless the closed shop policy is adopted by December 1, a general strike of Los Angeles stagehands, carpenters, scenic artists, motion picture operators and electrical workers, would be called. William Canavan, president of the I.A.T.S.E., who announced this action, as spokesman of the unions, said that not only would the strike involve the Los Angeles motion picture studios, but it would embrace a nation-wide sympathetic walkout of studio and stage employees, carpenters and electrical workers numbering approximately 10,000 employees of motion picture studios and theatres.

The ultimatum served on Warner Brothers, Famous Players and Producers Distributing Corporation last Tuesday according to the announcement made in New York, demands recognition of the union, a closed shop, readjustment of wage scales, the eight-hour day, pay for six legal holidays and extra pay for Sunday work. It was signed by Mr. Canavan, Robert Muir, of the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America; Adolph Lessing, President of the Scenic Artists Association, a branch of the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, and George Broach, vice-president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. Similar notices were to be served on Universal, Metro-Goldwyn, First National and Fox Films, Mr. Canavan said.

The action by these four unions is the first move in a campaign to do away with the American plan of the open shop in the studios and theatres on the Pacific Coast and the unionizing of the employees of the producers throughout the country.

Representations to discuss the demand for unionization of the studios have been made to producers on the West Coast during the past several months, the union chiefs said, and that further discussions will be sought, but firmly assert that December 1 will remain as the deadline for such discussions. The organization contends that a verbal agreement was made last April through Will H. Hays, president of the M.P.P.D.A., and Fred W. Beetsen, secretary of the Association of Motion Picture Producers of California, in which the Los Angeles industry agreed to employ only union mechanics, pay the union wage scale and grant other conditions. The demands served on the producers, Mr. Canavan said, were the result of the failure of the producers to live up to the agreement.

The Hays office last Wednesday declined to make any comment on the action of the unions.

Public Relations Dep't in Hollywood

Extension of Hays Organization Service to Los Angeles Will Also Make Working Conditions "the Best in the World"

CONTINUING its dual program to bring the public and the industry into closer and more direct contact and at the same time to make motion picture working conditions in Los Angeles "the best in the world," the motion-picture industry will inaugurate on November 1; in Los Angeles, a joint department of public relations and industrial relations in the California association. This will be a continuation, on a broadening scale, of the policy of co-operation with the public at the source of production as well as a new step toward further industrial improvements.

The purpose of the department will be to transmit still more forcibly to the industry, public thought and suggestions and at the same time to devote attention to activities which will give motion-picture studio employees—such as carpenters, electricians, mechanical forces—advantages enjoyed in few, if any, other industries. These workers, it is reported, comprise 60 to 75 per cent of the total studio personnel.

Announcement to this effect was made today by Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.

Colonel Jason S. Joy, director of the Department of Public Relations for the Hays organization, will go to California as director of the combined departments of the California association, Mr. Hays stated.

The dual nature of Colonel Joy's work was worked out in conferences in New York between Mr. Hays, Jesse L. Lasky, president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers of California; Fred W. Beetsen, secretary of that association; Colonel Joy, and Lee J. Frankel, second vice-president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, who has just reported the results of a survey of health conditions in the motion-picture studios, made during last spring and summer.

"Public relations and industrial relations are closely bound together," said Mr. Hays. "Proper regard for the public's wishes and proper regard for employees serving the public are of like importance."

"To discharge the industry's duty in both relationships is the earnest purpose of the association. Intensive study of the possibilities in the studios in this regard has been in progress for some months under the direction of Mr. Fred W. Beetsen, secretary of the California association, and by the producers on the Coast, accompanied by the survey of the health conditions during the spring and summer by Dr. Frankel. This has resulted in the inauguration of the joint department of public relations and industrial relations in the California association."

"An industrial problem always, of course," he continued, "is to furnish steady employment for all studio workers. This is a production problem with the seasonal element very definite."

"Because of improvements in lighting, photography and building of sets, much of the work that formerly was done outdoors is now photographed in the studios. With sufficient effort we believe it will be possible to schedule the work so that the line of production can be made more even and the majority of mechanical forces—carpenters, wardrobe people, and such employees—will work every month in the year."

"The California producers have made much progress in their organized effort for better industrial conditions. The improved conditions for child actors are a splendid example. Schools, under the supervision of the Los Angeles Board of Education, are provided in every studio. Children are cast in pictures only when their school work is above the average. A poor student can no more appear in pictures than a college failure could play on his school football team.

"Supplementing our own efforts to perfect industrial conditions at the studios, we asked the Russell Sage Foundation to make a survey. This resulted in a recommendation of a Free Central Casting Agency for the employment of the extras rather than the agencies through which these extras were paying thousands of dollars every month. This was done. We inaugurated such a free employment agency this year and during the first nine months it provided 190,652 positions—that is, positions for an average of 698 persons every day—without cost to them."

"The industrial department will go far beyond providing steady work for employees. We are inaugurating medical examinations, hospital accommodations, payments during illness or upon the death of employees, pension system, etc."

"Dr. Frankel's report of the survey made last summer states that health conditions in the industry are splendid. Most of the studios now have hospitals for emergency sickness cases. Sanitary conditions, ventilation, dressing rooms, stages can hardly be improved."

"In lessening the phases of seasonal occupations in motion pictures we will effect to a great degree the economic structure of Los Angeles. The purchasing power of the studio employee will be constant."

Casanave in Ohio and Coston in Chicago Enlarge Their Booking Combines

BOOKING combines continue to make headway in Michigan and Ohio. Charles L. Casanave, general manager of the Associated Theatres of Ohio, has added two out-of-town theatres as members of his combined exhibitors booking association, while Jimmy Coston has secured three additional Chicago theatre chains to the list of houses for which he is booking pictures.

The two additions to the Ohio association are the Palace and Lyceum, both located in Canton. The former, a downtown house, seats 2,300 and is scheduled to open on November 11th. It is being built by John Ebersson and will be managed by Sol Bernstein. The Lyceum, also a downtown house, seats 1,200. The circuits affected by the Coston deal are: Cooney Brothers' National Theatres Corporation; Marks Brothers' Theatres and Andrew Karzas' Theatres. Mr. Coston has already booked forty houses with the Sixty-third Street Theatres as a nucleus, and according to him, there are no tie-ups between his booking circuit and any distributor or producer.

Paramount to Hold Convention

Important Meeting at French Lick Will Be Attended by All Executives of Company

EVERYONE of prominence in Famous Players-Lasky will attend the convention of the distribution department at French Lick, Ind., October 25-28. A large delegation of executives is leaving New York Saturday for the convention, and there will be a large attendance from all sections of the country and abroad.

The delegates from the home office include: Adolph Zukor, S. R. Kent, G. W. Weeks, J. D. Clark, Phil Reisman, E. J. Zukor, Mel Shauer, G. M. Spidel, G. B. J. Frawley, Charles E. McCarthy, M. H. F. Wilkes, H. E. Piekett, and the following Canadian officials: A. C. Benson, Ed English, P. J. Hogan, William Hansher, A. E. Ritchie, William Kelly, W. R. Marshall.

The list of guests includes W. R. Fraser, general manager of the Lloyd Corporation; Bogart Rogers, of the MaeLean Corporation; C. L. Yearsley, British National Pictures, Ltd.; Wynn Jones, Ufa; Herbert Wileox, British National Pictures; C. Nepper, L. Whelan, Sam Rachman and Al Kaufman, both of whom are coming overseas from Europe.

Big Increase in Building Costs

Totals $48,689,000 for First Six Months of 1926; Fewer Cost More

ACCORDING to a survey just completed by the Department of Labor, a total of 325 amusement buildings, with a cost in excess of $48,689,000, were put under construction during the first six months of 1926 in the seventy-eight largest cities of the United States. While the department makes no distinction in the types of buildings, picture theatres constitute the bulk of construction.

Comparative figures of building activity for the first six months of 1925 and 1926 were secured from 68 cities, in which the number of amusement buildings for which permits were issued during the 1926 period totaled 307, to cost $47,439,000, as compared with 367, to cost $45,260,000 in the 1925 period, a decrease of 16.3 per cent in number but an increase of 4.8 per cent in cost.

New York City leads the nation with 97 buildings valued at $15,752,267.

Some of the outstanding figures in construction of amusement buildings—and, therefore, principally picture theatres—as compiled by the Department of Labor in Washington, follow:

Ohio M. P. T. O. at Columbus, Nov. 9th

WITH William M. James, president of the organization, presiding, the business administration of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio will hold their annual convention at the Neil House, Columbus, on Tuesday and Wednesday, November 9th and 10th. Six hundred theatre owners from every part of the state will be present. Two prominent speakers already announced by P. J. Wood, business manager of the organization, are Eli Whitney Collins, president of the M. P. T. O. A., and C. C. Pettijohn, chief assistant to Will Hays.

Messrs. James and Wood will spend the fore part of the coming week at the annual state convention of the Michigan M. P. T. O., at Battle Creek, Michigan. They will be on the alert for helpful suggestions to be brought before their own body at the coming convention.

The convention in past years was generally held in December, but early November was chosen this year in favor of the mild weather which will be taken advantage of by a golf tournament, to take place on November 8th, the day before the convention, at the Elk's Country Club.

Fredman Sees British Quota Certainty

Tradepaper Editor, Here From London, Deplores Move But Feels That 12½ Per Cent. Legislative Act is Inevitable

RECIPROCITY between the British and American film industries has been so long delayed that an empire quota of at least 12½ per cent. of British films is virtually inevitable, in the opinion of Ernest W. Fredman, editor of "The Film Renter and Moving Pictures News," who arrived in New York from London this week to confer on the situation and study matters at first hand.

Fredman makes this statement not as champion of a quota (a measure which he has opposed consistently in his publication), but as a close observer of present trends in the British Isles. He has pointed out repeatedly that a quota will only force a number of poor, cheaply made films upon British exhibitors, reacting unfavorably in turn upon public attendance.

Had the 1 to 25 reciprocity plan offered a few months ago been accepted, he feels, matters would not now stand as they do, but in interviewing leaders in the British industry just before his departure, he found that there was no longer any disposition to seek reciprocity, but in its place a determination to force the adoption of a quota. Parliament, he is sure, will pass such a measure quickly and without argument. This quota will be at least 12½ per cent., or about 75 features a year.

Fredman will remain here for about three weeks, conferring with Will Hays and the heads of the various American companies, and upon his return will lay his findings before the British trade.

In "The Film Renter" of October 9, shortly before his departure, appeared this appeal for reciprocity rather than a quota:

"It has been our contention for a long time past that the entry of British films into the American market, so vitally neces-

Possible Film Monopoly Seen in Roumania

IT is reported in Roumania that the government has decided to grant a monopoly for the production of films in the country to a Russian citizen, according to a report from Vice Consul George C. Arnold, Jr., Bucharest, made public by the Department of Commerce. Although it is provided that 51 per cent of the capital of the proposed company shall be Roumanian it is understood that the initial capital is to be subscribed by a naturalized American citizen who has become interested in the project.

Local representatives of foreign film manufacturers see in this monopoly a menace to their business and have formed a society for the protection of their own interests. This society has appointed a committee to investigate the matter thoroughly and has engaged the services of two well-known Roumanian lawyers to protect their interests.

sary for the resuscitation of the British film industry, can only be possible if there is reciprocity from America. It will be remembered that this Journal was the very first to advance the idea of reciprocity which, if it had been followed up with the executive heads of the motion picture industry on the other side, would probably now be a fait accompli.

"It is a recognized fact that British films require wider markets if they are to become a successful profit-making proposition, and the most essential market of all is America with its sixteen thousand screens. Discussions have taken place in this country over many weary months, culminating in the lamentable confession that there could be no trade agreement. Reciprocity, the only scheme which stood any chance of success, was killed at its birth by the manner in which it was presented, and the cloud of doubt fogging the issues which prevented it standing any chance of success.

"Since the death of the Joint Trade Committee, British film production has taken on a decided fillip. British producers have shown that we are capable in this country of making pictures comparable with world's best. Probably the most dramatic change in the situation has taken place over the past few weeks when great British pictures, such as "The Triumph of the Rat," "Monsieur Palaver," "The Lodger," and "Mademoiselle from Armentieres," triumphantly showed the world that we are just as able to make good pictures as any other country. But in order to make good British films a really paying proposition we need wider markets.

"Since the demise of the Joint Trade Committee there have been indications that America is prepared to take British films on a reciprocal basis. Famous Players have contracted with British National Pictures to take their output; United Artists have taken the latest Hepworth offering, and enquiries have been made in London for the five films quoted above, but this is not enough to put British production on its feet. Other American companies must do their share.

"During the whole time that the Joint Trade Committee were in session not a single effort was made to get in touch personally with Mr. Will Hays and the real leaders of the American motion picture industry to arrive at some basis of agreement. We have always contended that New York was the place for a deputation of this industry to go, so that the whole subject could be discussed with the men who can make decisions themselves without leaving it to representatives. It is common knowledge and past history that nothing whatever in this direction was done, and because we still believe in reciprocity, our Editor is leaving next week to discuss the whole subject with the American leaders."

Fredman will be the guest of honor at a dinner to be tendered him at the Hotel Biltmore, New York City, next Tuesday evening.

Al Christie Optimistic On Conditions in France

DECLARING that he had never before seen so much healthful activity in the motion picture industry as at the present time, Al

Al Christie

Christie, who returned a few days ago from a three-and-a-half week's trip in France, only to leave New York almost immediately for California, has expressed himself as extremely optimistic over the conditions of the industry in France.

"The motion picture theatres of France," he said, "are doing more business than ever before. Theatre construction is booming. The building of theatres in France has not been very active heretofore, but it has taken a sudden spurt which is a remarkably good sign for the future of the business. Mr. Christie also stated that 'the French people like our product much better than the pictures made in any other country.'"

Though Mr. Christie was forced to curtail his stay in New York because of production matters which necessitated his presence at the West Coast, he found time to address a few remarks to the district managers of Producing Distributing, who were were holding their sales meeting while he was in New York.

August Exports of Films Va'ued at $663,302

AUGUST exports of motion picture films totaled 22,176,905 feet with a value of $663,302, as compared with 26,115,214 feet, valued at $831,942, in July, it is shown by figures just made public by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

All classes of film showed a decline in August, the exports including 3,370,279 feet of raw stock valued at $84,877, against 6,129,297 feet, valued at $109,990, in July; 469,384 feet of negatives, valued at $96,855, against 731,224 feet, valued at $159,619; and 16,446,576 feet of positives, valued at $465,456, against 18,043,787 feet, valued at $546,983. Shipments to non-contiguous territories totaled 1,890,666 feet, with a value of $16,114, against 1,210,906 feet, valued at $18,350, in July.

Exports of positive film to Australia showed a decided increase over July, totaling 2,685,124 feet, valued at $55,094, against 1,671,045 feet, valued at $44,296, in July.

Catholic Meet Hears Milliken

Secretary of Hays Organization Also Addresses Buffalo Chamber of Commerce

ADDRESSING the National Convention of Catholic Men in Cleveland on Tuesday of this week, Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, told the assemblage that among the 1,500 Catholic men and women who belong to the Catholic Motion Picture Guild in Hollywood are many of the leading actors, directors, writers and technicians of the moving picture industry.

"Every Catholic is an art critic because every Catholic church is an art school," Mr. Milliken declared. Continuing, he said it was the Catholic Church which kept alive the spark of culture through the Middle Ages, when learning was not as universal as it is to-day.

"Pictures," he went on, "have always served the interests of religion. In the early days, pictures interpreted the Bible for those who could not read. To-day a great new instrument, the moving picture, has been given to the world to teach, to make all understand each other and to be friends."

The moving picture is America's most distinctive product, Mr. Milliken told members of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce at luncheon on Wednesday of this week. He stated approximately 85 per cent. of the world's supply is produced in this country.

Mr. Milliken also told of the work of arbitration boards saying that a saving of 4 1/4 per cent. was effected by the system of settling trade disputes without recourse to litigation; the Hays secretary also commented on the new free casting agency recently established in Hollywood which, he declared, will save extra thousands of dollars yearly.

"The moving picture is advertising America to itself," Mr. Milliken concluded. "We are building buying habits through the motion picture. We have kept our pictures as unpurchasable as the editorial columns of your great newspapers, but nevertheless, we are selling goods."

Comerford Acquires Two More

Buys Scranton Theatres from Reis
Interests; Steffes Co. Sells One

ONE of the largest real estate transactions to occur in Scranton in some time, was that consummated this week when the Comerford interests acquired title to the Academy and Capitol Theatres, the consideration said to be approximately a third of a million.

The deal was made through the Meeco Realty Company, a subsidiary of the Comerford Company, the properties being purchased from Mose Reis, of New York, head of the Reis circuit.

The Comerford interests held ninety-nine year leases on each property. Through the deal put through, however, the Meeco Realty Company acquired title to the properties.

For years the Reis circuit dominated by interested parties headed by Mr. Reis, operated the Academy and the old Lyceum Theatre which occupied the site where the Capitol now stands.

E. L. Peck, of Minneapolis, has bought the Watertown, S. D., Colonial Theatre from Steffes Amusement Company, headed by W. A. Steffes. He is already handling the house. This leaves Steffes with the Logan Theatre, Minneapolis.

The Kohn and Fairchild interests operating under the name of the K. & F. Amusement Company are reported to have taken over three more theatres, this time the B. P. McCormick theatres of Canon City and Florence, Colo. This information which reached Denver Friday is well founded and is not denied by the local K. & F. offices here. This new addition will increase their chain of amusement houses to a total of thirteen theatres, making theirs the second largest chain of theatres in the Denver territory.

Morris Pouzner has added two more theatres to his rapidly growing holdings, having this week taken over the Orpheum Theatre at Stoughton and the Orpheum at Canton, Mass. It is rumored that later these houses may be transferred to Universal. These two purchases make a total of seven theatres which he has acquired in three weeks.

Minneapolis Film Board May Inspect Projection Machines

Employment of an expert operator to travel through this territory inspecting projection machines is being considered by the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade as a means of reducing the number of damaged prints.

Julius Bernheim Columbia Business Manager

THE position of business manager of the Columbia Hollywood studio has been awarded Julius Bernheim, who will relieve the strain of business accumulated at the Columbia Western offices.

Julius Bernheim

Mr. Bernheim, a nephew of Carl Laemmle, acquired most of his business experience while with Universal, and while there was associated with the present Columbia executives, Joe Brandt, Harry and Jack Cohen. He was for several years general manager of Universal City, and during the past year and a half was connected with the Universal Theatre Enterprises at the home office.

Mass. Exhibitors Buy Scollay Square Strand in Boston

L. B. Schwartz and Louis Boas, prominent Massachusetts exhibitors, have bought the new Scollay Square Strand Theatre, Boston, now under construction, which will probably not be ready for opening before the early part of December.

The building was formerly the Crawford House, at one time a famous Boston hotel. It was sold last April although more than $125,000 had been spent remodeling it only two years before. With its sale, work was at once started remodeling the structure into a theatre and business block. The theatre section, with the exception of the lobby, is practically entirely new construction. In addition stores are being constructed and a part of the upper floors will be used as a hotel.

Part of the former hotel structure was taken by the City of Boston in its widening of Court Street, necessitating changes in the structure. The theatre will face the new Cambridge Street boulevard and is on the corner of Court Street and Cornhill.

It is understood the new theatre will have a policy of feature films and vaudeville with two changes in program weekly.

Thugs Club and Rob Theatre Owner of Cleveland

The very successful and auspicious opening of Paul Gusdanovic's Regent Theatre, Buekeye Road and East 116th Street, Cleveland, O., last Saturday, was followed by a sad catastrophe. Coming home from the theatre, with $1,200 profits in his pocket, he was attacked as he was driving into his garage, and robbed of every cent he had with him. The robbers attacked Mrs. Gusdanovic, who came out to meet him, and then struck him over the head, rendering him unconscious, while they made a getaway. Except for a bad case of nerves, there were no other serious results from the attack. Garage holdups have been the fashion in Cleveland robberies this season, so Gusdanovic is now among the elite.

Missouri Women's Clubs Opposed to Censorship

THE Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs' state board at a meeting held in Columbia, Mo., on October 12, went on record as opposed to state censorship of motion pictures. The women favor a program of education work through motion pictures.

The Federated Women's Clubs held their first general meeting in Columbia on the night of October 12.

Leaders among the women believe that it is not the proper province for the state to dictate to the people what they shall see in motion picture theatres—that such a policy would be un-American.

In and Out of Town

A DELEGATION of managers of the Wilmer and Vincent Circuit visited the First National home office this week with the object of discussing theatre problems with First National officials. Sidney Wilmer headed the delegation which included Harry Bernstein, Frederick Osterstock and Arthur Hopkins.

CARROLL S. TROWBRIDGE, general representative for the Christie Brothers, has gone to Cleveland to attend a meeting of the district representatives, branch managers, bookers and salesmen of district manager Robert Cotton's division. He was accompanied by Haydn Duke and assistant sales manager Ralph Clark of Producers Distributing Corporation.

E. OSWALD BROOKS, Pathe Southern division sales manager, is back again at the home office after a three weeks' tour through Atlanta, Charlotte, Dallas, Kansas City, Memphis, New Orleans and Oklahoma City. Mr. Brooks had the pleasure of meeting Eli Collins while at Jonesboro, Ark. He also made a record trip of 837 miles through Arkansas in three days.

NED MARIN, First National's Western District sales manager, will start on a five weeks' tour of his territory following the close of the semi-annual meeting of First National franchise holders at French Lick Springs, Ind. He will be accompanied by Emil Jensen, representative of the Joseph M. Schenck organization.

EDMUND H. HOWELLS, Far Eastern representative of Producers International Corporation, foreign distributors of Producers Distributing Corporation, has just arrived in New York after a six months' trip through the Orient.

PREDICTING that Gene Tunney's Pathe pictures will gross tremendous business throughout the Midwest, W. A. V. Mack, Midwest division sales manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., has returned from a tour of several weeks throughout his territory.

EDMUND LOWE and his wife, Lilyan Tashman, returned aboard the "La France," October 13, from Paris, where they have been enjoying a belated honeymoon. They left for Hollywood immediately.

CLAYTON P. SHEEHAN, manager of Fox Films foreign department, and Mrs. Sheehan sailed aboard the Berengaria, October 13, for a combined honeymoon and business trip. They will tour Europe, visiting the Fox branches in London, Paris and other European capitals.

HARRY JONES, the Cranfield and Clarke Western representative, has arrived in New York for a conference with W. F. Clarke of Cranfield and Clarke, Inc.

Asher and Small Plan Sequel to "Cohens and Kellys"

E. M. Asher and Edward Small, producers of "The Cohens and the Kellys," have announced their intention to film a sequel to the comedy which will reach the screen under the title of "The Cohens and the Kellys in Paris." It is very probable that George Sidney and Charles Murray will again be seen in their roles of Cohen and Kelly respectively. The film will be put into production early in the new year. As yet no definite arrangements have been made as to distribution.

Pantages Acts for "U" Theatre

Candler, Now Under Construction in Atlanta, to Play "Pan" Vaudeville

ARRANGEMENTS have just been announced between Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., and the Pantages vaudeville organization, whereby the million-dollar Candler Theatre now being built in Atlanta will run Pantages vaudeville in connection with Universal pictures. The deal was closed for Universal by Dan Michalove, assistant general sales manager in the Southeast and also supervisor of theatres in that section.

At present, the nearest Pantages house to Atlanta is in Memphis. Under the new arrangements, Pantages acts will jump from Memphis to Atlanta. The Pantages organization is one of the strongest vaudeville chains in the country, but with its strength mostly in the Middle West and on the West Coast.

The Candler Theatre, upon which Universal has a long-term lease, is being constructed as a part of a building project inaugurated by Asa G. Candler, the Coca-Cola millionaire. In connection with the theatre there will be a Macy store and an office building. The theatre soon will be ready for interior decoration and furnishings.

It will have its premiere around April 1st, next spring.

The Pantages circuit, which is strongly entrenched on the West Coast, has come into sharp competition at various times with the Keith-Orpheum houses, and acts playing "Pan" time have been looked upon with disfavor by the U.B.O.

For this and other reasons, Alexander Pantages has had under consideration for years plans to invade the East, the stronghold of Keith-Albee. Negotiations were under way at one time, it is understood, for the purchase of his circuit by North American, but nothing came of this, and the latter Keith-P.D.C.-North American deal puts P.D.C. into houses competing with Pantages.

The affiliation with Universal in Atlanta is one of the first definite moves toward an important eastern division by Pantages, though it is understood that he has the construction of a number of combination houses under consideration.

Castle Expands Distribution

Making Rapid Progress With Own Exchanges and Other Trade Affiliations

EUGENE W. CASTLE, head of the Castle Film Company, 729 7th Avenue, New York City, and one of the pioneers of the film business, announces that his company is progressing rapidly with the policy of establishing its own exchanges in the principal cities and further arranging trade affiliations with well-known distributors on a national scale. Connections have also been made in the chief European centres.

It is interesting to note the manner in which Castle made his entry into the motion picture industry. Before making his connection with the old Gaumont company with whom he was with for five years, Castle used to trudge around San Francisco with a motion picture camera acquired through his slender earnings at the age of seventeen. He sold his first picture of a Bay property dedication attended by prominent San Franciscans to the Animated Universal Weekly for the munificent sum of thirty-five dollars. While with Gaumont, Castle rose to the position of supervisor of all branches; but on his travels throughout this country and Europe, was never far away from the camera crank. While toiling the rounds, he continued to secure worthwhile footage for his company.

A number of Castle's former associates are with him today; one of them, Sanford E. Greenwald, he considers as one of the top-notchers in the short subject field. Bert Moissant, another all around film man and former school chum of Castle's, has been appointed production man in the West. Castle's contention is that a successful short subject must be produced by an experienced camera man; and to this end, has surrounded himself with twenty such men.

Castle Films will continue to specialize on "Short Shots," "Castle Novelties" and "Music Legends."

Chadwick Gives Prologue With First Division Picture

Chadwick Pictures inaugurates a new service in the recently completed arrangement whereby Raphael Odierno will prepare special prologues and presentations for houses showing Chadwick First Division productions. Through arrangement with the company, Odierno will supply complete programs or detailed scenarios from which the exhibitor may prepare his presentations. Chadwick has provided for the complete production of the musical settings. Odierno personally prepares all the new Chadwick presentations and is well known as a musical director, having scored more than one hundred feature productions.

K. C. Film Board to Aid in Passing Workmen's Law

The Kansas City Film Board of Trade will co-operate with the Associated Industries of Missouri in effort to obtain passage of the workmen's compensation law, it was announced Saturday, following the passage of a resolution to that effect. The law, which will be voted upon in November, will effect exhibitors in that it will tend to lower the rate of insurance a Missouri employer must pay for his employees. Free trailers advocating the passage of the bill will be used by exhibitors.

Supply Dealers' Chicago Meet

Association Reorganized and Renamed;
New Officers Elected and Dues Reduced

THE successful convention of the Motion Picture Equipment Dealers of America, held at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, this week, was the best answer to rumors that the association was about to disband. A reorganization was effected giving the manufacturers of equipment and supplies a greater voice. New officers and directors were elected and the name changed to Theatre Equipment Association, under which banner the organization will continue to be an important factor.

In the equipment branch of the industry John H. Hertner was elected president, S. A. Louis vice-president, and S. S. Behrends treasurer. The new directors are the officers and C. D. Struble, Irving Samuels, I. L. Nixon, J. E. McAuley, J. C. Brown and W. E. Green, five manufacturers and four equipment dealers as provided by the revised constitution and by-laws. Manufacturers are now eligible for active membership, as are supply dealers, with the provision that dealers having more than one store are only entitled to one active membership, including the right to vote and hold office, each branch store being eligible for an associate membership, without the right to vote or hold office. As an inducement to independent supply dealers and manufacturers to join, the association dues were reduced to sixty dollars per annum for active members and twenty dollars for associate.

A pleasing feature of the meeting was the presentation of retiring secretary B. A. Benson with a handsome watch and chain as a token of appreciation of his splendid work during the four years he held office. Retiring President Struble and the other officers were also given a vote of thanks for their accomplishments. It is the consensus of the manufacturers and dealers that the association will function even more successfully in the future than in the past.

Michigan M.P.T.O. in Session

Organization in Flourishing Condition
With Balance of $40,000 in Treasury

BATTLE CREEK, MICH., October 20.—More than four hundred members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan were represented at the seventh annual convention held at the Post Tavern here, October 19-20. The treasurer's report showed a balance of more than $40,000.

H. M. Richey, General Manager, made a very complete report on the arbitration situation in this territory as well as on the Music Tax situation, recommending a campaign of education directed at the Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, in an effort to convince them that they get enough publicity from having their music played in theatres so they can afford to forget the tax.

Before the M.P.T.O. convention there was a conference of arbitration board representatives from nine states together with Charles C. Pettijohn, of the Hays organization. Several hours were spent in discussing arbitration problems.

A very enjoyable banquet and dance was held Tuesday night. The Wednesday session was given over to unfinished business and election of officers for the following year. The incoming officers are: C. E. Kirehner, president, Detroit; H. T. Hall, vice-president, Detroit; Ruby Fisher, secretary, Detroit; E. Niebes, treasurer, and H. M. Richey, general manager.

There were two bids for the meeting place next year—Detroit and Jackson—and the decision was in favor of Jackson.

W. Bradstreet, New England Theatre Pioneer, Dead

Mr. Bradstreet was one of the earliest to realize the possibilities of motion pictures and organized one of the first circuits in New England with theatres in Boston, Rochester, N.Y., Syracuse, Providence, Pawtucket, Lowell, Waltham and other New England cities. He was also the owner of stock theatres in Malden, Mass.; Lowell and Pawtucket. Mr. Bradstreet also possessed several hotel properties to which he devoted all his time upon his withdrawal from the theatrical field about six years ago, when he sold his interest in the stock theatres and two years later his entire circuit with the exception of the Park in his home city of Waltham, which he operated until two years ago.

Screen Advertisers Hold Semi-Annual Meet in K. C.

The semi-annual convention of the Screen Advertisers' Association at the Hotel President, Kansas City, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, attracted about fifty delegates from various sections of the country.

In the absence of President Douglas D. Rothacker, of Chicago, A. V. Canger, of Kansas City, vice-president, presided. There was no election of officers, election not being due until the annual convention. Most of the routine business having been disposed of by Friday night, Saturday was devoted to pleasure trips about the city.

From the welcoming address of Mayor Beach on Thursday to the final session Friday, the convention was replete with addresses of interest. The screen, as an advertising medium, was praised by Paul Kendall, advertising manager of the Long-Bell Lumber Co., of Kansas City, in his address, "Our Experience in the Use of the Screen." Much data of technical interest in the use of the panchromatic negative was disclosed by George A. Blair, of the Eastman Kodak Company, of Rochester, N. Y., while the possibilities of national or multiple service to advertisers were discussed by H. E. Hollister, of the Pyramid Film Co., Dayton, Ohio.

The convention proper was completed with a dance, given by the Kansas City Ad Club, in honor of the delegates at the Hotel President.

Chicago Exhibitors Aiding Better Citizen Movement

The Exhibitors Association of Chicago is co-operating with the public and parochial schools, the police department, the Chicago Association of Commerce, the Union League Club, the League of Women Voters, the Federated Women's Clubs and about twenty other important civic and quasi-civic organizations, sponsoring a "better citizen" movement designed to prevent juvenile mischief and vandalism on Hallowe'en. It has been suggested that as a reward for good behavior, a free show be given to Chicago children on the morning of Saturday, October 30. This was done last year in about thirty theatres with splendid results, not only from the viewpoint of those sponsoring the movement but on the part of the theatres which participated. The children were accompanied by one teacher for every one hundred children and this arrangement will be made again this year.

Few New Firms Incorporate in New York State

Newly incorporated motion picture companies receiving charters from the secretary of state during the past week, and engaging in the business in this state, included the following: Kodak Cubana, Ltd., Rochester, $10,000, Charles F. Ames, Arthur H. Paul, Domingo E. Delgado, Rochester; Winfield Motion Picture Corporation, capitalization not specified, Edward Herbst, Robert H. Aarons, Zoltan Gross, New York City; The Greek Theatre Guild, Inc., $60,000, Samuel Grubman, Morris A. Kurtzack, Philip Isaacs, Bronx; Roma Philadramatic and Film Producing Corporation, $5,000, John Spano, Peter and Beatrice Tagliavia, New York.

Albany Exhibitors Find Business Prospects Good

NOT a single protest is being heard these days from exhibitors in this part of the State over business conditions. Practically all of the houses report that business is running ahead of the same period last year, and that the winter's prospects are the brightest in many years. While many persons expected that the opening of the Mark-Ritz in Albany, would bring about a slump in business at the nearby Leland, the fact remains that both houses are doing a capacity business, and that there appears to be patronage sufficient to fill every theatre in Albany if the entertainment measures up to the mark. Only last week a new theatre opened within two or three blocks of the Leland and did good business, while business at the Leland and Mark Strand did not show the slightest decrease on account of the new house. Every exhibitor in the territory is making money these days and with business at its best every exhibitor is endeavoring to furnish the highest possible type of entertainment.

Tim McCoy to Appear in New Kyne Story, "California"

"California," original screen story by Peter B. Kyne, will serve as a vehicle for Tim McCoy, whose first Western for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, "War Paint," was also written by Kyne. The new Kyne story concerns the early days of Californian history, during the time of the state's transition from Mexican to American territory, and with General Phil Kearney's invasion.

Aileen Pringle, who recently returned to the West Coast after being featured in several pictures in the East, resumes her work for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by portraying the chief feminine role opposite McCoy. The story has been adapted to the screen by Arthur J. Burke, aide to Brigadier-General Smedley Butler of the U. S. Marine Corps. W. S. Van Dyke will direct "California," which will be produced by Bernie Hyman.

Monte Brice Assumes First Directorial Assignment

The directorial ranks of Famous Players-Lasky were swelled last week when Monte Brice, gag man and scenarist, was given his first directorial assignment, "Casey at the Bat," featuring Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton. ZaSu Pitts and Ford Sterling also have featured roles. Brice wrote the story along with Reginald Morris from the suggestion found in the poem which is the title of the picture. Production will be started as soon as Beery and Hatton have finished their work in "We're in the Navy Now."

Columbia Signs Meyers and Chadwick for Feature

With Frank R. Strayer preparing for another feature comedy to follow "When the Wife's Away," featuring George K. Arthur, Columbia Pictures has signed Harry Meyers and Helene Chadwick for the principal parts in the picture. Other players are also under consideration. The title for the comedy has not as yet been determined, but Harry Cohen, general manager of production at the Columbia studio, says that it will measure up to any comedy title on the market.

New Tiffany Branches and Managers

M. H. HOFFMAN, Vice-President of Tiffany Productions, Inc., has appointed Charles I. Luntz manager of the Tiffany Exchange in Los Angeles, with temporary headquarters at 1906 S. Vermont Avenue, and Louis Reichart as the Tiffany representative for the San Francisco exchange. It is expected that within a short time announcement will be made of the establishment of exchanges embracing the Southern and Southwestern territories. Until these are realized and managers appointed, the bookings for Tiffany product are being handled from the home office in New York City.

Tiffany is at present represented in nearly all the principal cities of the United States and in addition has branches located in the principal distributing centers of Canada, Great Britain and Cuba.

Boston Audience Not Alarmed Over Fire

EXPRESSING more concern over the refunding of their money than the fact that a fire was blazing underneath the stage of the Shawmut Theatre, Boston, twelve hundred people comprising the audience, declined to leave the house even when ordered to do by the stage hands and a deputy fire chief.

Fire started underneath the back part of the stage during the evening performance, supposedly from defective wires. Upon the discovery of flames, the show was interrupted and the lights switched on. The audience responded with laughter to any requests to file out quietly though the smoke could be smelt and the noise of the firemen working under the stage was noticeable.

It was upon the arrival of the chief of the Boston fire department and his assurance that they could wait outside until the fire was overcome that the audience filed out, some of the last ones who lingered being hurried along by policemen who had arrived on the scene. The fire chief gave orders that the audience could remain inside the fire lines and when the fire had been put out, with an estimated damage of $1,000, they filed back into the theatre and the evening's performance was completed.

F. B. O. Planning Comedy "Her Father Said No"

F. B. O. officials will endeavor to make the Gold Bond feature, "Her Father Said No," a comedy of extra merits. The story, written by H. C. Witwer, first bore the magazine title of "Charlotte's Ruse." The leading feminine role—that of Charlotte—will be played by Mary Brian, who has been loaned to F. B. O. by Famous Players-Lasky. The two-reel comedians, Al Cooke and Kit Guard, who recently appeared in the "Red" Grange production, "One Minute to Go," and who have just finished work in the "Bill Grim's Progress" series, have the chief masculine roles. Frankie Darro also has a part in the production. Al Boasberg, who was gag man for Buster Keaton in "Battling Butler," has been named as comedy constructor for the Witwer comedy. Sam Wood will supervise. The director is yet to be named. The feature will be six reels in length.

Preparing New Song Parody and Radio Personalities

Jack Reilly, producing the Popular Song Parody series for Artelass release, has secured the rights to the popular song, "Margie," for the purpose of filming in animated form and using the jumping ball method for maintaining proper tempo. The next Artelass release of Radio Personalities will feature Major Andrew White, premier announcer of sporting events; Godfrey Ludlow, M. J. Gross and other entertainers and announcers of Station WJZ. Elmer McGovern is in charge of the directing and editing. Lester Soman is producing the Radio Personalities series of six single reels for Artelass.

Ernest Gillan Signs Long Term Contract

Having signed a long term contract with First National, at the West Coast, Ernest Gillan will make his first Eastern trip, and will arrive in New York to portray one of the leading parts in Robert Kane's next production. This production will mark his second picture with Kane, his initial role having been with Alice Terry as leading man for the same producer. He recently appeared in "The Auction Block" and "His Secretary." Upon completing his present role Gillan will return to the Burbank studio to appear in productions to be filmed there.

As a college youth in Pasadena Gillan took part in many benefits for the Red Cross during the war. This led to an engagement with Walter Hampden, with whom he appeared in "The Light of Asia." He was born in Mexico City, Mex., of Spanish parents, and came to Los Angeles at the age of seven for his education, which he completed at Occidental College.

F. B. O. Has Three Features in Cutting Room

Three feature length productions are in the cutting room of Film Booking Offices' Hollywood studio. Pandro Berman, with the aid of Phil Rosen the director is cutting "Rose of the Tenements," the John Morosco story from "The Stumbling Herd." Shirley Mason and John Harron are co-featured. Eddie Dillon is cutting "Bred in Old Kentucky," Viola Dana's first F. B. O. starring vehicle. "The Timid Terror," George O'Hara's second feature, is also being cut, while Jesse Goldberg is finishing "The Border Whirlwind," a Western, featuring Bob Custer.

"Jocelyn's Wife" Next On Tiffany Release Schedule

Following "College Days" on the Tiffany release program will be the special production of "Jocelyn's Wife," starring Pauline Frederick. In the cast supporting Miss Frederick are Holmes Herbert, Freeman Wood, Armand Kaliz, Carmelita Gerahty, Josephine Hill, Pat Harman, Ivy Livingston and William A. Carroll. The picture was directed by Richard Thorpe and was suggested by the novel of the same name by Kathleen Norris.

Vitaphone's Boston Premiere at Colonial on Oct. 27th

Vitaphone will have its Boston premiere at the Colonial Theatre on October 27 in connection with the showing of Warner Bros.' "Don Juan." This will be the first time Vitaphone has been heard in New England and there is a heavy advance sale of seats. The run will be limited by bookings already made for legitimate shows at the Colonial.

Morgan to Do Original for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

A compact was entered into last week at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio whereby Byron Morgan, short story writer, and Sam Wood, director, will combine in the production of a new picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to be called "Red, White and Blue." Morgan is now composing the original screen story.

Originals Dominate M-G-M List

Louis B. Mayer's Prediction Supported by Production Schedule Outlined

LOUIS B. MAYER'S recent prophecy that the original screen writer would assume prominence hitherto denied him is supported by the schedule announced at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio which calls for nearly a score of originals.

Agnes Christine Johnston is doing an original story for Marion Davies based on the comic strip, "Tillie, the Toiler." Dorothy Farnum has been assigned "The Cosacks," an original story which will be given an elaborate production with John Gilbert in the featured role. Josephine Lovett, who recently arrived from the East, has prepared for the screen an original romance in "Annie Laurie," in which Lillian Gish is starring. "Exit Smiling," the feature comedy featuring Beatrice Lillie, who makes her screen debut, is an original story written by Mare Connelly.

John Colton, author of "The Shanghai Gesture," is working on Lillian Gish's next starring picture, "Heat," a Javanese story. Irvin S. Cobb, humorist, is preparing a story, "The Glory Diggers," with the building of the Panama Canal as the principal motif. Robert Lee is composing another original that deals with the days when the old Mississippi steamboats held sway. Kate Corbakey is doing an original story concerning modern engineering and Adelaide Heilbron has been assigned the continuity of "Frisco Sal," an original story.

Edmund Goulding is preparing an original in "Diamond Handcuffs," Mae Murray's next starring vehicle. A. P. Younger has been assigned to write two originals and scripts. Peter B. Kyne has finished "California," another original of the Western type, for Tim McCoy. Harvey Gates is also writing an original for the new Western star. Charles Maigne, Buck Oxford, Fred MacIsaacs, James Gruen and Fred Stowers are writing for the Western unit, either doing originals or adapting some of Kyne's stories to the screen.

Although the present writing schedule gives the original story much prominence, published books, stories and plays will also be represented. A. P. Younger has written the continuity of "The Taxi Dancer," while Albert Lewin has adapted Rachel Crother's "A Little Journey." Elliott Clawson and Ray Doyle are adapting "Ordeal," Lon Chaney's next vehicle. Waldemar Yaung has completed the adaptation of "The Day of Souls," starring John Gilbert. Madame Fred de Gresac is preparing the screen adaptation of Leo Tolstoy's "Anna Karenina." Lorna Moon is working on the continuity of "Captain Salvation."

"The River" Sam Rork's Next F. N. Production

While in New York on business relating to the release of "The Blonde Saint," Sam E. Rork, producer, arranged with First National executives for his next production, "The River," Patrick Hasting's stage play. Doris Kenyon and Lewis Stone have been chosen for the featured roles. It is expected that the film will be completed by the first of the new year and will be released in March or April. The only supporting player thus far selected is Ann Rork. Inside of the next six weeks the director, the rest of the cast, the details of the erection of sets at the Burbank studio and the location of the exteriors will have been determined upon.

Jane Novak Added to "One Increasing Purpose" Cast

Jane Novak joins Edmund Lowe and Lila Lee in portraying the leading roles in the Fox Film production of A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel, "One Increasing Purpose." Important characterizations have already been assigned May Allison, Holmes Herbert, Lawford Davidson, Emily Fitzroy and George Irving. The exteriors were filmed in the original settings in England where the author cooperated with Bradley King on the scenario. Included in the English company were Mr. Lowe and Miss Lee, Fisher White, English actor and Gwynneth Bristone, sister-in-law of Mr. Hutchinson. Director Harry Beaumont is now ready to start work on the interiors of the picture.

Grauman to Install Vitaphone

His Egyptian Will Have Device on Oct. 27th; Warners Negotiating for More Space in N. Y.

BEFORE the end of the current month the Vitaphone, in conjunction with John Barrymore in "Don Juan," will be playing in Los Angeles and Boston. Sid Grauman has had capacity crowds at his Egyptian in the former city without the Vitaphone or accompaniment, staging instead an elaborate presentation on which had been expended over $30,000. But due to the insistent clamor that his patrons have put up for the widely-heralded Vitaphone, the showman will discard his presentation, substituting the Vitaphone on October 27. The same artists that are featured in the presentation at the Warners in New York City will be seen on the bill at the Egyptian. On the same date the Vitaphone will make its appearance in Boston for the first time, when it will be presented with the Barrymore film at the Colonial, an Erlanger house and one of the foremost legitimate theatres in New England.

Thus the Vitaphone and "Don Juan" will be playing at no less than six of the largest theatres in the country. It has already settled into long runs at the Warner's in New York, the Globe in Atlantic City, McVicker's in Chicago and the Capitol in St. Louis.

The Warner Bros. are negotiating through their bankers for a large building on West 48th Street in which to carry on their operations, the Manhattan Opera House being inadequate for all of the extensive Vitaphone activities. With possession of the new quarters the Warners could build most of the settings for Vitaphone acts there and then transfer them to the Manhattan, the last mentioned house being ideally suited for the synchronization process.

Even with the acquisition of the additional housing facilities Warner Bros. realize that it is only temporary and that in time it will be necessary to house all of the departments of the Vitaphone in one huge studio. It is planned to eventually have this studio on Manhattan Island.

"Michael Strogoff" Seen by Indianapolis Club

"MICHAEL STROGOFF," the French Societe des Cineman's picturization of the novel by Jules Verne to be distributed in America by Universal Pictures, was given its American premiere last week at a midnight show at the Circle Theatre in Indianapolis before the State Federation of Clubs and Photoplay Indorsers of that state. The picture made an excellent impression upon the delegates and the elicited praise for the film has given Universal executives the conviction that the picture is due to be one of the sensations of the current film year.

The Indianapolis showing was arranged by William Esch, exchange manager for Universal in that territory.

"The Desert's Toll" Next McDonald Western

An original story for the screen entitled "The Desert's Toll" has been chosen as the next Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Western starring Frances McDonald. It was directed by Cliff Smith, who made some of Bill Hart's pictures. Gardner Bradford prepared the titles and the cameramen were George Stevens and Jack Roach. The supporting cast includes Kathleen Key, Tom Santschi and others. A large percentage of the sequences of the McDonald picture were taken at Big Horn Ranch, Nev. It will be released to exhibitors during the month of November.

McGowan to Direct "Thunder Mountain"

J. P. McGowan begins direction in one week's time on "Thunder Mountain," the working title of the third F. B. O. production starring Ranger, the dog. The director will complete this Ewart Adamson story in time to begin work on "Tarzan and the Golden Lion," the Edgar Rice Burroughs story which will be one of the Gold Bond specials for the present season.

Thomson Has Irish-Spanish Role in "Don Mike"

Fred Thomson, Western star of F. B. O., has a half Irish, half Spanish role in his next special, "Don Mike," which deals with the early days of California. The story is now being prepared by his editorial staff.

"U" Secures Octavus Roy Cohen's Negro Stories

The screen rights to Octavus Roy Cohen's stories of colored folk which have been appearing for several years in the Saturday Evening Post have been acquired by Universal and that company will make as many of them as the market will absorb, using negro players.

Universal sent David Werner, assistant production manager and formerly in charge of the play department, expressly to Birmingham, Ala., where Mr. Cohen has his home. He returned last week with an agreement which will permit his company to produce as many of the stories as it sees fit.

Mr. Werner also brought back with him "The Prince and the Papa" and "Horns and Orange Blossoms," the first two of the Nobody-Loves-a-Fat-Man stories for Charles Puffy.

"The Magician" to Have New York Premiere at Capitol

"The Magician," Rex Ingram's latest production for Metro-Goldwyn, will have its New York premiere at the Capitol Theatre Sunday, October 24th, according to Major Edward Bowes, managing director of the Capitol.

"The Magician" is Rex Ingram's second production to be made abroad. It is an adaptation of the novel of the same name by Somerset Maugham and relates the peril of a young woman caught in the clutches of a hypnotist. Ingram himself produced the adaptation and scenario. Aliee Terry, who was last seen in "Mare Nostrum," has the leading feminine role. Appearing in her support are Paul Wegener, the German actor, Firmin Gemier, Gladys Hamer, Ivan Petrovich and other players.

Warners Exercise Option On Services of H. Raymaker

Warner Bros. have exercised their option on the services of Herman Raymaker with the result that he has been signed to a long-term contract. The renewal of the contract is due to the good work done by Raymaker during the past season, when he directed among other pictures "The Night Cry" and "A Hero of the Big Snows," both starring Rin-Tin-Tin, and "His Jazz Bride." During the present season the director will handle "The Brute," a Monte Blue starring vehicle, and "The Gay Old Bird," in which Louise Fazenda will appear. He has just concluded "Millionaires," suggested by the E. Phillips Oppenheim story, "The Inevitable Millionaires."

Maurice Stiller Signs Long Term Paramount Contract

Maurice Stiller, the Swedish director who has just completed his first work as director in the United States in "Hotel Imperial," starring Pola Negri, signed a long-term contract with Paramount just before leaving the West Coast for New York, where he went to meet Emil Jannings. The director will confer with Erich Pommer, Jannings and Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the corporation, on story material for Jannings' first American production. He will also accompany the European actor back to Hollywood.

Four Fox Features in November

Picture Versions of Two Stage Plays and Two Novels Scheduled for Release

FOX FILMS will release during November four feature pictures, two of which are versions of well-known stage plays and the others adaptations of widely read books. "Going Crooked," "Mother Machree," "Wings of the Storm" and "The City" are the titles of the four productions.

The first, "Going Crooked," which goes to exhibitors on the 7th, was written by William Collier, Sr., and Aaron Hoffman and presented on Broadway by John Golden. It is a drama of crookdom in which Bessie Love and Oscar Shaw have the leads, with Gustav Von Seyffertitz as the man of evil machinations and Leslie Fenton as the dupe. George Melford directed from a scenario executed by Keene Thompson.

"Mother Machree," written by Rida Johnson Young, will be released on November 14. John Ford directed a cast composed of Belle Bennett, in the name role, Neil Hamilton, Victor McLaglen, Ted Me-

Namara, Ethel Clayton, Constance Howard, Pat Somerset, Phillippe de Lacy and Joyce Wizzard.

"Wings of the Storm," filmed among the natural beauties of North America's national parks, will be released on the 21st. It is an adaptation of the magazine story, "The Runt," which tells of the romance and intrigue of a dog's life. Thunder, a police dog, is starred and the leading human roles are played by Virginia Brown Faire, Reed Howes and William Russell, John G. Blystone directed.

"The City," the last and posthumously produced melodrama of Clyde Fitch, goes to the exhibitors on November 28. It was scenarized by Gertrude Orr and directed by R. William Neil. This photodrama will mark the debut of Nancy Nash, a new Fox "find." Robert Frazier, May Allison, Richard Walling, Walter McGrail, George Irving and Melbourne MacDowell are included in the cast.

Sectional Drive for F. N. Cup

New Contest for Sales Force Starts Jan. 2; Lieber Month Winners Announced

A NEW contest among First National's salesmen for gross billings during the period embraced from January 2 to February 5 has been inaugurated as a result of a challenge issued by the Eastern Division to the West, Southern and Canadian districts. The winner will receive a silver loving cup; the presentation to be made at First National's Spring Sales Convention at Burbank.

Each district will be given a quota, and the winner will be decided on the best percentage on the total net billings against this quota. The Sales Cabinet states many wires have been received from exchange managers in all territories announcing acceptance of the Eastern Division's challenge. The slogan of the Easterners is, according to Salesmanager Smith, "Try and Get It."

Results of First National's Summer Contest, just made public by Secretary-Treasurer Samuel Spring, bring to light that the New Orleans exchange was successful in piling up the largest gross billings of any First National exchange in the United States and Canada.

Montreal, Canada, ran New Orleans a close second, Mr. Spring's report showed, with Atlanta making third place. The three winning branches received handsome cash prizes, the bonuses being divided among all employees of the respective branches.

Branch managers of the winning exchanges are Lucas Conner, New Orleans; A. L. Gorman, Montreal, and C. R. Beacham, Atlanta. In all, fifty-four employees will share in the prize awards.

F. B. O. Institutes Exhib. Aid

Over Four Hundred Newspapers Launch Special Fiction Service for Films

A NEW department has been inaugurated at Film Booking Offices to take care of the serialization of stories to be run in more than four hundred newspapers throughout the country which have signified their willingness to use the mats furnished through F. B. O. in their pages running twenty-four issues.

The purpose behind this movement is purely a matter of exhibitor aid, says F. B. O. It is expected that, through this medium, many new patrons will be gained through the reading of these stories and the automatic desire created to see the film.

"Bill Grimm's Progress," from the stories of the same name by H. C. Witwer, released by F. B. O. in the form of twelve two-reel episodes, has been serialized from the originals, which ran in Collier's Weekly in twelve installments.

It is planned to institute a regular special fiction service on many of the larger productions produced and released through F. B. O. Among these will probably be: "A Regular Scout," starring Fred Thomson, the Western star, and dedicated to the Boy Scouts of America; "Hello, Bill" (tentative title), a Gold Bond, dedicated to the Elks of America; "Wise crackers," another Witwer series; and many others.

Mystic in Window Display Draws Mobs

Age-Telling Stunt Big Attractor for "Beverly" in Dubuque

AGE guessing contests are always popular, Manager Nate Rosenthal took one out of "The Merry Widow" press book and used it to exploit "Beverly of Graustark."

Two pieces of compo-board were obtained. One was painted to read: "Let 'Beverly of Graustark' guess your age. On the other panel are six columns of figures. Designate to her on your fingers the columns in which your age appears. She will tell you your age."

The other panel read: "The Magic Table of Graustark." Then came six columns of figures as described in a press sheet on "The Merry Widow."

A large window was obtained in a prominent drug store. A girl with a mask on sat at a table. As passersby stopped she pointed out what was to be done, and when the columns were designated on the figures, she picked up numbers from table disclosing age. She did not turn to look at the figures on the board, which added to the mystery. By placing on the table small cards carrying these figures she was able to add the figures of each column without turning.

Uses Ship-Building Contest to Feature "Mare Nostrum"

A ship-building contest and window displays were the high lights of a campaign waged by Manager Tom Jones of Loew's Grand Theatre, Atlanta, Ga., for his showing of "Mare Nostrum." An arrangement was made for a neat tie-up on a "Mare Nostrum" ship contest with Eisman's Greater Boys' Department Store.

Stickers Tie-Up Magazine Review of Picture with Modjeska Showing

MANAGER F. J. MILLER took advantage of the story on "You Never Know Women," appearing in the "Liberty Magazine" issue of September 4th, when the film, "You Never Know Women," showed at the Modjeska Theatre, Augusta, Ga.

Through the co-operation of the local agent for the "Liberty Magazine," two teaser stickers were used in conjunction with the magazine.

Refers Reader to Review

The teaser sticker appearing on the front page read, "Turn to Page 55." On page 55 was the movie review of "You Never Know Women," and another sticker appearing over one of the cuts reading, "This picture has been selected as the opening attraction at the Greater Modjeska, September 6th and 7th."

Cut-outs Feature Display

The lobby display consisted of four large cut-outs in the shape of an apple displayed on each side of the marquee and attractively painted. Each cut-out contained one word of the title "You Never Know Women." Under the marquee suspended across the entire lobby over the three sheets was placed an attractive cut-out beaxer-board in the shape of an apple with a cut-out of the head of Florence Vidor protruding out of the top of the apple and her arms and hands extending out from the side. In each hand was a cut-out of the two men characters in the picture.

"LaBoheme" Well Advertised in Omaha by Ralph Goldberg, Sun Theatre

MANAGER Ralph Goldberg of the Sun Theatre, Omaha, Neb., recently put on a fine campaign for "La Boheme." He was assisted in his work by a M-G-M exploiter. A teaser letter campaign, screen trailers in other theatres besides the Sun, a novelty display and lobby decoration were among the features used.

Underworld Jargon

Letters were written in pencil or in ink on various kinds of note paper, with cryptic messages with a decided underworld air, were sent in bundles to M-G-M exchanges in other states and re-mailed back to Omaha. The letters were addressed to various individuals. These were all signed Mimi, the name of the character portrayed by Lillian Gish in the picture. A series of clever teaser ads in the Omaha dailies tied up these letters to the showing of "La Boheme." It created a lot of comment.

Wilton Forms "Strand Speak Kindly Club"

Manager H. E. Wilton of the Strand Theatre, Hamilton, Ont., has organized the "Strand Speak Kindly Club" for children of the city under 12 years of age, the badge being a small lapel button bearing the title of the club. To join the club, a boy or girl must attend a Saturday matinee performance at the Strand and must sign the register pledging that he or she will speak nicely to all others. Those who are club members are entitled to free admission at the theatre every Thursday if accompanied by a parent.

The club has made a hit with parents.

Warnings Keynote of "Lone Wolf" Drive

Two of the six couples who "ballyhooed" the Strand's showing of "The Prince of Tempters" (First National), in New York. In subway stations and other crowded places, these flappers shouted into the ear trumpets of their elderly escorts that they wanted to see "The Prince of Tempters" at the Strand

Extensive Advance Campaign Heralds "Prince of Tempters" in New York

AN exploitation campaign launched four weeks in advance of the premier at the Mark Strand on Broadway, attracted widespread attention to "The Prince of Tempters." The campaign was designed and executed by the Harry L. Reichenback offices, retained by Robert T. Kane, producer of the picture, to handle special advertising, publicity and exploitation for the Strand engagement of "The Prince of Tempters."

Four weeks before the picture opened, considerable attention was attracted to "The Prince of Tempters" by reason of an invitation which was sent out to some 5,000 prominent persons in New York to join a Special Reception Committee to welcome Queen Marie of Roumania and an incognito Prince who was destined to arrive on these shores the day following the picture opened at the Strand. Fully four thousand of this number responded to the invitation. A follow-up announcement was subsequently dispatched to these four thousand people in which it was stated that it was impossible to entertain the Queen because of governmental supervision, but that the Prince would arrive on October 17th on the screen of the Strand Theatre. This stunt broke in the New York daily papers.

Blind twenty-four sheets, featuring trick lettering, were posted. These were followed up by a block type announcement of the showing. A pictorial twenty-four sheet later was substituted. The lobby of the Strand displayed portraits of the stars, decorated with silks and brocades, and painted on compo board.

A publicity campaign, augmented by an advertising drive, intrigued the interest of the theatre-going public.

A snipe quarter-sheet card was stuck on every ladder in town, reading, "It is unlucky to walk under a ladder or miss 'The Prince of Tempters' at the Strand Theatre the week of October 17th."

An unusual stunt was employed which drew considerable interest to the picture during its showing at the Strand. Six couples, each composed of an elderly man and a young girl—the man carrying an ear-trumpet and carrying on a conversation about what show to see, and the young girl in a loud voice insisting on going to the Strand to see "The Prince of Tempters" worked the subways and other crowded places.

Morrison Scores With Campaign Exploiting Film and Presentation

MANAGER Ernest Morrison of the Howard Theatre, Atlanta, Ga., put on a tremendous campaign to advertise the Publix presentation, "Circus Week" and the photoplay, "The Lone Wolf Returns."

A tie-up was effected with six of the leading local banks, 2500 cards reading, "The Lone Wolf Returns" to Atlanta Monday—No need to fear him if you rent one of our safety deposit boxes," were placed on all counters. In addition, small cards carrying copy about picture, theatre and play dates were prominently displayed in each bank.

Several window tie-ups were secured with jewelry stores. These windows displayed stills from the picture together with cards reading, "No need to fear the return of The Lone Wolf to Atlanta—We will hold your jewelry purchases until he is apprehended."

10,000 automobile and door knob warning hangers were distributed in advance reading, "Warning—Hide Your Valuables. The Lone Wolf is returning to Atlanta next Monday—Watch For Him."

Presents Novel Ballyhoo at Football Game

Manager F. J. Miller obtained permission from the Augusta Military School to use a stunt at one of the school's football games to advertise his showing of "The Campus Flirt" at the Imperial Theatre, Augusta.

A female impersonator appeared on the field, smiling and flirting with the players and cadets. The impersonator carried a parasol which when opened revealed the information that the "The Campus Flirt" was playing at the Imperial.

Novel banners feature the title of "The Flaming Frontier" (Universal), in parade of Boy Scouts and Veterans of the Spanish-American War during convention of the latter in Des Moines. Special performance for the veterans at the Strand Theatre in that city was the means of getting this

"Fig Leaves" Campaign Blankets Lowell

Manager L. Beattus of Loew's Palace, Washington, D.C., congratulates the winner of the News-boys Boxing Tournament conducted in that city by the theatre and the Times-Herald as exploitation for "Battling Butler" (M-G-M)

Posters and Lobby Display Sell "Into Her Kingdom"

A good line of billing and lobby cut-outs helped materially in putting over "Into Her Kingdom," recently screened at Loew's Vendome Theatre, Nashville, Tenn. In addition to the billing and cut-outs, ample newspaper space was used in both the Sunday edition of the Nashville Banner and the Nashville Tennessean, along with the daily papers.

In the way of lobby decorations a large sized strip of heavy beaver board painted a brownish color and bearing large, white letters, gave the name of the picture. This was tacked just above the box-office. To the left of the box-office was a small sized beaver board cut-out upon which was arranged some of the photographs on the picture. The beaver board was done in light gray. The lettering was a glossy black.

M-G-M Exploiteer Filming Reel for St. Louis Cops

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's St. Louis branch office has been helping in the person of W. G. Bishop, exploiteer for that territory, the Police Department of St. Louis to film a one-reel picture, showing the hazardous life of the patrolmen in an effort to secure votes for the Police Pension Fund law. Bishop, who wrote the scenario for the film, as well as directing and editing the photoplay, announces that his part of the work is over and that the picture is ready for distribution.

Car Men Talk Up "Fighting Marine" for Passes

Manager Sam Hammond put over a good stunt with the street car motormen to help advertise "The Fighting Marine" when that film played at the Egyptian Theatre, Greenville, S.C. As the people left the cars the motormen would tell them that Gene Tunney in "The Fighting Marine" was at the Egyptian.

Novelty Cards on "Battling Butler" Used by Moore

Manager Marshline K. Moore got a wide range of distribution by employing 5,000 novelty cards to advertise "Battling Butler" when that film showed at the Palace Theatre, Fort Worth, Tex.

The cards had a peanut sticking through at the left hand top corner with copy reading, "I May Be A Nut! But I know a good comedy when I see it. I am raving about Buster Keaton in 'Battling Butler' now showing at the Greater Palace."

Cunningham Exploits with Everything from Ballyhoo to Tie-ups

MANAGER HAROLD CUNNINGHAM of the Strand Theatre in Lowell, Mass., recently staged a campaign that flooded the town with publicity for his showing of "Fig Leaves."

The first appeal for direct attention was made with a ballyhoo, comprising a motor truck laden with branches of apple trees bannered with the line, "These are not Fig Leaves—but Fig Leaves is playing at the Strand." His tie-up with the local Western Union Telegraph office netted excellent general publicity, as it provided means for the sending of messages from those who had seen the picture to their friends, recommending the show. A booth was installed in the lobby and blank forms offered patrons upon leaving the house. Screen announcements said that if patrons enjoyed "Fig Leaves" and wanted their friends to see it, to fill out and address the supplied form and the message would be sent.

Another attractive stunt was a window display arrangement with a department grocery store. A special sale was held for the Heinz fig pudding. All during the engagement the window of the store contained hundreds of cans of this fig pudding. The Bon Marche, an exclusive dressery devoted part of their window for a style display. While directly across the street the Downey Fashion Shop declared that they had the exact gowns as were worn in the production.

Witmark Song Ties-up With "Gigolo" Film

M. Witmark & Sons, music publishers, have announced a new song titled "Gigolo" which will be exploited in conjunction with showings of the P.D.C. production of that name in all towns and cities.

Boys enter pet canines in prize dog competition conducted by H. V. Smoots of Mount Vernon, Ohio, as exploitation for his showing of Warner Bros.' "The Clash of the Wolves." 75 boys with their dogs participated in the parade

THE GIRL from HIS PAST

It was his wedding night. Suddenly out of the darkness into the bright lights of the marriage party, stumbled this bruised flower from the streets—the girl he had promised never to see again, the girl to whom he was about to give to another woman. "IF I MARRY YOU, YOUR KID WILL BE THE KID OF A JAILBIRD!" Poor girl! She had given freely without counting the cost. Now she was facing woman's supreme test, only to find the man she had loved too well was about to cheat her, as he had so often cheated society. She had counted on him—his protection—his name. Instead she found herself deserted—alone.

VIOLENTLY SHE TURNED ON HIM

It was a terrible moment in his life—even more terrible than he knew. For because of the coming of this strange, pale girl, one of the party was to become forever an outcast, one a convict and one was to be murdered.

WHOSE FINGER PULLED THE TRIGGER?

At their feet lay the crumpled thing that had been a man—a slimy reptile in human guise.

With his evil stories he had threatened their lives. One word, fouler than the rest—and with the instant crack of a revolver, his life had been blotted out.

Who dared to take the law into his own hands—to risk paying with his own life for the life of this wretch?

Was it Jim—the seedy confidence man—who could not bear to bear the name of the only woman he loved sullied?

Was it Phil, the prosperous man of affairs, whose reputation and home were in deep danger?

Could it be Norma—lovely Norma—who had heard from those vile lips the story that had been kept from her for twenty years?

WHO?

"I'LL GIVE YOU THREE HOURS TO GET OUT OF TOWN!"

Phil Powers had run away from the past, the sor-did past in the slums of the big city.

He thought he was safe. He had become rich, im-portant. His daughter—or was she his daughter—was to marry the Governor's son.

Then out of the darkness of long ago came Jim Warren to re-mind him of all he wished to forget.

Jim—who lived by his wits—what did he know that made Phil Powers rise in blind fury and or-der him out of town? But Jim made no move. "I was not infor-ma-tion."

And the ghost of a woman long dead, and the thought of that woman's child held them deadlocked—stubborn—desperate.

What did Jim want to know? Why did Phil Powers fear him? What was the fearful secret that they shared?

at the

WAR DEPARTMENT THEATRE

A sample of the showmanship employed in exploiting pictures at the U. S. Army theatres. Teaser campaign using dodgers as a means of stimulating interest in the showing of "Silence" (Producers' Distributing Corporation) at Ft. Riley. Five of these dodgers were issued on successive days. Each related a chapter of the story, written to feature the mystery angle of the play. These teasers were designed by R. B. Murray, director of the U. S. Army Motion Picture Service.

Variety of Exploitation Ideas Used in Campaigns for "Sparrows"

A REVIEW of several campaigns staged to exploit "Sparrows" at first run houses in scattered sections of the country brings to light several interesting and novel applications of proved exploitation ideas and devices. What remains up to the present one of the most impressive campaigns used in connection with "Sparrows" is the newspaper contest which featured the drive for the picture at the Mark Strand in New York City.

This contest was based on the "to bob or not to bob" idea and offered cash prizes for the best essays giving their reasons for bobbing or not bobbing their hair. This was adapted from the "unshingled beauty" contest put on for the picture in Sydney, Australia. The Strand's tie-up was with the New York Telegram, which carried the contest for a week and gave liberal space to the feature.

The Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, got a large amount of free newspaper space boosting "Sparrows" by arranging for the premiere to be a free showing for all of the orphans in the various Cleveland institutions.

Orphans Guests at Premiere

Feature stories related how New York premieres were beginning to cost $50 and $100 per seat; but that the premier of "Sparrows" could not be bought at any price due to the fact that the house was given to the orphans.

The Imperial Theatre, San Francisco, used special art cartoons, picturing Miss Pickford, in her most attractive poses, and billed "Sparrows" as "The dramatic triumph of Mary Pickford's Career." The Adams Theatre, Detroit, used specially written copy, particularly stressing Mary Pickford's greatness as an entertainer, and confined all art matter to smiling portraits of Mary Pickford. Even when Miss Pickford was shown with her flock of kiddies, the type of still selected was one of a happy situation.

The Capitol Theatre, Winnipeg, Canada, took three full columns in the Winnipeg Evening Tribune, and featured a personal message from the manager of the theatre to the Winnipeg public. The only art matter was a cut of Mary Pickford which occupied almost one third of the space.

Local Reel Features Circle Anniversary Program

A local reel presenting views in front of the theatre and showing patrons looking

Unusual ad used by the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, to exploit a program headed by "Don Juan's Three Nights" (First National). The miniature tabloid, occupying a space four columns wide by about 9 inches deep, played up the sensational angles of the picture and devoted a separate story to each unit of the program over the lobby, buying tickets and entering the house, was one of the features of the tenth anniversary celebration staged at the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, Ind. Manager Ace Berry used the reel as a trailer announcing "Men of Steel." A novel feature of the scenes in the reel was that only the feet and legs of patrons entering the lobby and the hands paying for tickets at the box office were shown in close up—a device which excited widespread curiosity.

Funny Face Contest Scores in Portsmouth, O.

The Colleen Moore Funny Face Contest caught on at Portsmouth, Ohio. The Columbia Theatre, where Miss Moore in "Ella Cinders" was set for a four-day run, tied up with the Portsmouth "Daily Times." The newspaper gave the contest a two-column "break" daily concurrent with the engagement of the picture.

The management of the Columbia offered 23 prizes, the first amounting to $10, the second $3, the third $2 and the next 20 getting passes. Hundreds of replies were received daily.

The newspaper ran a cut of Miss Moore minus her nose, eyes and mouth. Contestants were informed that the object of the contest was to fill in the star's missing features, giving them the funniest possible alignment.

Picture Strip Stories Now Widely Used by Papers

Pressbook suggestions in the form of picture strips and cartoon mats are being widely adopted in the larger cities as a form of exploitation.

Among many instances where large and effective newspaper space has been obtained through such ideas, United Artists Corporation points out Kansas City and San Francisco. Incident to the Imperial Theatre's three weeks' run of "Sparrows," the San Francisco Bulletin used a complete picture strip story of the Pickford picture, while the Kansas City Post got behind "Stella Dallas" with a three column by seven inch cartoon of the various characters in this presentation.

Studio Briefs

Dolores Costello this week started work in "The Third Degree," a Warner Bros. production which is the first American directorial effort of Michael Curtiz, European director.

Lewis Stone, Billie Dove and Lloyd Hughes have been chosen for roles in "Here Y' Are Brother," June Mathis' next production for First National, which Balboni will direct. Tests are being made for players in other prominent roles yet to be filled.

Helen Dunbar and Ida Darling have been selected to portray the two mothers in Bebe Daniels' newest Paramount comedy, "Stranded in Paris." James Hall and Iris Stuart are other members of the cast.

Dorothy Sebastian, Southern beauty and featured Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player, has been given the part of a Salvation Army girl in "The Day of Souls," John Gilbert's new starring vehicle which is soon to go into production under Tod Browning with Renee Adoree in the leading feminine role.

Final scenes of Paramount's latest comedy of the World War, "We're in the Navy Now," were filmed yesterday at the West Coast Studio under the direction of Edward Sutherland.

The picture deals with the laughable side of the lives of two "gobs," played by Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton.

Jack Nelson, who recently joined the directorial staff of Chadwick Pictures Corporation, will start work shortly on "Sunshine of Paradise Alley," one of the stage plays of Denman Thompson, adapted by Josephine Quirk for the screen.

George Grandee and Andre Lanoy have been cast for important roles in "Stranded in Paris," Bebe Daniels' new starring vehicle for Paramount.

Arthur Rosson is directing the picture. Included in the featured supporting cast are James Hall, Ford Sterling, Mabel Juvenile Scott and Iris Stuart.

A recent recruit from vaudeville to motion pictures is Jack Egan, who plays a part in Frank Tuttle's newest Paramount production, "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em," featuring Evelyn Brent, Lawrence Gray and Louise Brooks.

No sooner had Clive Brook appeared before the cameras for his last close-up opposite Florence Vidor in "The Popular Sin," directed by Malcolm St. Clair, than he was obliged to pack his make-up box and en-train for the West Coast studios. There he will act as Pola Negri's leading man in "Barbed Wire," her latest Paramount starring picture now in the course of production at the Lasky Studio.

John Trevor, having completed his role in Herbert Brenon's new Paramount picture, "God Gave Me Twenty Cents," has joined the cast of "New York," which Luther Reed is directing. Ricardo Cortez, Lois Wilson and Estelle Taylor are principals in the cast.

Tom Kennedy has been cast in an important part in "The Man of the Forest,"

Zane Grey's story of the West, which John Waters is directing for Paramount, with Jack Holt in the title role.

Active production was started last week at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio on the new John Gilbert vehicle "The Day of Souls," in which the star and Renee Adoree appear together for the first time since "The Big Parade." The play is laid in modern times and will be given a spectacular production. An exact likeness of a Budapest street has been constructed at the studio. Stuart Holmes, Agostino Borato and Dorothy Sebastian are in the supporting cast.

J. Leo Meehan, son-in-law of the late Gene Stratton-Porter and director of all her stories which have reached the screen, has already begun shooting on "The Magic Garden," the last novel from the pen of the distinguished woman writer. The right locale for the "Garden" has been finally located and it is hoped that there will be no further hitch in production.

Famous Players-Lasky this week signed Louis Van den Ecker as French technical advisor for "Barbed Wire." Pola Negri's new starring vehicle. Rowland V. Lee will direct the film which will be Erich Pommer's second Paramount production in the United States.

Norma Shearer's next starring picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, at present called "After All," will be directed by Robert Z. Leonard, who has just completed directing "A Little Journey," the Rachel Crothers story in which Claire Windsor and William Haines are featured. The story of "After All" has just been completed by F. Hugh Herbert and Florence Ryerson of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer scenario staff.

Jack Nelson, who recently joined the Chadwick directorial staff, starts work shortly on "Sunshine of Paradise Alley," his first picture for that company. The cast which is now being selected will be announced shortly.

Ralph Spence, fiction writer, former newspaper man, playwright and title writer, has been placed under a long term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. His first work under his new contract will be the subtitling of "Altars of Desire," starring Mae Murray with Conway Tearle the foremost masculine lead.

"Her Father Said No," F. B. O.'s forthcoming screen version of H. C. Witwer's "Charlotte's Ruse," started auspiciously a few days ago in the West Coast studio with Jack McKeown directing. Some of the members of the cast are Mary Brian, Al Cooke, Kit Guard, Danny O'Shea and Frankie Darro.

Now that "Fingerprints," the first of the Arthur Somers Roche stories is in production, Warner Bros. are completing preparations to start "Wolf's Clothing," the second of the Roche stories. Darryl Francis Zanuck, scenarist, is finishing the script and the sets are now under construction. The story will co-star Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller. No director or supporting cast has yet been decided upon.

Jacqueline Gadsden, who has a prominent part in "The Mysterious Island," has affixed her signature to a long term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. She has appeared in many M.-G.-M. pictures, among them "His Hour," "Wife of the Centaur," "Man and Maid," "The Merry Widow," etc.

John Miljan is the latest player to be added to the cast of "The Great Galeoto," the Spanish romance in which John M. Stahl is directing Ramon Novarro and Alice Terry.

Constance Howard, eighteen-year-old sister of Frances (Mrs. Samuel Goldwyn), has been signed by Fox Films to play one of the leading romantic roles in "Mother Machree," the Rida Johnson Young story which John Ford is transferring to the screen. Miss Howard has just finished a prominent role opposite Richard Barthelmess in "The White Black Sheep."

As active work began on "The Day of Souls," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film starring John Gilbert, three additions were made to the cast in Lionel Barrymore, Edward Connelly and Jules Cowles. Tod Browning is directing from a scenario adaptation by Waldemar Young of Charles Tenny Jackson's novel of the underworld of Budapest.

Jacqueline Cadson has been given an important part in "It," Clara Bow's first starring picture for Paramount. Clarence Badger is directing. The supporting cast includes Antonio Moreno, William Austin, Priscilla Bonner, Eleanor Lawson and Rose Topley. "It" is Elinor Glyn's screen adaptation of her own story for Miss Bow.

Polly Moran, screen comedienne, who will be remembered for her "Sheriff Nell" comedies of the old Keystone days, essays comedy again in "The Day of Souls." Tod Browning's forthcoming Hungarian story featuring John Gilbert.

Rin-Tin-Tin's latest starring vehicle, "While London Sleeps," was completed last week at the Warner Bros. West Coast studio. The film is now in the cutting process and is scheduled for release among the Warner productions for next month. For a realistic reproduction of a street in the Limehouse district of London four street sets, several stories high were constructed complete with pavements, shops and all their furnishings.

Edward Sloman is now engaged in making tests of candidates for supporting roles in his production, "The Bargain Bride," the Mary Philbin starring vehicle adapted from the French play, "Lea Lyon." George Seigmann, who appeared with Miss Philbin in "The Merry Go Round" and "Love Me and the World Is Mine," has an important part in the new production.

THE CHECK-UP

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."
The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

Short Subjects and Serials

Comedy highlights in "The Merry Month of May," a Fox Films-O. Henry two-reeler

Quartet of New Roach Comedies Completed

FOUR new short feature comedies for Pathe release have reached completion at the Hal Roach studio in California. "War Feathers," an "Our Gang" comedy of the wide open spaces, has been edited, titled and previewed. It was directed by Anthony Mack under Robert McGowan's supervision. "Be Your Age," a Charley Chase comedy directed by Leo McCarey, has also been completed, edited and previewed. Gladys Hulette, Lillian Leighton, Oliver Hardy and Frank Brownlee are in the cast. At the same time, production was completed on another Chase comedy, directed by James Parrott, with Eugenia Gilbert, Bull Montana, Amber Norman, Eugene Pallette and Valentina Zimini in the supporting cast.

In the cast of the current "star" comedy which Leo McCarey is directing, are Marjorie Daw, Creighton Hale, Jess Devorska, Max Davidson, Oliver Hardy, Spec O'Donnell and Ann Brody. Fred Guiol, director of the all-star Hal Roach comedies, is recuperating from a severe case of sunburn and is preparing the story on the next of the "star" series.

Five New Bray Productions Nearly Completed

Three two-reel comedies, one animated cartoon and one novelty screen magazine are nearing the finishing mark at the Bray studio. "Don't Kid Me, Monk," a Sunkist comedy featuring "Mr. X," the educated ape, and the Sunkist bathing beauties is the first opus on the list. "Blue Black" is a two-reel "Fistical Culture" comedy featuring Lewis Sargent. "School Days" is a "McDougal Alley" comedy supervised by Joe Rock and setting forth the capers of the "McDougal Alley" gang. "Transportation" is the name of the novelty screen magazine subject. It is a travelogue and is the product of Don Carlos Ellis. "Dog Gone It" the Bray animated cartoon, features Walt Lantz, the artist, in company with "Pete the Pup," of the hot dog cartoons.

J. R. Bray on the Lookout for New Material

Though this has been a banner year for J. R. Bray, with eighty-eight short subjects being released during the 1926-27 season through twenty-eight exchanges throughout the country, the producer of the Bray product feels that he could make good use of additional material. He invites known and unknown producers who have something to offer to come forward with their product that he may examine what they have and select the best, most original, unique and different among them for the public. He offers the co-operation of a name that is becoming increasingly popular in the short subject field.

Many on Educational Nov. List

Schedule Includes Two Reel Comedies, Cartoons, Novelty Subjects and News

FIVE two-reel comedies, four animated cartoon comedies, two one-reel comedies, three novelty subjects and eight Kinograms comprise the program of releases scheduled by Educational for release during November.

"Open Spaces," the new Juvenile two-reeler stars "Big Boy," the two-year-old star. He is seen as the "goat" of a boys' camp where he falls in love with a pretty, rich girl, Bonnie Barrett. Charles Lamont directed. Neal Burns is featured in "Dodging Trouble," and Eddie Baker and Edna Marion head the supporting cast. Directed by Harold Beaudine.

"Hoot Mon," is the title of Bobby Vernon's third comedy on the new program. The supporting cast includes Eddie Baker, Frances Lee, and Jack Duffy. Al St. John is featured in a Mermaid comedy titled "Flaming Romance," which Stephen Roberts directed. Aileen Lopez, Otto Fries, Clem Beauchamp and Jack Lloyd support the star.

"Movieland" is the title of Lupino Lane's first comedy for the 1926-27 season. Kathryn McGuire has the leading feminine role. Two Cameo comedies, "His Off Day," and "Bad Breaks," will be released during November. The first features Phil Dunham and Miss "Toy" Gallagher and George Davis is starred in the last named.

"Then and Now" is the title of the current Curiosities reel; a new Bruce seenie offers "Hula Hula" and Honolulu Nights." Lyman H. Howe's new Hodge Podge is titled "A Key Hole Cruise."

"The Mighty Smith" and "Barnum Was Right" are the titles of two new Life Cartoons. "Felix the Cat in Reverse English" and "Felix the Cat Trumps the Ace" are the two Pat Sullivan creations for release; as usual Kinograms issues will appear twice each week.

"The Golden Stallion" Wild Horse Serial, Under Way

Work has begun on "The Golden Stallion," a ten-chapter serial being produced by Nat Levine and featuring a wild horse and including in its list of players Maurice "Lefty" Flynn. Others in the cast are Molly Malone, Joe Bonomo, Joseph Swickard and Burr McIntosh. Harry Webb is directing from a story by Karl Krusada and William Lester.

"The Golden Stallion" is intended for independent consumption.

"On Guard" New Pathe Serial

Schuyler Grey Prod. Filming New Chapterplay With Cullen Landis

ANNOUNCEMENT was made this week by Pathe that it would handle the release of "On Guard," a chapter play at present being filmed by Schuyler Grey Productions which produced "Casey of the Coast Guard," a recent Pathe distributed serial. The new story deals with life in the Army.

Arch Heath will direct from a scenario prepared by Paul Fairfax Fuller of the story by Major Robert Glassburn of the U. S. Army. Wilfred Noy, English director, will assist Heath. The balance of the production staff includes Buddy Sehyer and Cameramen Walter Strenge and Frank Perugine.

Cullen Landis has been cast for the leading role and the balance of the cast comprises Muriel Kingston, leading lady; Louise Du Pre, Walter P. Lewis, Tom Blake, Hal Forde, Edward Burns Jack Bardette, Gus De Wilde and Tom Poland.

While the unit will use the Pyramid studios in Astoria, L.I., for some scenes, the greater part of the picture will be produced on location at the various army camps and forts. Scenes have already been taken at West Point and the production unit is now at Fort Hoyle, near Baltimore, and at the Aberdeen Artillery Testing Grounds.

It is expected that this new serial will follow "The House Without a Key" on the Pathe release schedule.

Six Fox Shorts For November

Three Imperials, One Animal, One O.
Henry and a Van Bibber Scheduled

THERE will be six Fox short subject comedies released during November embracing three Imperials, one of the Animal Comedy series, and one each of the Van Bibber and O. Henry series.

On the 14th comes the first Imperial, "Light Wines and Bearded Ladies," featuring Wynne Beaulter and Gene Cameron, under the direction of Jules White; and "Napoleon, Jr.," an Animal Comedy, with "Jerry the Giant" (Jerry Madden, child star) and Pal, the wonder dog, having the leads.

"The Tennis Wizard," with Earle Foxe and Florence Gilbert in the leads as usual, is the title of the Van Bibber which will be sent out the 21st. "Madame Dynamite," with Della Peterson and Eddie Clayton, is the name of the Imperial booked for Nov. 28th release. The O. Henry scheduled for this date has not been definitely decided on as yet.

Ten Subjects on Pathe Oct. 31st Program

VARIETY is in evidence among the ten short subjects comprising the Pathe releasing schedule for the week of October 31st. Hal Roach contributes a two-reel comedy in "Get 'Em Young," with Harry Myers featured and Eugenia Gilbert, Stan Laurel, Max Davidson, Charlotte Mineau, Fred Malatesta and Ernie Wood in supporting roles. Mack Sennett is represented with another two-reeler, "Masked Mammals," with Billy Bevan, Thelma Parr and Vernon Dent portraying the principal roles. Fred Guiol directed the Roach offering and Del Lord the Sennett.

Chapter Eight of the Pathe serial, "The Fighting Marine," starring Gene Tunney, bears the title of "Challenged." Grantland Rice covers the sporting angle in "Durable Souls," wherein the importance of grit and stamina in sport are stressed. "Nurnberg, the Toy City," is a leaf from Hv Mayer's Sketchbook and visualizes that artist's experience in the medieval Bavarian city. Another of Aesop's grains of wisdom is incorporated in the film fable, "Home Sweet Home." Pathe Review No. 44 contains "Miracle Mud," "Memory Road," "With the Roosevelts in Turkestan" and "The Ramparts of the Rhone." Issues Nos. 90 and 91 of Pathe News conclude the list of subjects for the week.

Extensive Alterations to Hal Roach Production Plant

Hal Roach, producer of comedies for Pathe release, has just completed extensive improvements to his Washington Boulevard studio, thus making it one of the most substantial and complete of its kind on the West Coast. The stages and executive offices are built with an eye for permanence, boasting of hollow brick construction. The studio maintains its own laboratory for the development and printing of film, with the equipment the most modern and complete. A wardrobe and designing department, under the supervision of Will Lambert, supplies all the feminine apparel which figures so prominently in the Roach comedies. Carpenter, paint and blacksmith shops are included in the studio's line of accessories, besides mills, automobile garages and a non-profit making studio cafe, each with a crew of carefully selected craftsmen. A school-room has been for years a feature on the Roach lot. Here "Our Gang" pursues its studies under the guidance of expert tutors.

In addition to the Washington Boulevard lot, Roach owns a ten-acre ranch on Preuss Road where the wild stallion Rex is confined in company with other equine and canine performers. The producer recently purchased a ranch near Moapa, Nev., which he uses as a location camp. Hal Roach, in addition to housing and accommodating his own units, is able to rent stage space to outside producers at the Culver City plant.

"Plumb Goofy"

(Educational-Cameo—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

A GAIN the woes and tribulations of lovers. In this instance they are up against the parental barrier even though the wedding ring has already been secured and presented to the bride-to-be. Father throws his would-be son-in-law out of the house, but retribution follows fast behind in the shape of an electric iron in which is a note for the expelled lover. This hits father and temporarily floors him. Then follow innumerable suitcases which are caught with the skill and precision of a college football player handling a forward pass. The would-be elopers discover that young brother has stolen the automobile in which they were to elope. To cross a stream to the minister's they take refuge in a boat. Father and mother pursue. Father lands in the water and young brother throws a life line to the lovers, who are thus pulled ashore. The life line holds; so does the kid's mistaken sense of humor, for he does not unfasten the tow line, but hauls his sister and her beau through the streets of Hollywood until they alight at the church and are married. Their wedding journey consists of a ride in the same boat which is opportunely brought down the street by the prankish youngster on his return trip.

THE CAST

Phil Dunham, "Tov" Gallagher, Jack Lloyd, Blanche Payson and Jack McHugh. Director, Clem Beauchamps.

Summary.—The unusual situations devised by the director and cameraman distinguish the comedy and make it entertaining and amusing.

"Wild Bill"

(Universal-Blue Bird Comedy—One Reel)

T HIS is a burlesque "bad-man" western featuring that corquelt comedian Charles Puffy. It is rather good fun. Here is the idea. William McKee gets a position on the sheriff's staff. His first assignment is to get a "bad man" who is terrorizing the countryside. He buckles on his belt with the regulation six-shooters, but is saved the dangers of the expedition because Charles Puffy gets the job to make good in the eyes of the store-keeper's daughter, Elsie Tarron. To save going for him Kalla Pasha, the bad man comes into the store and the sheriff's office adjoining and kidnaps the dummy figure which he mistakes for Elsie. Then Puffy starts in pursuit also in ignorance of the fact that the villain is stealing a dummy. He catches up with him and through a combination of happy circumstances captures the outlaw and wins the girl. It is robust but childish fun, and will unquestionably draw its quota of laughs.

Scott Darling wrote the classic and Richard Smith directed.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Masked Mammies"

(Pathe—Mack Sennet—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

H ERE our old friend, the husband who disavows his wife at a masquerade and the penalty he pays for flirting with his own better half. No, not new, but amusingly handled. The philanderer is the third of a party of three, the other two being his friend, a beauty doctor, and his wife, said doctor not knowing, of course, that the fair unknown is his friend's wife. He does learn it at the ball when the two men engage in a rough-house fight on the floor of the dance hall and through their realism win the cup for the best Apache dance offered. Their finale finds the combatants landing in the base-drum.

Engaged in the business of making you laugh are Billy Bevan as the beauty doctor, Thelma Parr, his patient who "steps out," and the philandering husband of the fair Thelma, Vernon Dent. Del Lord in the role of director moved them hither and yon before the camera. It is difficult to point a moral from the tale, but possibly one is not needed or expected if the spectators laugh hard and often enough. They probably will at this and also speculate how soon these and other Sennett players will follow the precedent of graduating to important roles in more serious plays as so many graduates of this past master of slap-stick seem to be doing each season.

"The Marry Month of May"

(Fox Presents An O. Henry Short Story)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

W ILLIAM FOX has done one of Sidney Porter's masterpieces and done it successfully so that even an O. Henry fan should be pleased. This is a good comedy and entertaining.

Start with this premise. A girl who believes in mediums and fortune-tellers goes to consult one of the faking fraternity to discover if her suitor is a lineal descendant of notorious Captain Kidd. The beau gallant is not keen about it but goes with her. To stage his exhibition or exposition most successfully the seer takes his customers to a sloop docked near by there to work in cahoots with a mate who is on the graft.

In the meantime a "Pirate's Den" cabaret has been raided by the police and the waiters consistently garbed as pirates (which, judging by most night-club charges, they really are) take refuge on the same sloop as that visited by the astrologer and his victims. Then ensues a series of rough-house, slapstick comedy that is, despite these qualities, decidedly amusing. Every time one pirate has been done away with, another looking exactly like him bobs up until the fake commences to think he has really conjured up spirits.

With innumerable trap-doors on the deck of the sloop through which everybody is being dropped from time to time, it is almost like Hanlon's Superba or one of those trick pantomimes of thirty years ago. It is mirth provoking.

THE CAST

Harold Goodwin, Gladys McConnell, William E. Jamieson and Noah Young. Supervisor, George E. Marshall. Director, Thomas Buckingham. Two Reels. Released October 17.

"The Lyin' Tamer"

Wherein the King of Beasts Stars

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

M ESSRS. Gene Ford and Henry Johnson have concocted a story and from this themselves fashioned a scenario that fills two reels with comedy satirizing tourists and guides. While this particular locale is Africa, the satire might apply almost anywhere on the globe where the twain come in contact with each other. It is quite amusing even if the spectator feels at times that it is a bit drawn out.

Ernie Shields outwits the other guides by using an elephant-drawn cart for a jungle trip to see the animals at close range. For a matter of fact the animals which he is to show are caged. And even then he has to utilize the services of Curtis MacHenry, a negro native, to impersonate a lion to satisfy the customers. Enter on the scene a real lion and you have the ingredients for the story. Everybody chases everyone else. Lion imitator, lion, guide, tourists are all mixed up in one pot-pourri or goulash so that it is difficult at times to disentangle the various actors. To supply a full measure of laughter and impossible situations, the house in which the principal characters take refuge is on the brink of a stream and with a typical tropical storm falls in the torrent.

It is decidedly slapstick humor but justifies itself time and again through the very absurdity and impossibility of the situations and the acting. The cast includes Ernie Shields, Barbara Luddy, Harry Woods, Edward Wills, Unice Moore and Curtis MacHenry. Directed by Max Gold and Al Davis. Supervised by George E. Marshall. Produced and distributed by Fox. Released October 3, 1926. Two Reels.

"Shell Socked"

(Educational-Jimmie Adams Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

T HIS is quite an amusing and entertaining bit of war-time slap-stick. Possibly I am predisposed because I like the personality of the star, Jimmie Adams, who has a method that is quite his own. Then, too, it is rather ingenious even though it deals with a theme that has been almost exhausted by writers of legitimate plays and screen dramas, comedies and farces. It cannot fail of its appeal because it follows the formula of having the so-called underdog win out in the end through no cleverness of his own, but through the force of circumstances beyond his control and not of his own connivance. The idea of escaping from the German trench in which he and heroine find themselves because the Teutons think he is really a German captain is good. Their following him into the allied lines, where he gets his reward in the shape of a decoration, even if it only be an iron cross, and, much more important and worth while, the hand of the general's daughter, makes a decided hit.

Walter Graham, who is credited with the directing, devised some amusing situations, not the least of which is the bombing-plane where the pilot is reduced in rank each time that a bomb is launched and misses its mark on the terrain beneath. Said mark is hero Jimmie Adams and heroine Vera Steadman as a private and Red Cross nurse respectively.

THE CAST

Jimmie Adams starred, Vera Steadman, George Burton, Eddie Baker, Bill Irving. Director, Walter Graham.

Summary.—Ingenious war-time comedy well directed, photographed and acted.

"The Lone Prairie"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

L OVE, its inevitable corollary, jealousy, self-sacrifice, daring and all the other virtues go into this western so that the spectator will not be emotionally starved when the fade-out comes. George Magrill is the star. He is in love with Alma Rayford, the school teacher of the district. When Regina Doyle, daughter of the ranch on which Magrill is employed, returns Alma, not realizing that they are boy and girl friends from youth, becomes jealous. She climbs on a mustang and rides away. Her horse bolts and George has to live up to his comic strip name and "do it," the do it being rescuing the heroine in a pursuit race.

Regina doesn't play true to western cowgirl traditions, but does a feminine and supposedly characteristic eastern fain when she learns that an outlaw is about to hold up her father returning from the bank with a large roll paid for delivered cattle. To make amends for her groundless jealousy, Alma rides forth alone to warn Regina's father. She is captured by Jack Dawn, the bandit, as is money-laden father.

Enter the hero to save both after a breath-taking fight on the mountain side. He in turn is rescued by comedy relief "Shorty" Jack Knapp, who lassos him and pulls back from almost certain death on the mountain side. What more can any seeker for thrills ask?

"Jane's Engagement Party"

(Universal-Stern—Jane Series—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE road of true love, if your fiancée owns a motorcycle with a side-car, is anything but smooth; that is one of those self-demonstrating or obvious truisms. That is what this one of the "What Happened to Jane" series of Stern Brothers released through Universal proves most conclusively. Tony Hayes, the beloved of Wanda Wiley, starts things off hilariously by providing his mother-in-law to be with the first thrill she has had in thirty years by taking her home in the motorcycle side-car. Narrow escapes galore and finally a wreck.

Then the engagement party of her daughter. The villain, a bigamist for whom the police are looking, has ambitions of adding Jane to the collection of wives. He is in a fair way to do so until Tony discovers from a newspaper story that the chap who is wrecking the engagement party, his happiness and his face is the man wanted. He gets him by bringing in a bunch of kids who have been subsidized with a nickel bribe to claim the impostor as their father, Tony, with dress and veil, pretending to be one of the deserted wives.

The requisite amount of plaster is dislodged from the ceiling, enough rough and tumble acrobatic stunts staged to be worthy of a vaudeville troupe of Arabian acrobats, and the atmosphere is sufficiently clear to show Tony and Wanda in a final strangle-hold as the shutter of the lens closes for the last time.

Sam Newfield saw to it that enough amusing situations were staged to hold the numerous followers of Jane's adventures.

"River-roads and a Railroad Flivver"

(Educational—Bruce Seemies—Two Reels)

PHOTOGRAPHED with the same attention to setting and coloring which have made this series notable this latest addition decidedly belongs. It is far, far removed from the bustle of the cities and accentuates the beauties and restfulness of roads far from main-traveled highways. Its primitive ferries and fishermen are oblivious of the passing of time, Mussolini's rise to power in emulation of his Cæsarian predecessors or Queen Marie's arrival in this so-called democratic republic.

"Five-fifty-five" runs wild is a series of pictures taken from an automobile which is daily used for inspection purposes on the Canadian-Pacific Railroad. It fills the spectator with wander-lust and a desire to see the section of this continent through which this road runs. Judging by the speed attained by this auto it can distance any of the powerful engines on the line. It is a truly thrilling and picturesque ride which the camera man takes with his chauffeur as no attention is paid to turns, tunnels, grades or anything else. Trains are passed as though they were snails crawling their way to the Pacific Coast.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Cut Price Glory"

(Educational—Life Cartoon—One Reel)

ANOTHER of a series of Life Cartoons is with us—a three cornered melodrama of the War—served through the medium of Educational by Messrs. Sherwood and Wadsworth and their staff of Life artists. Briefly, the plot has to do with hero "Mike," who enlists following a debate with "High Hat Harold" over a raise in salary. After some preliminary training Mike is given a message to deliver to the General, "without cost." Many adventures finally land our hero in that officer's presence, and he's none other than "High Hat Harold," who shows his appreciation by blasting Mike on his way astride a cannon ball. As Mike nears home and his beloved, the shell explodes, and our hero drops in his Myrtle's arms.

In the opinion of this writer, this cartoon is not on par with the first of Life cartoons shown at Wurlitzer Hall some few weeks back. The animation does not appear to be as silky and smooth as it should be; moreover, the characters (supposed to be monkeys) are not particularly attractive and one has a hard task to determine just what they are. However, the combined ingenuity of Robert Sherwood, Mason Wadsworth and their experienced staff, can undoubtedly be counted on to remove whatever may appear as a defect at the present time.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Get 'Em Young"

(Pathe-Hal Roach—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THEY do not have any subtitle for this comedy, but if they did it would probably be "And Treat 'Em Rough." Anyway, the characters in this are treated rough, so that element is not lacking in the comedy, but when has it been? Harry Myers is returning from abroad. He is seasick, so is his man. Also a fellow passenger, Eugenia Gilbert. She takes possession of Harry's bed, so ill is she, and he falls in love with her even under those unusually unpropitious circumstances. A radio tells him he must marry immediately to inherit one of those movie fortunes. On landing the hero is presented with an Amazonian candidate for the marital honor and he chivalrously pushes her into the harbor. To get the money he dresses his valet up as a woman. But the latter gets tipsy and spoils the conspiracy. But, ah, just before the fatal stroke of twelve the girl met on shipboard puts in appearance and all is saved.

It is the wildest kind of burlesque, but succeeds in being entertaining. The beds which roll across the stateroom and the drunken valet in women's bridal costume—these are the outstanding features. It is well acted and directed.

THE CAST

Harry Myers, Eugenia Gilbert, Stan Laurel, Max Davidson, Charlotte Mineau, Fred Malatesta and Ernie Wood. Director, Fred Guiol. Supervisor, F. Richard Jones.

"Felix Shatters the Sheik"

(Educational—Cartoon—One Reel)

FELIX in this reel, as the English would express it, "enters trade." The manner in which he embarks on a more or less useful career instead of playing his usual butterfly role is characteristic of the cat. He follows an umbrella-vendor who regards him as a hoodoo and attempts to stone him. He misses hitting instead a poster in which a man is advertising vichy. Enraged this character deluges the peddler and a passer-by. The latter thinks a rain storm is brewing and buys an umbrella from the peddler. Convinced, Felix is a mascot instead of a hoodoo, and the latter takes him in partnership.

The Sahara is selected as a selling field, but disastrously at first as there is, of course, practically no rain there. Then the ingenious cat solves the problem by sending up toy balloons with bird seed and onions. The former attracts the birds and the onions make them weep. As a result showers and a tremendous sale of umbrellas to the Arabs.

Cleverly thought out and executed by Pat Sullivan.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Nurnberg the Toy City"

(Pathe—Hy Mayer Sketch Book—One Reel)

HERE is another delightful addition to the contributions to the screen of an acknowledged master-artist of the newspaper and screen worlds. He depicts with the camera famous spots in the city noted for its toy manufacturing and combines these with drawings of the characters and scenes blending these with an almost uncanny cleverness. The city itself is unusually picturesque; that I remember from personal experience, and Mayer has taken full advantage of its possibilities with camera and brush or pencil. One of his stunts is to draw a face or a scene and then have this dissolve into an actual photograph which might have been inspired by the drawing. It enters the world of the mystic so mysterious and intriguing is the result. Again hats off to Hy Mayer and his contributions to the screen.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Gun Shy"

(Pathe—Aesop's Fables—One Reel)

CONSISTENT with this time of the year the creator of Aesop's Fables sends his characters afield in this release. Only the things which could happen in the land inhabited by cartoonist characters do happen. Farmer Al first encounters a condor wearing a bullet-proof vest which he discovers when his bullets have no effect. Next rabbits playing leap-frog engage his attention. This leads to meeting with a bear and his family. Escaping from the latter he finds himself in the condor's nest misappropriating the food intended for the condor's young. Once more on terra firma facing the bears he starts one of those seemingly endless chases and ends up in a trap set by the cat. The latter has been doing his own hunting, a bit more successfully than Al and has come back wearing a bear-skin. Al penetrates this disguise because the cat's tail is sticking out and then ensues another marathon over the hill and out of the picture.

It is a good Pathe picture and belongs by every right in this entertaining series.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Short Shots, No. 2"

(Castle Films—One Reel)

WITH an airplane flight the principal theme of this second of the new Castle series moves crisply across the silver sheet and succeeds in keeping one interested during all the time of its unreeling. Camera magic enters for a short demonstration. A giant dirigible is made to appear as if standing on its head, assuming all sorts of positions unbecoming to a dirigible and is twirled around at a rapid pace like a cigar on the end of a string. The shooting off into space of the airplane is excellently done, the cameraman being located near the wheels of the plane, thus obtaining unusual camera angles. Consequently everything on the screen assumes a topsy-turvy aspect when the plane loops-the-loop, spins and nose dives. Even from the security of his seat the spectator is bound to feel that tingling, uncomfortable sensation of falling. There is also a daredevil who has an assortment of aero-acrobatics. To lend variety to the reel there are a few shots of children and their pets.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Durable Souls"

(Pathe-Spotlight—One Reel)

IN sports as well as in other spheres it seems that this is the day of souls and soles. Endurance is the thing that counts if an athlete has other qualities such as nerve and ability. DeMar, the marathoner, is one illustration. College crews afford another. LaCrosse, football, boxing, hockey and soccer; all these and other sports where the ability to last is one of the most important factors are shown in the carefully selected pictures and titles in this release. "What shall it profit a man that he has all the daring in the world if he cannot last," would seem to be the sermon and it is self-evident how true this is. The diversity of subjects selected, the pertinent angles taken by the camera and the appropriate titles selected by Rice make the week's offering decidedly acceptable.—PAUL THOMPSON.

Whispering Wires

Shivers Up and Down Your Spine

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

MELODRAMA of the mello-ist is this picture with the stage play by Kate McLaurin as its inspiration. Henry Leverage did the story for the screen and L. G. Rigby contributed the scenario which Albert Ray directed for Fox featuring Anita Stewart. The picture suffers because it is almost impossible to maintain to the end the secret of how the murders are committed which is one of the biggest assets a play of this kind possesses. The baffling of the spectator as to the manner and method until almost the final curtain almost always intrigues the theatre-goer if the story be interesting and thrill-producing. In the picture that becomes difficult and the scenarist and director have to tip their hand early as to how the thing is done and then rely on the gripping quality of the action to hold the spectator's attention.

In this respect "Whispering Wires" is rather successful. Anita Stewart helps a lot through her impersonation of the heroine. Scott Welsh as the detective, and Otto Matieson and Frank Campeau, that hardened screen sinner, as the villains are the others whose work stands out. Personally I feel that emphasizing the comedy (so-called by courtesy) of the assistant musical comedy sleuths is a mistake. There doubtless is a large audience for that sort of thing but to me it detracts greatly from the value of the picture and from maintaining that tension which is so absolute a necessity.

THEME: Mystery melodrama of revenge by ex-convict and inventor pal.

PRODUCTION HIGH LIGHTS: Ingenuity of murder by telephone shown so graphically as to be almost convincing.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Legitimate play's success and love of people for mystery melodrama. Also Anita Stewart's vogue.

DRAWING POWER: Should be good.

*Produced and distributed by Fox Films Corp.
Length, 5,906 feet. Released October 24, 1926.*

Football pervades the Paramount offering, "The Quarterback"

Take it from Me

Reginald Denny Runs a Department Store

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

HERALDED as the first of six Denny Specials for 1926-27, "Take It From Me" is released to inaugurate what Universal hopes will hereafter be known as "National Denny Day."

His initial vehicle for the "Twelve Nights," not to be confused with Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," is taken from the musical comedy which Will Johnstone and Will Anderson fashioned for Broadway. It was successful in that guise and should be in the motion picture version. It has the always-interest-compelling star supported by attractive Blanche Mehaffey, Ben Hendricks, Jr., and other capable players directed by William A. Seiter. Moreover, it was screened with little regard for production costs. The story is amusing, well told and acted and holds your interest.

Its underlying idea will give a slight suspicion of its possibilities. Reginald has run through fifty thousand dollars left by a wealthy uncle and is broke, women and horses having done their bit toward this depletion. The valuable dry goods store of the departed is left to the nephew to be run for three months. If at the end of that period the books show a profit it becomes Reginald's permanent property. Otherwise it goes to a crooked old manager. The Denny innovations, intended to wreck the property so he will lose his gold-digger fiancée and be free to marry Blanche, do succeed in that that consummation is brought about.

The Cast: Reginald Denny (starred), Blanche Mehaffey, Ben Hendricks, Jr., Lee Moran, Lucien Littlefield, Ethel Wales, Bertram Johns, Jean Tolley, Vera Lewis and Tom O'Brien. Director, William A. Seiter. Scenarist, Harvey Thew.

THEME: Amateur operates dry goods store successfully to win inheritance.

PRODUCTION HIGH LIGHTS: Denny's consistently amusing acting. Style show and bathing scene also show-window sequence.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Denny and then Denny. Clean comedy. Laugh - provocative powers. Fashion show.

DRAWING POWER: Excellent draw for all theatres. The whole family can see it.

The Quarterback

Lively College Story Is Entertaining

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE films have certainly gone collegiate—what with all the promising young men doing their bit on track and gridiron. In line with the fall pastime Richard Dix pulls a Grange without running into his own interference. Which is to say that he is allowed clear sailing to score that touch—and win the game for dear old Colton.

Naturally the highlights are concerned with the football game—which has more than its share of suspense. In building it up a romance is introduced which has a truly collegiate flavor. Indeed, the director hasn't gone astray in giving it a campus atmosphere. Dix may appear a trifle mature in his role but then so is any good football player who is not declared ineligible by a faculty. The point is he does his stuff. The game is a humdinger—and it has the touch of reality. Well, why shouldn't it?—seeing as how "Hurry Up" Yost of Michigan was brought East to give it an authentic flavor. Esther Ralston is charming enough to inspire any player to die for her if he doesn't care to die for his alma mater.

The Cast: Richard Dix, Esther Ralston, Harry Beresford, David Butler, Robert W. Craig, Mona Palma. Director, Fred Newmeyer.

THEME: Romance of college hero encountering good luck in meeting the girl—and falling in love so that he plays like a demon for his alma mater.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The introduction of the romance. The collegiate incident. The football game. The local color and atmosphere. The easy acting by star. The fine support by rest of the cast. The milk-peddling episode.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: First you have a title which will bring 'em in for the fall season. Play up Dix. Tie up with schools and colleges. Stage football matinees, etc.

DRAWING POWER: O. K. for any house. Title and star will draw them.

The Prince of Tempters

Interesting, Well Produced and Acted

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ANOTHER German, Lothar Mendes by name, comes forward with an American entry and shows that his reputation with UFA is well founded. The E. Phillips Oppenheim story as screen material is nothing to make a fuss over. It is inclined to be trivial notwithstanding its good treatment here. But Mendes gives it personality. He should go far with real, stirring drama.

The film, which reveals some excellent camera effects in regard to lighting and photography and staging, tells of a young monk who leaves the peaceful confines of a monastery to become engaged in earthly arguments and temptations. He falls in love and encounters a temptress and when he eventually becomes disillusioned, he resolves to renounce earthly things. But love and the happy ending intervene—and so to the inevitable finish.

One should disregard the plot and drink in the mechanics of the production. It features some exquisite exteriors a quota of dramatic scenes and some first-rate performances. Ben Lyon and Lois Moran act very creditably—and Lya de Putti, having been directed by one who knows her and understands her, also redeems herself.

The Cast: Ben Lyon, Lois Moran, Lya de Putti, Ian Keith, Mary Brian, Olive Tell, Sam Hardy. Director, Lothar Mendes.

THEME: Romantic drama of youth who while falling in love encounters temptations which disrupt his romance. His sacrifice wins him his romantic reward.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The camera effects, noticeable in the lighting and photography. The exteriors. The church scenes. The death of the mother. The double exposures. The creditable acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The title and cast and fact that it is directed by UFA director should be advertised here. Play up its camera effects. Tell of its spiritual quality. Tease the title.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for houses catering to better class clientele. Title will draw them. Good for neighborhoods.

Produced by Robert Kane. Distributed by First National. Length, seven reels. Released October, 1926.

Breed of the Sea

Ralph Ince Doubles in a Peter Kyne Story

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

WHETHER reading a novel or seeing the original play from which a moving picture is devised is an asset or a liability and detriment is an open question. Personally I think a reviewer is fortunate if he be unfamiliar with the original. Then he will not be so captious about his ideas or ideals being unrealized when screened.

It is good melodrama and it is a truism that all the world loves good melodrama, or at least most of us do, whether it is between book covers, on the spoken stage or on the screen. I thought Ince did good work in directing and also in acting. Also that Margaret Livingston and Alphonz Ethier, best remembered by myself for his Neri role in "The Jest," were more than satisfactory in the support, as they played daughter and father respectively on the island of Paroa which Ince makes safe, not for democracy, but for his brother's spiritual work.

Twin brothers and suitors for the same girl one brother misses the girl and embraces the ministry as a vocation. The other flies the jolly Roger as a pirate. The buccaneer conveys his brother and the latter's wife to the south seas as missionaries. The seafaring twin goes ashore and tames the bully that runs the island. Incidentally he falls in love with his most sensuous and seductive daughter, Margaret Livingston (in this picture anyway), and sails away to the port of matrimony.

The Cast: Ralph Ince, Margaret Livingston, Pat Harmon, Alphonz Ethier, Dorothy Dunbar and Shannon Day. Director, Ralph Ince. Camera man, Allen Siegler.

THEME: Twin brothers compete for same girl. One becomes minister, other a pirate. Ince's direction and two-fold convincing acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Latter tames island bully for brother's mission. Story of adventure and love. Ince's dual characterizations.

PRODUCTION HIGH-LIGHTS: Ships and tropical scenes. DRAWING POWER: Good.

The Winning Wallop

The Man With the Punch Comes Through

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THE truth of the aphorism "You cannot keep a good man down" is again brought to your attention in this cinematic offering from the Gotham studio. It can be immediately said to contain all the necessary elements and opportunities for the display of athletic prowess that are so necessary to the fast moving type of picture. It serves as a vehicle for the athletic ability of William Fairbanks, one of the screen's "huskies" who can go through his paces so easily and with such little apparent effort that he hardly seems to be working up a sweat.

When a young man is faced with the alternative of leaving his pleasant home and earning his living with his mitts, the situation is not so bad when the young man in question can use those mitts to excellent advantage. But when he is placed in the predicament of submitting to the guns of a gang of thugs with the big fight only a few short hours away and when he is being sought by the police the young man must be of staunch calibre, of unwavering determination and unflagging zeal. Fairbanks possesses all of these attributes and he easily gains his liberty, enjoys an exciting chase by the police, arrives at the prize ring at the nick o' time and disposes of his adversary in jig time. This scene of the fight is excellently staged and has a dramatic denouement wherein the cards of Fate are shuffled and the villains get their just desserts while Fairbanks gets the hand of Shirley Palmer.

The Cast: William Fairbanks, Shirley Palmer, Charles K. French, Melvin McDowell, Crauford Kent, Jimmy Aubrey and Frank Hagney.

THEME: Branded a ne'er-do-well by his father, youth proves conclusively that his fists can enable him to get along in the world.

PRODUCTION HIGH-LIGHTS: Fighting scenes. Pursuit by the police. Dramatic denouement in the prize ring.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The fact that it deals with the squared ring which has had such prominence with the battle of the Sesqui and what not. The popularity of Fairbanks.

DRAWING POWER: Good. For the neighborhood house or for a double bill.

The Fourth Commandment

What Happens If You "Don't Honor Your Parents"

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

EMORY JOHNSON directed his mother's, Emilie Johnson's, script in this mother-movie. Both director and scenarist have collaborated before and with deserved success. "The Fourth Commandment" somehow just didn't click with this individual critic. Why, is difficult to put one's hand on. Possibly because it is a bit too mawkishly sentimental or sentimentally mawkish. It purports to tell how retribution visits those who fail to honor their father and mother and how in the end, no matter what temporal and material comforts one may possess, at the finish the offender of this law of Moses is penalized.

Here again we have Belle Bennett in a weepy role, and Mary Carr in a Pollyannaish "mother" role. After the former has practically forced out into the rain the latter because of jealousy of the son, she in turn suffers the same fate at the hands of her own daughter-in-law. Then for a fitting finale in Paris the now affluent and successful architect, Henry Victor, passes his whilom wife, Belle Bennett, who had expelled his mother and then left him for a richer if not handsomer man. He in an expensive limousine with his white-haired mother, Mary Carr, and his son, Robert Agnew, while she is playing a small street piano or organ.

The Cast: Henry Victor, June Marlowe, Belle Bennett, Leigh Willard, Mary Carr, Brady Cline, Catherine Wallace, Frank Elliott, Knute Erickson, Kathleen Myers, Robert Agnew, Wendell Phillips Franklin, Lorraine Rivers, Malcolm Jones and Stanley Taylor. Directed by Emory Johnson from his adaptation of his mother's, Emilie Johnson's, story.

THEME: Mother love and how it is sometimes rewarded.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: San Francisco earthquake and fire in opening scenes; deadly parallel of situation of life conditions reversed.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES.

Mary Carr, Belle Bennett and others in cast; their fame and popularity. Plug mother love theme.

DRAWING POWER: Should be excellent.

Produced and distributed by Universal (Jewel Feature) Pictures Corporation.

Length, 7,560 feet. Released October 12, 1926.

The Ace of Cads

- Fine Production With Fairly Diverting Plot

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WITHOUT much of a story to work over Luther Reed, who makes his debut as a director, has accomplished a neat job. He has covered up the plot shortcomings by placing emphasis upon the production—with the result that the atmosphere is correct and in good taste and the technical details O. K.

Michael Arlen, who wrote the story, has brought nothing new to the screen. As is customary with his ideas he has his principal character found guilty of a misdemeanor of which he was innocent. And so for nineteen years he suffers before he finds some measure of happiness. Since this plot has done yeoman service under various guises the element of suspense is not very prominent. It is quite easy to anticipate the outcome of the story—so the interest falls upon the characterization and the intelligent handling of the figures by the director. Adolphe Menjou plays with his usual poise and sophisticated bearing, but Alice Joyce has a role which invites much more sympathy. The film could stand more humor.

The Cast: Adolphe Menjou, Alice Joyce, Norman Trevor, Philip Strange, Suzanne Fleming. Director, Luther Reed.

THEME: Drama of broken love of youth separated from sweetheart through treachery of false friend—but who years afterward finds a measure of happiness.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The settings and atmosphere. Scene when two rivals meet in cafe. The bachelor dinner. Scene when heroine surprises her fiancé. The acting by principals.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up Michael Arlen, who wrote "The Green Hat." Bill as typical Menjou picture with star giving smooth, polished performance. Play up as romantic drama of heart interest.

DRAWING POWER: Star has following. And his popularity and title should draw them. Q. K. for better class houses.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players.
Length, six reels. Released October, 1926.

Regional News from Correspondents

BROOKLYN'S newest playhouse, the Mayfair Theatre, at Avenue U and Coney Island Avenue, erected at a cost of upwards of a half million dollars, was formally opened to the public Monday, Oct. 11. This theatre will serve as a new amusement center for those who live in Flatbush, Midwood, Sheepshead Bay, Gravesend and Coney Island, by reason of its location in the midst of these sections and its policy of first-run photoplays and vaudeville.

The theatre, latest in the growing A. H. Schwartz Circuit, is possessed of every facility for the comfort and entertainment of patrons. Of particular interest is the announcement that Max A. Cooper, with ten years of experience as manager and more recently connected with the Rialto Theatre in Manhattan, will direct the new house.

A feature picture and five acts of vaudeville will make up the regular program for the first three days. Thursday the bill will change and another feature, with an entire change of vaudeville, will be shown.

Many surprises were introduced as features of the opening night. Prominent men and women of the borough were guests of Mr. Schwartz on the occasion.

Keen taste for elegance has been shown in decorating the interior of the house. Gorgeous curtains, sumptuous drapes and a large mural painting over the promenade floor make for a luxurious interior. The construction of the house allows for a clear view of the stage from any of the 2,000 seats.

The Spiegel Motion Picture Enterprises have purchased a theatre site on the corner of Albany Avenue and Empire Boulevard, where they will erect a new house of 1,860 seating capacity. The Spiegel concern, which also owns the Utica Avenue Theatre, Utica, near Church, completed the sale from the plans.

J. R. Levee, well known in New York City film circles, leaves this week for the West Coast via automobile. He will visit his mother and family on arrival and later on expects to connect with one of the larger Coast exchanges.

Chris' Hink, manager of the Claridge Theatre, Montclair, N.J., has taken over the buying for that house. Fred Faulkner has attended to that matter in the past.

Sartorially perfect, Peter Adams emerged in the midst of Film Row last week, brown hat, brown top-coat and everything. Anyone needing tailoring advice should go see Peter.

It will not be long before the wedding bells will peal for one of our well-known Jersey exhibitors and this piece of news will undoubtedly come as a surprise to those who are acquainted with our good friend, Sam Perry, of Englewood. Bachelor Sam, who has successfully dodged feminine wiles for several years, has at last succumbed. About January 1, Mr. Perry will lead a Miss La Mar to the altar, where he will sign some-

New York and New Jersey

William B. Stein, of the Ritz Theatre, Elizabeth, seems to be gazing at the camera lens rather than the register on the rear of Pat Dowling's little Christie Comedy Drive car thing considerably more binding than a picture contract. The proper word for a writer to spring here is, "congratulations, Sam" (so, there they are, Samuel) and well meant, too.

Two changes in the personnel of Associated's New York and New Jersey Exchange have depleted the ranks to three men; namely, Phil Meyer, Eddie Carroll and Matt Meyer.

Bert Mendelson and Frank Shephard have both tendered their resignations, Mendelson going to Commonwealth Film Exchange, where he will work Manhattan territory from 110th Street downtown and part of Brooklyn, and Shephard has gone to Washington, D.C., where he will manage Sam Sax's Gotham Exchange. Mendelson was a seven-year-man with Associated, while Shephard was connected there for about one year.

Stanley Sobelson was another visitor from Jersey. Commenting on the reported strengthening of the Fabian-Stanley interests in a section of Elizabeth where a Sobelson theatre project is under way, Mr. Sobelson said: "Regardless of what competition may arise, we are going ahead with the completion of our new theatre at Fifth and Elizabeth streets. Plans have been filed with the fire department and contracts have been signed. The house will seat approximately 1,800."

Up to the present writing the report that the Fabian-Stanley group had taken over four Elizabeth theatres operated by Kokalis, is unconfirmed.

Harry and Max Pear have evidently forsaken the exhibition end of the business; at least, for the time being. An announcement is out to the effect that the former owners of the Avon, Garfield and Sixteenth Street theatres have associated themselves with I. H.

Moscowitz in the formation of the Amusement Supply Company, Inc., at 729 Seventh Avenue, where they will deal in the various items of theatre equipment.

Not content with capturing the Motion Picture League and Industrial championship in baseball, the Fox Films team in the Motion Picture Athletic Association has taken a flying start in the bowling tournament. The standing of the teams on October 7th is as follows: Fox Films, 1,000; Famous Players, .667; First National, .667; Producers Distributing Corp., .667; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, .333; Pathe, .333; Universal, .333; Hirlagaph, .000; Warner Bros., .000. The 200-pin bowlers during the week of Oct. 6th were: Spree of M.-G.-M., 214; Mullen of First National, 202; Uhlenbusch of Fox, 200.

Four new motion picture theatres have opened in this zone during the past week. On October 11th the Jersey Theatre, a 2000-seat house at Morristown, N.J., held its premiere. This playhouse is controlled by Publix.

Following the opening of the Morristown Theatre, the Hollywood, a new Stanley-Fabian theatre, located on Central Avenue, Newark, held its first night Oct. 14. This house also seats approximately 2,000.

Another theatre to open was the Strand at Lakewood, N.J. The Strand is not a new theatre but considerable money has been spent to make the playhouse modern in every respect. It is said that this house is one of Sol Brill's many holdings among theatre properties in this section.

The opening of the new Fox Academy of Music, Fourteenth Street, New York City, was covered in last week's issue of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Other theatres to open in the near future include: Ed. Speigle's Roxby in Brooklyn, Oct. 22; Matty Chrystos' new White Plains Theatre, White Plains Avenue and 231st Street, Nov. 1; Sam Baker's Floral Park, Nov. 22; Mike Glynn's Mineola, Nov. 1, and William and Harry Brandt's new house in the East New York section of Brooklyn, about Nov. 1.

After spending a week in conference with his associates of the National Theatre Supply Company in Chicago, Joe Hornstein, a vice-president and general manager of that organization, has returned to his New York City offices.

Theatres in this zone installing new equipment from the above named company include: The Winthrop, Brooklyn; the Colonial, Newark; The Hollywood, Newark; The Jersey, Morristown; New Academy of Music, 14th Street, New York City; The Colonial, Pompton Lakes and the Strand, Lakewood.

Over in the "Big U" Exchange at 1600, there is much activity due to the change in selling policy, which has given the men one hundred per cent. of the product to handle. Heretofore, the salesmen specialized on features, serials and short subjects.

Another item of interest is that one would hardly recognize the new arrangement of the exchange offices. Everything looks a lot more ship-shape than in the past; new desks and new private offices have replaced the old ones, and the routine of business hums along with clock-like precision.

S. S. Liggett, former short subject man for Universal and now handling all product for the entire State of New Jersey, is putting over his work in fine style, according to report.

Two recent additions to the Universal sales staff are: Leslie Sherwood and George Ross. Sherwood was formerly with F.B.O. and George was connected with Commonwealth Film Exchange. Both of these men will work New Jersey territory.

Hartman, who writes exchange news of Universal's sales force in that company's weekly house organ, calls the Big U boys "traveling sheiks" and their exhibitor victims (?) "cadis." One of the items concerns Sheik Herman Stern, who picked a future Brooklyn theatre site on Franklin Avenue, owned by Sutcliffe and Melrick, as a spot to be bumped off a street car. Fine sense of direction, Herman. Another sheik, by name of Lou Levy, reports that Morris Spivack's new house, under construction at Carteret, is progressing nicely.

Sam Perry, of Englewood, N.J., is installing a new oil burning heating apparatus in his theatre. Incidentally, Sam is having his troubles; the workmen tore up the front sidewalk before the 4000-gallon tank arrived and Sam is still waiting for the tank.

Philadelphia

WILLIAM J. HEENAN, newly elected president of the Philadelphia Film Board of Trade, was tendered a dinner at the Cafe Riviera by fellow members of the Board as an expression of their good will and readiness to cooperate with him during the coming year. Jay Emanuel was chairman of the board of arrangements and the "get together" proved to be one of the most enjoyable affairs of its kind that has taken place in Philadelphia for some time.

At the semi-annual sales conference of Famous Players-Lasky, to be held at French Lick, Ind., this month, the Philadelphia office of Paramount will be represented by W. E. Smith, district manager; Percy A. Bloch, branch manager, and Mike Landow, sales manager.

Oscar Neufeld, former president of the Philadelphia Film Board of Trade, and half owner of the De Luxe Exchange and the East Coast Theatres Co., accompanied by Mrs. Neufeld, has left for an extended motor trip through New England and Canada. This is Mr. Neufeld's first real vacation since assuming the duties of president of the Film Board of Trade about five years ago.

George P. Aarons, secretary of the M.P.T.O.A., of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, has just returned from a several weeks' swing around the territory, during which time he visited practically every exhibitor, whether or not a member of the M.P.T.O., and succeeded in bringing the membership of the organization up to 96% of the total number of exhibitors in the entire territory.

Nick Fourgis, of the Strand Theatre, Johnstown, Pa., and Charles Flaherty, of the Pittsburgh Educational exchange. They are both looking at Pat Dowling, who "snapped" this one on his recent Christie Comedy drive

The Philadelphia branch of F.B.O. has made extensive improvements in its quarters and is now occupying more floor space than it has at any time since the opening of its offices here several years ago. The entire first floor has been remodeled, providing for the executive and booking offices. The second floor has been re-partitioned and equipped with a thoroughly up-to-date projection room which compares favorably with any in Philadelphia. More than $8,000 has been expended for these improvements.

Karl Suelke, a member of Paramount's local sales force, has been temporarily transferred to Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where he will assume management of the Paramount exchange during the absence of Fred Myers, branch manager, who is confined to his home with a serious attack of illness.

Owing to the inability of some of the contractors to complete their work within the specified time, the opening date of the Stanley Company's new Earle Theatre in Atlantic City, which was scheduled for the third week in October, has been postponed. While no definite opening date has been announced by Stanley Company officials, Eli M. Orowitz, manager of the Virginia Theatre, Atlantic City, who is handling the publicity for the Earle, expects to make an announcement in regard to the opening within a very short time.

Plans are being made for the opening of George Gravenstine's new Cameo Theatre as early in the year as possible. Work is being pushed forward so rapidly that it is expected to have the house under roof within a very short time. No announcement has been made as to what disposition will be made by Mr. Gravenstine of his Carmen Theatre, which is directly opposite the Cameo Theatre, at Germantown and Allegheny avenues, Philadelphia.

Green & Altman's Jefferson Theatre, which has been closed for some months on account of repairs and improvements, has been reopened and will continue under its former policy. Earle Weston, formerly special representative and later house manager for Hunt's Theatres, Inc., has been placed in charge of the Jefferson.

William H. Mattison, who was for eight years sales representative for Metro-Goldwyn in the Pennsylvania coal region, has resigned and has joined the sales personnel of P.D.C. Wm. G. Humphreys, branch manager, has assigned Mr. Mattison to cover practically the same territory that he worked for Metro-Goldwyn.

Milwaukee

RAY KEMPEN, who recently closed his theatre, the Rex, at Berlin, visited the film offices this week.

Ed Fuchs, manager of the Opera House at Marion, Wis., was a recent Film Row visitor.

E. J. Lipson, manager of the Minneapolis branch of P. D. C., and "Doc" Honeck, manager of the Milwaukee branch, called on Martin Thomas, manager of the Braumart Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich., recently and found him just ready to leave on a hunting expedition.

Manager Cain, of the Palace Theatre, Sheboygan Falls, spent a few hours in Milwaukee recently.

Il. P. Ironfield, booker at the Fox office, and Miss Jean Kupper, formerly of the Fox home office, were married in Milwaukee on October 9th.

Messrs. Smith and Ainsworth of the Fond du Lac Theatre Co. of Fond du Lac, were Milwaukee visitors this week.

Harold Sliter, son of F. G. Sliter, manager of Fox office, has been appointed head of the advertising department to succeed W. W. Kelly who recently resigned.

H. A. Leach, of Leach and Christianson circuit, Hartford, visited several local exchanges this week.

A. M. Van Dyke is the new office manager at Fox' Milwaukee office. Mr. Van Dyke was assistant manager for Fox in Detroit, and was formerly a salesman in the Minneapolis office.

Film Row welcomed "Dad" Wolcott back this week. "Dad" was seriously injured in an automobile accident recently when his car swerved in loose sand. He received a deep cut on his head and injured his leg. This was his first appearance in Milwaukee since his accident. Aside from a slight limp "Dad" says he is as well as ever. "Dad" manages the Majestic Theatre at Racine.

Mrs. August Gloe, managing the Tivoli at Two Rivers, paid a short visit to Film Row recently.

Fox offices report a few changes in personnel. C. W. Perry, formerly a salesman, has left and is now in Chicago. Louis Guhl, former Fox salesman has also resigned. Dewey De Lorenzo, formerly in the shipping department at Celebrated, is now in that department in the Fox offices.

A. C. Accola, manager of the Bonham Theatre, Prairie du Sac, was among out of town exhibitors who visited Milwaukee this week.

Hall Schulz is a new salesman on the staff of Celebrated, out of Milwaukee. He has been assigned to northern Wisconsin and upper Michigan territory.

Carl Ebert, who was a salesman for First National out of Milwaukee and who is now traveling for that firm from Des Moines office, stopped in for a few minutes to see his friends in the Milwaukee exchanges.

N. Thompson, managing the Crystal Theatre at Ft. Atkinson, was a Milwaukee visitor this week.

The Colonial Theatre, Milwaukee, which is undergoing extensive rebuilding, is progressing rapidly. The new walls are appearing and give promise of early completion. Ernest Landmack is the manager.

Elmer Huhnke has been appointed salesman for First National. Mr. Huhnke was formerly booker in the Milwaukee office of First National.

"Happy" Meiniger, managing the Retlaw at Fond du Lac, visited the various film offices recently.

E. Pelletteri, who formerly managed the Gem at Oconto, is taking over the Gem and Princess theatres at Plymouth on November 1st.

Interest in the bowling teams is running high. Two matches have thus far been played. Teams have not as yet been named but are designated by names of their captains. Capt. Van Norman's team has to its credit two games out of six; Captain Steeve Bauer's team heads the list, having lost only one; Chas. Trampke's team lost three and won three, and Ed. Winbaum's team won three and lost three. The schedule runs for twenty weeks, at the end of which the teams are planning a big celebration with the $160 which will have accumulated. Teams meet every Wednesday noon.

J. S. Grauman, president of Celebrated Players, thinks his little three-weeks-old son is just about the best ever. Says he isn't a bit disappointed in having three boys. The youngster is named John at present, but it won't be long before he will be Jack like his daddy.

NAT WYSE, Playdate Representative for Universal, is spending several days in the Charlotte office.

Lester Sipe, former booker of Associated Exhibitors, is now carrying a brief case for Enterprise Distributing Corporation.

It is reported that R. T. Wade, of the Palace Theatre, Morehead City, N.C., is planning to start construction within the next few days on a new theatre seating between 600 and 800. The plans are ready and this theatre will open early next summer. It will be of brick construction, standard stage, with balcony, and will cost between $5,000 and $7,500.

Paul Phillips, of Wilson, N.C., and H. R. Mason, of the Mason Theatre, Goldsboro, visited Film Row the past week.

The Charlotte Better Films Committee had its annual meeting at the Chamber of Commerce to elect officers, and re-elected Mrs. J. A. Parham, President; Mrs. Ralph Van Landingham, Vice-president, and Rev. Jos. A. Gaines, Treasurer. Jacob Binder was elected Secretary to succeed Mrs. B. A. Powell, who had served two years, and J. Renwick Wilkes to fill the newly-made place as vice-secretary. This is the first meeting of the fall season. The meetings having been discontinued throughout the summer months.

Chas. C. Hook, architect, has been commissioned by Ross Realty Company to erect a building on the corner of Second and Poplar streets, for use as a home for Film Exchanges.

E. L. Beam, of the Princess Theatre, Shelby, N.C., was a visitor on Film Row during the past week.

Miss Pauline Hardin, Secretary of the Charlotte Film Board of Trade; Miss Ruth Hardin, Secretary to Mr. Paul Griffith, Film Transport Co., and their mother, spent several days in Atlanta the latter part of the week.

P. C. Parish, of the Southern Theatre Supply Company, is spending several days in the Charlotte office during the illness of Branch Manager Sykes.

C. H. Weeks, District Representative of Liberty Film Corporation, is covering the territory out of the Charlotte office with the different salesmen.

The Warner's Broadway Theatre gave a benefit performance for the storm sufferers in Florida. It was held Tuesday night at 11 o'clock. This included the regular program of pictures and five acts of vaudeville. Regular prices prevailed and the entire sum taken in at the box office was sent to the storm area.

Ken Finlev, of the Opera House, Goldsboro, N.C., was in Charlotte the latter part of the week, purchasing new product and arranging play dates.

Manager Warren Irvin, of the Imperial, Publix house, gave a benefit performance at the theatre one minute after midnight Sunday. The entire proceeds was given to the fund for relief work in Florida. All Publix theatres in key cities in this section gave benefit showings, the entire proceeds being turned over to the Red Cross.

The Imperial Theatre at Greensboro, N.C., has been completely renovated by the Piedmont Theatres, Inc., and new equipment has been placed in this house. It is now one of the most modern and up-to-date houses in this section.

The Charlotte Film Board of Trade had its semi-annual election last Monday and the following officers were elected: William Conn, F. B. O., President; M. W. Davis, Warner Brothers, Vice-president; E. F. Dardine, Universal, Treasurer. The new chairman appointed the following committees: Arbitration Board. P. A. Schmuck, Pathe, Chairman; M. E. Wyman, Liberty; F. B. Bryan, First National. Credit Committee, E. F. Dardine, Universal, Chairman; H. H. Everett, Bromberg; M. W. Davie, Warner Bros.

First National has placed Joe Worsley, former salesman for Fox and Bromberg Attractions, on the road for that company.

A. S. Dickerson, local Associated manager, and Mrs. Dickerson and daughter, Winifred, are visiting friends in Chattanooga.

Ed. Turner, President of Carolina Theatres, Inc., was in Charlotte the past week.

Abe Rosen, of New Haven, who is president of the U. S. Film Transport Company, located in Charlotte, is visiting his office here.

The Hewel Theatre, Rosebury, N.C., which is owned by Drs. E. O. and D. A. Underwood and Miss Ossie L. Duckner, held their formal opening Tuesday. This is one of the most attractive and best decorated and equipped theatres in the Carolinas.

St. Louis

IN the Oct. 16 issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, under St. Louis regional notes, a paragraph stated that the Advance Trailer Corporation had opened a branch office in the Pathe Exchange at 3318 Olive Street. Walter J. Freudenberger, Southern Sales Manager, has advised us that this was an error; that the St. Louis office is located in the Universal screening room at 3318-A Olive Street, instead of the Pathe Exchange.

Ralph Wilson, of the home office of First National Pictures, and Mrs. Charles M. Steele, wife of the supervisor of exchanges for that company, were called to St. Louis by the death of their mother the past week.

L. H. Dalmer, President of the Standard Cinema Corporation of New York City, paid our fair city a visit the past week.

Peter Blassant will open his new Grand Theatre in Litchfield, Ill., next week. His house seats 200 and will operate on a six-day week schedule.

R. E. Atkins of Elkhart, Ill.; Mrs. I. W. Rodgers of Cairo, Ill., and Tom Reed, of Duquoin, were some of the prominent exhibitors seen along Picture Row during the past week.

Chief of Police Arbogast, of Belleville, Ill., has two acetylene gas tanks, a torch, fifty feet of hose and other safe cracking tools abandoned by yeggmen who looted the safe of the Washington Theatre, Belleville, early on October 4, escaping with $100.

A. L. Barlow of the accessory department of First National Pictures, was a visitor to the local exchange the past week.

C. E. Penrod, division manager for F.B.O., was in town on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Charles Johnson, motion picture operator for the Olympia Theatre, operated by John Karzin at 1420 Market Street, St. Louis, Mo., escaped injury the night of October 13, when a film he was projecting caught fire. The booth, equipment and film were damaged to the extent of $300 by the flames. The audience passed out of the house quickly but quietly.

A small blaze in one of the huge electrical signs in front of the Ambassador Theatre, Seventh and Locust streets, St. Louis, Mo., at 11:30 a.m., Saturday, October 16, attracted thousands of spectators and tied up traffic along the busy thoroughfares. The audience inside the big house was not aware of the fire.

Bill Barron, manager for United Artists in St. Louis, was wishing for pontoons on his automobile when he encountered high water between Paducah, Ky., and Cairo, Ill.

Visitors of the week included Ted Yemm of the Reed, Yemm and Hayes Circuit of Southern Illinois, and Steve Brady of Cape Girardeau. Mr. Yemm's family has removed to St. Louis and he makes the week-end trips here.

Albany

ON the day following the opening of the new Eagle Theatre in this city, owned and operated by George Roberts and his son, Ormond, the latter was taken to a local hospital suffering from what was later diagnosed by three physicians as kidney trouble. Mr. Roberts complained of being ill on the day previous to the opening of the theatre, and he became rapidly worse. Distracted by his son's illness, Mr. Roberts was forced to give but little attention to the opening of the theatre. Reports from the hospital later in the week indicated that Mr. Roberts would recover unless complications set in.

If Charles Marshall's aim is as good as his word, the chances are that Albany's Film Row will enjoy venison steaks in the near future. Mr. Marshall, who runs The Bridge Theatre in Ausable Forks, was in town last week, driving down in a car owned by Doris Kenyon, who was married during the week at Ausable Forks, to Milton Sills. While here, Mr. Marshall dropped into the Universal Exchange, and in conversation with C. R. Halligan, promised to send him an entire deer as soon as he had bagged the animal.

Mrs. Lillian Nachman Cohen, cashier at the local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Exchange, is back from her honeymoon, and has been presented with a handsome mahogany desk by her associates.

Bob Landry, who recently sold his theatres in Ogdensburg to the Schine interests, has entered the Albany Law School, and plans to remain there for three years, after which he will become a full fledged lawyer.

F. S. Farnsworth has closed his theatre in Essex Junction, Vt., and George Valley, who operates the Strand in Winooski, may take the house over in the near future.

Lew Fischer has acquired the Victory Theatre in Cambridge, which has been run for some time past by William Curry. Mr. Fischer now has houses in Chatham, Cambridge, Hoosick Falls, Fort Edward, Ticonderoga and Chestertown. He was in town last week, and was accompanied by Mrs. Fischer, who has recovered from a broken ankle sustained at the Film Board outing several weeks ago.

J. Gould is now a special repre-

Another stop made by Pat Dowling, on his recent drive for Educational, was at the Bijou Theatre, New Brunswick, N. J. Herbert Shusterman is seen signing the Christie Comedy register sentative in this section for Universal, and is specializing on the selling of the bigger features.

Harry Lux, Rae Candee and Nate Robbins, all well known Utica exhibitors, packed their guns last Wednesday and left for Mr. Robbins' camp back of Old Forge, to be on hand for the opening of the deer season on Friday.

W. H. Linton, of the Olympic in Utica, is back home from three or four days in New York City, during which he visited a number of distributing agencies.

H. C. Bissell, local manager for Universal, returned here last week from an upstate visit.

Morris Silverman, of the Happy Hour and Pearl in Schenectady, is talking of erecting a marquee and electric sign in front of the former house. His new theatre will be opened to the public on December 15.

Miss Betty Feuer closed the Crescent Theatre in Schenectady last week, and later on a business block will be erected on the site.

Frank Larnan, manager of the Strand in Schenectady, is supervising the redecoration of the foyer, and other improvements to the house.

C. H. Buckley, who runs the Clinton Square and Leland Theatres in Albany, has decided to postpone the erection of a $50,000 residence in Loudonville until next spring.

The Broadway Theatre in Schenectady reopened last week under the Farash banner. It was operated last winter by Roach and Hickey.

The Albany Theatre in Schenectady, managed by Edward Walsh, announces a reduction in its admission prices from thirty to twenty-five cents.

Claude Fish, owner of the American in Schenectady, is now Lecturing Knight of the Elks, which means that he is never at the theatre on a Tuesday night.

Visitors along Film Row during the week, and buyers as well, included Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Milligan of Schuylerville; Myer Dale, of Schoharie, and Mrs. Fonda, of the Grand in Scotia.

W. W. Farley, of Albany, was with Governor Smith last week in Binghamton, assisting in staging one of the biggest mass meetings thus far held in the campaign.

Frank H. Hickey, of Schenectady, assistant treasurer of the Farash Corporation, is in Atlantic City, recuperating from an attack of ill health.

E. E. Lowe, a well-known broker along the local Film Row, has left for Pittsburgh, where he will be associated with Robert Mochrie, former manager of the Producers Distributing Company Exchange here and who is holding down a similar position with the same company in the smoky city.

Nate Robbins, of Utica, has installed an orchestra in the Avon Theatre there, which is made up entirely of boys from Colgate University.

Mrs. Tony Veiller, wife of the manager of the Mark Ritz in Albany, is visiting relatives in Virginia.

Labor troubles have been finally adjusted in Schenectady between the theatres and the various unions, with the result that peace and harmony again prevail in that city.

Mathew Moran, who runs the Opera House in Coxsackie, is thanking his lucky stars these days that the fire that swept the business section the other night did not reach his theatre. Mr. Moran was in town the other day and stated that he is repainting the theatre.

Sam Burns, one of the best known exchange managers in this city, was the first to arrive at a serious automobile accident the other night, near Kingston, and assisted the occupants of the car to a nearby hospital.

There appears to be considerable generator trouble in theatres in this part of the state with the result that the Opera House in Andes, as well as the theatre in Catskill, were temporarily forced out of business last week.

Ernie Tetrault, who runs the Grand in Watervliet, has made plans to stage novelty nights each Monday and Thursday from now on.

Kallet and Goodman, the new owners of the Orpheum in Utica, are busily engaged these days in redecorating the house, and erecting a handsome marquee out in front.

The engagement of George E. Dwore, Schenectady attorney, to Miss Ruth Kornmehl, of New York City, was announced on October 4. In addition to his law interests, Mr. Dwore has for a long time been prominent as a Schenectady exhibitor, being connected with the Capitol and Cameo Theatres. Miss Kornmehl is executive-secretary in the importing house of Hyams, Inc., of New York.

Denver

FRANK HARRIS, Western Division Sales Manager of Pathe, was a Denver visitor this week, spending a few days with S. B. Rahn, local Pathe branch manager.

Carl Judge of Wheatland, Wyo., owner of the Iris Theatre of that city, and J. J. Lynch, exhibitor from Laramie, Wyo., were Denver visitors this week. Jim Lynch stopped over in Denver Friday on his way to Boulder, Colo., to see the Wyoming and Colorado University football game. Mr. Lynch is a great football enthusiast, his state university being located in Laramie.

J. C. B. Hopkins, chairman of the School Board of Willard, Colo., was a Denver visitor this week. Mr. Hopkins has charge of all bookings for the theatre in Willard, which is run by the school.

Nate Salmon of the Paris Theatre, Santa Fe, N.M., arrived in Denver Friday to transact business with exchanges.

Hugh Braly, Famous Players manager, made a trip to Salida, Colo., this week, where he attended the grand opening of the new Empress Theatre, operated by Senator and Mrs. Kelly.

Joseph Morgan, operating the Arriba Theatre of Arriba, Colo., has taken over the Royal Theatre of Flagler, Colo., from C. C. Heck.

Pat Dowling, special exploitation representative for Christie Comedies, passed through Denver last week in his unique little French car which he calls the "Doodle Bug." Mr. Dowling is on a trip across the country in the little car, which if successful, will be the first coast to coast trip in an automobile as small as the "Doodle Bug." Mr. Dowling spent several hours here visiting A. P. Archer, manager of the local Educational Exchange.

J. H. Ashby arrived back in Denver Saturday after a ten-day sales trip on the western slope of Colorado. Mr. Ashby is president of the Denver Film Board of Trade and First National manager here.

Salt Lake City

ON October 20th, Louis Marcus, District Manager for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and Branch Manager Lawrence J. McGinley, will leave for French Lick Springs to attend the Paramount sales convention held there. They will be joined at Denver by Hugh W. Braly, manager of the Denver Paramount Exchange.

H. B. Loveless, who has been checking the Lloyd engagements for Paramount, has recently entered the employ of the Famous Players Exchange in this city, in the booking department.

Lawrence J. McGinley, local manager here for Paramount, has been confined to his home by illness.

M. W. Peterson, operating the theatres at Fillmore and Konosh, is a Film Row visitor in this city.

J. L. Tidwell, salesman out of the local Fox office, is leaving for a trip of two or three weeks' duration into the Southern Utah territory.

C. MacKain, Home Office Representative for Associated First National, has just completed his work at the Salt Lake Exchange, and has left for the Denver office.

W. F. Gordon, manager of the local Associated First National Exchange, is back from Montana.

Max Stahl, Home Office Representative for Educational, left here the latter part of the week to return to New York by way of Denver.

Pat Dowling, publicity manager

On his way South, Pat Dowling of Educational, stopped at Norfolk, Va., to let Herman Stern of the Granby Theatre, sign the Christie register on the rear of the famous little French motor car for the Christie Studios from Hollywood, is expected to arrive in this city October 15th with his little French Citroen car in which he is making a transcontinental tour.

Clyde H. Messinger, Branch Manager of the Educational Exchange here, leaves this week for a swing through the Southern Utah country.

The local Universal Exchange is now located in the new film building, having been moved this week.

Manager Mathew Aparton, of the Universal office, is leaving for the territory right away, as is Tony Hartford, sales representative.

J. A. Epperson, local manager for Pathe, leaves this week for a trip into Cache Valley.

Seth D. Perkins, District Manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is spending about one week at the exchange here.

"Ben-Hur" is to have its premier showing here at the Salt Lake Theatre, October 25th, and will be run for six days.

Ed Norman, manager of the Capitol Theatre at San Francisco, Cal., is visiting his former home in this city, due to illness. He expects to return to San Francisco within a short period.

Ray Hendry, Assistant Manager to Carl A. Porter, of the Victory Theatre here, is leaving this week for Idaho Falls, Idaho, where he will be in charge of the Idaho Theatre during the absence of Joe Koehler, manager there, who has found it necessary to undergo an operation due to serious illness. Hendry expects to be gone for a period of about six or eight weeks at the culmination of which time it is expected that Koehler will be completely recovered.

Mrs. J. B. Harrison, of the Mission neighborhood house here, reports that fall business is very good at this theatre.

George Smith, owner of the Rialto and Gem theatres at Magna, Utah, is lining up new business along Film Row here, this week.

John Rugar, of the American, Orpheum and the Egyptian Theatre, which is now under construction at Park City, Utah, is spending a few days in this city.

J. Myers, operating the Bluebird Theatre at Garfield, Utah, is among exhibitor visitors here this week.

The many friends of Thomas Berta, exhibitor at Rock Springs, Wyo., will be grieved to learn that he has been very ill with influenza. His condition has been improving within the last few days.

Al Hager, owner of the Rex Theatre at Idaho Falls, is visiting with the various managers along Exchange Row here.

Kansas City

ANOTHER elaborately constructed suburban theatre will be added to the chain of Midwest Theatres, Inc., in Kansas City. Work on the 1,600-seat Rockhill Theatre at Forty-sixth Street and Troost Avenue began this week. The structure, which will include office space, will cost in excess of $300,000. The Rockhill Theatre Building Company is the owner of the property, while the Midwest Theatres, Inc., is the lessee and future operators. The theatre will be constructed by the Reyburn Company, Shepherd & Wiser being the architects. The manager of the house has not yet been decided upon.

A Scottish Rite Temple and theatre to seat 4,000 also was announced this week in Kansas City by Arthur L. Williams, chairman of the building committee of that organization. The structure will cost $1,333,000, according to present plans, although the type of attractions to play in the theatre has not been determined.

Miss Hope Jeffrey, a member of the company permanently attached to the Globe Theatre, first-run house of Kansas City, was injured Saturday when she was struck by a truck, suffering bodily injuries.

There was an avalanche of excuses for being in St. Louis this week by film salesmen, exchange managers and others. Of course, they had "business to attend to," but, was not there a world's series in progress?

Joe Silverman, of the Independent Film Corp.; Bill Warner, of the First National; W. E. Trough, Universal district manager, were among the St. Louis visitors.

Tom Byerle, assistant First National manager, installed a radio in his office and succeeded in keeping most of the force at home, listening to world's series results.

Roy Churchill, F. B. O. branch manager, left for Topeka, Kans., on a business trip.

C. D. Hill, P. D. C. division manager, was a Kansas City visitor.

E. C. Rhoden, Midwest Film Distributors manager, is in the territory looking for more contracts, as is "Red" Jones, of the Educational branch.

Charles Russell, Warner representative in Kansas, has resigned.

J. R. Grainger, general sales manager for Fox, was a Kansas City visitor.

A number of Kansas City exchange representatives and exhibitors from surrounding towns attended the opening Friday of the new Electric Theatre, operated by Grubel Bros., of Kansas City, in Joplin, Mo. The house has undergone complete remodeling and redecorating.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: Arthur Perkins, Harrisonville, Mo.; S. C. Andrews, Gem, Olathe, Kas.; Mrs. O. Winkler, Main Street, Lexington, Mo.; Frank Weary, Farris Theatre, Richmond, Mo.; G. L. Hooper, Orpheum, Topeka, Kans.; R. V. Turner, Panama Theatre, Burlingame, Kans.; S. E. Wilhoit, Jefferson, Springfield, Mo.

When Fred S. Meyer, in charge of Universal Theatres in the Kansas City territory, and Adolph Eisner, in charge of the booking for Universal, left for Springfield, Mo., and Moberly, Mo., Sunday night to attend the opening of new Universal Theatres in those towns, they saw to it that Harry Taylor, Universal branch manager at Kansas City, and Mrs. Taylor went along in the special car which had been chartered. Difficulty was experienced in booking opening acts for the theatres. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor are known to radio fans of the Kansas City territory as the "Ukelele Songsters," so they were given a real tryout, along with other acts which had been booked.

According to word received from Pathe this week, R. S. Ballentyne, Assistant Southern Division Sales Manager, has taken temporary charge of that organization's Kansas City branch following the resignation of F. W. Gebhardt as branch manager.

Mr. Ballentyne will serve in the capacity of acting branch manager until such time as a definite appointment is made.

Des Moines

ANNOUNCEMENT of the resignation of Chris G. Behrens, manager of the Garden Theatre, Davenport, Ia., was made recently. Mr. Behrens has sold his interest in the Family Theatre, where he started in business in the motion picture industry in Davenport, to the A. H. Blank interests of Des Moines. He retains his interest in the Storage Battery Service Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Behrens will spend the winter in California, returning to Davenport in the spring. His plans for the future have not been definitely made.

Chris, as his many friends in Davenport know him, has lived there all his life except for two years spent in Milwaukee shortly after his marriage. He is a pioneer in the motion picture business, having started here 13 years ago with the Family. He managed that theatre until this spring, when he became manager of the Garden. He is well known in Davenport and has a host of friends who will regret to learn of his resignation.

During the number of years Mr. Behrens spent in the motion picture business, he made the acquaintance of many in the selling and advertising departments. Should any care to get in touch with him at the present time, they can do so through the Storage Battery Service Company, 518 W. Third Street, Davenport, Ia., where they will forward his mail.

Al Yarowsky, formerly short subjects booker for Universal, is now head of the booking department, having worked his way up from the shipping department before that, through the kind of industry, and so forth, that the Alger stories exploited. L. G. Allison, who was booker for Universal, went to Kansas City where he will be with Manny Gottlieb, who was transferred to the Southern branch from the managership at Des Moines.

W. T. Biggs, who has the Unique Theatre at Anita, has closed his theatre for a short time in order to do a little remodelling.

Ollie Reese, formerly at the headquarters of the A. H. Blank Enterprises, is now secretary for N. C. Rice, manager of the F.B.O. Exchange. She is a brunette addition to the staff which is otherwise made up of the blonde variety.

C. H. Lawrence, at Strawberry Point, has sold his theatre, the Lyric, to A. P. Shadow. Mr. Shadow is also owner of the Colonial Theatre at Cedar Rapids. Mr. Lawrence is planning on going south to Florida for the winter.

Five hundred dollars in lobby frames, a generator and a Peerless transvector were bought by the Strand Theatre at East Moline. This theatre is the opposition to the Le Clare, which was recently bought by A. H. Blank.

A. C. Wilson, auditor from the New York office, who has been in Des Moines since the opening of the new Fox Film Exchange here, left for Omaha.

Office Manager Thiele, of the National Theatre Supply Company at their Des Moines office, states that the last month was the biggest month that they had seen in the past year.

S. G. Harsh has bought the theatre at Boone, Ia. It was formerly owned by Prine and Evans.

Ray O'Brien, assistant manager at the Omaha office of Fox for the past two years, is assisting Ben Reingold, manager for the new Des Moines office.

The Willard and Strand at Creston have been bought by Roy Benson from Harry Frankel.

Another theatre change is the Star Theatre at Davenport, which was transferred from H. G. Earll to E. Lee Barnett.

A new theatre has been opened at Rowan, Ia. A. A. Williams has opened up a theatre there which he has christened the Empress.

Other recent theatre changes are the Strand Theatre at Pomeroy, which was bought by C. C. Becker, the Opera House at Milo, which was bought by George Manners from H. E. Jacobs, the Star Theatre at Lake City, which was purchased by Larson and Peterson, the Opera House at Flors opened up by Mr. Plank, the Opera House at Castalia, which was sold to the Community Club by Ed Rodenkirk, the Magic Theatre at Pierson bought by Fred Struve from J. H. Brownell, the Park Theatre at Morningside transferred from Goodwin and Hilton to J. C. Duncan, the Family Theatre at Leeds bought by Mrs. Mae Gipple from Lawrence Brookhart, the Leeds Theatre at Leeds, bought by Mike Danese from B. G. Schmidt, and the Auditorium Theatre at Harlan, bought by B. G. Schmidt from J. F. Eardman.

J. R. Forseman of the Strand at Jewell, E. M. Fantan of the Fantan Theatre at Gilman, C. A. Boltsley of the Unique at Bussey, P. F. Madden of the Masonic Theatre at What Cheer, and J. W. Alstatt of the Lyric at Fort Dodge, were visitors at the film exchanges.

Ira Cohen, district manager for Fox, was at the Des Moines office last week.

J. Benjamin Gerbracht, head of the Ames Theatre Company of Ames, Ia., announces that he is closing the Twin Star Theatre for the first half of the week and that it will play on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The Star and the Princess will be continued on the all-week schedule.

A. W. Nichols, district manager for Famous Players, made the Des Moines branch last week.

The Fox Film Company has issued invitations to all the exhibitors of the state for their formal opening. The date of the opening was set as October 19 and October 20. Ben Weingold, manager of the new office, will head the reception committee.

N. C. Rice, manager for F.B.O., returned from a very profitable trip through the Eastern key cities.

Waldo Hackman is leaving Des Moines where he has been a member of the sales staff of First National, to go to Kansas City, where he will take on the booking job for the Pathe office.

John A. Thurlow has bought the theatre at Nora Springs. He took immediate possession.

A new theatre is going in at Storm Lake, Ia. This theatre will offer opposition to the Princess and the Empire there. It is thought that a new building will not be constructed for the theatre, but that one of the Storm Lake properties will be remodelled.

Carl Plantz, formerly manager for the Western Theatre Supply Company of Des Moines, is traveling central Iowa for the National Theatre Supply Company, which recently took over the Western Theatre organization. The Eastern part of the state is being covered by Mr. Wachter, who comes from Kansas City.

Ralph Pratt, one of the well-known exhibitors of the state, and owner of the Fox Theatre at Washington, visited Film Row last week. Others who were in were C. E. Carrigher, of the Park Theatre, at Clear Lake, who made a fast trip down in his fast stepping Packard; Tom Waugh, of the King Theatre, at Albia; C. H. Lawrence, of Strawberry Point; H. G. Simpson, of Sigourney.

The first shipment made out of the new Des Moines branch of the Fox Film Corporation was to E. P. Smith, of the Strand at Newton. J. E. Carven, manager of the Crystal Theatre at Kellogg, was the first one to sign up for a contract.

Cleveland

LEO DEVANEY, manager of the local Universal Exchange, has made it worthwhile for his sales force to work for the button that is emblematic of leadership of the Laemmle Go-Getters Club. Instead of having an unadorned gold button which is worn by the leading salesman of the week, Devaney has had a diamond mounted in the button. And this diamond button will become the property of the salesman who succeeds in holding top place four weeks in succession, on three occasions during the year. This is Devaney's personal contribution to the contest, which is based on the percentage of sales as against the quota in the territory. It is four weeks since Devaney made his offer. To date the honors have been evenly divided, each of the four members of the sales force having won it once. Ownership of the button, Devaney thinks, is a greater incentive for successful competition.

Robert Cotton, Central Division Manager for P.D.C., will return from the New York P.D.C. convention just in time to hold a regional convention here next Sunday and Monday. This meeting will be attended by all exchange managers, salesmen and bookers of the offices in Cotton's territory, which includes, in addition to Cleveland, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Detroit. H. O. Duke, assistant secretary for P.D.C.; Carroll Trowbridge, Christy representative, and R. H. Clark, assistant sales manager, will each make addresses.

Dan Stearns, Universal City salesman, is motoring to Asheville, N.C. If his tires behave and he doesn't encounter any engine trouble en route, it'll be a vacation.

Phil Dumas, recently made sales director of the Reginald Denny

Productions, was in town last Saturday and held a conference of the entire local Universal sales force. This was Dumas' first trip in the territory in his new capacity.

R. V. Anderson, sales manager of International News, stopped off here for one day last week on his way to Canada, where he is making a tour of exchanges.

M. C. Howard, manager of the Cleveland exchange of Gotham Pictures Exchange, Inc., has secured the services of H. Hirsch as sales manager of the Akron-Canton-Youngstown territory. Hirsch has been connected with J. S. Jossey and the Progress Pictures Company for the past four years.

J. E. Smallwood, who has just completed his course in student salesmanship under the training of Leo Devaney, local Universal Exchange manager, has been assigned to the Omaha Universal branch office. He reported last Monday for active duty.

Carl Hohage, for four years home office manager for the Standard Film Service Company, has turned his back on the movies and is now connected with a local electrical refrigeration company.

Albert L. Goodsteen is now combining the duties of home office manager and supervisor of the Cleveland office of the Standard Film Service Company.

Howard Feigley took time off from his duties as general manager of the Rivoli and Palace theatres, Toledo, to buy for himself and family, a beautiful new home, which is said to be one of the show places of Toledo.

Al Green, musical director at Loew's State Theatre, has just completed thirty years as an orchestra leader. He gave a party to the boys of his present orchestra to celebrate the occasion.

Detroit

FELIX FEIST, general sales manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was a Detroit visitor last week for a banquet which was tendered to the local sales force and department heads. W. F. Rogers, in charge of Eastern branches, and George A. Hickey, district manager, were also present.

Isham Jones and his Orchestra, after an absence of four weeks, returns to the Capitol Theatre week of October 17, for the balance of the season.

Oscar Hanson, manager of Pathe, will return this week from Omaha, Neb., where he went to visit his mother and father.

James Kent, formerly manager for Warner Bros. in Pittsburgh, is now connected with the local branch of United Artists as salesman. Kent will patrol the western part of the State.

Auditor Reed, of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Exchange, is confined in his hotel on account of a sudden illness.

The Lyric Theatre at Mt. Clemens, Mich., is being completely remodeled and a new organ is to be installed.

Jess Veldman, who has been cashier for Warner Bros. for some time, has been promoted to booker. Jess succeeds Leo Sanshie, who has gone over to the Fox Exchange to take charge of their booking department.

The Wadlow Bros. opened their new Colony Theatre, located on Mack Avenue and Nine Mile Road, last Saturday. Although the new house seats only 600 people, it is

By this time Pat Dowling is 'way out around the Salt Lake City territory signing Utah exhibitors on his Christie register. That accounts for the fact that John W. Cook, of the Arcadia Theatre, Reading, Pa., is wearing a straw hat equipped with the latest equipment, including a Wurlitzer organ. Besides the New Colony Theatre, the Wadlow Bros. also operate the Virginia Theatre in Detroit.

Chester J. Lowe, Cincinnati manager for Producers Distributing Corporation, was in Detroit last week on a short business trip.

Miss Grace Armstrong, cashier at the Warner Bros. Exchange, has been absent from the office for a few days on account of an automobile accident. Only a few minor bruises resulted from the mishap.

Salesman Sam Nathanson of P. D.C. is a happy man these days, as he is all full of smiles. The reason is that his little baby girl can now say a few words. Sam had asked her whether she had been a good girl and to his surprise she had answered him, "Daddy, I don't know."

E. J. Purcell, formerly connected with the Trans-Canadian Theatre Chain in Toronto, Canada, is now associated with the local branch of Universal.

Del Walt, who has resigned from P.D.C., is now covering a section of the State as salesman for Fox Film Company.

Sam Barrett, connected with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for over nine years, has resigned to become assistant to manager Lester Sturm of the Detroit branch of Fox Film Company.

Charles Hagedorn has resigned as manager of the Lasky, Detroit, to join the George F. Koppin real estate department.

The Oakland Theatre at Pontiac, Mich., is broadcasting a one-hour entertainment of vaudeville and organ recital three nights each week through WJR Station.

Joe Friedman, manager of the New York exchange for Universal, was in Detroit last week on business.

Mike Schoenherr, who had managed the Columbia Theatre for a good many years, is now in charge of the Strand Theatre and L. H. Gardner is to manage the Columbia.

Frank E. Stewart, district manager for Producers Distributing Corporation in Dallas, Tex., has stoppd in Detroit for a few days. Mr. Stewart was all dressed up with one of those big cowboy hats.

Frank Howard and Charles Schweitzer have been two-timing for P.D.C. this week throughout the State.

Ray Moon, Detroit branch manager for Universal, has just returned from Chicago.

Fox Film Company has installed a play date department in the Detroit exchange and Al Champaigne, who is assistant manager, will be in charge.

Butte

A MEETING of the Film Board of Trade recently took place in the office suite of Secretary Harry Meyer. There was a full attendance and the usual routine business came before the members. A resolution was passed expressive of satisfaction over the speedy conviction of the theatre men involved in the "bicycling" case and appreciation was extended to Harry Meyer for his efficient handling of the case. The film members went on record for starting a vigorous campaign against all "bicyclers" of films or the violation of the national copyright law.

There is great rejoicing in the local Pathe Exchange over the fact that the local attaches won in their range in the Great Scott Billings Roundup. It was a hot summer's job and the salesmen under the direction of Manager W. M. Hughart worked long hours under a blazing sun.

The prizes were as follows: W. M. Hughart, manager, $500; Claude Hall, booker, $200; Anna McGonigle, cashier, $200; T. J. Walsh, salesman, $250; and G. H. Warren, $250.

"Rick" Warren is covering eastern Montana and Tom Walsh is making a swing over the western part of the state in the interest of Pathe serials as well as other Pathe features.

C. P. Scates, the new manager of the American Theatre, has been exceedingly busy since his arrival in Butte from the Coast. He has issued a news letter to the press in which he states his policy for the American and expresses the faith he has in Butte's appreciation of the high class of programs which he expects to book for the American and the musical features that will be a big part of every program. General Manager Harry Arthur, Jr., is expected in Butte this week to join Mr. Scates and to talk over the plans for North American Theatres with the Montana managers who are Will Steege of Great Falls, W. J. Sullivan and C. P. Scates, of Butte.

Just because we've put Dave Snapper's photo under a Montana masthead, doesn't mean that Mr. Snapper has moved. According to Pat Dowling who is conducting a Christie Comedy Drive, Dave is still happily retailing pictures at the Strand Theatre, New Brunswick, N. J.

Rolla Duncan, who gave up his theatre work recently to accept the position of postmaster for Billings, has resigned the position and is at Lewistown, where he has taken a ten-year lease on the Judith Theatre. He is spending some $30,000 in remodeling and expects to make it one of the classiest and most modern playhouses of the West.

W. A. Simons was in Seattle recently with his manager, E. K. Taylor, who directs the Rialto Theatre at Missoula. Mr. Simons is quoted as considering plans to open a theatre in Kalispell.

Knitson and Hyde, who own the Strand Theatre at Miles City, are planning to erect a new theatre on the old site and it is arranged that the new playhouse is to be a model theatre of splendid proportions and one that will reflect credit on the city as well as the theatre men.

Bill Steege of Great Falls, who has charge of the North American theatres, the Capitol, Grand and Liberty, has been out duck hunting and came home with the limit of ducks after being out one day. Steege is some hunter to bag the limit the first day out.

Manager Chester L. Wingham of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange of Salt Lake City spent last week in Butte.

Baltimore

THE Century and Parkway theatres, here, were reopened to the public Monday, October 4, under the control of Loew's, Incorporated. The Century has been entirely rebuilt inside and extensive alterations were made on the Parkway. Plans for the work on both houses were drawn by John Ebersson, architect, Chicago.

Reopening the Century was like the opening night of a new house. The opening at each playhouse went off without a hitch and the entertainment given was thoroughly enjoyable. The invited guests were taken care of excellently in sections provided for them even though both houses were crowded to the doors.

Radio, stage and movie celebrities were among those present. Among those who attended were members of the Capitol family, known to radio fans: William Russell, Helen Ferguson, Mack Sennett, George Sidney, Carmel Myers and Baby Sylvia Froos.

The Loew Interests are represented in Baltimore by Herschel Stuart, who is managing director of the Century, Parkway and the Valencia atop the Century to be opened later. U. S. Brummell, formerly manager of the Century, is now manager of the Parkway, while Larry Shead, formerly with Balaban and Katz, Chicago, is in charge of the Century.

E. C. Jeffress, formerly publicity manager for Loew's Century and Parkway theatres, here, has resigned his position. He has been succeeded by Norman W. Pyle, who is employed by the Theatre Department of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and handles radio broadcasting in Washington and the publicity for the Palace Theatre there also.

Here's two more who turned out to greet Pat Dowling during his Christie Comedy Drive. Jake Silverman, of Silverman Bros., Altoona, Pa., is on the right with the straw hat. Ray Brown, publicity director of the Altoona Strand, is on the left

A new orchestral organ has been installed in the Boulevard Theatre, Baltimore. That house is operated by Harry Schwalbe, Philadelphia, Pa., and managed by M. H. Rogers.

L. J. Le Faucheur, who had been associated with theatres in Norfolk, Va., for 38 years and had an interest in developing the Wells Enterprises, has left the Virginia city to become associated with a construction firm in Philadelphia, Pa.

The bookings for the Wilmer and Vincent theatres, Norfolk, Va., will be handled by Mrs. N. L. Rich, formerly with the Wells Interests.

The Victor Theatre, Norfolk, Va., operated by Wilmer & Vincent, has reopened after having been entirely reconstructed inside.

A new lighting system is being installed now in the Rialto Theatre, Washington, D.C., and the stage is being enlarged. During the interim, while the work is being done, stage attractions will be abandoned.

A moving picture theatre to cost approximately $25,000 is to be built in New Market, Va., by William Dalke, owner of several other theatres in Virginia.

T. Hohleneck, formerly doorman at the Parkway Theatre, has been transferred to the Century Theatre, in the same capacity.

The Isis and Trenton theatres, Lynchburg, Va., have now begun their winter policy of two pictures a week with summer prices still existing.

The Opera House, Frederick, Md., was scheduled to reopen about October 1, and the Tivoli, being built in that city by the Stanley-Crandall Company, Washington, D.C., is expected to be finished in about six weeks' time.

L. M. Baker, operator of the Empire Theatre, Winchester, Va., has recently taken over the Colonial Theatre of that city and after extensive decorating and the installation of new Simplex projectors and a Hertner transverter, reopened the house to the public on October 2. The policy of the house will be straight first-run pictures of the better type at popular prices.

Jack Mark's new theatre project at Clarksburg, W. Va., is well under way, ground having been broken and foundation work progressing nicely. This theatre will be one of the finest in this section of the country when completed some time during the early part of 1927. Mr. Marks also operates Marks' Orpheum at Clarksburg.

It is said that Parkersburg, W. Va., a city of 39,000 population, is one of the few cities of this size which boasts of a modern neighborhood theatre. Pete Thomas, owner of this house (the State), has broken ground on the adjoining property for the construction of the New State which will seat about 750 on one floor and be ready for business during January, 1927. Mr. Thomas has purchased a Robert Morton organ for installation in the new house.

J. W. Heaton, manager of the Opera House at Cairo, W. Va., has recently taken a lease on the Gaiety Theatre at Pensboro, W. Va., and will continue to operate it on the same basis as run by former manager Hammond. The latter has been in bad health for some time.

Southwest

JOHN FEENEY, former owner of the Cozy Theatre at Okmulgee, Okla., is now managing the Jackson Theatre at Pawhuska.

N. P. Eberley, for two years and a half manager of the Oklahoma City office of Educational, left Thursday for New Orleans where he will be in charge of the Educational Exchange. Mr. Eberley's promotion comes as a result of the splendid showing he has made with the Educational Exchange here. The local office has stood second of all the Educational exchanges in the country during the last few weeks.

Mr. Cammer, who has been selling for Educational for the last year, will succeed Eberley as manager here.

The Griffith Amusement Company has purchased the new theatre being built by Jake Jones at Seminole, Okla. The new house will be ready for opening in the next 30 days.

Fred Smith has sold his theatre at Mounds, Okla. (the Home), to H. C. Cruze.

C. O. Murphree was in town this week booking pictures for his new theatre at Sand Springs, Okla. The Liberty, as it will be called, will soon be ready to open.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Fishbaugh were in town recently purchasing equipment for a new theatre they are installing at Kellyville, Okla.

C. P. Anderson is a grandfather for the third time. Miss Eva Maxine Hueston, 9¾ pounds, is the new arrival at the home of Mr. Anderson's daughter, Mrs. F. D. Hueston.

Otto White was in town last week making arrangements for a new theatre in Canyon, Tex.

C. R. Zears, secretary of the Film Board of Trade, gave a dinner at his home last Monday night in honor of N. P. Eberley, who left for New Orleans to become manager of the Educational office there. The guests of the evening were the members of the Film Board and a few of Mr. Eberley's personal friends in the exchanges. There were seventeen at this stag and after a splendid dinner the men spent the evening most enjoyably and more or less profitably with Poker and Hearts.

How Army's Theatres Were Made Self-Supporting

105 Houses in Chain Catered to 4,500,000 Patrons Last Year;
No Competition With Commercial Theatres

By R. B. Murray

Director U. S. Army Motion Picture Service

PIG POINT is the rather inelegant name of an army ordnance reserve depot on the James River some 12 miles or more from Norfolk, Va., reached by a none too accessible roadway. The total population of the reservation, soldier and civilian, man, woman, and child, is barely half a hundred. But being a civilized, if isolated, community, Pig Point must have its "movies," for in the realm of the military, as in the civilian world, the motion picture has progressed from a luxury to an essential. Two shows a week are provided for Pig Point's small population, on which occasions the average attendance runs close to forty. When the enforced absence of the military guards, the non-commissioned officers in charge of quarters, and those soldiers on other essential military duties is considered, it is evident that very close to 100 per cent. of the depot's available population is on hand on "show night." But motion picture machines, films, and electricity cost money, and at an admission rate of 15 cents, no profit can be expected from an attendance of forty persons.

"Payers" Carry Losers

There are some seventy other army motion picture houses whose monthly statements are made to balance only by the liberal employment of red ink.

Despite this handicap, however, the U.S. Army Motion Picture Service, under the Adjutant General of the Army, is operating a circuit of 105 theatres on a self-sustaining basis with no governmental funds available to meet deficits, a circuit wherein nearly 75 per cent. of the theatres operate at a monthly loss.

The general framework of this military motion picture service consists of a civilian director, Mr. Raymond B. Murray; a theatre equipment engineer, Mr. Roger M. Hill, both located in Washington, D.C., and a director of bookings, Mr. Thomas H. Martell, located in New York City. The Service has six branch offices, conveniently located from a film distributing standpoint, and managed by:

New York City, N.Y., Thomas H. Mar-

Within a comparatively short time the U. S. Army Motion Picture Service under its present administration was changed from a losing proposition to a self-sustaining business organization, efficiently operated and supplying entertainment to the men, women and children at Army Posts in the United States and the Panama Canal Zone. This is the first installment of an article describing the theatre organization and methods of operation, written for MOTION PICTURE NEWS by the man who took charge of the Motion Picture Service of the Army when it was losing money month by month and put it on its financial feet, Mr. Raymond B. Murray.

tell; Washington, D.C., M. W. Smith; Kansas City, Mo., Fred Bund, Jr.; Dallas, Tex., W. E. Crist; Seattle, Wash., R. O. Schmidt; Canal Zone, R. C. Hayes.

Each year rental prices for the product of all the national distributors are negotiated by the director of bookings, Mr. Martell. The branch managers make the bookings for the theatres in their territories, arrange for advertising, etc., and make frequent contacts at the theatres to keep their fingers on the pulse of the audience and to advise in the conduct of the theatres.

Run by Army Personnel

The theatres themselves are run entirely by army personnel. Their operation comes under the supervision of the post recreation officer, who, in some of the large garrisons, is assisted by a competent non-commissioned officer known as the manager. The theatre staff usually consists of a cashier, a doorman, an operator, and a pianist. When attendance warrants, orchestras of from three to ten pieces are employed from the personnel of the army bands on the posts concerned. All enlisted men connected with the army theatre system do this work in addition to their regular military duties.

A practical application of the "Big Brother" idea is the reason for the success of this interesting army business venture. The profits from the large posts, greatly in the minority, are used to support the non-profitable theatres on the small and isolated posts, where the showing of motion pictures is deemed most essential.

The extent of the support accorded to the Army Motion Picture Service by the personnel of the permanent military establishments is strikingly evident when it is considered that the surprisingly large attendance of 4,500,000 people during the past fiscal year was drawn from 94 posts and stations in the United States and 11 in the Panama Canal Zone, upon which the total military population, commissioned and enlisted, is approximately 60,000.

High Standard of Programs

One of the greatest single factors in the success of this enterprise is the high standard of entertainment value which has been consistently maintained. The Service's slogan of "Always a good show at the War Department Theatre" is no idle boast. When a branch manager starts out on a booking trip he has well fixed in his mind the preferences of the audiences of each of his theatres and he books accordingly. The programs are carefully selected and well balanced to the end that they will be timely and novel and afford the utmost in entertainment value. The majority of the enlisted men prefer the western type of story and the best attendances are secured with this type, provided they have production value behind them. Discrimination is used, however, in the number of this type that are booked, to the end that the soldiers' taste for this type will not become surfeited. While the enlisted men form the bulk of the audience, attention is also given to the preferences of the officer personnel and their families. Copies of the booking sheets for each theatre are forwarded by the branch managers to the Director and the Director of Bookings, who, working separately, review them in an endeavor to find any weak spots. Should such weak spots develop, the branch managers are instructed as to the action to be taken.

The Service is able to keep closely in touch with audience reactions through its system of having the recreation officers forward a complete report on the reception accorded each program. By this means, the branch manager is kept well informed of the preferences of each audience.

The best proof of the high standard of service maintained and of the ability of the branch managers to gauge their audiences is found in the fact that out of 17,618 complete programs shown during the past fiscal year only 162 were reported as unsatisfactory by the recreation officers. In this connection, it must also be considered that where a patron of a civilian theatre may show his dislike for a picture by avoiding that theatre or that star in the future, the average soldier registers his disapproval immediately and in a way which cannot be misunderstood.

Shows Well Advertised

Although many of the usual and unusual exploitation ideas are not practicable on an army post, the shows are well advertised. The conventional advertising media are used and are augmented by many theatres by mimeographed bulletins, printed programs, heralds, and trailers. The Service produces its own heralds at a cost considerably below that charged by the exchanges and is thus enabled to use this medium to a greater extent than would be otherwise possible. In addition, the Service has brought to light a number of officers and enlisted men with natural aptitude for this sort of work, and these men have been responsible for many novel and valuable exploitation ideas.

It will be appreciated, therefore, that within necessary limits each and every program is well advertised. In addition, and of equal importance in the successfully accomplished work of popularizing the Army Motion Picture Service, a campaign of institutional advertising has been carried on for over three years. The campaign has been highly successful and has resulted in a steady patronage of a great many patrons who are little concerned whether they know beforehand what picture is being played, feeling confident that under any conditions they will be well entertained by the theatre's offerings. Whenever improvements are made in the theatres, recreation officers see that every member of the garrison is acquainted with the fact.

(To be concluded next week)

"Don Juan" and Vitaphone Atlantic City Run Closes

The Warner Bros. presentation of Vitaphone and "Don Juan" completed a five weeks' engagement at the Globe Theatre, Atlantic City, on Sunday, October 10. The attraction drew heavy patronage to the Globe during the entire run. It is reported that more than 50,000 persons had paid admission to see the double attraction during its stay in Atlantic City.

Orchestra Feature of New Tampa

A 20-piece orchestra under the conductorship of John Ingram, former associate conductor at the Mark Strand in New York, is being featured as one of the leading offerings at the new Tampa Theatre, Tampa, Fla.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

F. E. WESP has assumed his duties as general manager of the Rialto and Eagle theatres in Pontiac, Mich. Both houses are operated by the Kleist Amusement Enterprises, Inc. Wesp recently resigned as manager of the Plaza at Sioux City.

HARRY E. HUFFMAN has been appointed manager of the new Aladdin Theatre, Denver, which is scheduled to open the latter part of this month.

LA VERNE WARNER, well known in Michigan as a theatre manager, is now in charge of the Caldwell Theatre in St. Joseph, operated by the Fitzpatrick-McElroy company. Warner managed the Riviera Theatre in Three Rivers since its opening and previous to that was manager of the Rex in that city.

JAMES THORNTON is the new manager at the Rialto, Providence. He formerly was associated with his father, Owen Thornton, at Riverport, Rocky Point, Arctic, and Westerly, R.I., as manager of those theatres.

HARRY M. HOBBS has been appointed manager of the Keith-Albee St. James Theatre in Boston. Herman Lorence, whom he succeeded, has been transferred by the Keith interests to New York.

BERNARD DEPKIN, Jr., who has managed the Metropolitan Theatre in Baltimore since it was opened, has resigned his position and has been succeeded by Frank N. Seltzer, formerly manager of the Fox Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa.

Fined $15 for Disturbing Theatre Audience

Because Dennis Albanese of Lynn, Mass., snored so loudly at a picture and vaudeville performance at a theatre in Scollay Square, Boston, that he disturbed the patrons, he was fined $15 by Judge Sullivan in Boston Municipal Court.

According to the evidence, Dennis bought a ticket and took a seat in the far corner of the balcony. His snores caused ushers to arouse him and when he protested, they ushered him out to the lobby.

Dorchester Strand Showing Vaudeville 4 Days

A new policy has been put in operation at the Strand Theatre, Dorchester, Mass., with four acts of vaudeville being presented with films four days a week, instead of on two days a week as formerly. Vaudeville is now presented from Thursday to Sunday inclusive with pictures, and pictures only Monday to Wednesday.

Midnight Show at Watertown

The Liberty in Watertown, N. Y., staged its first midnight show last week, with the premiere showing of a picture. The midnight show is something new to Watertown and its 30,000 inhabitants, and attracted a large audience.

Made Director of 3 F. & R. Houses

Finkelstein and Ruben have named James T. Stroud managing director of three of its St. Paul houses, the Park, Oxford and St. Clair. He was formerly with the American Express Company.

New Price Scales at Two Baltimore Houses

Since it reopened a morning bargain show has been inaugurated at Loew's Century, Baltimore, from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. daily at 25 cents admission, from 12:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. all seats are 35 cents, and in the evenings a schedule of 40 and 60 cents exists, which is ten cents higher than the former price of 50 cents in effect before the theatre closed for remodelling. With the reopening of Loew's Parkway the prices have been reduced to Matinees—children 15 cents, adults 25 cents; Evenings—children 25 cents, adults 35 cents. The former evening price was 50 cents. The Parkway is an uptown theatre, but a first run house.

Detroit Madison Launches Long Run Policy

John H. Kunsky last week launched his Madison Theatre, Detroit, as a long run house. The Madison is the second of the Kunsky downtown Detroit theatres to operate on this basis, the Adams also playing long runs. The new policy was introduced with the presentation of "Bardelys the Magnificent," which had been booked for an extended engagement at the Adams, but owing to the congestion of bookings at that house, the new M-G-M production was selected to open the new policy at the Madison. Ads announcing the picture carried a personal endorsement of "Bardelys" signed by John H. Kunsky.

Music Contest Open to All Butte Instrumentalists

Manager W. J. Sullivan, of the Rialto Theatre, Butte, Mont., is staging a contest of unusual character in drawing together musicians, who can play on almost any kind of an instrument from a "violin to pitch fork" and all intermediate instruments he says. The contest is to be staged for three successive days in conjunction with the regular programs at the Rialto. Cash prizes are to be awarded the most popular instruments as well as the one who gets the most music out of his toy. These home talent stunts usually draw a packed house and already much interest is being manifest over the new plans.

Buddy Stuart With Famous Players in Canada

Laurence E. (Buddy) Stuart, who put over the very successful Greater Movie Season program for New England for the Hays organization and who was for some years manager of the Fenway Theatre, in Boston, has again joined the Famous Players organization and will have charge of special exploitation work in Canada. He is at present making his headquarters at the Uptown Theatre, Toronto, Canada.

Boosts Prices for Better Shows

Cambria Appointed to Post with Publix

Leaves B. and K. to Become Art and Stage Director for Circuit

FRANK CAMBRIA has been appointed director of art and stage productions for the Publix Theatres Corporation and took up his new duties Monday at the home office of the corporation in New York. In assuming this position in the larger field which Publix affords, Mr. Cambria relinquishes a similar post in the organization of Balaban & Katz in Chicago, which he has held since 1920. During that period he planned the decorative schemes for the Chicago, Tivoli, Uptown and Oriental Theatres and supervised the remodeling of the Roosevelt and the opening of the Norshore and more recently that of the Michigan Theatre in Detroit. During that period also every stage production for these Balaban & Katz theatres has gone through his hands and it is his imagination that has been the controlling factor in the particular form of entertainment for which the Balaban & Katz theatres are famous.

It was this same imagination that took Cambria, at the DeWitt Clinton High School in York City where has been being prepared for Cornell University and electrical engineering, and set him to studying architecture and art in Cooper Institute. From that school he went to the National Academy of Design.

In 1900 he was apprenticed to Ernest Gros, one of the most prominent art directors of his day. He worked with Gros on such productions as "Ben Hur," "Darling of the Gods," "The Heart of Maryland," "L'Aiglon," "Under Two Flags," "Du Barry" and the various Rogers Brothers musical plays.

Later, Cambria returned to art, and for six years prospered as a portrait painter and mural designer. Then the motion-picture field "caught" him and he went to work, a pioneer in stage presentation, in the theatres of B. S. Moss. With his acceptance of the Balaban & Katz post he had his chance to develop a department of his own in which painters, designers, costumers, ballet masters, carpenters, electricians, all were fitted into niches.

RIVOLI PROLOGUE

Strong Bill Is Presented at Shea's Buffalo

Shea's Buffalo Theatre, last week presented one of the strongest bills ever offered the Buffalo theatregoers by a pictures and presentation house. The screen feature was "La Boheme," with a Fur Fashion Exhibit, staged in conjunction with local merchants, and the Publix unit show, "The Miracle of Youth," as the stage attractions. The fashion revue was widely advertised by the merchants and drew many patrons to the theatre. Buffalo girls acted as models to display the $150,000 worth of furs and gowns exhibited in the act.

Deslys Revue Plays Madrid and Isis, Kansas City

The Deslys Sisters, dancers, in an act called the Royal Revue, played both the Madrid and Isis theatres, Kansas City, last week, as the stage feature presented in conjunction with "So This Is Paris." The new policy at the Isis introduces the presentation idea for the first time in a suburban house in the Kansas City district. The house recently was taken over by Universal.

Van and Schenck Stars of Stanley Stage Bill

Van and Schenck headed the stage attractions offered last week at the Stanley Theatre in Philadelphia. The program, which presented "Into Her Kingdom" as the screen feature, also offered a dance symposium in which Renoff and Renova were the principal artists.

Present "College Week" at Capitol, Detroit

Waring's Pennsylvanians completed a four-weeks' engagement as leading presentation feature at the Capitol Theatre, Detroit, last week with a "college week" program tying up with the screen attraction "One Minute to Play." Appearing with the musical organization were the Glorias, dance team; Margie Coates, who specializes in syncopated songs, and The Cavaliers, a quartette.

This week the Isham Jones orchestra returns to the Capitol after an absence of four weeks, during which engagements at the Ambassador and Missouri theatres in St. Louis and the Wisconsin, Milwaukee, were played.

Murray Anderson Production Heads Rivoli Stage Bill

John Murray Anderson is the producer of the stage attraction offered this week at the Rivoli Theatre, New York City, in conjunction with "The Ace of Cads," Adolphe Menjou's new starring vehicle. The Anderson act is called "In a Persian Garden." A supplementary stage feature is provided by the Wainwright Sisters with a program of vocal selections.

To Add Presentations Features

Neil Schettler and his Victorians will succeed Edward P. Kimball, former director of the orchestra at the Paramount Empress Theatre, Salt Lake City. George E. Carpenter, manager of the house, has announced that presentations with the orchestra will be offered as a regular policy in the near future.

"Seven Syncopators" at Princess

The Princess Theatre, Milwaukee has installed an enlarged orchestra, Johnny Lang and his Seven Syncopators. This group of musicians, together with Arthur Maves, organist, is proving a big drawing card. Joe Levinson is managing the Princess.

Capitol Playing Hold-over Program

Major Bowes of the Capitol Theatre, New York, is presenting "The Temptress" and the stage and musical features which accompanied it last week for a second week at that playhouse.

New Structure to Replace Famous, New Orleans

While a new and much larger motion picture house is being built over it, the Famous motion picture theatre, North Claiborne and Marigny Streets, New Orleans, is continuing its shows uninterrupted.

The new theatre will cost $80,000 and will replace the old one. The proportions of the new building being greater, there is ample room for its foundation and the erection of the steel framework without impairing the Famous. The new building will be practically completed as to framework before the old theatre is forced to close its doors.

The theatre under construction will bear the name of the older one and will be operated by Alsina Brothers, proprietors, who have conducted the Famous at the same site for the last 13 years.

The structure will have a seating capacity of 1,500. The orchestra will seat 1,000 and the balcony 500. The balcony will be supported by a large steel girder which will eliminate the necessity of posts in the theatre and afford clearer vision and more room for the spectators.

Arkush Amus. Co. to Build in Palo Alto, Cal.

A new $300,000 theatre, the fourth motion-picture theatre to be erected in the Palo Alto district of California in the past fourteen months, will be constructed on University Avenue between Waverly and Cowper streets, it was announced by H. E. Seipel representing the Ellis J. Arkush amusement interests. Work will start within the next 30 days and the theatre opening is expected to take place early next spring.

The Spanish mission motif will form the general architectural style of the show-house, which will be patterned after Grauman's Egyptian Theatre at Hollywood. It will seat 1,500 people.

General Contract Awarded on Nebraska House

Construction has started on the theatre being erected at Fifth and Norfolk Avenue, Norfolk, Neb., by Jack Koenigstein, 1204 Norfolk Avenue, Norfolk.

The W. J. Assenmacher Construction Company of Lincoln, Neb., has been awarded the general contract for this house, which it is estimated will cost upwards of $175,000. It will be two-story and basement and of reinforced concrete, brick and terra-cotta construction.

Bayview Theatre May Be First of Chain

A new theatre is being built in Bayview, Wis., it is reported, and will be operated by National Theatres of Indiana. Earl Rice, formerly with the Universal houses, Milwaukee, will be the new manager. It is reported that this will be the first of a chain of theatres to be operated in the Milwaukee territory by National Theatres.

Prepare Plans at El Cajon, Cal.

Andrew Moloin is at present preparing plans for a modern motion picture house to be erected at El Cajon, Cal. The proposed structure will seat about 500.

El Portal Theatre Opened at Hollywood, Cal.

EL PORTAL, Lankershim's new $250,000 theatre, Hollywood, Cal., was formally opened to the public October 18, with stars and celebrities of the film industry in attendance.

The new house, one of the finest in the West, is operated by Hollywood Theatres, Inc.

J. Leslie Swope, treasurer of the amusement concern, made the dedication and introduced Councilman Charles Randall, who spoke briefly on the subject of valley development. M. Gore, president of the company operating the chain of theatres, was present at the opening of the new house.

Buys a Site in Richmond's West End Section

Charles A. Somma and W. J. Coulter, owners of the Bluebird and Brookland Theatres, Richmond, Va., have recently purchased a site in the West End section of Richmond where they plan to erect a new motion picture theatre with a seating capacity for 1,700.

Features of the proposed house will be a large organ, a refrigeration plant and all other equipment up-to-the-minute in every respect. It is said that first run feature pictures will make up the program.

Another theatre, being built by other interests, is at present under construction in the West End.

Seattle's 5th Avenue Opened to Public

Mammoth Carnival and Brilliant Premiere Inaugurate Million Dollar Key Theatre of Pacific-Northwest Theatres, Inc.

MARKED by a formal opening attended by 3,000 of the city's representative citizens, civic officials, state officials, newspapermen and organization leaders, the Fifth Avenue Theatre in Seattle threw open its doors to the public the latter part of September and now stands as the premiere motion picture house of the Pacific Northwest, and one that has few, if any, equals on the entire Pacific Coast. It is a $1,500,000 house, seating approximately 3,000 persons, and operated as the key theatre of the immense Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc., operating more than forty houses in Washington and Oregon. Harry C. Arthur, Jr., is president and general manager of the circuit, and Harold Horne is managing director of the new Fifth Avenue Theatre.

Broadcast to Outsiders

The night following the private formal opening, the house was opened to the public in a blaze of glory. A mammoth street carnival, lighted by the glare of Kleig lights and Cooper-Hewitts brought from the H. C. Weaver Studios in Tacoma, drew the attention of more than 20,000 persons who crowded into six square blocks and heard music and entertainment from the theatre broadcast by direct radio from the stage. Beginning at 6 p.m., regular performances at regular admission prices of sixty-five cents were given by the theatre, and it was announced that more than 10,000 persons had paid admissions to see the show before it finally closed at 3:10 a.m. the following morning. The house policy provides feature screen attractions and stage presentations brought direct from the larger houses in California.

The Fifth Avenue Theatre is generally accepted by theatre men and architects as one of the foremost houses on the Pacific Coast. It is entirely Chinese in architecture, decoration and furnishing, and occupies practically three entire floors of the new Skinner Building at Fifth Avenue, between Union and University Streets, covering an entire half block. Its seating capacity is limited to a main floor and balcony, the former being divided into four banks and having thirty-four rows. Loge seats are located at the front of the balcony. The theatre has no boxes.

As one advances to the house, he is impressed by the grandeur of the lobby, which extends twenty feet from the sidewalk. A box office with three cashiers stands in the middle of the lobby, which is entirely Chinese in decoration.

True Chinese Atmosphere

Entering the house, one walks into a huge foyer decorated entirely in Chinese design, and marked by a magnificent Chinese lantern hanging from the center of the ceiling. Usherettes in Chinese costume, and native Chinese call boys, enhance the beauty of the house. From it, when turning to the left one walks into one of the four aisles each of which is guarded by an usherette who stands just below a miniature colored spotlight. To the right is a grand staircase which ascends one flight and then divides into two staircases which lead to the mezzanine and balcony. Here, before one reaches the auditorium, are rest rooms, smoking rooms, a public lounge and waiting rooms, and a grand promenade, marked by luxurious Oriental rugs, tapestries and authentic Chinese objects of art.

The auditorium of the Fifth Avenue continues to express the vivid color of the Chinese architecture, yet in such subdued and careful tones that it cannot become tiresome. A highly-ornate ceiling is offset by plain tapestried walls, decorated only now and then by a Chinese symbol or emblem. Huge brass chandeliers and lighting fixtures are unusual features, and the center of the ceiling is marked by a mammoth Chinese chandelier hanging from the open mouth of a monstrous gold and bronze dragon. Reds, blues and gold are the favored colors, with the chairs covered in a specially-designed green tapestry, decorated in gold. To the right and left of the auditorium, just above the stage opening, are the organ grilles covered with imported Chinese tapestries of ancient design and execution.

Stage and Organ Elevators

Both the orchestra stage and the organ are housed on an ascending platform, so that the orchestra may be elevated from the pit to the floor level or stage level at the will of the director. The same applies to the organist, both being arranged so that they may be operated together or independent of each other. The latest type Wurlitzer organ is installed, being almost a duplicate of the organ in the Chicago and Uptown Theatres in Chicago. An orchestra of twenty musicians is used in the pit for concert numbers, and twelve of these men double on the stage as a jazz organization for the presentations.

Ventilation of the auditorium is effected by the latest equipment possible. The air is drawn into the theatre by a series of huge suction fans operating from the sixth story of the theatre building.

Back stage, the Fifth Avenue represents the very newest in theatrical construction. The stage itself is the largest of any theatre in the Pacific Northwest. From the grid, 68 feet above the floor, 50 drops may be suspended. A counterweight system controls the drops, draperies and border

The huge electric sign on the front of the 5th Avenue Theatre building, Seattle, is said to be the largest on the Pacific Coast. The letters in the upper part of the sign measure twelve feet in height, and each letter contains three rows of lights

National Supply Remodels Boston Branch

Work of remodeling the building at 67 Church Street, Boston, formerly occupied as the United Artists exchange, is now under way for the new National Theatres Supply Co., Boston branch. Joseph Cefre, head of the former United Theatre Equipment Co., will be general manager. R. D. Marston, who was at the head of the Exhibitors' Supply Co., and Robert W. Hosmer, head of the Eastern Theatre Equipment Co., retire from these companies with their merging in the new National combine.

Plans Well Under Way on Georgia Theatre

Manager Williams of the Grand Theatre, Thomasville, Ga., in a recent statement reports that the final plans for a new theatre in Thomasville have been completed. Following approval of the plans, bids will be asked for and when accepted construction will start as soon as possible. C. K. Howell, of Atlanta, is the architect in charge.

Ballas Amus. Co. Close New Memphis Lease

The Ballas Amusement Company, of Memphis, Tenn., operators of the Madison, American and Cameo theatres, recently closed a lease for a motion picture theatre to be built on the south side of Poplar Avenue and Belvedere Boulevard, Memphis. Plans call for 1,000-seating capacity, pipe organ and cooling system. Completion of the structure is looked for by January 1.

Interior view of the recently opened Stadium Theatre, Woonsocket, R. I. The owners spared no expense in making this house one of the finest in New England. It is one of the latest links in the Publix chain of theatres.

Bay St. Louis to Have New 1,000 Seat House

Formal announcement is made of the immediate construction of a $60,000 movie theatre for Bay St. Louis, La., on the corner of Front and State Streets, and across the street from the present A. & G. Theatre, the owners of which are constructing the new one. The building will be fireproof, of Spanish mission architecture, and will have a seating capacity of one thousand, with steam heating equipment for the winter and typhoon cooling system for the summer.

The building is to be owned by the Ames and Gaspard interests and will be leased to Ames Gaspard, and Richards.

Vancouver's New Exchange Building Under Way

Plans have been prepared and several downtown sites looked over in Vancouver, B.C., for the proposed $2,000,000 building which will house the motion-picture distributors of that city. A one-story structure of mission architecture has been designed.

Inquiries and Comments

The Reflecting Properties of White Paints Part II

THE question naturally arises as to what is the best type of paint for different conditions, and one most stop to analyze what is required of the paint. The initial reflection factor certainly does not tell the whole story since one paint may have a very high initial value and its rate of depreciation may be quite rapid; another may have a lower initial reflection factor and yet over a period of time actually reflect more light—in other words, depreciate more slowly. It is the area under the curve (see preceding article) which tells the story. Two sets of curves, similar to those shown, but for individual specimens, have, therefore, been integrated and their average reflection factors for the period of twenty months are set forth in Table 1.

Another interesting point is the change in tint of the paint over a period of time. Initially, all specimens would have been classified by the average individual as practically pure white in color. Some change their appearance as indicated in the table. (Table I.)

TABLE I

Specimen No.	Basic Pigment	Type of Finish	Initial Reflection Factor	Average Reflection Factor During 20 Months		Appearance at End of Test
				Can- inet Set	Fac- tory Set
1	Lth & Zn O	Undercoat	81.9	73.1	64.7	Grayish
2	Zn O & Lth	Semi-Gloss	82.5	71.3	62.0	White
3	Titanox Pb & Zn	Eggshell	86.9	76.3	65.7	White
4	Lth Pb & Zn	Flat White	86.6	75.3	63.5	Bluish
5	Lth Titanox Pb & Zn	Gloss	84.3	75.3	63.2	White
6	Zn O & Lth	Eggshell	85.2	76.4	64.3	White
7	Zn O & Lth	Flat White	83.7	74.8	57.6	Bluish
10	Lth	Enamel	80.4	73.75	57.9	White
11	Lth	Flat White	83.7	75.9	61.8	Cream
12	Lth & Zn O	Gloss	81.8	74.5	59.15	White
13	Lth	Eggshell	81.7	74.4	61.8	Cream
15	Lth	Flat White	81.7	74.8	69.9	White
16	Lth & Zn O	Gloss	82.2	74.8	61.1	White
17	Lth	Semi-Gloss	75.5	72.8	60.6	Cream
18	Zn O	Semi-Gloss	75.8	68.8	57.2	White
20	Lth	Flat White	76.3	68.0	59.2	White
21	Lth	Eggshell	79.75	69.4	58.3	White
22	Lth	Gloss	77.4	68.7	52.9	Cream
24	White Pb	Flat White	77.25	68.5	59.8	White
27	Zn O	Enamel	83.5	65.8	59.65	White
29	Pb & Zn O	Eggshell	75.1	68.3	55.5	Cream
30	Lth & MgSi Silicate	Eggshell	80.0	70.7	60.7	White
32	Lth & Zn O	Gloss	80.1	73.8	61.5	White
33	Lth & MgSi Silicate	Flat White	80.0	72.5	62.2	White
34	Lth	Eggshell	81.4	73.5	61.7	White
35	Lth	Gloss	82.1	73.6	63.2	Grayish

A third point to consider is the location where the paint is used. If very dirty, the specimens which show up best in the factory test are likely to be most useful. If quite clean, those which give the highest value in the cabinet group would be the logical choice.

In general, it may be said that for a paint to be permanent it must be compared of chemically inert (not active) substances of high re-fractive index, ground exceedingly fine (to produce density) and mixed with an inert vehicle. The vehicle is a very important factor and the indications are that linseed oil, though frequently used in the past, is not very satisfactory for this purpose.

Reflection Coefficient of Colored Paints

It is rather difficult to tabulate the reflection factors for various colors. A number of elements are responsible for this condition. Also, there is no standard terminology of paint colors. A tint which one manufacturer may call ivory-tan may be quite different in appearance and reflecting properties than some other maker's color under the same name. The chemical composition, or method of mixing the paint, will have an affect on its ability to reflect light. A high or low oil content, for example, produces some variation.

The most sensible method of presenting the necessary data seems to be to tabulate a number of commonly used colors under a rather broad classification and give a range in percentage for any particular color. The figures presented in the following table are the results of a considerable number of tests by different authorities and indicate the wide range of color which is often classified under one name.

Table II

Color	Percentage of light Reflected
	Can- inet Set	Fac- tory Set
White-new	82—89
White-old	75—85
Cream	62—80
Buff	49—66
Ivory	73—78
Gray	17—63
Light Green	48—75
Dark Green	11—25
Light Blue	34—61
Pink	36—72
Dark Red	13—30
Yellow	61—75
Dark Tan	30—46
Natural wood brown stain	17—29
Light wood varnish	42—49

Method of Applying Paint

In painting any sort of surface, it is necessary that it be thoroughly covered with pigment both for protection and light reflecting properties. The under coats may well be of a less expensive though opaque, variety. All coats must, however, be chemically inert and non-porous when dry.

The following formula is recommended:

First coat—good impervious primer.

Second and third coats—high grade lithopone paint (not less than 75% lithopone).

Fourth coat—high grade flat white.

Draw Plans on 2,500-Seat Brooklyn Theatre

Plans are being drawn for a 2,500-seat motion picture theatre, house and stores, on the southeast corner of Kings Highway and East Eighteenth Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.

The theatre has already been leased for a period of twenty-one years by one of the larger Brooklyn theatre circuits. The lessees are at present unnamed. Plans call for a seating capacity of approximately 2,500.

Gregory to Build Theatre at Englewood, Ill.

The S. J. Gregory Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., have announced that they propose to build a large motion picture theatre at Englewood, Ill.

The Gregory company now operate the Parthenon, Berwyn's 2,500-seat picture and vaudeville house, and the La Grange Theatre, which has a seating capacity of 2,000. This concern also has a house known as the New Palace under construction in Cicero.

Indiana Theatre Installs Wurlitzer Organ

The Jefferson Theatre, Huntington, Ind., will soon complete the installation of a new Wurlitzer pipe organ, according to a recent announcement. The work of preparing the sound-proof chambers and grill has been practically finished and it is said that the new instrument is on the way to Huntington from the Wurlitzer factory.

Syndicate Plans House in "No Man's Land"

"No Man's Land," that section of Highland park, Ill., running along Sheridan road between Wilmette and Kenilworth, and called by that name because it is not situated within either village, is to have a new motion picture theatre. A syndicate of north shore residents recently announced the plans for the proposed structure.

Purchase Bronx Property for Theatre Site

An attorney representing the Forest Avenue Theatre and Apartments, Inc., has purchased the square block in the Bronx bounded by Jackson, Forest and Westchester avenues, where he purchasers propose to erect a structure which will include a large motion picture theatre.

lights. A stage switchboard, duplicated by another board in the projection booth, controls all stage and house lights. A feature of the theatre is a radio microphone system, whereby the projectionists can hear all stage directions and orders from a series of "mikes" located in the footlights, at the orchestra leader's stand and at the side of the stage switchboard. A cloth of gold drop, a rhinestone drop and an orange velvet traveler curtain with ornate Chinese figures are the outstanding stage drapes, augmented each week by special scenic drapes. 400,000 watts of electricity furnish the power for the operation of the many lighting circuits in the Fifth Avenue.

The projection room is similar in appearance to a scientific laboratory. Its Duo paneled switchboards and work benches, trimmed with nickel and fitted with every known automatic projection device, is second to none in America, according to the claims of those who installed it. Three Simplex Projectors, equipped with Peerless reflecting are lamps, Western Electric speedometers and half-size Cinephor lenses; one two-deck Brenkert automatic effect machine, and two Brenkert spotlights are included in the projection equipment. The machines may be controlled from five different points in the projection booth. At one end is the auditorium control switchboard which governs light in the auditorium. Next to this board is the loud speaker connected with the previously-mentioned microphone on the stage. All openings in the booth are eased in glass, even the picture being projected through glass so that absolutely no sound of the projection machine is possible. A staff of four projectionists operate the booth.

Finally, the comfort of audiences is assured by 60-spring cushion type opera chairs. Each seat is 22 inches wide and 34 inches back to back, affording more than the usual seating space. Loge seats are of the barrel-back type, 24 inches wide and 36 inches back to back. From the rear of the balcony a special exit leads to the general offices of the Fifth Avenue Theatre on the sixth floor of the building, and intercommunicating telephones connect this office with the house manager's office, projection booth stage, orchestra pit and other parts of the house. It is reported that 40,000 pounds of wiring were used in the installation of the various electrical systems in the theatre.

The stage equipment and curtains in the Fifth Avenue were especially made and installed by the Armstrong-Powers Studios of Los Angeles. Gump and Company of San Francisco, famed over the nation for their Oriental art objects, supervised the decorating and furnished the art objects for the house. B. F. Shearer, Inc., of Seattle, had charge of the installation of all other equipment and decorations. Mr. Shearer's organization also created many of the house draperies and fixtures.

At present the house operates on a continuous run policy from eleven in the morning until midnight with weekly changes of program. Admission prices are forty cents until 6 p.m., when they advance to 65 cents. Loges are 85 cents and children's admissions 15 and 25 cents.

Hables Plans New Theatre for Hollister, Cal.

Leslie Hables, operator of the King City Theatre, King City, Cal., plans to erect a new house at Hollister, Cal. If Mr. Hables' plans materialize, he will leave his son in charge of the King City house and return to Hollister, which was his former home.

ILLUSIONARY DEVICES of every description for the stage and theatre—fire-logs and coal-grates that glow with all the realism of actual burning logs or live coals; scenic effects that reproduce blizzards, fogs, tidal waves, forest fires and other phenomena with the thrill of the reality; lightning bolt, winds, smoke, clouds and other stage effects that rival nature—illusions that may be used to enhance the attractiveness of your productions or beautify the lobby of your theatre.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Temptress"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Capitol, New York City

Times: "A distinguished piece of work wherein Fred Niblo, the director, keeps the audience on the qui vive. Greta Garbo wins new honors. She makes every scene in which she appears a telling one."

Sun: "A lavish and exciting picture. The crowds that filed into the Capitol Theatre were privileged to witness a superior entertainment. Greta Garbo makes every move a picture."

Daily News: "A motion picture on a large and sometimes grand scale. You will be entertained, beyond doubt."

Evening World: "Effectively told with a minimum of subtitles and with a maximum of visual beauty."

American: "Don't fail to see 'The Temptress.' It will hold your interest from reel one to the very end. Greta Garbo is born for the seductive charm of the languid-eyed Elena."

Morning Telegraph: "Fred Niblo's direction is admirable. As fine a piece of directorial effort as has appeared on the screen this season. Greta Garbo gives a brilliant performance while Antonio Moreno has never appeared to better advantage."

Daily Mirror: "'The Temptress' is packed with color and emotion. For absorbing, romantic, electrical entertainment, do not miss it."

Herald-Tribune: "Greta Garbo is a delight to the eye. Antonio Moreno is fine as a lover and we were thrilled by the Argentine duel in which he and Roy D'Arcy engage. Anyone who misses 'The Temptress' will miss a lot that is interesting."

"It Must Be Love"—First National, Rivoli, New York City

Morning Telegraph: "Miss Moore is delightful. There is a humorous twinkle to her expressive eyes that seems to say, 'I am really enjoying myself and I hope you are.' As the little delicatessen clerk, she has brought one of the most pleasing characterizations to the screen."

Times: "Miss Moore attacks her role in clever fashion, using her big, brown eyes to advantage and making the most of her clever stretches of comedy by her knowledge of pantomimics. Jean Hersholt, an emphatically accomplished actor... is impressive as the German father in this film. Malcolm McGregor is sympathetic as Jack Dugan."

Graphic: "Among the best program pictures of the year. It gives Colleen Moore another opportunity to show her versatility and will indeed register at the box office."

World: "Miss Moore is as vivacious as ever."

Evening World: "The story is well told in good cinema and is cordially recommended for its human flavor."

"Raggedy Rose"—Pathe, Forum, Los Angeles

Examiner: "It's great to have Mabel Normand back and to see her with all her old-time sparkle and spontaneity.

"As the forlorn helper in a second-hand junk shop Mabel has opportunities for both comedy and pathos. She proved, to the delight of her friends, that she has not lost her sense of comedy and her ability to make the most out of every situation."

"I am glad to say that Mr. Roach is planning a series of similar comedies. I have a feeling that Mabel will find herself and come-back with even greater emphasis in some of her succeeding pictures. F. Richard Jones, who understands the value of Mabel's screen personality, supervised this production."

Herald: "Mabel's long absence from the screen has not in any way hurt her popularity among motion picture patrons, if the reception at the Forum is any criterion. In the role of a pawnbroker's assistant, Miss Normand is given ample opportunity to display the mannerisms and comedy genius that originally won her the position of comedy queen."

"The World Struggle for Oil"—Pathe, Cameo, New York City

World: "'The World Struggle for Oil' is unusual. This picturization of the world's sudden interest in oil makes a gripping drama. It makes romance. Altogether, it makes a mighty interesting film, well worth seeing."

Morning Telegraph: "First and foremost on the program is 'The World Struggle for Oil' which tells the world how great oil is and traces its progress from early days in America. It is an interesting and informative production."

Times: "Of emphatic interest is 'The World Struggle for Oil'... In view of the subject with which it deals and because of the stirring way in which the story is unfolded this is a production which will appeal. Nobody can help but be proud of the initiative and genius of Americans in drilling for oil and constructing thousands of miles of pipe lines. Aside from the first sequences in which the narrative of oil begins, there are scenes of the primitive machinery through which the oil was first obtained. The gradual development of the machinery is shown and a telling sequence shows the way in which the pipes are cleaned. The picture is the best of its kind yet put forth."

American: "'The World Struggle for Oil' carries over at the Cameo another week and if you have not already done so we advise you to make a point of seeing this picture."

Herald-Tribune: "Everyone in the theatre enjoyed it immensely."

Telegram: "At what must have been a big expense and the result of careful research, Mr. Butler has produced a photoplay in which all the romance of oil is found. The scenes are laid down the ages and the characters of those ages are carefully delineated. Ancient rites are revived as the pagans swayed to them in the days of superstition. Always oil, burning on high altars, was an important part of the ceremonies and mysticism. The discovery of its commercial value is shown, and the leaps and bounds of the industry once American capital saw its possibilities."

"The Sorrows of Satan"—Paramount, Geo. M. Cohan, New York City

Mirror: "'Sorrows of Satan' is a gorgeously presented photoplay and beautifully acted. Adolphe Menjou is excellently cast as this type of Satan. He portrays the part with a wearied sophistry, varied with flashes of bored humor that really charms. Carol Dempster scintillates in several dramatic scenes as the suffering heroine. He (Ricardo Cortez) is superb as the rebellious, impoverished novelist. Lya de Putti startles as the vamp."

Daily News: "See this picture, by all means. No other like it has been made. The entrance of Menjou on the scene, with one monstrous shadow after another finally fading into Prince Riminez himself, amid flashes of lightning, is remarkably effective and elicited bursts of applause. Carol Dempster's acting is one perfectly good reason for seeing the picture. Ricardo Cortez comes through nobly under the Griffith direction. Returning to Miss de Putti, as everybody will, she deserves praise for her portrayal of complete abandonment in her big scene with Menjou. It was magnificent."

Times: "A silk-hatted Satan glides across the screen in David W. Griffith's pictorial transcription of Marie Corelli's novel, 'The Sorrows of Satan,' which was presented last night with due pomp at the George M. Cohan Theatre before a notable gathering. In swinging from squalor to pomp, depicting wretchedness on one side and passionate orgies on the other, Mr. Griffith reveals himself a master, and in this present offering he has made a photodrama that excels anything he has done in recent years. It is a marvelously beautiful film in which Mr. Griffith has obtained some gorgeous effects."

Herald-Tribune: "Do not miss 'The Sorrows of Satan.' As we have intimated, Mr. Griffith's direction at times was superb. The acting was fine and the photography was beautiful. We must earnestly approve of the way some one has had the forethought never to show the Devil when he is acting up."

American: "Not so very long ago one of our young directors lamented that David Wark Griffith had grown old-fashioned and that his ideas were so antiquated he might as well retire from active service. Will that same self-assured youth please visit the George M. Cohan Theatre and take a look at the 'Sorrows of Satan'? The man who invented the closeup, the fadeout and the intricate dissolve while that particular director was still in swaddling clothes has come forth with another proof of his versatility. He has given us a new technique, not only in story but in actual visualization. The diminishing body of Adolphe Menjou as he finally disappears through his own enlarged figure is a startling and striking feat of the camera. Ricardo Cortez is superb. She (Carol Dempster) tears at the heart strings. Adolphe Menjou is his usual suave self. I hope the devil is not as attractive. It would be bad for our morals. Mr. Griffith tells me he considers 'Sorrows of Satan' his finest picture. It is certainly his most daring piece of work."

World: "In approaching it as a cinema subject, the genius of Griffith clearly has been directed toward the visual, the mechanically technical, aspect of the story. 'The Sorrows of Satan' is a compositional and pictorial triumph. Those views of fantasy at the outset, glorious moving curtains in a semi-screened effect presenting a conception of Lucifer being cast out of Heaven, constitute some of the most amazing laboratorial and camera treatments which I have ever seen. By far the best and most knowing performances are those by Ricardo Cortez and Mr. Menjou. The truth of the matter is that these two young men are just about perfection."

Sun: "It is an exquisite shimmering of lights and shadows, of fantastic Satanic wings casting their shapes on the walls, of lyrical love passages, this 'Sorrows of Satan' which Paramount presented before a crowded audience at the George M. Cohan Theatre last night. For nearly a year D. W. Griffith, its director, has been working on it, and its soft, melting, lucid photography, its marvelous technical virtues bear more than eloquent witness to that fact. The virginal Carol Dempster enacts with feminine charm and frailty the girl. It is Miss Dempster's picture — almost. Ricardo Cortez is splendid as the hero. The Satan of Mr. Menjou is suave and intriguing. And our chronicle would be grotesquely incomplete without mention of the wicked character, really wicked, if you ask me, played by Lya de Putti."

Evening Post: "'The Sorrows of Satan' can hardly fail to reap a flattering harvest."

Journal: "It is an interesting and expressive picture, containing some beautiful photographic shots, and well developed by a strong cast, consisting of Adolphe Menjou, Ricardo Cortez, Carol Dempster and Lya de Putti. His (Adolphe Menjou's) suavity, bland nonchalance and world-weary eyebrows are perfect. Cortez does some excellent work under Griffith's direction and the convincing sincerity he puts into his part makes this his best portrayal so far. Carol is lovely and fragile, and makes her characterization appealingly delicate. And Lya succeeds in being as unsympathetic as her role intended her to be."

Apparent on the screen

THE IMPROVEMENT in the rendering of color values in black and white tones, when the picture is printed from Eastman Panchromatic Negative on Eastman Positive, is readily apparent on the screen.

PATRONS will notice the difference—and that's what really counts at the box office.

EASTMAN PANCHROMATIC NEGATIVE is now the same price as ordinary negative. It keeps as well as ordinary negative and, except for the lighting in the darkroom, is developed in the same manner as ordinary negative. Yet it's an extraordinary product.

You Can

Fill Those Empty Seats

Every empty seat reduces your hard earned profit.

Pathe has found that Morgan Posters help eliminate empty seats for many exhibitors.

You can materially reduce this loss by putting posters in every available place.

Look for "Morgan Imprint"

It means fewer vacant seats.
